The first encounter wasn't too bad. I was walking on campus with my friend Katie, telling her my reasons about why I would never get my haircut at the barbershop in the Campus Center. (If you're wondering why, it's not that I don't think they do a good job. I'm sure the people there do a wonderful job, and I have nothing against them. I just don't want to be the entertainment. It's just those huge windows. When you walk by them, you can't help but look in. I don't just look into the window either. I look in there like it's the zoo, and I expect to see two zebras humping the crap out of each other. You can imagine my disappointment when I see hair being cut.) Somewhere near the library, I had a three second eye staring contest of someone I used to date. I don't even speak to her anymore, so I just got a dirty look and traveled on my merry old way. Katie asked if it was a jealous evil look. I really hope it was.

The second encounter was the bad one. It happened at Bueno. It wasn't bad because I don't like running into this ex-girlfriend. I'm all good with that. She's really cool and stuff, but what made it bad was the fact that I ran into her after playing two hours of basketball and not eating anything all day. I was so hungry from the obvious ulcer that I'm developing, and wasn't helped out by the legal studies class project I forgot to do that was worth ten percent of my grade. My hair was in an afro-puff and I smelled like a locker room. I'm sure I came off really attractive. I can only imagine what stories she told to her friends that night.

As if Thursday wasn't unlucky enough, Friday brought more good stuff. I woke up to check my email. This is the first thing I do every single day. I had a letter with the subject, "I love you and don't want you to die." The letter was very obviously an advertisement, and I never open those, but out of sheer curiosity, I clicked on it. Apparently someone really loves me and doesn't want me to die... until I've seen "XXX sex fetishes." There are very few things I'm 100 percent sure about. I'm 100 percent sure that getting hit on by a 30-year-old woman at Wal-Mart is not cool. I'm 100 percent sure that getting hit on by a 50-year-old woman at Foxwoods, who uses the pick-up line "I look nothing like Mrs. Robinson" is even less cool. I'm 100 percent sure that the Red Sox will never win a World Series while I'm alive, and I'm 100 percent sure that I will never understand how or why someone would connect "I love you and I don't want you to die," with "XXX sex fetishes."

Anyway, since I don't go to the barbershop in the Campus Center, I have to go downtown. On my way to get a haircut, blood drained from running into two ex-girlfriends, and clean because I actually took a shower that morning, I saw a nice portly gentleman with a beard standing outside of the place that cuts my hair, smoking a cigarette. I gave him a friendly smile, and said "hi." He asked me if I was going to get my haircut, and though I thought it was a bit unusual that the freaky smoking man wanted to know if I was getting my haircut, I said "yes" and walked in. He started following me, which wouldn't creep me out too much except that he was being followed too – by a cloud of skanky-ass cigarette smoke. Then it hit me that he worked at the barbershop. Three words went through my head: 1) Dear 2) God 3) No. There's nothing I hate more than the smell of smoke. I walked into the place and the owner asked if I was there for a haircut. I just nodded. "Okay," he said. "Just follow Smokey!" He called him "Smokey." I'm pretty sure that one of the things I learned in kindergarten was never let a man called Smokey come near your head with a pair of scissors.

Thursday and Friday were my days to be unlucky. Saturday my life just turned plain weird. I went to Boston to celebrate my friend Josh's 22nd birthday. We went to a club called, "The Big Easy." Unfortunately, movement is impossible at The Big Easy. There were more people packed into a tiny room than at a basketball game at the Mullins Center (oh wait, no one goes to those). In Boston, the bars have to stop serving alcohol at 2 a.m., and you would think that drinking for the night would be over. Well if you knew Josh's brother's roommate Ben, you'd be thinking wrong! Ben knows a nice little Chinese food restaurant (well, he actually didn't know where it exactly was, we had to ask a prostitute how to get there) where you can have a good meal until 4 a.m. Oh, and if you order "cold tea" with your Chinese food, they bring you a teapot filled with something cold, that's certainly not tea! Yes, law abiding citizens would call this a "speak-easy." Say what you want about us, but Josh and I have done something that you never have. We've gotten drunk at 4 a.m. at a Chinese restaurant from cheap beer called "cold tea." That's hardcore, my friends.

We stayed out until 5 a.m. We went to bed, and woke up the next day. Waking up was tough: I had drank way too much "cold tea" to be mobile. The weather was exceedingly terrible. Ice engulfed all of Massachusetts, and I had to drive back to school. I waited as long as I could for the weather to get better, so I would have as little trouble as possible. I was driving down Route 9, with the smooth sounds of Matchbox Twenty bumping out of my radio.

I wasn't driving too fast, but the road was just too icy for my car to move straight anymore. I skidded to the left and crossed the street. After I spun around twice, I was only absolutely sure of two things: 1) I was on the wrong side of the road and 2) I was definitely going to hit something. I had never been in a car accident before. I've never been so unexplainably terrified in my entire life. The sound was awful. Whatever I hit, I bounced off of. The car was still moving. I hit it again. The same sound crashed again, and again!

Millions of things went through my miraculously still intact head: I'm not dead, the airbag didn't come out, the car's destroyed, I can't blink my eyes, I don't know what to do now, my dad's going to kill me, what the HELL did I hit!

If nothing else, I'm alive enough to tell you this story. I suppose that's better than the alternative. All I know is that this upcoming weekend I think I'll take it slow. If anyone's up for sitting around in my apartment and watching a movie, give me a call. I guess I should probably warn you though. I'm not drinking past 2 a.m. because (as far as I know) there are no speak-easies in Amherst. I won't be driving anywhere because I haven't got a car. My heart hurts, because I'm bitter at the entire female population, and I smell like a Midwestern barn house because I haven't showered in two days.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

"LOOK, LADY, I KILL FOR THE GOVERNMENT. DON'T GIVE ME ANY OF THIS "VIDEO GAME" CRAP."

© 2001

Write for Ed/Op!

The architecture of UMass

DAN LAMOTHE

Today, I would like to share a clip from a totally fictitious magazine that I found on a newsstand this weekend while bungee jumping in the Himalayan Mountains. It's exciting! It's a joy to share this with all of you! You see, the University of Massachusetts is a finalist! It's true. Officially, according to the architectural journal Krap, we are one of the five ugliest schools ever! Here you have it, fresh from the pages of Krap:

"Obviously we must consider UMass as a finalist for our prestigious Golden Rubber Chicken Award For Architectural Suicide. UMass is a vibrant school of over 30,000 students, the pinnacle of what a university should be (Dan side note: Hah, you like that one, I can tell). Yet despite all that is good with UMass, it cannot hide a glaring flaw in campus life there. Plain and simple: we at Krap find UMass butt-ugly.

As we do every month in Krap, we would like to highlight the truly fun stuff that makes UMass such a stinkin' eyesore.

First of all, we would like to recognize Hasbrouck Hall for its utter butt-ugliness. Why is Hasbrouck so ugly? The place is a dungeon, to be honest. Sit down in Hasbrouck 124. Yes, that is your professor down there, way down there on the floor. Yes, the ceiling is peeling and the chairs have holes in them. Don't even think about putting up the desks, they're not going to stay. And yes, the only educational aide in the room is the blasted sink. We architectural scholars at Krap Magazine find it all charming.

Moving on, we find it important to comment on several other of UMass' repulsive buildings. Krap's analysts enjoy finding buildings like these, and walking the UMass campus gives us great glee. It's like an archaeologist that runs into a huge find of dinosaur fossils – rarely do architectural "gurus" like us find so many ugly buildings concentrated in one area. It's exciting!

The Fine Arts Center is great source of enjoyment for us. Ray Charles could not have designed the place any better. The angles! The cement slab walkway that has tiles that give and slide at any time! The stairs going up and down for no reason on that walkway! This is the kind of sheer putridness that we seek out at Krap for the Golden Rubber Chicken Award. We at Krap don't skateboard, but it is obvious to us that the way that place looks, you may as well start charging admission for all of the skaters that appear there, because they're coming anyway. The place looks like a skating park, plain and simple. Neon lights should flash "GRIND HERE!!!" because that is what the architecture says. Fine art does not equal beauty here. Not by a long shot.

On lesser notes, UMass has little odds and ends that just make their buildings weird. These are not things that would merit consideration for that coveted Chicken Award on their own, mind you. But they're weird! Look at Franklin Dining Common, for example. Nice setting, they say. We agree. But why in the heck does the hallway on the first floor not stretch all the way around the building? There's a hallway on one side of the building where the UCard office is. There's a hallway on the other side where the convenience store is. Why do the hallways extend toward each other into a brick wall? The layout of the building is one the weirdest things we at Krap have ever seen.

Another thing that we find quite remarkable are the auditoriums in the School of Management. Why does the place look like a Sunday school from the 1800s? Unlike all the other auditoriums, SOM has this tiny little stage that's about four inches high, with chicken wire sticking out of it. Now what is the point of that? It isn't high enough to help you see the professor. It isn't large enough for much, really. The stages are like four feet deep, so what exactly is the point of them? It's just one more chapter in the UMass architectural coffin.

The pinnacle in UMass' complete failure at design is the Campus Center itself. Quite frankly, the Campus Center is the worst looking building on the planet. It is number one, grade A, top of the line ugly. Things don't get any worse than this. Krap points to the stairs that can be seen from a mile away and asks "Why!!!??" They obviously don't lead anywhere, since nobody has even bothered to shovel them. They're just ugly – plain and simple. We here at the journal also look at the radio antennas and the way that the building is wider at the top than at its base and shake our heads. It looks like something you would see on an air force base, not on a university campus. Several incoming freshman have been known to believe that the Campus Center is some sort of building for the Communications department before they learn any better (Dan note: Yes, that may have been me last summer at orientation, guys). That says it all. The heart of the campus is the ugliest building in the world, and even if the rest of the school looked better, the Campus Center would drag it down with it. UMass is doomed forever as an architectural disaster."

Please note: the opinions in the magazine excerpt enclosed do not mirror those of the Daily Collegian nor of Dan Lamothe personally.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian columnist.

Sly Stallone's remake of Get Carter is now available on video... but just rent the much better original.

Monkeybone visually resplendent

By Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

MONKEYBONE
Directed by Henry Selick with Brendan Fraser, Bridget Fonda
Playing at Mountain Farms Four

It nagged at me for weeks on end, sitting on the tip of my tongue, driving me crazy each and every time I heard it. It became my journalistic mission to uncover the enigma that vexed me, and if that meant having to sit through the preposterous new film Monkey Bone to figure it out, then gosh-darnit, that's the price I would have to pay. (It's a tough job being a film critic.)

Ever since I had seen the coming attraction to Monkey Bone, the answer I had wracked my brain trying to uncover was who performed the voice of the film's animated title character. Much to my surprise, I came to discover it was none other than multi-talented actor John Turturro (most recently seen in-the-flesh in O' Brother, Where Art Thou?). To add to my astonishment, I ended up enjoying Monkey Bone more than I thought I would.

Moviegoers take a huge chance when they go to see a Brendan Fraser movie, because you may end up with a superb film like Gods & Monsters and The Mummy or a real clunker such as Dudley Do-Right and Blast from the Past. He brings nothing new to Monkey Bone that we haven't seen him do before: a lonely, nice guy who is thrown into a zanny situation. This time around he plays cartoonist Stu Miley, creator of the Monkey Bone series, who gets into a car accident and falls into a coma, whereupon he is thrust into the nightmarish world of his own comic strip. (Think Who Framed Roger Rabbit? meets Beetlejuice, or if you can reach far back enough into your memory, drudge up the unsuccessful 1992 film Cool World, where a cartoon creator was also flung into the sordid and frantic planet of his own design.) The peculiar primate escapes and takes on the form of Stu back on Earth, slowly destroying the successful life he has cultivated, while the real Stu is still stuck in the hellish underworld.

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

Brendan Fraser as Stu Miley.

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

Visuals from the twisted mind of Henry Selick.

The real thrill of the movie is director Henry Selick's imagination gone wild in creating the twisted, outlandish world of Downtown, where Monkey Bone and friends reside. The director, who also worked wonders with his former projects The Nightmare Before Christmas and James & The Giant Peach, here marks the pinnacle of his career with eerie scenery, amazing use of stop-action animation and actors bedazzled in bizarre makeup. The scenes in Downtown are downright delicious to feast the eyes upon, and you practically want the entire movie to take place there, only to be disappointed when the story surfaces to the human world where there's a dizzying lack of plot or pleasures. At times like those, we're left with Bridget Fonda (getting worse with each additional role she plays) as Stu's girlfriend, who has surmised that the post-coma Stu is not the one with whom she fell in love. Her blank-face expressions and monotonous lines are so ineffective that I hope Stu stays in Downtown where he might finally get some excitement in his life.

Equally abhorrent is Dave Foley ("News Radio") as Stu's manager, who I assume only got the part since he is a close friend of Fraser in real life. His role serves no real purpose, and would have been better had it been left on the cutting room floor.

The script, written by Sam Hamm, based on the graphic novel "Dark Town," leaves much to be desired, especially when you are subjected to forced lines like the one when Brendan Fraser hollers "I'm gonna go choke my monkey!" as he takes off in pursuit of the troublemaking chimpanzee. The ending, too, is rather abrupt, but for a film aimed at the 12-16 year old crowd, you don't expect "I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship." Monkey Bone hits its target demographic, give or take a few degrees, and you can't be too hard on a film like this where the real creativity lies in the director's very capable hands.

So too goes the rest of the acting, though there are two very entertaining cameo appearances. Whoopi Goldberg's appearance as Death (who lives in the next realm over from Downtown) is hysterical and unpredictable as is "Saturday Night Live's" Chris Kattan as the

Turn to MONKEY, page 6

Sophmore Vanguard release immaterial

By Tom Frazer
Collegian Staff

FINLEY QUAYE
Vanguard
Sony/Epic

"Hi, my name's Tom Frazer and I'm calling to request a promotional copy of Finley Quaye's latest release," I said.

"Oh, that shouldn't be a problem Tom, you're probably the only man in America who still cares about Quaye," said the record company representative.

Not a good sign. No sir-e, not a good sign at all.

Finley Quaye is the uncle of Trip-Hop pioneer Tricky, but any relationship between the two is purely biological. Where Tricky has gone from doom (Pre-millennium tension) to gloom (Angels with dirty faces) to down right despair (Maxinquaye, Incomplished) in three easy steps Finley's sound has tended to be upbeat and melodic, and his release strategy has been much less prolific.

Characterized by many as reggae, some as folk fusion or the uninitiated as pop, Finley's first album, Maverick a strike, was widely acclaimed in his native England. Where it sold well, and seeded two UK top ten singles.

The infamously challenging task of the follow-up second album therefore faced Quaye, along with the perpetual challenge posed to any foreign act attempting to gain serious critical acclaim, breaking America. Quaye obviously didn't feel the need to maintain the momentum of the first album, waiting four years to release Vanguard. While it might be an exaggeration to say that different generations will be listening to the two albums, it is realistic to assume the many of his fans will have a kid or two. So, does Quaye's hybrid style still appeal, and has he managed to reinvent himself, with a more mature and nurtured sound reflecting the passing of time?

The album starts promisingly with "Broadcast," described by Quaye himself as "original jungle, a pirate radio sound." The track contains some pretty funny little rhymes though, such as the verse about beans. No really, it's about beans: "Butter bean, broad bean, black eyed bean, kidney bean mung bean, runner bean." It could be read as a metaphorical description of his cultural influences, or even as a recipe for bean soup.

If you listen to anything long enough, it lodges in your brain, reappearing at the funniest of moments: when you are on the bus, in a lecture or even at the height of passion. This isn't a good sign, though. One of my favorite shower time sing-a-longs is the theme from "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?" Catchy? Yes. Good? No.

I was more than willing to give this esoteric artist, with his sharp sounding band and his smooth public persona, the benefit of the doubt. To take tracks like "Spiritualized" and "Hey Now" as ventures in lyrical and musical experimentation. However on listening to the album a few times, I have made my judgment, and it is not favorable. No, not at all. The tracks are all uniformly emotionally ambiguous, with little or no appeal to the listening audience.

The cryptic tor are they simply nonsensical?) lyrics first disillusioned, then frustrated me. Quaye broadcasts on his promotional blurb "I'm not trying to reach anybody, I'm just making music I want to make." Fair enough, but if he hopes this approach to record making is industry standard or even avant-garde, he is sorely mistaken. It just comes across as a monotonous, mindless mish-mash. Hell, he couldn't even convince someone paid to promote this record to try the hard sell.

COURTESY JON CRUDEN

Theatre at Smith

Smith College presents Giving Up the Ghost on a double bill with Antigona Furiosa Wednesday through Saturday, February 28 through March 2, at 8 p.m. in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre, Smith College. Call (413) 585-ARTS for tickets and information.

Smashing Pumpkins honored with disc of industrial sludge

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

VARIOUS ARTISTS
A Gothic-Industrial Tribute to the Smashing Pumpkins
Cleopatra

In a perfect world, tribute albums would only be released when a lineup of artists sufficiently talented to bring something new and worthwhile to the material could be assembled. They would, ideally, be a means of demonstrating the strength and coherence of an artist's music, as other, equally talented artists added their own textures and interpretations while maintaining the integrity of the original songs. Most of all, they would be true tributes, ways of paying homage to the artist for their contribution to the field while fostering the sort of dialogue essential among artistic contemporaries.

More often than not, however, tribute albums are intended much less as true tributes, and more as vehicles for exposing unknown bands to potentially sympathetic listeners, and as ways for record companies to make some quick money. A Gothic-Industrial Tribute to the Smashing Pumpkins, unfortunately, falls shaved-head-first into the latter of those categories.

The 13-track album kicks off with "Rhinoceros," originally off of the Pumpkins' 1991 debut Gish, here covered by Guenter Schulz and En Esch, formerly of KMFDM, and any traces of the original version's psychedelia have been wiped away by masturbatory exercises electronica. The occasional lyric notwithstanding, there is no trace of the original tune, and the sort of self-importance and lack of regard for the source material represented by this song makes for an extremely bad invitation to the rest of the album.

Trudging ahead one track takes one to "Ava Adore," this time beaten into gothic-industrial submission by Candymmachine 88 with Tina Root of Switchblade Symphony. Here, at least, the original song is visible, and the song amounts to a more or less straightforward cover with weak vocals; Tina tinkers with the melody to no good effect and, not having much vocal strength to draw upon, finds her singing overpowered by the lackluster band. The mix sounds dangerously similar to that adopted, more by necessity than design, by most high school garage bands.

And so the album continues, with one no-name goth act after another stepping up to bat against a defenseless Pumpkins tune. Most fall into the "not horrible, but certainly useless" bin, with the occasional heinous cover eliciting a knee-jerk grope for the track forward button. A very few, like Electric Hellfire Club's cover of the b-side "God," are good for a warm belly laugh before moving on.

One of the only songs able to hold the listener's

COURTESY ANTON CORBIJN

The ridiculousness of the Smashing Pumpkins' outfits, pictured above, is matched only by the ridiculousness of this album.

Turn to PUMPKINS, page 6

Anime gains footholds in U.S. culture, stirs controversy

By Michael Longo
Daily Orange (Syracuse U.)

(U-WIRE) SYRACUSE, N.Y. – When Andrea Koupal was a senior in high school, she rented her first Japanese-animated film because its box art looked exciting.

Called "Windaria," it proved to be a beautifully drawn fantasy with well-developed characters and an anti-war sentiment, she said. What was most attractive about the film, however, was that unlike most English-language animated features, it was complex enough for an audience of teenagers and adults.

Koupal, now a senior illustration major at Syracuse University, attributes a great deal of the style and content of her own artwork to influence from Japanese animation. Throughout the past four years, she has viewed scores of these films, also known as "Japanimation" and, more commonly, "anime."

One of the first things Koupal noticed was that not all anime is as tame as "Windaria." In the beginning, she said, "the violence went with the newness of the story." But after watching some examples featuring gratuitous violence, she admits to being somewhat disturbed by the content.

As more animation makes its way across the Pacific from Japan, anime has risen from sporadic appearances on U.S. television and movie screens to fill daily time slots, with programs such as Pokemon and Dragonball Z being among the most popular.

This growth in popularity has not gone unnoticed by critics of media violence.

Typical of these criticisms is an article appearing on family.org, a Web site dedicated to promoting the traditional family. Columnist Steve Isaac discusses the "graphic brutality, ferocious language and intense depictions of the occult" common in anime.

"Parents," he wrote, "must be aware of anime's inherent dangers."

Issac finished with a final warning: "Never think of anime as just cartoons. In reality, many of these morally corrupt products constitute one of America's most dangerous entertainment imports."

Too broad to categorize

Doug Hemphill, a senior aerospace engineering major and member of "Dark Side of the Sun," SU's anime club, disagreed.

"It's like any other medium," he said. "You have anime that's excessively violent, stuff that would be equivalent to an R rating, and then material that's for children. It all gets lumped together because it's from overseas."

A frequent problem with anime criticism is that it tends to make generalizations about programs that are too diverse to categorize together, he added.

Another problematic aspect of anime is the wide audience to which it caters. In Japan, animation does not carry the juvenile associations that it does in America. Just as American feature films range from "Babe" to "Basic Instinct," Japanese animation runs the gamut between innocence and indulgence.

But when Japanimation reaches the shores of North America, the general public is unaware of its broad appeal. U.S. audiences see animation, and are culturally conditioned to expect children's programming.

The content of anime parallels that of other Western media such as film and television.

"You can find anything," said Bob O'Keeffe, a Syracuse resident and anime buff. "Soap operas, stuff targeted for teenage girls, comedy."

Koupal believes anime, In comparison with Western animation, offers more beautiful and complex narratives.

"I like both the intelligent ideas and the art," she said, chuckling. "Not just little animals singing like in Disney."

Koupal was quick to point out recent American movies, such as "Dinosaur" and "Tarzan," also include great quantities of violence.

David Hicock, an animation professor in SU's College of Visual and Performing Arts, said that programming of American origin is as much to blame as its Japanese counterpart.

"Anime by itself is not a problem", he said. "It's just one more thing that reinforces the culture of violence in America."

Parental discretion

Hicock holds parents responsible for not just the content in the anime, but for any medium their children are watching.

"It's the parent's responsibility to interpret what the child sees, to put a moral structure on the information that the child is viewing," he said. Anime creates a problem for parents because often, it is not released on the silver screen and thus lacks a rating from the Motion Picture Association of America.

But Internet resources exist for the interested parent. "The Anime Café" at abcb.com offers a page just for parents, complete with a rating system with three tiers: "G" (suitable for family viewing), "PG" (parental guidance advised) and "M" (recommended for mature audiences).

In addition, animegrapevine.com features a bulletin-board forum focusing on issues involving anime.

Koupal stressed that excessively violent anime that is easily available in the United States, such as "Akira" and "Ninja Scroll," gives a bad name to all anime. In many instances, she said, "the violence is used to make a statement or is inherent to the plot.

"There are bad anime that do that – excessive violence and – things like that give anime in general a bad name in the USA," she added. "People focus on the excessive stuff."

Your mom is going to hate our low fares.

Starting At

$46

Each way with 7-day advance roundtrip purchase.

You can now fly home anytime you want, even if it's just to do laundry. Be sure to purchase your tickets at least seven days in advance and within one day of making reservations. Seats are limited and won't be available on some flights that operate during very busy travel times and holiday periods. For reservations, call your travel agent or Southwest Airlines or log on for low fares℠ at southwest.com. And don't forget to warn Mom.

Click 'n Save® Fares Starting At $30 One-Way

Sign up for our weekly Click 'n Save specials at southwest.com. Our lowest one-way fares start at $30 with a 21-day advance purchase when you travel by May 23, 2001.

Fly Four, Get One Free.

Right now you can receive double credit as a Rapid Rewards Member when you purchase Ticketless Travel on our web site and travel by June 30, 2001. After just four roundtrips, you'll have a free ticket. To become a Member, sign up on southwest.com after purchasing.

southwest.com

SOUTHWEST AIRLINES®
A SYMBOL OF FREEDOM

1-800-I-FLY-SWA®
(1-800-435-9792)

©2001 Southwest Airlines Co.

FROM BRADLEY INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT TO:
(Each way with roundtrip purchase)

Albuquerque (Just an hour away from Santa Fe)	$185
Austin	$167
Baltimore/Washington (BWI) (29 miles to downtown Washington, D.C.)	$46
Birmingham	$131
Burbank	$201
Chicago (Midway)	$99
Cleveland	$91
Columbus	$91
Corpus Christi	$171
Detroit	$111
El Paso	$135
Ft. Lauderdale (22 miles to downtown Miami)	$115
Houston (Hobby)	$161
Indianapolis	$112
Jackson	$141
Jacksonville	$119
Kansas City	$139
Las Vegas	$201
Little Rock	$138
Los Angeles (LAX)	$201
Louisville	$111
Miami (See Ft. Lauderdale)
Nashville	$99
New Orleans	$149
Oakland (18 miles to downtown San Francisco)	$201
Oklahoma City	$158
Omaha	$149
Ontario (Easy access to Southern California)	$201
Orlando	$112
Phoenix	$176
Portland	$198
Raleigh-Durham	$73
Reno/Tahoe	$221
Sacramento	$201
St. Louis	$131
Salt Lake City	$198
San Antonio	$173
San Diego	$201
San Jose	$198
South Padre Island (Harlingen)	$171
Tampa Bay	$119
Tulsa	$158
Washington, D.C. (See Baltimore/Washington)
West Palm Beach	$112

Fares do not include federal excise tax of $2.75 that will be imposed on each flight segment of your itinerary. A flight segment is defined as a takeoff and a landing.

Offer applies to published, scheduled service and includes nonstop, direct (same plane), and connecting service.

Fares do not include airport taxes of up to $18 roundtrip. Your plans must include a stayover at least one night. Tickets are nonrefundable but (except for tickets purchased through our Group Tickets Program) may be applied toward future travel on Southwest Airlines. Travel through August 4, 2001. Fares are subject to change until ticketed. Any change in itinerary may result in an increase in fare.

FREE TICKET OFFER: Changes to your itinerary may eliminate the double credit offer. After enrolling online, your plastic membership card will be mailed within 14–21 days and you must present it at the gate upon check-in each time you fly to receive credit toward a free ticket. All Rapid Rewards rules apply.

monkey

continued from page 5

decomposing corpse Stu assumes the form of when he returns to Earth to get his original body back. Note to Chris: You know you're ready to move on from SNL when you steal the entire movie of a film that you aren't a headline star in.

Apart from Kattan's laugh-out-loud segment, the film is very dark, and is not the comedy that the trailers make it out to be. Much like Selick's Nightmare Before Christmas, Monkey Bone is haunting and bizarre, its visual effects long lingering in your mind. This movie works only because of the special effects, not the script or the acting.

Finally there's Fraser, whom I have cultivated a great deal of respect in recent months. In a weird way, he is a Hollywood anomaly, acting for the fun of the job, not so much for the big paychecks or the awards and accolades so many of his fellow actors shoot for. Fraser seems content to do goofy, slapstick movies that have no real depth or breadth to them, and then pull a fast one on us by occasionally defying expectations and taking part in real accomplishment. While Monkey Bone doesn't fit the latter category, it's an achievement in its own right with its stunning and inventive images. It is a fun film to watch that fits nicely into Fraser's film resume of lighthearted movie fare.

pumpkins

continued from page 5

interest for any length of time is Razed in Black's surprisingly bubbly rendition of "Cherub Rock;" its adaptation of the song's verse riff into a bright piece of keyboard-pop is at least a gesture toward the sort of respectful experimentation that tribute albums are supposed to offer. Similarly, Godbox's cover of "Frail and Bedazzled" manages to reach "okay" status by virtue of its adherence to the original's general formula; the laid-back beat adopted for the chorus is perhaps the album's most effective moment of innovation.

At the risk of revealing my own extreme loyalty to the Smashing Pumpkins, it could be argued the greatest stumbling block for these covers is the Pumpkins' simple and enormous musical superiority. No guitarist on the album can solo like Billy Corgan, and no drummer or drum machine can match the muscular beats of Jimmy Chamberlain, and so what we have, essentially, is a crowd of bad bands begging comparison to a good band. And the results, not surprisingly, are bad.

Congradulations to Christopher Theriault and Justin Celani, who won the Dave Matthews Band trivia contest.

And check out tomorrow's Collegian for our review the new album, Everyday.

College Basketball

women a-10

continued from page 12

some poor decisions in that game. I don't think we can play worse than [we did] the last time."

UMass defeated URI in overtime in the rivals' first match-up of the season on Jan. 9. Butler had a monster of a game, racking up 28 points, while Coyner kicked in 14 of her own and dished out six assists. It was one of the Minutewomen's better performances of the season, and the third rematch shouldn't be anything less than a battle.

"They're a young team as well," O'Brien said. "It's going to come down to some discipline on our part and some composure on our part. I'd be interested to see if we have the fight in us to do it or if we just pack it in. You'll see by the effort."

UMass has one final chance to play its best basketball. It can claw, scratch, and fight its way back to respectability. Or it can call it quits and wait until next season to do it all again.

But Coyner can't wait, and on Friday, the world will see if this team rolls over and dies or if it battles its way back into contention.

Matthew Bencal is a Collegian Columnist.

DAN BARTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Head coach Joanie O'Brien and her team will have their hands full when they head to Philadelphia for the A-10 tournament. UMass will go head-to-head with URI on Friday in their opening contest.

Crunch time for bubble teams

Whose bubble will burst first, Tennessee or Wake Forest? Both are a loss away from booking trips to the "Not Invited Tournament"... excuse me, the National Invitation Tournament.

The Volunteers have picked an inopportune time to be in their worst slump in two years. The Knoxville faithful have had little to cheer about over the last month as Tennessee has lost eight of its last 11 games. With two games remaining before the vaunted Southeastern Conference tournament, a loss either at South Carolina or at home against LSU would end all hopes of a trip to the "Big Dance."

BRYAN SMITH

In early January, Tennessee reached its highest ranking of the season at No. 4 in both the AP and the Coaches Polls, but oh how the mighty have fallen. In their recent swoon, the Volunteers went from averaging 85.2 PPG over the first 19 games of the season to 76.1 over the following nine games. Vincent Yarborough, Isiah Victor and Tony Harris have picked a terrible time to fold.

A team that once had its eyes set on a national championship now has to focus on the games at hand to even be considered for the tournament.

Wake Forest is a team that is in a similar situation. The Demon Deacons too reached a ranking of No. 4 in both polls, but a subpar showing in the Atlantic Coast Conference has put the third member of Tobacco Road on the bubble.

Wake is coming off the heels of a complete collapse at home against Duke on Saturday. Holding a 75-66 lead with 5:16 remaining in the second half, the Demon Deacons found themselves tied at 77 with two minutes to go in the game. On Senior Day, Robert O'Kelley hit a three-pointer to knot the game at 80, but Blue Devil freshman Chris Duhon hit a circus shot at the buzzer to win the game.

O'Kelley's shot kept Wake's hopes alive for 7.6 seconds – the amount of time that it took for Duhon to sink the game-winning basket.

The Demon Deacons have one game remaining before the ACC tournament, a road game at N.C. State on March 4. Wake sits at 18-9 and need a win versus the Wolfpack to finish its conference campaign at .500.

The only thing that these two teams have in their favor is that they are average teams in two of the best conferences. That might be enough to get them in, but they should not cause too much damage in the tournament if a bid is handed to either the Vols or the Demon Deacons. After all, they are just going to beat up on the lower seeded teams – the same as they did during their non-conference schedules.

Teams that would benefit if either of these two teams were not to make it – Memphis, Pepperdine, Hofstra and UMass.

John Calipari has done a tremendous job resurrecting the Memphis program. After starting the season at 4-4, the Tigers have plowed through Conference USA with a 10-4 mark and currently stand at 16-11. With wins in its final two games, at Southern Mississippi and at Louisville, Memphis would have a serious shot at the "Big Dance."

Pepperdine has a nation against it. The reason – the darling of the previous two NCAA tournaments, Gonzaga, sits atop its conference. The Wave is in second place in the West Coast Conference a game behind the Zags. Pepperdine is 20-7 overall and has won six of its last seven games heading into the conference tournament.

Hofstra has a legitimate case as well. Granted it plays in one of the weakest conferences in college basketball the America East, but 15 games in a row heading into the conference tournament is a great feat having lost point guard extraordinaire Craig "Speedy" Claxton to the NBA last year. Should they fall in the America East tournament. The Pride still have a chance.

Finally, UMass has an outside shot at an at-large bid. The Minutemen started the season 2-9 and have turned around what was once seen as pathetic campaign into a cross your fingers and hope final week of the season. UMass currently sits at 13-12 with a game tonight against No. 18 St. Joseph's. With an RPI of 66 and the seventh toughest schedule in the country, Amherst remains hopeful. A win at St. Joe's and a win at home versus St. Bonaventure to go along with two wins in the Atlantic 10 tournament should send the Minutemen dancing with a 17-13 mark and having gone 15-4 over their final 19 games.

Bryan Smith is a Collegian columnist.

philly

continued from page 12

UMass picked up a 76-65 victory behind 25 points from Mack and 20 from Shannon Crooks.

However, O'Connor was one player the Maroon and White could not seem to stop, as he totaled a combined 43 points in the two games. Defending him will be a high priority for the Minutemen this time around, and the task will most likely fall to a combination of Winston Smith, Ronell Blizzard and possibly Mack.

Nelson is also capable of giving UMass fits, and Crooks will get the job of trying to defend the fleet-of-foot point guard. Both Crooks and the trio of defenders on O'Connor must try to hold the Hawks below their conference-leading 79.2 points per game; otherwise, it could be a long afternoon for the Minutemen, who are at the very bottom of the A-10 scoring column, with only 67.7 PPG to their credit.

As of now, St. Joseph's has already garnered a share of the regular season A-10 title, but the Maroon and White could still come back and tie for first with a win today, a win against St. Bonaventure on March 3 and an unlikely Hawks loss to LaSalle.

Life Sciences Career Fair

(in lieu of the biotech fair)

co-ops, internships AND permanent positions for sophomores, juniors, AND seniors

FEBRUARY 28, 2001
10 A.M. TO 3 P.M.
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Industries represented include pharmaceuticals, environmental, government, biotechnology

Check "Events" on the Career Network web site for a list of participating organizations: www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

Campus Career Network

Presented by: The Careers Offices for the Colleges of Food & Natural Resources and Natural Sciences & Math, and the BioSci Club

Trip-On: Amsterdam Barcelona Berlin Brussels Dublin London Madrid Paris Rome

PACKAGES INCLUDE: • Roundtrip airfare • 2 nights accommodation • Airport transfers† • Travel Card† • Camera, document organizer, discounts, guidebooks, maps and more.

STARTING AT

London $444*
Madrid $502*
Amsterdam $509*
Rome $499*

44 Main Street
413-256-1261
counciltravel.com

Council Travel
America's Leader in Student Travel

†Select cities only.
*Prices are per person, double occupancy, based on departures from Hartford Bradley and minimum 2-night stay. U.S. departure taxes and airport fees are additional. Departures from other major cities are available. Prices are subject to change.

When someone asks you What you did in College,

What will you say?

The Amherst Fire Department is recruiting members for its Student Force.
Stop by the Campus Center, Feb. 26- Feb. 28 for more information.
The North Fire Station will host an Open House on March 2 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The Station is located at 603 East Pleasant St., up the road from Sylvan.
Call for more information 549-5419

Going up.

As you begin your ascent to the top, remember, it's what you learn along the way that counts. At Ernst & Young, you can have endless learning opportunities working with leading companies in leading industries. So when you get to your destination, you'll belong there. Ride with us.

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2001

ey.com/us/careers

ERNST YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

©2001 Ernst & Young LLP

Men's gym makes quick work of Temple

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team hosted Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference rival Temple on Friday, and sent the Owls running back to Philadelphia before they could say "Philly cheesesteak".

The Minutemen dominated Boyden Gymnasium in the afternoon meet by almost five points, 210.550-205.770. UMass went into the meet ranked 10th in the country, while Temple was swooping right behind them at No. 12.

Senior Andy Leis had an outstanding day in Amherst as he took first place in the all-around for the team with a finish of 51.400 points. He also placed first on the horizontal bar at 8.85.

"Andy really led the team and set the tone," head coach Roy Johnson said. "He had a season high on the pommel horse, and it was the first time we've scored a 36 total on the vault; the average was a 9.0. He really sets the standard for scoring."

First was the word of the day, and everyone was using it. Freshmen Patrick McFarlin was the top competitor in the floor exercise, an event that was the strongest rotation for the Minutemen.

The junior class wasn't too quiet as John Szymczyk took first on the vault and Ben Kandel was best on the rings Friday. The rings are a weaker event for the gymnasts, but Kandel set a personal high with a score of 8.90. Senior I.J. Hershey showed his veteran skills on the parallel bars.

With a win over the rival, UMass has moved up to 9th in the national ranking. The Minutemen look to take the mental advantage over the Owls, as they'll be competing again in a few weeks and then again during the ECAC Championships. Friday's win will be the start of a promise for a good run in March in the next Temple matchup.

"We have that much more confidence now," said Johnson. "We'll be down there, and we'll need to keep focus and not think about what Temple has."

With officials already seeing that UMass has the ability to pounce on the Owls, they'll know what to expect when the Minutemen head down to Philly to try and beat them again. The tight rivalry should make for a strong meeting between the two teams.

In the meantime, UMass will be competing in the New England Championship this weekend in Springfield this Saturday.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior John Szymczyk was key in UMass' rout of rival Temple this weekend. The Minutemen are now ranked 9th in the nation.

UMass making way up standings

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team had a busy weekend with two meets on the road. The team split meets at State College, Pa. on Friday and at Philadelphia on Sunday.

In Friday's event the Minutewomen lost a tough match to Penn State, while they took a break from their ride home Sunday to pounce on Temple. Even with the loss on Friday, the gymnasts moved up in the national standings and now rest in the 48th spot, up from 57th.

It was a tough night at the PSU Recreation Hall as the Nittany Lions swallowed UMass whole in their record-breaking meet. Penn State was able to top its overall team score record, posting a 197.450 over the Maroon and White's 193.675. Katie Teft had a strong rotation on the vault and tied for second place at 9.90. Despite the loss, UMass could not be too disappointed at their defeat, as the Nittany Lions are one of the top teams in the country.

Philly was the better city this weekend. The Minutewomen went to Temple ready to compete against the 68th ranked Owls, one of the toughest teams that the Maroon and White face during the season. The afternoon matchup was a dominating performance for UMass, as the gymnasts finished on top by close to four points, 188.650-184.775.

Sophomore Jen Gendron had a strong day, finishing first in the all-around. The former Atlantic 10 Gymnast of the Week had a great rotation on the floor exercise.

"It was one of our best meets," Gendron said. "The score doesn't really show how well we did."

The sophomore explained that the scores for Sunday's meet don't reflect how well the gymnasts actually did, as judges sometimes score harder on meets in Pennsylvania and that's why the scores are so low.

Gendron's classmate Katie Teft also had a great day, taking first in the uneven bars at 9.80. Teft has been making a slow comeback into the rotation for the team after a severe ankle sprain in a meet at Michigan, but has come out on top in at least one event in most competitions this season.

Senior Mary Moore tied for first on the balance beam with Gendron at 9.650. Moore and Gendron also split second prize on the vault at 9.30, just shy of teammate Tracey Chew, who took first with a 9.425.

The stress of two competitions in a weekend is tough for any athletic team, and the women's gymnastics team is no exception. The Minutewomen were on the road for a three-day trip against some of the top competitors this season.

The Minutewomen will be on the bus again Friday as they take to the road for a dual-meet with the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut. The meet will take place at 7 p.m.

softball

continued from page 12

son, UMass has scored a total of three runs, a major cause for her winless record.

"There is no reasoning behind it," Hadley said. "Just bad timing, I guess."

Massachusetts 9, Michigan St. 6

After scoring just five runs in the previous four games, the Minutewoman offense finally woke up against the lady Spartans, behind the bat of their freshman catcher, who has also earned the respect and comfort of the UMass pitchers.

"We really feel comfortable with [Cahalan] behind the plate," Hadley said. "She has adjusted really well."

The Maroon and White jumped out to and early lead, plating two runs in each of the first two innings, including a two RBI double by Cahalan in the first.

UMass added to its lead in the bottom of the fifth inning on a three-run homerun by Cahalan, giving the Minutewomen a 7-0 lead. Holtz held the lead on the mound, going the distance for the Maroon and White, scattering ten hits while striking out seven.

The Minutewoman offense was complimented by junior Ashley Bakken's 2-for-3 performance and sophomore Anna Perey's 2-for-4 showing. Perey knocked in three runs.

Among high expectations that followed its previous performances earlier in the season, UMass struggled through some very good opponents and a curse of silenced bats, managing only one win in five games. The team couldn't help but feel that it could have faired better.

"We were definitely disappointed this weekend," Hadley said.

DAN BARTELLA/COLLEGIAN

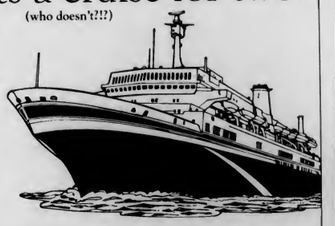
Play Ball!

Jeff Altieri and the men's baseball team will begin their action this weekend as they face off with Oral Roberts for three games in Oklahoma.

Who wants a cruise for two?
(who doesn't?!?)

In one of the issues of the Collegian each week there will be a clue: Uncover the item at which the clue is hinting, collect it, and hold on to it!

When the taste of UMass rolls around, bring all the items you have collected and you will receive the FINAL CLUE...



The first person to bring the last item back to the TASTE OF UMASS will win an AMAZING seven day cruise for two!

Have fun and start hunting! The first clue will be in tomorrow's issue!

Coca-Cola •••• brought to you by •••• The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

Discover the Power to Innovate

Put some power behind your ideas. At MIT Lincoln Laboratory, your research and ideas will be transferred directly into the development of leading-edge, real-world applications, including air defense, space surveillance, communications and air traffic control systems.

If you're looking for a way to power up your career, please forward a cover letter and scannable resume to:
resume@ll.mit.edu
Fax: (781) 981-2011;
or mail to: Human Resources, MIT Lincoln Laboratory, CN00, 244 Wood Street, Lexington, MA 02420-9108.
M/F/D/V.
An Equal Opportunity Employer, US Citizenship is required.

Please visit our website or Career Services for time, location and date of our informational session and date of interviews for Spring 2001

If you are pursuing a degree in:

- Electrical Engineering
- Physics
- Computer Science
- Mathematics
- Mechanical Engineering
- Aeronautics/Astronautics

maybe you have the power to succeed at:

LINCOLN LABORATORY
MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

www.ll.mit.edu

General Electric

PriceWaterhouse Coopers

NHL Corporation

MBNA Financial

Q: What do these companies have in common?

A: Former Collegian Finance Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ASSISTANT FINANCE MANAGER.

CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.

APPLICANTS SHOULD CURRENTLY BE A SOPHOMORE.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Center of Town
1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos
3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Do you need money$? Will you be in the Amherst area over the summer? Do you like working outside? Are you reliable, hardworking and friendly? If so call Amber for a great job. 537-3348

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. (2 hours form New York and Philadelphia), Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, WSI, waterfront activities, scuba, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, gymnastics, fishing, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20-8/17. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

The UMass Football team is looking for interested students to video practices and games for the spring 2000/2001 season. Experience preferred but will train. Scholarship and work study programs available. If you are interested please contact Bill Sisler at 577-0319. Come be a part of a championship tradition.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS - NE Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/01). Directors for Gymnastics, Fine Arts, Camping/Nature, Golf, Swimming. Couselors for : Tennis, Team Sports, Ropes, Self-Defense, Gymnastics, Aerobics, Cheerleading, Swimming, Sailing, Waterskiing, Fine Arts and Crafts, Piano, Drama, Photography, Guitar, Video, Group Leaders. On Campus Interviews March 6th. Call 800-279-3019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED; Be at Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment - end of June through July, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosfeling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132, bicycletrips.com

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

French & or German Speaking cadidate needed for part-time work. Contact Diane at 549-1169 or e-mail diane@remi.com

PT Help Wanted Amherst Greenhouse growing pesticide free, hydroponic herbs. 549-3558

Crabapple Whitewater is hiring whitewater raft guides for the up coming season. Full & part-time summer jobs. No experience necessary. Must be athletic & outgoing. We will train. Call for info & application. 413-625-2288

Photographer Needed for whitewater trips. Full time summer job. Weekends Spring & Fall. Experience necessary. Call 413-625-2288

EMPLOYMENT

Our Team & Make a Difference in a Child's Life
5 great children summer camps in NY, ME, PA, and WV seek General Counselors & Group Leaders, plus Activity Specialists who can teach/coach: tennis, swimming, waterskiing, sailing, caving, mountain biking, canoeing, windsurfing, woodworking, theatre, arts, photography, video, website design, fitness, golf, gymnastics, dance, volleyball, basketball, roller-hockey, lacrosse, baseball, and soccer. Nurses and kitchen and operation staff also needed. June 16-August 16. Benefits include training, room and board, laundry, and travel stipend. Apply on-line at www.horizon-camps.com or call 1(800) 544-5448

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

HOUSE FOR SALE

3 Bedroom House close to University. 549-6157

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons Recreational & competitive boxing. Retired pro Dajata Bumpus. 256-0364

Kickboxing Instruction and General Personal Training. All levels and abilities. Joe 548-8979

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITY-BARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Publish Your Work For $1,295 Textbooks, Novels, and More Call FirstPublish, Inc. at 888-707-7634 Or visit www.firstpublish.com

MUSIC

Do you want your band recorded? Call Hellbent Studios. Digital and Analog Recording. $20 per/hr. 413-549-5942

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in Large 3 bedroom house. On busline 253-3670

ROOM FOR RENT

One Bedroom in two bedroom. 3/15-6/15 (flexible). Laundry, furnishings, near bus route. $375/month. Inc. HEAT 584-4664

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOM FOR RENT

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer ? Contact the Student Legal Service Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. Avail 3/4 $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-800-234-7007 endless-summertours.com

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@gofliptrips.com

TRAVEL

Spring Break Airport Rides: Students want to save $5 Bucks on a ride to the airport? Call to reserve a roundtrip from Campus to Bradley Airport by February 28 to get your discount. Just mention this ad when making your reservation. Valley Transporter. 253-1350

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $179 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

Spring Break - Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun and Jamaica from $499. Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and More! Organize small group - earn FREE trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-GET-SUN-1

Go Direct! #1 Internet-based Company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Lowest price guarantee! 1-800-367-1252. www.springbreakdirect.com

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1 - HSCN Bulletin Board
2-5 Cable Portion
4 - CBS 4 Boston
5 - PBS 57 Springfield
6 - PBS 57 Springfield
7 - Time Warner Cable Channel
8 - UPN 20 Hartford
9 - Worcester Area Cable Channel
10 - NBC 30 New Britain
11 - Public Broadcasting
12 - PBS 24 Hartford
13 - CBS 3 Springfield
14 - International Channel
15 - WWLP Cablevision Channel
16 - WB 56 New Haven
17 - ESPN
18 - ESPN2
19 - TCI TV (Student Channel)
20 - Weather Channel
21 - Travel & Living
22 - Cspan
23 - CNN
24 - CNN Headline News
25 - USA
26 - TNT
27 - Sci-Fi
28 - Lifetime
29 - Nogin
30 - Business Network
31 - Nick at Nite
32 - VH1 Classic
33 - Comedy Central
34 - A&E
35 - Discovery
36 - Cartoon Network
37 - College TV Network
38 - MTV2
39 - MTV
40 - VH1
41 - The Learning Channel

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 27, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Secrets of the Pharaohs		Nova "Cancer Warrior" (N)		Frontline (N) (In Stereo)		To Be Announced
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Retreat, Hell" (In Stereo)		State of the Union Address		Judging Amy (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Retreat, Hell" (In Stereo)		State of the Union Address		Judging Amy (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Mole (N) (In Stereo)		State of the Union Address		NYPD Blue "Russellmania"		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "Epiphany" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier (N)	Three Sisters	State of the Union Address		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	7th Heaven "Seiya Who?"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "Epiphany" (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Frasier (N)	Three Sisters	State of the Union Address		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	70s Show	Titus (N)	State of the Union Address		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier (N)	Three Sisters	State of the Union Address		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Secrets of the Pharaohs		Nova "Cancer Warrior" (N)		Frontline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WGGB	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Mole (N) (In Stereo)		State of the Union Address		NYPD Blue "Russellmania"		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	ss "The Players Club" (1998, Comedy) Drama) LisaRaye.				Frasier	Mad Abt. You	Spin City	Spin City
WTBS	22	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: Seattle SuperSonics at New York Knicks. (Live)				Inside NBA		ss "Firewalker" (1986)
A&E	10	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Virtue"		Biography "Scott Hamilton"		Figure Skating: Stars on Ice.				Law & Order "Casual"
CNN	20	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	State of the Union Address		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	23	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stain's Money	ss "Planes, Trains and Automobiles" (1987) Steve Martin.				Battleborts	Battleborts	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	32	Wild Discovery: Australia		Wild Discovery: Octopus		Prosecutors-Justice		New Detectives: Forensic		FBI Files "Driven to Kill"		Justice Files
ESPN	33	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Tennessee at South Carolina. (Live)				College Basketball: Michigan State at Wisconsin. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	29	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait:		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		ss "Maternal Instincts" (1996, Suspense) Delta Burke.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	31	Direct Effect	Fear (In Stereo)		Andy Dick's	Real World	Real World	Real World	Real World	Real World	Andy Dick (N)	Undressed	Kelly-Reality
NICK	35	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Facts of Life	Facts of Life	It's Company	It's Company	All in Family	Jeffersons
SCIFI	30	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		ss "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" (1995, Drama) Jason Robards, JoBeth Williams.						Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	28	Paramedics "Force Five"		48 Hours "The Killer Next Door"		Trauma: Life in the ER		Maternity Ward: "Fertile Desert"		Storm in a D-Cup		Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	25	ER "Sleepless in Chicago"		Pretender "Nip and Tuck"		ss "The Defenders: Taking the Fifth" (1995, Legal Drama)		ss "The Defenders: Choice of Evil" (1999, Drama)				Martin
USA	27	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Father's Day" (In Stereo)		Noah Bridges "Blackout"		ss "Lethal Lies" (1997, Drama) Sylvester Stallone.				Martin
HBO	43	(4:15) "A Passage to India" ('PG')		ss "The Deep End of the Ocean" (1999) Michelle Pfeiffer.				"Boycott" (2001, Drama) Jeffrey Wright. (In Stereo)				Oz "Famous Last Words"
MAX	45	(4:45)		ss "Switchback" (1997, Suspense) Dennis Quaid.				ss "House on Haunted Hill" (1999, Horror)		ss "Shadow of Doubt" (1998) Melanie Griffith.		"Cell Mates"
SHOW	46	(4:35) "Down"		ss "Throw Momma From the Train" (1987)				ss "The Green Mile" (1999, Drama) Tom Hanks, David Morse. (In Stereo)				Queer as Folk

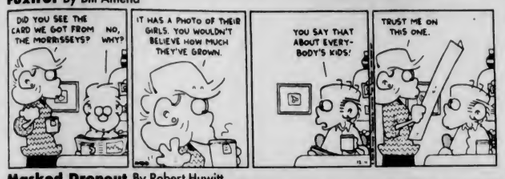
Buttercup Festival By Elliott Garbauskas

HI, I'M WHISTLE-STOP WILLY. I'D LIKE TO DATE YOUR DAUGHTER.
SHE'S HALF YOUR AGE
YOU'RE NOT KIDDIN'!
I WANTED TO THANK GOD FOR ALL THE COOL STUFF ABOUT EARTH, SO I BAKED HIM A PIE AND MAILED IT OUT. IT CAME BACK "INSUFFICIENT POSTAGE." SO I ATE IT. I THINK I'M GOING TO HELL.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

A.D. IS RECRUITING AT A CORRECTIONAL FACILITY
I DROPPED BY YOUR HOUSE THIS MORNING, JIMMY...
IMAGINE MY SURPRISE TO HEAR YOU'D BEEN ARRESTED ON A WEAPONS CHARGE! WHAT A LOUSY BREAK!
OF COURSE, EVEN IF YOU'RE CONVICTED, I'M SURE YOU'LL BE OUT PLAYING FOOTBALL BY THIS FALL! AND I HOPE IT'LL BE FOR THE FIGHTING GALLOWAYS OF ARLEEN!
SO! NOW ARE THE OL' GRADERS JUST KID ONES?
GUARD!

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



DID YOU SEE THE CARD WE GOT FROM THE MORRISSEYS?
NO, WHY?
IT HAS A PHOTO OF THEIR GIRLS. YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE HOW MUCH THEY'VE GROWN.
YOU SAY THAT ABOUT EVERY-BODY'S KIDS!
TRUST ME ON THIS ONE.

Masked Dropout By Robert Huwitt

I'VE HEARD THE LUNCHROOM IS A GREAT PLACE TO MEET FEMALES!
REALLY?! MAYBE THIS IS WHERE I'LL MEET MY SOUL MATE...
OUR EYES WILL MEET... WE'LL EMBRACE...
I'M TALKING ABOUT FEMALE ROACHES!!
MASKED DROPOUT!!
HOT ONES?

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

MOMMY, WHERE'S DADDY TODAY?
HE'S ON THE ROAD SUBSTANTIAL RECRUITING FOR THE TEAM
EVERY WINTER YOUR DADDY CRISSCROSSES AMERICA, DETERMINED TO SIGN UP THE MOST GIFTED STUDENT-ATH LETES IN THE LAND!
SON, I'D LIKE YOU TO PLAY FOOTBALL FOR ME GET IN LINE, MAN.

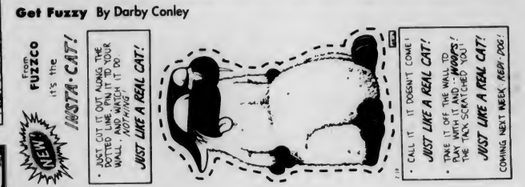
Paranoid Valley By C. Musielak

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

WHAT'S UP?
NOTHING. GO AWAY
I SAW A BIRD UNDER THE BED!
OK... NOBODY MOVE!! I'M ALL OVER THIS.
THAT'S WHAT I'M AFRAID OF
NO, NO. FALSE ALARM. IT'S JUST MY TUG-OF-WAR SOCK

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



NEW FUZZCO IT'S THE INSTA-CAT!
JUST CUT IT OUT ALONG THE DOTTED LINE, PUT IT TO YOUR WALL AND WAIT. NOTHING!
JUST LIKE A REAL CAT!
CALL IT. IT DOESN'T COME!
JUST LIKE A REAL CAT!
TAKE IT OFF THE WALL TO PLAY WITH IT. IT DOESN'T MOVE!
JUST LIKE A REAL CAT!
COMING NEXT WEEK FROM FUZZCO

Robotman By Jim Meddick

OCEANWAVE AT THE GLADIATOR TRAINING COLONY
YOU THERE. KEEP YOUR SWORD HEWER
WHO ARE YOU?
MY IDENTITY IS OF NO CONSEQUENCE. IF YOU DON'T KEEP YOUR SWORD UP, A THORIAN SORN COULD EASILY DO THIS
I AM ROBA AND I AM TO BE YOUR TRAINING DROID
SOFT FOCUS, STAR TREKIAN CLOSEUP

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Your reaction to what comes to you by surprise today will tell others a great deal about what is hidden beneath the masks you present to others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – A friend or loved one will be able to take advantage of your good will today. An enemy, however, may discover that you are quite formidable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Even something you're doing just for the thrill can prove more than profitable to you in a number of surprising ways before the day is out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – It's a good day to get back to the basics, and it's important that you understand what is really motivating you right now. New goals are taking shape.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Take care that you don't become overbearing or preachy today as you instruct others. Be supportive, encouraging and sympathetic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – There is no point in denying what others already know today. Take the time to reflect on your motives before you begin changing your methods.

VIRGO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22) – You're heading in an important new direction today, and those who support you will not be able to contain their excitement and enthusiasm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – What's more important than your own personal development? Nothing – and today you must refocus your energies on learning one or two key lessons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – A reunion of sorts is favored today, but you mustn't make the mistake of thinking that all will be forgotten that easily. Make apologies!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Challenges today are likely to come to you from unexpected sources, but you have what it takes to face even the most direct with confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – It's up to you today, and no one is going to step up to the plate for you in any sense. Don't get discouraged. Opportunities lie ahead, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Take what you can from even the most difficult situations today, and you'll find yourself ahead of the pack – and ready for real success.

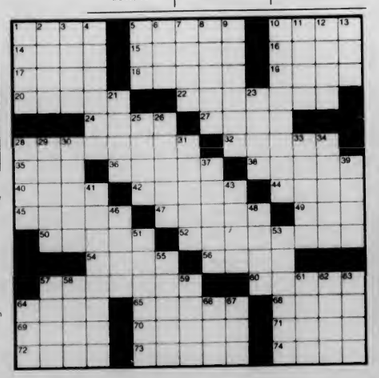
WE DELIVER DELI
Boar's Head Brand
Starting every day at 11:00AM
549-7122
CLAUDIA'S CAFE
In the Amherst Carriage Shops
OCMP accepted

ACROSS
1 Observe
5 Oater extras
10 Peel (apples)
14 Yemeni port
15 Exberg or Brookner
16 Affirm positively
17 Safety items?
18 Hue
19 Silent approvals
20 Prank
22 Shows deference
24 Very pleased
27 Second-story man?
28 Plotted secretly
32 Snatches
35 Ghost — chance
36 Flice dish
38 Cornhusker city
40 Molecule unit
42 Drink noisily
44 Auth. unknown
45 Dud
47 Scornful look
49 Large weight
50 Mom agreeable
52 Japanese-garden feature
54 Hairdo
56 Made a picture
57 Wander lazily
60 Texas landmark
64 Outbursts
65 Spot
66 Director Kazan
69 "Potent" start
70 Consumed
71 Casual tops
72 Lima —
73 Informal language
74 Mailed out

DOWN
1 California valley
2 Valhalla host
3 Nomad's home
4 Naval officer
5 Yukon footwear
6 Singer Yoko
7 Tie fabric
8 Bar seal
9 Insect
10 Sweeping view
11 State
12 Bright colors
13 Hosp. areas
21 Groom a poodle
23 Polynesian food
25 Ovid's bird
26 Places for farmers?
28 Ember
29 Many times
30 Singer Judd
31 Cow
33 Congo language
34 Drives away
37 Unbound
39 Actress Archer
41 Footwear
43 Mellow fruit
46 Times Square sign
48 Ostrich
51 Potato-chip lines
53 Big eyed babies
55 Like a bear
57 Say with gestures
58 Still-active volcano
59 Ms. Moreno
61 Ship's position
62 Air
63 Brewery kiln
64 Watch chain
66 Guys
67 High-school subj

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

1-9-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Quote of the Day

"I may be a brain in a vat. I don't have evidence that I am a free living organism."

–Alma's Biology Professor

Amherst Weather

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 15	HIGH: 31 LOW: 10	HIGH: 29 LOW: 13

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Kielbasa Grinder

Carrot Onion Schine (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

Beans and Rice (vegan)

DINNER

FAT TUESDAY/ MARDI GRAS!!

Chicken Mamou

Shrimp & Sausage Jambalaya

Black Eyed Peas Jambalaya (vegan)

all your base are belong to us.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Adam Martignetti
Photo Technician — Scott Eldridge
Copy Editor — David Troupes
Production Supervisor — Jess Grant
Production Staff — John Dicker, Rick Alcid

What teams will have their bubbles burst? Check out page 7 for tourney talk.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Tuesday, February 27, 2001 | 12

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Minutemen to invade Philly

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts men's basketball coach James "Bruiser" Flint played for St. Joseph's back in the mid-1980s. If the former player was a casual fan, he would probably be very proud of the success his alma mater is having, and would be rooting for the Hawks to improve their 23-4 (13-1 Atlantic 10) record, as well as their No. 25 national ranking.

Unfortunately for Flint, instead of kicking back and watching St. Joe's attempt to pick up its 10th straight win and 18th victory in its last 19 contests, the fifth year coach will be forced to lead his Minutemen into battle against a team that has clearly established itself as the best in the A-10.

And even though UMass (13-12, 11-3 A-10) has also been playing well of late, winning 11 of its last 14 games to get over .500 for the first time since the opening day of the year, the Maroon and White knows that it will need one of its best games of the season if it is going to have any chance of toppling the conference's most elite group of players.

MEN'S B-BALL
UMASS @ ST. JOSEPH'S
TUESDAY 9 PM
91.1 FM-WMUA
PLAY- MATT FEATO
COLOR- ADAM DEYOUNG

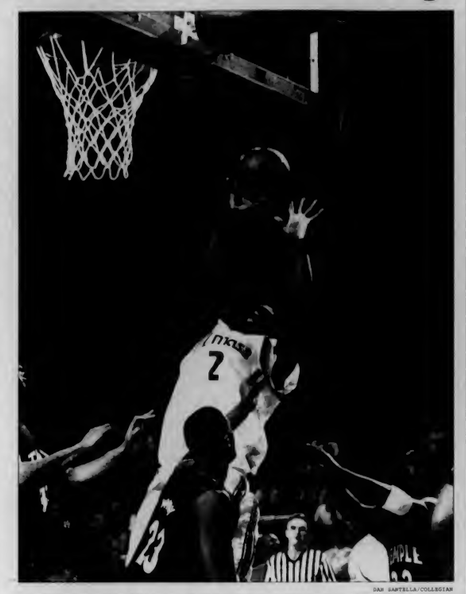
In the 2000-01 campaign, the Hawks have absolutely ripped apart most of their competition, crushing Duquesne by 20 last Saturday for their latest win. In fact, Xavier has been the only A-10 team to defeat St. Joseph's, squeaking out a win on Jan. 20 in Cincinnati.

At home, St. Joe's has been especially dangerous, and that does not bode well for a Massachusetts squad that will travel down to the Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse tonight for a 9:30 p.m. tip off. The Hawks are 11-1 at home and their one loss, a Dec. 11 defeat at the hands of Big Five rival Villanova, didn't even come at the Fieldhouse, but instead at the Palestra, a home away from home for the Philadelphia team.

Marvin O'Connor is probably the most dangerous player on St. Joe's, averaging 21.1 points a game, good enough for second best in the conference. The junior swingman is far from the only offensive weapon the Hawks have, however, as guards Jameer Nelson and Na'im Crenshaw compliment O'Connor by averaging 12.2 and 11.8 PPG, respectively.

Center Bill Phillips is also an offensive threat, averaging 11.9 points to go along with a team-leading 9.4 rebounds a game. Damian Reid supports Phillips on the boards by pulling down 6.8 rebounds of his own.

As far as passing goes, Nelson is the team's floor leader, dishing out a conference-leading 6.3 assists per game. The freshman phenom has been the main difference between this year's team and last year's, picking



DAN BARTELLA/COLLEGIAN
Jackie Rogers and the Minutemen will have a tough task when they travel to Philadelphia tonight to take on St. Joseph's. The Hawks, ranked 18th in the nation, boast a 23-4 record.

apart defenses almost at will. Just one example of what he can do took place earlier in the year on Jan. 16 against Temple, when he killed the Owls' matchup zone for 16 points and seven assists in leading his team to a 22-point blowout.

Last season, the Hawks were nothing compared to what they are now, only going 13-16 (7-9 A-10). When the Minutemen played them on Jan. 16 of 2000 in Philly, Monty Mack scored 19 points in order to help UMass to the 73-69 win. Later in the year at the William D. Mullins Center, the results were similar, as

Turn to PHILLY, page 7

A-10 tourney is UMass' last shot

There's a light on the horizon, but it's dim and distant.

In order for the Massachusetts women's basketball team (11-16, 6-10 Atlantic 10) to redeem itself, it must prove that it is a better team than the one that finished with the school's worst record since 1991-1992. There are a few people who still believe that UMass can salvage its season, and that it can turn some heads in the conference tournament.

There are other critics who believe that, if this team hasn't played its best ball yet, it's never going to.

MATTHEW BURNSAL

Head coach Joanie O'Brien has had her hands full all season long. She lost her most prolific scorer, junior co-captain Nekole Smith, before competition ever started. She only had one senior on her roster, and half way through conference play O'Brien lost sophomore guard Ebony Pegues to injury for the remainder of the year. The 10th-year coach also had to deal with the losses of sophomore center Jen Butler for a short span and shooting guard Kristin Cannon for most of the past month.

But the problem that has most bewildered O'Brien and her coaching staff has been the lack of composure that this squad has exhibited. O'Brien's squad boasts nine underclassmen, and those nine have accounted for a majority of the problem. But the composure issue that plagued the Minutewomen at the onset of the year was just as prevalent in the last few games. UMass ended its regular season with a four game losing streak.

"To be honest with you, I feel we're a team that has underachieved," O'Brien said. "Before the season, we had all these aspirations that you think people can achieve. And as a team, we didn't beat anybody. We didn't beat a single team that we weren't supposed to beat."

This has been O'Brien's worst season since her inaugural year in 1991-92. This team produced the fewest points per game (58.1) since O'Brien's first season while shooting a humble 35 percent, the same as the Penn State grad's initial squad.

"Are we not good enough? Maybe," O'Brien said. "We have a lot of players who are very talented. We just haven't gotten to that next level yet."

Perhaps the biggest shame this season has been how senior point guard Kathy Coyner's career has ended. Coyner, a two-season co-captain, has played incredibly well in the past four years, with highlights such as 1,000 points scored and an NCAA tournament appearance (1998) on her basketball resume. To end her career with a losing record is unjust.

But the opportunity still looms large that UMass can redeem its season with a strong run in the conference tourney. The Minutewomen are pitted against rival Rhode Island on Friday, and the winner of that game will face No. 1 seed Xavier, who is ranked 9th in the nation.

"We're going to find out what kind of character we have," O'Brien said. "We can quit right now, or we can turn around and fight. We know we haven't played even close to what we're capable of playing. It's just going to be a matter of how hard we're going to fight."

UMass will have to take the tourney one game at a time in order to make its mark, and though Rhode Island is the lowly ninth seed, the Rams present a world of problems for the Minutewomen.

The last time UMass and URI matched up, it was ugly. UMass scored a mere 15 points in the first half and lost, 46-35, in Kingston. It was a game to forget about as soon as it was over, but is one that now has to be revisited, as UMass has a chance at revenge.

"That might have been the worst offensive game I've ever seen in my life," O'Brien said. "It was a game when we had no patience, no composure. We made

Turn to WOMEN A-10, page 7

Water polo splits weekend

By Alison Sciamanna
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's water polo team returned to Amherst from the New England Invitational in Providence, Rhode Island with a win and a loss. Ranked 14th in the National Collegiate Women's Water Polo Poll, it now stands at 3-2 on the season. The Minutewomen crushed Queens College 8-2 in their first match-up on Saturday and dropped a heartbreaker to host – and 13th ranked – Brown University 8-7 in the second game of the day. Sunday's scheduled game against the Crimson of Harvard was cancelled due to inclement weather.

UMass opened up the tournament on Saturday morning against Queens College. The Maroon and White was not expecting much from their competition and the game lived up to those expectations.

When it was over, Massachusetts had six players in the scoring column. Sophomore Kelly Chassy continued her consistent effort on offense with three goals. Junior captain Megan Perry, sophomores Mattie Newell and Amy Black and freshman Jen Allen tallied single goals. All-America goalie Dana Sinkwich posted three saves, while freshman reserve goalie Emily Knight also recorded a save.

"I think there is definitely room for improvement," Perry said. "It will just be a matter of getting used to each other in the pool."

According to Perry, the team needs improvement in breaking the drop and on its drives as well as its level of aggression on the outside. The team's strong point, on the other hand, is its offense.

"We have a lot of great shooters," Perry said.

The big game of the weekend for the Maroon and White was against Brown University. Unfortunately for the Minutewomen, the Bears squeaked by them by one goal in the 8-7 loss. Once again Chassy was key on offense, as she and fellow classmate and Californian Amy Black both chipped in two goals. Other scorers included Perry, junior captain Anne Dettloff and senior captain Sarah Newell.

"We are an overall better team than Brown, but they've all played together for a year now," Perry added. We don't even have six players that have all played together before."

Goalie Sinkwich recorded one save in the loss.

"I think we felt we had a really good game against Brown," sophomore forward Mattie Newell said. "We played really good defense and really good offense. We came out strong which is something we don't usually do. We need to work on getting to know each other better."

According to Newell, the mistakes being made are typical early in the season and can be perfected as the season goes on.

The Minutewomen meet up with the Bears for a rematch on March 6 in Providence, where the team hopes to avenge its loss.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Junior captain Megan Perry helped the Minutewomen come away with a split in this weekend's contests.

Softball drops four of five in Atlanta

By Jim Pignatiello
Collegian Staff

A trip south in February is usually a welcome occurrence that causes happy memories of time out of the snow and into warm, sunny weather. However, the 24th-ranked Massachusetts softball team's 1-4 record on its trip to Atlanta, Ga. last weekend for the National Fast Pitch Coaches Association Leadoff Classic will not be cause for any happy memories.

"We had been playing so well in practice," junior pitcher Jen Hadley said. "I thought we would have a more successful trip."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
It was a tough weekend for softball coach Elaine Sortino's team, as UMass went 1-4 in the National Fast Pitch Coaches Association Leadoff Classic.

Kansas 4, Massachusetts 1

Kansas hurler Kara Pierce dominated the Minutewomen in the Classic's opener. She held UMass to just three hits and one run. Sophomore Brandi Cross scored the lone run for the Maroon and White when freshman catcher Jamie Cahalan singled off Pierce.

Hadley struggled on the mound, giving up seven hits and four runs while striking out four.

"My pitches were a little flat," Hadley said. "The ball just wasn't moving well."

Arizona St. 5, Massachusetts 1

After a victory in the Louisville Slugger Championship in Tempe on Feb. 17, the sixth-ranked Lady Wildcats had all the momentum leading into their match-up against the Maroon and White.

UMass tried to swing the momentum in its direction, taking a one-run lead in the top of the second inning when Cahalan walked, then scored on an error. Arizona St. retaliated with two runs in the bottom of the inning to take the lead and never looked back, scoring three more unanswered runs.

Sophomore pitcher Kaila Holtz was tagged with the loss after giving up five earned runs on nine hits. The Minutewomen were only able to muster three hits.

Alabama 6, Massachusetts 3

The bats finally woke up early for UMass as it jumped out to an early 2-0 lead over the fourth-ranked Crimson Tide. Down 2-0 in the 5th, Alabama sent nine batters to the plate and scored five runs on its way to victory.

Senior hurler Carrie Jeffries went the full seven innings. She gave up six runs, four unearned, off nine hits and struck out five.

The three UMass runs came on three solo home runs by Cross, Holtz and junior Cherra Wheeler.

San Diego St. 1, Massachusetts 0

In what has become an ongoing theme for the Minutewomen in the early season, when Hadley pitches, UMass has trouble crossing the plate. The junior hurler was mixed up in a pitchers duel against the Lady Aztecs on Sunday, a game that was tied at zero into the seventh inning.

"I felt really good in warm-ups," Hadley said. "I felt like I was a the top of my game. I was really hitting my spots."

San Diego St. broke the tie in the top of the final inning on a one-out sacrifice fly, giving them a 1-0 lead and the eventual victory.

"We were knocking on the door," said Hadley. "We just ran out of time."

In the four games Hadley has pitched so far this sea-

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 9

The Massachusetts Daily
COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 90 | www.dailycollegian.com | Wednesday, February 28, 2001

The local comic Monkey-Box shifts its gaze to the serious world of publishing, and DMB's latest let-down. Turn to Arts for details.
ARTS p. 6

UMass completely blew it against St. Joe's last night. Turn to Sports if you feel you need the details.
SPORTS p. 12

"Declaration of War"

Protests of low ALANA numbers continue

By Jennifer Eastwood
Collegian Staff

Just under a hundred students united yesterday from for two hours starting at noon for a rally on the Student Union steps. That rally ultimately led to the group's invasion of the reception area of the Chancellor's office in the Whitmore Administration Building, demanding an end to the decline in numbers of ALANA and low-income students.

At noon, Senior Saliwa Shampande stepped up to the microphone and announced that the drop in ALANA and low-income students' numbers is offensive to the community.

Recounting the events of the past week, Shampande explained about the "ALANA graveyard" set up off to the side of the Student Union Building, which symbolizes all the ALANA and low-income students who have had to leave the University of Massachusetts as a result of cuts in financial aid and academic support programs.

"You're seeing this campus reflect less and less of what America reflects," Shampande continued, "and we want to provoke some responses today because so far we've gotten no response from the administration. Their silence is offensive."

He explained how as a land grant institution, UMass has a commitment to its students.

"People, something needs to be done, and if you don't fight racism everyday, you're going to lose!" he shouted to the crowd.

His colleague Tom Taafe soon addressed the audience, acknowledging that students need to build a connection between ALANA students and poor working class students, adding, "We're all being screwed."

He recalled how in 1996, UMass dramatically changed its admissions requirements.

"And what happened in 1996?" Taafe questioned, "William Bulger became president! He's a racist and led a racist campaign in the early 1970's in Boston. We're going to Bulger! If we don't do this now, and tied with the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System [MCAS] test, we could be looking at a 90% decline [in ALANA and low-income student numbers] in just two years!"

Senior Legal Studies major Rene Gonzalez shared the belief that something must be done to stop this decline, cautioning everyone to remain united in whatever happens.

"We are being completely wiped out because everybody is not connected," he said, hoping to stir some "pride and revolutionary duty" within the crowd.

Calling attention to the women of the audience, Afro-American Studies major sophomore Johnette Ellis remarked, "A lot of women haven't been stepping up to the plate here at UMass."

Observing on how women can be forgotten in the struggle, she said that she wanted her message to reach out to people.

"We need both sides of the army – men and women! The war will be more successful if everyone joins together," said Ellis.

Political Science major junior Christopher Rue questioned the audience on if they are tiring of attending rallies and just talking.

"Racism needs to end. You've got to know how the system works, and the system is screwing us!" he thundered.

He reported that he would not give up on this struggle, or his people, as applause boomed through the air.

"The population, not leaders, lead a Movement," senior Toussaint K. Lacoste shouted to the crowd. "We need to have a collective of people to attack this system. Black people aren't the only block of oppression. Ask all underrepresented groups to join together to attack on all fronts."

He questioned the white community's support on these issues, asking white students, "If you are not racist, what are you doing to rid the world of racism?"

Finally, Shamapande addressed the audience once more, reporting specific problems in the UMass community, including the drop of Black students (213 to 119 from 96 to 2000) and Cape Verdean students (31 to 12 from 96 to 2000) and the recent requirements of the MCAS.

SCOTT ELDRIDGE/COLLEGIAN/COLLEGIANPICS.SMYAHOO.COM
Saliwa Shamapande and Tom Taafe lead the march from the Student Union to the Whitmore building and Chancellor Scott's office.

The crowd responded to each point with, "Hell no!"

"Do you as an institution care?" he questioned. "Does this University need black students?"

"Hell yeah!" the crowd answered.

Shampande said that the time for talking about this issue was at an end. "We beat this one to death," he commented. "What do we want?"

The now anxious crowd replied, "Justice!"

"When do we want it?" Shampande asked.

"Now!" was the response, as the crowd began to move towards the Whitmore Administration Building, continuously yelling: "Who's school? Our school!" and "No justice! No peace!"

In front of Memorial Hall, Shampande paused the crowd and employed them to unify their message.

"When I ask, 'What do we want?' you answer, 'Bulger!' When I shout, 'When do we want him?' you say, 'Now!' That's right! We want him to come from Boston to this campus!"

As the demonstrators' voices joined in unison and rhythmically clapped their hands, students' faces could be seen staring out of the windows of the Herter classroom, wondering what their fellow students were doing.

The doors to all offices in Whitmore had been closed just prior to the group's entrance. As the masses of bodies moved through the building's halls, the office personal peered out from their windows in amazement.

Finally, the group moved upstairs after circling the bottom floor once, steadily clapping their hands and stomping their feet.

"No justice! No peace!" the shouts continued as students crowded into the reception area of the Chancellor's office.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos addressed the crowd, "Okay, I heard your message. I'm happy you're expressing your freedom of expression, but that's enough."

Taafe began, "Chancellor Javier, we are here to demand..."

"We take no demands!" Cevallos responded sharply, igniting the chants once again.

Cevallos informed the crowd that he was going to get the UMass picketing code. Taafe was aghast. "That's a land speed record for calling on the picketing code," he said. "It's disrespectful! They have to learn respect! Until they learn to respect us, we'll just hang out here!"

Reentering with copies of code, Cevallos distributed the papers throughout the crowd, pointing out code number three – which prohibits students from blocking free entry or free exit from buildings.

"You should be with us!" one frustrated ALANA female yelled to the chancellor in response to his actions. "You're not white!"

With her comment left unacknowledged, she and the rest of the crowd cleared a pathway through the reception room and down the long hall. A policeman also entered the room at that time to ensure that the students would continue to adherer to the code.

Various people questioned Cevallos about the cutting of the English as a Second Language, Women of Color, and Bilingual Collegiate programs and the increased funding for the Honors College and the Distant Learning program.

Taafe commented how university Admissions officers had told him that money for finical aid is continuously set-aside for people in the Honors College before anyone else is considered for the grants. However, Cevallos disagreed, claiming to have no knowledge of this practice.

As an employee of parking services, Rue stated, "Last year we [parking services] made close to one million dollars. Let me stress that – one million dollars, and where did that money go?" he asked Cevallos whose response was that the money was needed to fix potholes on campus roads.

"They only fixed potholes in the red lots!" Rue boomed and continued to explain how and where the university could get pothole repair done for cheep or nonexistent fees, pointing out that the money could (and should) have gone somewhere in

Turn to RALLY page 3

Angry students seize Whitmore for two hours

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

The Whitmore Administration building closed several of its offices yesterday as protestors invaded the building. The Bursar's office and the Registrar's office were closed just a few minutes before the group of roughly one hundred students swept through the building, and remained closed for most of the duration of the protest.

"We assumed the students would come here," Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos explained. "We let people know that students were coming."

As the protestors were making their way through the ground floor of the building, upstairs the corridors were quiet and empty. Cevallos' office remained open, but the Chancellor's office was closed, and the reception area was vacated at least five minutes before the group made it up the stairs.

The doors leading to the hallway that contained the Provost's office were locked.

Several administrators stood waiting for the mob, including Cevallos, Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin, and University of Massachusetts Police Chief John Luippold.

Deputy Chancellor and Chancellor designee Marcellete Williams was in the area, although only briefly appeared during the occupation of the Chancellor's reception area.

"I certainly support their [the students'] right to protest, but they must keep in mind the guidelines of the Picketing Code," Dean Vanin said. "They have an important message, and I would hate to see it lost in a situation where we have to take action."

The message to the administration was summed up in a handout that the protestors distributed. The document accuses the administration of "whitening" the University, citing declining African Latino Asian Native American (ALANA) enrollment and giving several figures.

"As of this fall and since September 1997, African American freshman enrollment has declined 45 percent (213 to 119). Since September 1996 Latino freshman enrollment has declined 41 percent (218 to 132)," the document reads. "And since 1996, the Cape Verdean freshman enrollment has declined 61 percent (31 to 12)."

Cevallos acknowledges the numbers, but says they can't always be trusted.

"You can do a number of things to manipulate numbers," Cevallos said. "The students were just making a point, but they don't have the full picture. People were playing with numbers."

Cevallos explained how while overall ALANA population has decreased, so has the total population of the University.

"Of course you're going to have less students of all kinds," Cevallos said. "What we have always looked at is not the raw numbers. We looked at percentages. Have we declined in the number of students of color? Yes. We were breaking the law before and we couldn't continue doing that."

Another protest concern was the retention rate of ALANA students, a concern that Cevallos shares, and assures that it is getting better.

"The worst thing we can do is shoot to have an "x" number of ALANA students as a goal and just have them fail," Cevallos said. "In reality we want to graduate every student we bring in."

Ryan Benharris contributed to this article

SCOTT ELDRIDGE/COLLEGIAN/COLLEGIANPICS.SMYAHOO.COM
Vice Chancellor Javier Cevallos (second from right) reads the Picketing Code to the group of protesters in the Chancellor's reception area.

GW Bush presents budget

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

President George W. Bush presented his tax plan to a joint session of Congress last night. The assembled Senators and Representatives welcomed the President with thunderous applause.

Bush's address outlined several of his tax proposals, plans that promise to pay down debts while increasing funding for education and protecting Social Security.

"Education is my top priority and by supporting this budget, you will make it yours as well. Reading is the foundation of all learning, so during the next 5 years, we triple spending, adding another $5 billion to help every child in America learn to read," Bush said. "Values are important, so we have tripled funding for character education to teach our children not only reading and writing, but right from wrong."

Social Security figured large in Bush's plan as well. Bush outlined several ideas that he believes will save Social Security for younger workers, while protecting current benefactors.

"My budget protects all $2.6 trillion of the Social Security surplus for Social Security and for Social Security alone," Bush said. Bush described his plan for saving Social security for younger workers as private savings accounts, which would give more control to the workers.

"To save the system, we must increase that by allowing younger workers to make safe, sound investments at a higher rate of return," Bush said. "Ownership, access to wealth, and independence should not be the privilege of a few. They are the hope of every American and we must make them the foundation of Social Security."

The President's tax cut, a central plank of Bush's campaign platform, was brought up near the end of Bush's hour-long address. According to the President's plan, there is enough money to not only pay down the national debt but also provide a tax cut to the nation. Bush's $1.6 trillion cut would be retroactive.

"We have increased our budget at a responsible four percent, we have funded our priorities, we have paid down all the available debt, we have prepared for contingencies and we still have money left over," Bush said. "The surplus is not the government's money, the surplus is the people's money."

The Democrats disagree. In a short response to the President's address, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle (D- South Dakota) blasted Bush's two trillion budget.

Daschle claims the budget threatens the economic well being of the country and that such a large tax cut would be harmful.

"We will work with him [Bush] and work hard, but when he insists on proposals that threaten the prosperity of all Americans we will fight and fight hard," Daschle said.

House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt (D-Missouri) shared his concerns on Bush's tax plan, claiming it tries to do too much.

"If what we heard tonight sounds too good to be true, it probably is," Gephardt said. "President Bush's budget numbers simply don't add up. Ours do. His plan leaves no money for anything except tax cuts. Ours does."

BENEFITS

NORTHAMPTON – Northampton Survival Center presents their Fourteenth Annual Benefit Boogie, featuring the band Trailer Park and a giant raffle, from 8 to 11:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 10 at the Inn at Northampton. Proceeds will help to provide food boxes to people in need. Tickets are 15 dollars, and are available at Beyond Words bookshop in Northampton. Call (413) 586-6564 for more information.

CONTESTS

THERE!!ED – "Bright Spots." Create and submit 30 or 60 second video shorts promoting nonviolence and peacemaking. $2,000 in prizes will be awarded to groups and individuals in several categories. For more information and entry forms, see www.crocket.com/~traprock or call the Traprock Peace Center at (413) 773 7427.

SOCIAL EVENTS

UMASS – "Just a Noshi" presented by FORUM. Eat lunch with other Jewish UMass students and have an informal discussion about Jewish life. This event takes place every Wednesday in the Bluewall from 12:15 p.m. to 1 p.m. For more information, contact Hillel House at (413) 549-1710.

FILM/VIDEO SCREENINGS

UMASS – "Multicultural Film festival, "Border Crossing: Cinema and Video at Century's Turn," will be held on dates from February 16 to May 16. The series highlights the fluidity and permanence of artistic, technical, geographic, cultural, political and personal borders and includes film and vide screenings and panel presentations. On April 5 at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 253, will be "Hamburger and Dolma: Cross Cultural Identity" presented by the director Caroline Babayan. Five Armenian women's stories are interwoven to shape a collective narrative about the intergenerational transmission of trauma, the complexity of identity and the abiding power of family and friendship. For more information, call Film Studies at 545-3694.

RELIGIOUS

AMHERST – Shabbat services are held on Fridays at 6 p.m. followed by Shabbat dinner at 7:15 p.m. in Hillel House.

LECTURE/DISCUSSION

UMASS – "The Gender of Development: Reproductive Politics and the Birth of Development Policy in Puerto Rico." Laura Briggs, from the University of Arizona (Women's Studies), will give this lecture at 5 p.m. in Campus Center 905 on Thursday, March 1. For more information, contact the UMass Women's Studies office.

UMASS – "A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy," as part of the Asian Dance and Music Program's two-day festival "Illuminations from the Middle East," will be presented by Professor

Cultural Events Calendar

Khali Barhoum of Stanford University. The lecture, including a demonstration, will be held at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall on March 9. Admission is 4 dollars, free for students and seniors. For more information, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

CONFERENCE

SMITH COLLEGE – A four day international conference will mark the launch of Smith College's new women's studies journal "Meridians: feminism, race, transnationalism" amid worldwide celebrations of international Women's Day on Thursday, March 8. Conference events are open to the public, free, and accessible. Registration is requested. See www.smith.edu/meridians for details. For more information, call (413) 585-4222 or 585-2206 (TTY).

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "From Abortion Rights to Social Justice: Building the Movement for Reproductive Freedom," an annual conference for student and community activists, will be held from March 30 to April 1. Free housing, babysitting, sign language interpreters, and meals are available by advance registration. The conference is free, but registration in advance needed. For more information, call (413) 559-5416.

THEATER/DANCE

UMASS & SMITH COLLEGE – The second installment of "Words She Spoke" will be performed by Tracie Morris at 7:30 p.m. in the Smith College Davis Center on March 1. This series is part of New WORLD Theater's Future Aesthetics Project, presenting the intersections between theater and spoken word, performance poetry, hip-hop and youth culture. The following installment will feature spoken word with Staceyann Chin and Melinda Corazon Foley at 6:30 p.m. in the UMass W. E. B. Du Bois Library on March 5. The final performance, featuring Caridad de la luz, will be held at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery at UMass on April 5. Free admission to all events.

UMASS – "Cliff Matias." This event, which features the demonstration of traditional Native American dances by a Taino/Cherokee performer and educator, will take place at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery on Tuesday, March 6. For more information, call (413) 545-5177.

UMASS – The Stonewall Center will host a 15th Anniversary Celebration, featuring celebrity comics Harvey Fierstein and Kate Clinton, at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Concert Hall on Saturday, March 10. Fierstein is an award-winning playwright, actor and gay rights advocate. Clinton is a political monologist and comedian. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "Stop Kiss" traces the experiences of Callie and Sarah, two young women who are dealing with all the usual young adult issues as well as falling in love with each other. The show explores the theme of honesty, and the hostility of a homophobic society to such honesty. The show will take place at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater on April 5 through 7, and April 10 through 13. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "Nuyorican Stories" will be performed with sidesplitting humor by the members of Culture Clash, who blend poetry, dance, music and visual arts. The show will be performed at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on Thursday, April 19. For tickets, which range from $5-10, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "I Remember Mapa," a comical one-man show starring Alec Mapa, will be performed one night only at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on May 10. Based on his true-life experiences, the piece chronicles Mapa's colorful adventures through rise, fall and rebirth as a gay Filipino American actor in the entertainment industry. For as a gay Filipino American actor in the entertainment industry. For tickets, which range from $5-10, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – "The Grieg Trio in Concert." Praised widely for their outstanding musicianship, technical polish and rich sonority, the Norwegian group will perform works by Haydn and Ravel, as well as a new work commissioned by the Trio, at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 1 in Bezanson Recital Hall. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "The National Orchestra of Spain." Celebrated guitar player Pepe Romero joins the renowned National Orchestra of Spain in a concert featuring the works of nine nineteenth and twentieth century composers on Thursday, March 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Concert Hall. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

SOUTH HADLEY – Andrew Russo, a graduate of the Juilliard School, has been called "a reincarnated Liszt." He will perform a program including Chopin, Copeland, Crumb, and Borodin at 3 p.m. on Sunday, March 11 in the Kosciuszko Foundation Southern New England Chapter. For more information, call (413) 734-7052 or 532-1546.

UMASS – "AEROS" features gold medal-winning gymnasts from the Romanian Gymnastics Federation, directed by Daniel Ezralow, David Parsons and Moses Pendleton in collaboration with "Stomp" creators Luke Cresswell and Steve McNicholas. This unusual performance troupe will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Hall on Wednesday, March 14.

UMASS – "Musical Illuminations from the Middle East." Hear cutting edge world music from Anatolia, a Massachusetts ensemble combining Turkish and Arab traditions to showcase the arts of the Middle East. The event will take place in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. on Sunday, March 10. Tickets range from $7-20, and are available through the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

This calendar, which previews local events of interest to under-represented groups on campus and in the community, runs on Wednesdays. Submit notices of events to Tanya Mannes, Diversity Editor. Standard entry forms are available in the Collegian office.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1992 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1991. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perrotuiti Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

2001 REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice is soliciting innovative proposals for educational activities and programs which have the following goals:

- promote mutual respect
- enhance understanding of community, diversity and/or social justice issues
- encourage collaboration between different campus communities and constituencies
- build a greater sense of community

ELIGIBILITY
Undergraduates, graduate students, staff and faculty, as well as individuals or groups

AWARD CRITERIA: Proposed Activities

- must bring together persons from two or more communities or constituencies in joint activities
- must demonstrate collaboration of communities or constituencies in the proposal planning process
- should represent new programs or collaborating partnerships as opposed to annual programs or continuations of past projects
- should be completed by the end of the fall 2001 semester

EXAMPLES OF ACTIVITIES WHICH COULD BE FUNDED:
Forums, speakers, film/video series, seminars, workshops, training programs, public education programs, outreach activities to secondary schools and home communities, community public service programs, faculty/student collaboration to develop new courses, performance events, printed materials, posters.

PROPOSAL COMPONENTS:

- a clear description of how the proposed activities will meet both the goals and award criteria
- a list of groups involved and contact person or persons responsible for the activity
- a plan for evaluating the impact and effectiveness of the activities
- a time line indicating when the activities would start and conclude
- a budget

AWARD RANGES: $250 to $1500, with all awards expected to total $15,000
SUBMISSION DATE AND LOCATION: mailed, emailed to wmw@admin.umass.edu, faxed to 577-2455 or hand delivered by noon on Friday, April 6, 2001 to the Chancello's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice, c/o Office of Human Relations, 206 Middlesex House.
PROPOSAL REVIEW AND AWARD ANNOUNCEMENTS: A committee of the Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice reviews all proposals. Awards will be announced during the week of April 16, 2001.
PROPOSAL WRITING ASSISTANCE: http://www.umass.edu/funding/FundHowTo.html

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION: Contact the Office of Human Relations at wmw@admin.umass.edu or (413) 545-0851.

UMASS The UMass Index Yearbook

ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2001
SENIOR PORTRAITS
Beginning February 26th.
Make your appointment now by calling 1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)

DAVOR
Walsworth Publishing Company

Order Your 2001 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or
Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)

After reaching a standstill with Vice Chancellor of student affairs the group marches out, chanting, "We'll be back!"

SGA meets tonight

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

After a three-month break, the Student Government Association [SGA] will meet tonight for the first time this semester.

The SGA Senate, which was thrown out due to unconstitutionality, will once again get back to business, only this time with a new, constitutionally ratified Senate.

For the past two months of this present semester the SGA had been making all decisions under Coordinating Council, but as of today, all responsibilities will lay within the Senates hands once again.

"I would hope that we could all put our personal stuff behind us and start doing work again for the campus," Associate Speaker Michel McCarthy said.

After barely making the needed five percent student vote last week, and getting the elections ratified Sunday, a petition was filed against six members of the SGA Chancellor of Elections Sam Blasiak, Speaker Jim Eltringham, SGA President Jeffrey Howe, Attorney General of the SGA Jonathan Laubinger, Associate Speaker Michel McCarthy and Student Trustee Seth Avakian were all named as components to the petition stating that the elections were once again unconstitutional.

The petition, which was submitted by Zachary Spilman and others, explains that the elections were unconstitutional based on the fact that the Senate members representing the Non-Residential On-Campus housing do not have an area government. According to the SGA By-laws "Non-Residential On-Campus students should have an area government, but at this time do not. "I don't think that the elections will be thrown out due to a flaw in our Bylaws," Eltringham said. "There are roughly 100 pages put together by a band of people who are 18 to 22 years old, there is obviously going to be some inconsistencies within the constitution."

Eltringham continued to explain that he felt that the SGA was put in a "Catch 22" position.

"[Spilman] has a point, but it's a 'Catch 22' position, and it's up for the Student Judiciary to decide."

The petition which was submitted to the SGA Student Judiciary, will not be on tonight's agenda, but McCarthy explained that he was not sure if it would be addressed at the Senate meeting or not.

With only a small agenda on the table for this evening, the Senate will discuss two main motions. One issue is that the Senate breaks the tie for the Coolidge Senate seat.

Another motion up for discussion is the appointment of Mike Taugher, Justin Provencher, Luis Nieves, Brian Thompson, and Peter Zwahlen to the Ways of Means Committee.

"I hate that we have to appoint committee members before the Chairs, but we need some people to be in place," Eltringham said.

Eltrinham went on to further explain that he felt that other issues would be taken out of committee at tonight's meeting.

As the new SGA Senate meets for the first time, members have expressed their desire for a more active and productive SGA Senate.

"It's going to be business as usual, but not the same business as last semester," Eltringham said. "Last semester wasn't average. I think that people who have problems with one another have learned to ignore one another and are willing to work together as needed this semester."

Eltringham continued to explain his expectations for the new Senate. He expressed the fact that he was disappointed in last semester and he has hopes of restoring the SGA's image on campus.

"Last semester was a real wake up call. Things just got so bad that everyone was about to call it quits," Eltringham said. "We had such a bad image, it's hard when you know that, but it's worse when you know that you deserve it."

The SGA is still planning an SGA Road Trip in which the Senate meetings would visit various resident halls on campus in order to open up student awareness.

"Right now were just looking at putting one meeting on in Southwest on April 11, but were hoping to possibly do more," Eltringham said. "I really hope that it doesn't begin and end with me though."

Eltringham continued to explain his main goals for the remainder of the semester. He expressed the need for a productive semester as well as strong Senators who would be able to lead in the future of the SGA.

"I hope that students will be able to look back, even if they don't know that we [SGA] did it, and say that this little change whatever it may be made there experience here at the University of Massachusetts more enjoyable," Eltringham said. "I hope that we will be able to rope some of the new Senators in so that they will want to stick with the SGA and not get frustrated when things get negative, and not inflate when things get positive, but stick with it and keep the torch going."

Tonight's Senate meeting will be held in the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

■ rally

continued from page1

greater need of it.

Cevallos also explained how UMass rates admissions applicants on a ten-point scale, and one of those points are saved for the basis of race. The crowd's sarcastic and drawn-out "oohh" showed their displeasure in this.

Under Shanpande's leadership, the group moved downstairs again chanting, "What do we want? Bulger! When do we want him? Now!" and finally "We'll be back!"

Everyone gathered in the main lobby of Whitmore as Shamapande apologized for cutting it short but felt it necessary.

He invited the group to participate in silent protests on both Wednesday and Thursday and to attend a meeting set for 6:00 p.m. at Farthfoods in order to prepare the movement to speak with Bulger.

"But think about it," Shanpande said swelling with emotion, "They shut down this building before we got here. That's how much power we have."

Yet Shanpande's hopeful message still left some unhappy. Sociology major junior Tenesha Horne said she was very disappointed in Cevallos' response.

"As we were leaving the room, I turned to a friend of mine [who's also Latino] and said that he [Cevllos] was just a disgrace to the Latin community, and he heard us too," she said. "By the look on his face, I at least made him think about what he had done."

By 2:05, everyone had dispersed, and all of the Whitmore offices reopened their doors.

SHOOT...SHOOT...DRIVE (away)

The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN PRESENTS

ATLANTIC 10 ShootOut

CO-ED TEAM HOOP SHOOTING CONTEST
Win a Trip to Philly and a 2001 Chevy Tracker

SHOOT...From six spots on the floor. Qualifiers shoot at halftime of a Men's Game
SHOOT...Winners ShootOut in Philly at the Atlantic 10 Championship— March 9 & 10
DRIVE...The ShootOut Champions drive away, EACH* in a New Chevy Tracker*

2-Year Lease

Official Sponsors
CHEVY TRUCKS LIKE A ROCK
GMAC US AIRWAYS
verizon
Festival Sponsor
Stride Spring Ales

QUALIFYING ROUND:
Thursday, March 1st @ The Cage @ 3pm
CAMPUS SHOOTOUT FINALS:
Halftime - March 3rd vs. St. Bonaventure @ Mullins Center

FREE & OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS TO ENTER:
LOG ON: www.atlantic10.org
Or See Intramural Director for Details

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

George Bush:
The controversy is over

It's finally over. And we have to accept it.

The Miami Herald finished it's recount of the Dade County ballots from the Presidential election this past week, and concluded that, even by the loosest standards for chads and miscast votes, Al Gore did not win the election.

This is a verdict that many in this state and on this campus will find a jagged pill to swallow. A hotbed of liberalism of all stripes, we have clung to the belief that we were robbed, that the election was stolen, and that George Bush, a man constantly derided, was an impostor, a charlatan, and a thief.

We were wrong.

It turns out that the election was not stolen. It was close, this is true, but the outcome which was cemented at last month's inauguration was the one which should have happened.

Does this mean that all questions regarding the election should be forgotten? No, of course not. Irregularities involving the treatment of minorities, the placement of voting booths, and even the controversial Supreme Court decision itself will be and should be debated and talked about for the good of the next election. The election of 2000 was by no means clean and pure, and this Herald recount cannot wipe away the stain of that.

As for this election, the one which resulted in our current president, the time has come to finally just exhale and let it go.

If you do not like the man, if you do not agree with his policies, if you think that George Bush has no right to be the President, then you have every right to that opinion, but you can no longer state it as fact that he has no right to be there. The American people chose him.

We must all now figure out how to deal with him. For conservatives, this should be less of a problem – even if you wanted McCain or one of the other primary candidates, Bush is at least from your party and you have the ability to find at least some common ground with the man.

Liberals have a distain, and intensive dislike for Bush. Like it or not, however, he is the leader of the free world, and he has the power to set his policies. The liberal establishment must work with Bush on some legislation, fight him on others, but never lose sight of the fact that he is the president, and the he was elected, not they.

Thanks to the Herald and their hard work the nation can move on. The route may have been flawed, but we all now can rest assured that the final outcome was consistient with the traditions and the procedures that our country has held most dear.

Move on, America. The time has come and there is no other way. As President Bush gives his State of the Union address tonight, realize that you are not staring at some impostor to the office, but the man America chose.

Finally, he is everyone's president.

MATTHEW DESPRES

The finest spring tradition

Let us go forth awhile, and get better air in our lungs. Let us leave our closed rooms...The game of ball is glorious. – Walt Whitman

This column has been written hundreds of times. The sentiment has been passed down for years among family and friends, and published in various forms of media for just as long. There are few, if no, new angles to cover; it's raised each Spring and beaten dead again in the Fall.

And yet none of that matters.

Each year, as the snow stops falling and begins pulling away from the earth, revealing the life that had colored our lives only a few months before, we revisit it. It's become a tradition for the residents of Massachusetts, a rite of passage that each person undergoes in some form or another. We stand together, bravely rallying the troops, in preparation for the long walk to October.

And each year, as Red Sox fans, that walk comes to a heartbreaking end, always a game or series too soon. We hang onto the bats of our beloved Sox every season, letting every pitch, every out, dictate our mood. We live and die by how the boys of Fenway perform, using their success to express our own joy, and their failure to vent our own personal frustrations.

In 2001, however, the first year of the new millennium, all of this will change. This is, of course, our year, the year, in which, for the first time since 1918, the Boston Red Sox deliver us a World Series. Let me be the first to tell you, this year at least.

Perhaps I'm jumping the gun, though. After all, after we have gone through the paces of Spring Training and other pre-season hoopla, the season stands more than one month away, the second of April, when "Our Boys" travel to Camden Yards for an afternoon bout with the Baltimore Orioles. The wheels of the media machine have been drawn out already, greased with the anticipation of a new season and new opportunity. For the citizens of Red Sox Nation, however, those same wheels have been turning since the last out of the 2000 season, for the Fenway Faithful never rest. They hole up in the winter, pouring over statistics and debating with Ted Sarandis on where newly acquired Manny Ramirez will be stationed. They debate and predict the game, live and breathe it, because it's something they're born with. For most New England natives, a pure love of the Sox and hatred of the Yankees is as natural as growing up. It happens, and you accept it.

Regrettably, my Red Sox gene remained dormant for most of my youth. My childhood centered around the black and gold of the Boston Bruins, and the subsequent summers were spent regrouping from the inevitable pain they caused me each Spring. Somewhere along the line, however, I realized that the eternal hope sprung by the Red Sox each year was enough to compensate for the feeling of loss induced by other local teams. Yes, in the end, the Sox themselves brought back that pain, but for that brief moment early in the year, everything was made to be ok.

The Red Sox own springtime in Boston. Win or loss, rain or shine, the story that unfolds with them each year brings us closer.

We watch the game for the athleticism and intelligence of those who play it. We watch for the beauty and individuality of each major league ballpark, and how Our Boys react to the atmosphere in each. We watch because the game slows time, because one team will win, and that the victory will be decided by the men on the field and not some artificial timekeeper. We watch because maybe, just maybe, the Yankees will falter this year.

Mostly, though, our attention returns each Spring because every season carries with it a very real chance of glory. This season, perhaps more than any other in recent memory, has that aura surrounding it. The Red Sox of 2001 have a dominant pre-season roster in place, a jigsaw puzzle of players who, if arranged correctly by Manager Jimmy Williams, will make this state happy for quite some time.

We have Nomar Garciaparra, and can rest assured that he will once again give us airtight defense at short and flirt with .400 all season.

We have Carl Everett, Manny Ramirez and Dante Bichette, and can rest assured knowing that, when all cylinders are firing, we have one of the most potent lineups in the league.

We have Cone, Nomo and El Guapo, ready to ride the mound deep into the Fall. Chants of washed up? Not here, not yet, at least. This is Spring, and everyone is equal.

We have Pedro, who is nobody's equal.

If nothing else, we have Fenway. It is far from perfect and yet everything we want in a ballpark. Its' filthy underbelly pulsates with the life of the fans making their way to the stands. Go there. Go there, sit in the bleachers, and take in the beauty that is natural grass, that is the Green Monster. Search every nook that the old place has to offer. Bring your child, your sibling, your significant other, but above all, bring your undivided attention, because Fenway Park is baseball in its' purest form.

I'd like to think that some eight months from now, I will be able to look back at this column and smile as the Red Sox claim the World Series. People have been waiting quite some time and, yes, I suppose I could hold on a few more myself. It has to happen sometime, though, and this year, the first of the new millennium, would be as good a place as any to start.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist.

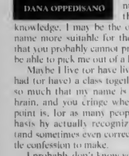
IT HAD BECOME SOMETHING OF A RITUAL EVERY SNOWFALL, THE OLD MAN WOULD "PROVE" TO THE TOWN THAT HIS DOWSING ROD COULD FIND WATER.
© 2001

Write for Ed/Op

What's up, umm, you? How are, umm, you?



DANA OPPEDISANO

Do you know my name? Wait, maybe that came out the wrong way. You see, I'm not assuming I have some sort of reputation or asking if you've read my column before. I guess what I'm really asking is, if you ran into me somewhere, would you know what my name is? I do suppose that my face popping up in the newspaper a couple of times a month might make me a little more recognizable. If you couple that with the fact that, to my knowledge, I may be the only Collegian columnist with a name more suitable for the opposite sex and a last name that you probably cannot pronounce, I guess you just might be able to pick me out of a lineup.

Maybe I live (or have lived) in your building. Maybe we had (or have) a class together. Maybe you hate my articles so much that my name is permanently tattooed on your brain, and you cringe when you see me on campus. The point is, for as many people who shock me on a regular basis by actually recognizing or remembering my name (and sometimes even correctly pronouncing it), I have a little confession to make.

I probably don't know yours.

Now, don't get me wrong, I'm not saying that because I'm one of those people who seems to have confused the fact that I write for a couple of papers in the area into thinking that I'm a pop-culture icon or something. I know that I'm not. Hell, I don't even think I'm a good writer, which explains why I'm still taken aback when people ask if I know Columnist X, who introduces themself at parties with "Hi, I'm Columnist X, I write for the Collegian." Really, how lame is that? The said fact that most people on this campus don't realize is that anyone who wants to make a statement or voice their opinion can write for this fine publication. They'll let any bonehead write – just look at me! Anyway, I'm losing my point here, which I don't even know if I made in the first place... oh yeah, the names thing.

If college has taught me one thing, it is that I am absolutely horrible with names, and no, I'm not talking about the people I meet when I'm half in the bag and slurring my words. I'm talking about the people whose names I feel as though I really should know. People in my smaller classes, my coworkers, my professors, cousins on my father's side, the people in my building, my dog. You name it, I can't remember it. I didn't even know my freshman year roommate's name until Spring Break. (How are you anyway, ummm...you!?!?)

Oh, and it gets worse. I'm one of those people who hates to ask someone what their name is. I'll try to nonchalantly ask everyone else in the room who this person I just gave my life story to is, and if that doesn't work, I'll just wait to get embarrassed. You know, like when you pick up the list for the Beer Pong table and say, "Jimbo? Who the hell is Jimbo, and why am I on his team?" Only to find out that Jimbo's not only standing right next to you, but that he also drove your car to the party, graduated high school with you, and now he's engaged to your sister.

And don't even get me started with those small groups in discussion. It hurts when I have to finally break it to the short blonde that smiles and says "Hey Dana!" no matter where I am when I see her, that I know her only as "the short blonde that smiles and says 'Hey Dana!' no matter where I am when I see her... from discussion class."

I don't know why I'm going to reveal this (because I know it's going to come back to haunt me), but here are a few sure-fire ways to tell if I know your name or not:

a) If you give me a personal greeting (like "what's up, Dana," "Yo D," etc.) and I don't return with a similar personalized greeting. I'll usually substitute some pronoun or another term of endearment in the place of a name. Basically, for guys, I like to use dude, brother, man, kid, and dogg. If you notice that I use these words when I see you, it's simple: I don't know your name. Hopefully, it's not that big of a deal. After all, I just can't find it amidst a brain that has already been crammed with useless knowledge (Hello, Linguistics).

If, deep down in your heart, you honestly believe that I do know your name and I still greet you in this manner- I DON'T LIKE YOU, STOP TALKING TO ME, DAMMIT!

b) Any time you greet me and I use a totally generic form of greeting, like "Hey, how are you?" or "What's up?," I probably don't actually know your name. I'd like to think that I'm friendly enough to always add the name of a person I'm speaking to when I make first contact, and if I don't, well then, I have no idea who the hell you are. Even if you do look familiar, you must have skipped down to this part of the article, because you would already know that I'm too damn shy to actually ask for your name again, so you get the Joe Blow "how are ya?"

c) I totally ignore you. Granted, this method works best with the person that became your best friend the other night when you were totally sloshed, and now that you're seeing them outside of that element, it's a bit awkward. Most people actually want this "new friend" to forget their name –now that they are seeing them for the first time sober – and won't go through the trouble to remember the chick from the other night's name (especially if she looks like she got hit with a bag of nickels).

I know, this totally sucks, and I may be coming off as a bit arrogant, but I really cannot help it. I can't remember people's names, and I guess I'm writing this as a sort of public apology to all the people out there who feel I should treat them with enough respect to actually remember who they are. I know I have limited space here, but here goes:

To dude, brother, and my boy in the triple downstairs, sorry about not knowing your name. To my sister's friend, the blonde chick with the bad eye shadow, I will call you by your first from now on. Hey, TA dude, I'll talk more in class Friday. To my editor dogg, I hope you like this article, and to that bitch who won't stop calling so freakin' early on weekend mornings and asking about classes, well... oh yeah, sorry Mom.

Dana Oppedisano is a Collegian Columnist.

IRAQ CANNOT KEEP ATTACKING OUR AIRCRAFT. THIS IS MY WAY OF SENDING BAGHDAD A MESSAGE!!
TO SADDAM
W
GOT YOUR MESSAGE I'M STILL HERE SO HOWS YOUR OLD MAN?
CARSON
2/21

Taking everything for granted

EMILY VACANTI

Do you remember when you were eight, ten or twelve years old? Do you remember running up stairs, climbing trees, and simply running around? How many of you actually thought that in ten, twelve, or fourteen years that that privilege would be revoked? I never thought that it would. Recently though, I came to the realization that I may never be able to climb stairs agan without pain.

This column is about taking things for granted. Seemingly little, everyday things that you would never think would disappear do so, and you had taken them for granted without realizing it. In my 22 years of life, I know that I have taken a lot for granted. I am not even going to pretend like I have been thankful for every good thing that has come my way. But now, this point, I cannot honestly see how I continued to take certain things for granted for years on end. There were even little signs over the years that should have made me realize what i was doing.

Last Friday I was at my internship. I was on my knees sorting through the newspapers for specific articles, as usual, when I heard a sound behind me. At that point I got up and twisted at the same time. This was a mistake My left knee is doing pretty badly. I cannot climb more than a flight and a half of stairs without pain, so twisting that knee was not a swift move. As for my right knee. I have not had much trouble with it, so I have not been too cautious when it comes to my activity with it. Needless to say, I should have been. As I got up, I felt something pop. Suddenly my knee really hurt. But I figured that it could not be that bad, just a simple twist. So I decided to try and put up with it. For the rest of the day I hobbled around but could not bend it without pain. I had to sit in a chair with arms so I could push myself up. It was not a good situation. By the time I got home, I realized that University Health Services might come in handy. They told me there that they thought I had torn something under my knee. If it were torn, then I would need surgery. If not, then my knee would only be sore for less than twenty-four hours. My knee hurt enough so that I could not walk through Saturday and Sunday without pain. I could hobble with a good deal of pain, but not walk comfortably. This means that I might need surgery. I took my left knee for granted, and now I really wish that I had not.

So many people take things like working joints for granted everyday without realizing it. I never thought that I would need surgery, or that I should take more care of how I move. Not even a year and a half ago when my mother told me that it was a fear of hers that something really bad would happen. At that point I had multiple ankle and wrist sprains, but nothing with my knees. So I blew her off and continued playing basketball and skating, and taking kickboxing and dancing. Little did I know that during my last semester of college both of my knees would stop working.

Taking things for granted is something that everyone does, almost on a daily basis. I have a lot of friends, like myself, who have cars on this campus. Many of us do not know how lucky we are. When my car was stolen last spring, I realized what a pain in the ass it was not having a car. I could not just go off and do as I pleased. It sucked, Every day since then I have been thankful for my car.

Getting an education is something else that many, many people take for granted. There are so many underprivileged people throughout the world that do not have the slightest chance to get an education, and yet there are so many people in college who are wasting theirs. Many students, I am not saying the majority, come to college to get away from their families so that they can stay out all night and party. They never have any intention of going to class and doing well. They hope that life will be handed to them. This does happen for a select few, but the majority of those people will wish that they had put work into their actual education. I am not taking my education for granted. I did at first, but then realized where I would be in school for years if I did not start attending class and doing work. I would be working a minimum wage job with little hope of a future. That is not where I want to be.

I have a challenge for everyone out there. It will show you the extent to which people take things for granted. When you walk around just observe everyone and what everyone has. One easy observation to make is how many students are walking around with cellular phones. Cellular phones are becoming more accessible to everyone everyday. Just little things like that show how much people do take for granted.

How many people drive to school, as opposed to taking the bus? How many people have the money to wear all Nike, Abercrombie and Fitch, Banana Republic, or any other expensive brand of clothing? How many people can buy all of their textbooks, instead of using those on reserve at the library? How many people can afford to take an extra year of school so that they do not kill themselves with both academics and extra-curricular activities? If you just make simple, everyday observations you can answer the first three inquiries with little or no difficulty. We all take so many things for granted, and yet very few of us realize it.

After this past Friday, my eyes have become more open. I no longer am taking my joints that actually work for granted. My friends have been so helpful since my knee stopped working. I know that it seems like I am taking them for granted, but I really do appreciate everything that they are doing for me to help me get through this. Doing things as simple as carrying my purse or grabbing a soda for me at the movies are things that I would not be able to do without them (thanks to both Rich and Sloane).

My request for everyone is to try to see just how much you are taking for granted and try and be appreciative of what you have. It may actually improve your life. Who knows, it may even prevent a future accident from occurring.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian Columnist.

Here nor there

SETH KOENIG

Originally, I sat down while really tired of brushing snow and ice off my car. After completing a several inch-long bitch session about that exact subject, I reread my masterpiece and realized there was next to no substance in it. With that in mind, I went back in and threw in some important information on timely issues that make this an inspiring editoral piece.

When I was a youth, the first snowfall was a magical experience, lightly frosting the green grass and pine needles before – over time – the world became consumed in a mystical whiteness. I would rush to the window and press my face against it, eager with the anticipation of sledding, snowball fights and cross country skiing.

Yes, cross country skiing. Shut up.

When the covering seemed deep enough, I'd pull on some wool socks, get into some long underwear and go outside to play.

Three or four hours later, my caring mother would find my motionless body in a nearby snowbank, and would kindly remind me that boots and a jacket also helped in avoiding hypothermia.

Still, I was young and having fun. And who really needs fingers and toes, anyway?

On the subject of Jane Swift becoming governor of Massachusetts, it's extremely important to note that women all over America have done amazing work while also running a family. I, for one, would like to think that all public figures – male or female – have family interests in mind, especially their own family. If I thought Paul Cellucci – who was, of course, selected to become the United States' ambassador to Canada, thus vacating the governor's seat – was neglecting his children because he was governor of this state, I'd think him less of a leader. Should we not extend that same mindset to a woman governor?

Does Paul Cellucci have any children? If you don't know, what does that tell you about how important that is?

The second snowfall of the year was almost as magical, oftentimes wiping out a day of school and allowing my friends and I to pelt one another with chunks of ice rolled up to resemble harmless balls of snow. Ah, the memories.

At the time, I couldn't drive, the house was always warm and there was always hot cocoa waiting for me in the friendly confines of my kitchen (once I regained consciousness).

Now, a year later, I have a different opinion on the subject. I'm now quite certain that snow is the fragmented embodiment of Satan himself, hell-bent on taking over the world in a viciously ironic cold precipitation.

If I have to unearth my car one more time before I drive home from work, I will hunt Mother Nature down and pummel her with a tire iron, so help me God. I've lived in New England my entire life (beginning with my upbringing in the most spectacular of states of Maine), and have yet to get used to that "I hate my life" sensation one gets when scraping off one's windshield in the – 75-degree weather prior to coming to campus for class in the morning.

Let me correct myself. Back home in Maine, it was – 75 degrees. Here, on the other hand, it's –113 degrees because there's constantly a six-million mile-per-hour wind whipping through the Pioneer Valley that would probably jet us all to Oz if we weren't frozen to the ground.

With the last count-recount voting fiasco apparently not exhausting enough, now there's a probe looking into the possibility that President Clinton bought votes for his wife by promising executive pardons for four influential New York convicts.

Hillary, who was running for Senator, blasted the competition, Rick Lazio, out of the water by a 1,400 to 12 margin in the Hasidic community of New Square in Rockland County – which just so happens to be where Kalmen Stern, David Goldstein, Benjamin Berger and Jacob Elbaum have the most weight.

My feeling on the subject is: who gives a rat's ass? Let's move along. Politics is corrupt, and the Clintons aren't the only ones that perpetuate that. If we actually want to clean up Washington, we'd have to expel every Senator and Representative there and start a commoner revolution visa vie Denmark circa 1849. Provided nobody in the holier-than-thou GOP is down with such an expulsion, they should just concern themselves with the daily grind of National issues, like surprise bombings of Iraq and such.

After former Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon signed with the San Diego Chargers many years back, he was asked by a reporter about a December game in Buffalo, N.Y.:

"After playing all those years in Chicago, this sort of weather must not really bother you, right," beckoned the reporter.

McMahon curled his face up in that incredulous, "Are you frickin' mad?" look, then responded with, "Who told you that? I hate the snow!"

Ah, what so many don't realize. No matter how many times one has stepped into the freezing cold, there's nothing particularly comforting about clenching one's steering wheel and coming to terms with the fact that there's an extremely reasonable chance of dying on the way home... every day.

Dale Earnhardt Sr. could have retired years ago with a huge house, a pool the size of Yankee Stadium and 40 servants. Still, his livelihood was getting behind a jacked-up car and zipping around a track at over 200 miles-per-hour. It's never good when a person dies, but don't tell me that it was a shock. When someone plays Russian roulette and ends up blasting his own face off, nobody says, "Geez, how did that happen?"

He intentionally got into a car and drove over 200 miles-per-hour in heavy traffic. Sure, it's too bad he crashed, but compare that to a child who has leukemia. The child doesn't choose that fate, could very well end up in the same boat as Dale Earnhardt Sr., but never gets any credit in the newspapers for his or her battle. While Earnhardt lived, he was showered by publicity and riches beyond belief. The child with leukemia? What does that child get?

There's probably a lot of people out there touting Earnhardt's status as a hero that ignore the Jimmy Fund cup in the movie theater.

Now, so far this has just been a bitch session by me about bad weather, and obviously, nobody can do anything about the weather. So why waste my voice?

Because I can. I have three words for you: "Ha Ha Ha." Now suck it up and try to make it home alive. Ciao.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Ed/Op:
See how the other half lives

Letters to the Editor
Criticizing editorial stances

To the Editor:

Critical review, in all areas of study, is an important part of our education. "Critical discourse by its very definition implies a reasoned and informed contribution to the ongoing dialog that that is the collective enterprise of art making," states Ron Michaud (Chair, Art Department). Many of us in the art department (staff, faculty, graduate and undergraduate students) along with supporters in other departments are disappointed with the "art reviews" recently printed in the Collegian.

If the Collegian is going to print vicious, uninformed reviews of on-campus visual art shows, they should hold themselves journalistically responsible by including authorship. To allow a critic to hurl vindictive comments anonymously is nothing short of cowardice. "Such self-indulgence is sophomoric, at best, and the stuff of tabloid mentality at worst," responded Michaud.

We urge the Collegian to feature regular reviews of art in a menner that exemplifies honesty, and informed criticism, and that fosters challenging, thoughtful dialog and our sense of community.

Heather Kasunich
President, Graduate Art Student Association
Bryan V. Thomas, Sukey Lawler, Annie Asebrook, Mikael Petraccia, Sean Langlais, Robyn O'Reilly, Lisa Lindgren, Amy Allen

To the Editor:

Motor vehicles, cars and trucks, put large amounts of carbon dioxide directly into the atmosphere. Because carbon dioxide is odorless, tasteless, and invisible we are unaware of the huge volumes emitted by automobiles. According to Saving Energy in U.S. Transportation, 1994, the U.S. Congress, Office of Technology Assessment, every mile we drive releases 470 grams of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere, about 1 pound. One pound of carbon dioxide occupies a volume about the size of those orange, 55-gallon drums used as temporary barriers along the highways. Every mile we drive a car injects 55 gallons of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. On average, an individual drives about 30 miles a day, adding 1,600 gallons of carbon dioxide to the atmosphere each day. A community the size of the Amherst area, about 30,000 motorists, adds nearly 50 million gallons of carbon dioxide to the atmosphere each day.

There are about 6X10^30 (that's 6 followed by 30 zeros) molecules of carbon dioxide in the 50 million gallons of carbon dioxide injected into Amherst's atmosphere ever day. Carbon dioxide molecules absorb infra-red energy, like black objects, before the energy can escape into the stratosphere, causing an increase in the temperature of the Earth's atmosphere. As the number of carbon dioxide molecules multiplies, the capacity of the atmosphere to capture infra-red energy increases and temperature, in response, also increases.

If Amherst area motorists reduced their driving miles by 25 percent, about eight miles a day, it would reduce the amount of carbon dioxide injected into the atmosphere from 50 million gallons to 40 million gallons a day. Though that is a small reduction I carbon dioxide emissions, it would slow human warming of the atmosphere.

Through the use of fossil fuels, we have transferred trillions and trillions of tons of carbon from inside Earth into Earth's physically and chemically active atmosphere. This is an unprecedented change in the environmental history of the planter. Think about it!

M. Springer-Young
Amherst

To the editor:

Your editorial suggesting that more cars in Town will "take some of the burden off of the PVTA" is in fact one of the best arguments for why not to build it – it will be a drop in the proverbial bucket!

There is a delicate balance between providing excellent public transit service and requiring everyone to have his or her own cars and parking spaces. Tip the balance the wrong way, and Amherst will come to resemble Los Angeles (except without the ocean, or the mountains, or the warm sunny climate): do we really want the jammed multi-lane roadways and highrise parking garages that would be needed to accommodate all the cars which students could bring to Town if the PVTA bus system were to falter?

Instead, why doesn't your editorial staff think up ways of promoting improving access to public transit in the area? Imagine, for example, what life would be like here with regular AMTRAK service between Amherst and Boston or New York? Together with a more comprehensive PVTA (or Peter Pan) bus system, and judicious use of walking or cycling or wheel-chairing, who would need a car at all to get around?

Rob Kusner
Professor of Mathematics, University of Massachusetts
Member (and former Chair), Amherst Public Transportation Committee

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Arts Editor •
David Troupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com

Monkey Box dishes out new book

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

Monkey-Box, the locally produced photo comic seen daily in the Collegian, recently celebrated the publication of its first 100 comics with the aptly titled book, Monkey-Box - the First 100 Amazing Comics. More than just a collection of funny pictures and words (although it certainly is that), the book represents a first step in what the comic's creators, PB&J, hope to accomplish.

Brian Moses, the "B" of that collective moniker and the Monkey-Box c.e.o. (that's Creative Entertainment Official, of course), speaks with obvious enthusiasm about the strip's future.

"We have big plans," he says, before launching into an explanation of the Monkey-Box Media Collective, the team of "humor advocates" who help the core creators produce Monkey-Box strips, maintain their online presence, produce video and musical components to the humor for online publication, and help promote the strip to potential markets.

That last portion of the plan falls under the title of Baboonic Plague, an effort to rebuild the usual syndication process into a more grassroots system, in which fans and allies of the strip work to get the strip picked up by local publications. This "reverse syndication," explains Moses, does away with the general practice of a comic artist signing a contract with a syndicate, who then works on the artist's behalf to gain publication. Under the Baboonic Plague, Monkey-Box would be a much more responsive creation, able to adapt to suit the needs of individual publications because of the strong local ties that brought it there.

Which leads to another selling point for this reverse syndication. "For each publication," boasts Moses, "we'd create a novel strip." Meaning that if Monkey-Box appeared in 30 newspapers, the Media Collective would produce 30 original strips, each response to local interests and ideas. The strip's online home, www.monkey-box.net, would serve as a focus for the various strips, a way for people to read Monkey-Boxes from other areas, and swap ideas with other members of the Media Collective.

On PB&J's inevitable loss of creative control under such a plan, Moses offers, "It was never one person's comic." At least three people – Moses, along with fellow creators Pete Lukow and Jen Comeau – have always been involved in the production of Monkey-Box, and so they see an increase in authorship ranks as both natural and beneficial.

At this stage in the strip's life, of course, most of this planning is just that, planning, and if success is to come through this reverse syndication, it will need generous amounts of time and effort. In the meantime, however, anyone interested in revisiting the first semester and a half of Monkey-Box can do so through the book ($7, available through their website and soon to be on sale around campus – check the website for locations).

And, of course, Moses and co. are always looking for new members of their Media Collective. "We'd very much like people to contact us if they're interested in making comics."

COURTESY WWW.MONKEY-BOX.NET

The newly published Monkey-Box Book

Monkey-Box's history is less grand a thing than its envisioned future, but it nonetheless captures the grassroots essence of what PB&J hope to accomplish. Moses, Lukow and Comeau were roommates, and took to amusing themselves by pinning magazine cutouts paired with strange captions to each other's doors. Moses, who had previously produced the comic strip "Fiendish Foglios" for the Collegian in the fall of 1998 and was looking to start up a new comic, had been eyeing the square space in the Collegian's comics page, and came up with the idea for a photo-caption comic around Christmas of 1999.

Initially, the strips were produced with a standard camera, which involved discouragingly high film and development costs. The captions were also decidedly low-tech; each strip was hand-lettered, and the combined photo/caption page was then photocopied to produce a dark, fuzzy, low-quality finished strip. Soon enough, however, that costly and time-consuming process was replaced by a video camera which could input directly to the computer. Each second of film had 30 frames, meaning 30 potential comics, so PB&J were able to choose precisely the most suitable picture for their comics, without worrying about how standard film would turn out when developed. The comic can be manipulated in photoshop, given a caption, and turned in on disk, without ever having lost quality to a non-digital format.

Monkey-Box has made use of technology in other ways, too, most visibly in the Sunday comics available through their long video clips flavored with locally-produced music. The Sunday strips are currently no being produced due to time pressures. PB&J do hope to resume producing the Sunday strips, envisioning them as a way to promote local music and continue moving Monkey-Box into non-paper media, although currently they remain one of many things on the Monkey-Box table, mapped out but incomplete. The first step into sustainability beyond the UMass community will be a difficult one, but is already underway by a team of humorists who, beyond all of the planning, simply enjoy comics and community, and look to share that enjoyment with anyone interested.

New days no revolution in post-grunge scene

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

TANTRIC
Tantric
Maverick

About four years ago, I was lucky enough to see a group of eager, wide-eyed rockers light up a packed Pearl St. nightclub. This band, all still teenagers at the time, seemed ready to receive the grunge torch from predecessors like Pearl Jam or Stone Temple Pilots. They were already drawing comparisons to Alice In Chains, Metallica and other long time rock mainstays. They had a chart-topping hit, a modern rock smash, "Touch, Peel And Stand," before Scott Stapp and Creed ever saw the light of radio play.

The band was Days of the New and, for one night, they were rock gods. Everything seemed fine as the group, with its leader and mastermind Travis Meek, pounded out a set of songs from their self-titled debut album.

However, behind the scenes, things were obviously not okay. The quartet became on ongoing soap opera, a bad episode of "Behind the Music" in waiting. The saga ended two years ago when Meeks finally fired drummer Matt Taul, bassist Jesse Vest and guitarist Todd Whitener. Meeks has since reformed Days of the New and released a sophomore, self-titled disc.

The three fired members returned home to Louisville, Ky. to reform. After hooking up with Detroit singer Hugo Ferreira and taking the name Tantric, the threesome is finally back in the national spotlight with a self-titled release of their own.

For the most part, the band follows a formula which has recently launched Mississippi natives Three Doors Down into the rock niche (and with "Kryptonite" the pop niche) of radio play. That is, throw together some acoustic strumming, a good guitar hook, a Vedder-esque vocalist and a catchy chorus.

Call it post-punk, post-grunge, anti-pop or mainstream rock, but it all amounts to pretty much the same thing. That's not to say that the album is not good; on the contrary, some of it is quite good. It's just to say that you're not going to find anything mind blowing here. It's easily consumable rock, engineered for the radio ear.

The album begins in a familiar place with the modern rock radio hit, "Breakdown." Production values eerily reminiscent of Incubus' "Drive" and some pretty cool guitar picking make this a great introduction to the disc. You can expect more of the same to follow. From the minute you hear Ferreira's baritone, your mind reaches for a place to put the band, a similar sound, a distant resonance. You think, "hey, that sounds like..." and you fill in the blank, probably in an apt manner.

Indeed, the band has not completely escaped their days with Meek, and the influence of that band, as well as others (see above), can be heard. Still, there's something refreshing about the mellow, flowing chorus of "Live Your Life" and the pop happiness of tailor-made singe "I don't care." This third track is absolutely infectious. Despite its apathetic overtones, one can't help but sing along. One can sense the eagerness and youthful exuberance that those teenagers had four long years ago.

Track five, "Revillusion," might as well be called "Downtown Part II" as the band sways too close to their former selves for comfort. Do notice, the cool early 90s-esque guitar solo though; it's fun.

Somehow, you expect Tantric to, at some point, break out into some edgy metal riff and start screaming like, well, too many bands. However, they stick to their murky sound and acoustic arrangements fairly closely. A piano even gets into the act on "Mourning."

What's left is electrical accents and an occasional solo ("Astounded" is another great example). I'm not sure Tantric even really sings about much on the disc – sticking to kind of vague, all-encompassing choruses – but it seems like you could listen to Ferreira sing about it all day long. He's got the kind of lulling growl, which makes one a rock star.

I'm also not sure that Tantric is anything further along than Days of the New was four years ago. Musically, they are perhaps slightly more mature, and, at least making attempts to escape their influences (partially on "Frequency"), but I would argue that these are the disc's less impressive moments. I'll admit: I like the retro-Seattle sound, even if it's not groundbreaking.

Who knows? Maybe Tantric is ready to assume to grunge/post-grunge torch. I just wonder if anyone's ready to listen.

DMB flounders with latest studio release

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
Everyday
RCA

Dave Matthews can't have an easy time of things; the enthusiastic reception with which he and his band were met when they released Under the Table and Dreaming, their major label debut, and which then continued through Crash and only faltered slightly with Before These Crowded Streets (with another three live albums strewn about) cannot be an easy thing to maintain. With worrisome rumors surrounding the recording of Everyday, including scrapped sessions and a rushed atmosphere, it didn't seem inconceivable that Dave Matthews Band could have already reached their peak with Crash, and were simply playing out the proof of their creative exhaustion with a final mediocre album or two.

COURTESY OF DANNY CLINCH

Dave Matthews Band latest release, Everyday

Not inconceivable, but, as it thankfully appears, not the case after all. Everyday, while far from perfect, is far from the husk of an album it had been prematurely labeled as, and provides sufficient reassurance that everyone's favorite neo-hippies aren't quite yet out of ideas.

The signature riff of the opening track, "I Did It," finds Dave on electric guitar for the first time (having previously left that duty to unofficial sixth member Tim Reynolds, absent from this album), and, to put it plainly, it's a great riff, punchy and jangly and possessing all of the energy and momentum that the best of DMB material displays. As the song progresses, however, problems begin to surface; the chorus is unexciting and feels only weakly connected to the verse, a paint-by-number cop-out in lieu of more thoughtful, potent songwriting.

"When the World Ends" suffers from a similar disparity between verse and chorus, this roughness perhaps the result of the album's tight recording schedule. Whatever the excuse, the mellow, sunny-day rhythm of the verse gets rudely interrupted by a thick, textureless chorus. "The Space Between" takes the band further from their acoustic jam roots with wah-wah-enhanced violins and a clean electric figure that calls to mind the shimmering halls of high school prom slow dances. On one level it comes across as intentionally commercial, the sort of cross-market single

Turn to DMB, page 7

Quick and easy fixes for your dorm room blues

This week's Real Meal : CHEATER'S PASTA SAUCE (no, not a squirt of ketchup)

What you will need:

some good tunes, ALWAYS, a culinary necessity a relaxed attitude – this one's goof proof medium sized saucepan wooden spoon
a bottle of your preferred tomato sauce (I prefer Classico, but I'm only half Italian) one or two cloves of garlic, depending on your plans tonight one small yellow onion, chopped evenly and finely olive oil
oregano basil
black pepper (which is better coming from a mill, not McDonald's) hot pepper corns (some like it hot) parmesan cheese
half and half (if you want to turn it into a pink sauce)

Start by peeling and chopping your onion. You don't have to chop the whole thing, about a handful of chopped onion should suffice for one jar of sauce. Make sure you chop it evenly, so the onion cooks at the same pace. Also peel and press or chop your garlic (here's a trick to peeling it – place the clove, on a chopping block, under the broad part of your knife, blade angled towards the chopping block so you don't cut yourself. Use the heel of your hand to crush the clove under the knife. If you are not comfortable using the knife, try your biggest text book.)

Put the garlic and the onion in the saucepan with a little olive oil. Once you have all three in the pan, turn the heat low, and sauté the onions and garlic. Make sure you move them around a bit because garlic burns extremely fast. When the onions are clear, they are done. You have now "sweetened" your onions - not so hard.

Now you can dump your jar of sauce into the saucepan. Sprinkle a little oregano and basil in there (however much you like, usually in portions of 2 to 1, oregano to basil). Also add a bit of parmesan cheese for flavor, some pepper, and if you like, just a tiny tiny bit of hot pepper for some bite.

Taste your sauce, and if you don't love it yet, add about two tablespoons of half and half for a pink sauce. Now you've made an impressively gourmet-tasting marinara sauce, the cheater's way. Spoon it over your favorite shape pasta, with a nice salad and some Italian bread and you're all set. Godere il vostro pasto!!

This week's Get Out of Jail Free Tip : Mess Matte

Do your cinderblock walls ever make your roommate feel more like an inmate? We sympathize. All dorm walls scream Alcatraz, but yours don't have to! With this easy transformation of your beloved bulletin boards, you can add color and personality to those cold clammy walls.

What you will need:

a corkboard or bulletin board of some kind – if you don't already have one, get one!
a piece of fabric big enough to cover the board, an old T-Shirt,... be creative, any material that strikes your fancy a box of thumb tacks ribbon (optional)

This one's pretty simple. Stretch the fabric across the front of the board, and secure in back with your choice of thumb tacks (must be flat headed for hanging), adhesive or staple gun (watch the fingers).

Garnish with your favorite pics, ticket stubs, patches, cutouts, pint or post cards. Don't worry about covering every square inch, the pattern on the fabric should show through. It's supposed to look unorganized yet stylish – so don't bust out the ruler. If you chose a solid material and want to have more goin' on, you can pull strands of ribbon tautly across in a criss-cross or windowpane pattern, and fasten them to the back. Then tuck your memorabilia behind the ribbons.

Walla! A real work of wall art. You can rest it against the wall on top of a shelf or table, or you can hang it like you would a plain board. I prefer to use masonry hooks on the cinderblock, which you can get at the U-Store, the C-stores, or the hardware store. Adhesive usually doesn't work too well for such a heavy piece. Next week we'll show you how to make pillows out of orange jumpsuits and patches out of your serial numbers!

Turn to TRICKS, page 7

■ tricks

continued from page 6

This week's Quick Fix: HOW TO GET A BROKEN LIGHT BULB OUT OF THE FIXTURE

Scenario: You're throwing your roommate a birthday bash, and low and behold, the drunk girl who thinks she's Brittany Spears yells, "Oops! I did it again!" Your mom's lamp is lying on the floor, with the light bulb in pieces. Major situation. How are you going to get the broken light bulb out of the fixture without ending up with Hannibal Lector – like hands?

Solution: UNPLUG THE LAMP. Grab a potato out of the fridge, cut it in half, and stick it onto the half-broken bulb. Then simply unscrew the bulb, knick-free! Next time tell "Brittany" to practice her moves before she comes.

Maggie Lyons is a Collegian columnist.

■ dumb

continued from page 6

record companies love to promote, but when taken on its own terms as a genuine groping for love and emotional connection it works well enough.

As the hit-or-miss songwriting continues another potential problem surfaces, and sticks on until the very end: violinist Boyd Tinsley and saxophonist Leroi Moore are given precious little time to play, and almost no time in the spotlight. Gone are the raucous violin breaks of "Tripping Billies" and the drifting sax melodies of "#41," and the two talented musicians are generally relegated to autosophers. Perhaps the band wants to shed its image of glorified jam band, and if so that's their prerogative, and it's a fine one. A de facto abandonment of two fifths of their membership along the way, however, is no way for a band to mature, and the results sound more like a Dave Matthews solo album with some studio backing than a Dave Matthews Band album. This evolution may also stem from the changing nature of Dave's songwriting, which is becoming more forceful in its use of meaty chords and general textural thickness, eschewing the spacey thinness of such older tunes as "Typical Situation" and "Crash Into Me;" even their older rockers, such as "So Much to Say" and "The Best of What's Around," depended as much, or more, on the band's non-guitar instrumentation for definition as on Dave's acrobatic fretwork. When listening to Everyday's "Dreams of Our Fathers," however, it sounds as if Dave were trying to redefine his band as purely guitar-driven.

Everyday closes with a song of the same name, a happy-feet tune that recalls the carefree energy of Before These Crowded Streets' "Stay." Especially with such a charming album closer, it's impossible to call Everyday a failure. It does fall short of DMB's previous albums, and it does suffer from serious deficiencies in instrumental variation and songwriting coherence; at the same time, however, it gestures towards a more experimental Dave Matthews Band, one that won't hesitate to abandon previous successful formulas in favor of something new. Next time around, however, we can only hope that more time is taken to feel out this new territory before songs are considered finished.

Our returning staff know what a WILD experience camp can be!
Come check us out this summer...work at CAMP!

Crossroads for Kids

Crossroads for Kids runs 3 great camps which serve AT-RISK YOUTH. These kids need people like you to care about their lives!

Opportunities are available for:
Cabin Counselors, Waterfront Staff, Program Specialists, Food Service Personnel, Nurses, Maintenance Staff, Housekeeping, and Office Managers

We will be at U-Mass Amherst Wednesday, March 14th
If this sounds like the type of summer you'd love,

702 Kerne Street, Dracut, MA 01013
(978) 454-2781 • Toll Free (888) 567-7284
www.crossroadsforkids.org
email: camp@crossroadsforkids.org

CollegianArts:
"Just before Collegian Sports"

MOLSON
CollegeFest
ONLY $ 319!
Springbreak
5 Days & Nights
Parties•Cruise•Lift Tix
SKI & travel
1 800 999 ski 9
WWW.SKITRAVEL.COM

"Get involved"

Nominations for President, Trustee and Area Government open Thursday 3/01/01
They close 3/15/01 at 5:00pm

Elections will be 3/28/01 and 3/29/01

You can pick up nomination forms in the SGA office, room 420 of the Student Union
If you have any questions call the SGA office at 5-0342

you know that little voice inside that says "I can't"?
this summer,
[crush it].

Bring your "can-do" attitude to Camp Challenge. Where you'll get paid to learn how to become a leader and acquire skills that'll help you meet the challenges you'll face in your career. Apply today at the Army ROTC department, with no obligation. Before that voice tells you to take a vacation.

LEADERSHIP EXCELLENCE

ARMY ROTC Unlike any other college course you can take.

Scholarship, Credits, No-Military Obligations
UMASS ARMY ROTC @ (413) 545-2321

Mirwais debut dance album

Redeems French pop mainstream

By Tom Frazer
Collegian Staff

MIRWAIS Production
Sony/Epic

French music has traditionally been treated with derision. From Edith Piaf to Johnny Hallyday and Serge Gainsbourg French pop stars have historically never had the "coolness" of their British or American counterparts. Nor have they been on the cutting edge of musical trend setting. Indeed the remnants of stylistic faux-pas loom long and hard in pop's memory. So perhaps it is unsurprising that it took the French nation so long to get over their 60's and 70's hangover, and contribute something of credibility in the late 90's and today.

The greatest obstacle to French infiltration of the pop mainstream is obviously the language barrier. Where native language acts are seen as inaccessible to the conventional international audience, and English speaking French acts treated with great skepticism. The most popular genre of music in France is Hip-Hop. With a long a prolific line of French MC's from MC Solaar to Alliance Ethnik. To appreciate this artistry, though, is clearly pretty hard for the laymen English speaker. Just imagine listening to Mos Def rapping in Dutch or Eminem freestyling in Chinese.

The revolution in Dance music however has not escaped French influence, as that the ever-elusive language factor is removed from the creative equation; with mixing, sampling and sequencing the central tools of the art.

Acts such as Daft-Punk, Cassius and Air have all achieved international acclaim. And the acid test of any movement had surely lead to a positive result with Madonna, the Queen of reinvention choosing a French producer for her latest album.

The debut solo release from the veteran French producer and musician Mirwais wears this endorsement proudly on its sleeve, literally. Madonna eulogizes on the cover of the CD: "I truly believe that this man is a genius. This is the future of sound."

Track one of Production is pure, unadulterated French Dance. It resonates with funked up base lines, and awesome Moog oscillations. Entitled "Disco Science" it is a perfect encapsulation and entrance to the album. Leading to the future unfolding example of good dance.

The vocoder-vocaled electro-pop of "Naive Song," along with "Junkie's Prayer' and the weakest tracks on the album. The former tips its creative hat to Daft Punk, the sometime collaborators, with a distinctly unortiginal base line. The later track shows Mirwais using his guitar skills, which he acquired as the main musical influence in 80's French pop act Taxi Girl. Both these tracks use a similar vocal effect as the one employed by Cher on 'I Believe', and 'No Diggidy' by Black Street. I will grant you this is personal pet hate, but one I think that is founded and legitimated by my universally renowned good taste.

Perhaps to describe Production as a Dance album is a little unfair. For it shows a maturity that reflects the experience of the Producer, and a diversity of tempo and stylistic approach that is rarely found in pure dance records. Where it is clear that Mirwais is from a dance background his exhibits qualities rarely shown by most dance producers or DJ's. Employing sparse siren-esque sounds evocative of the urban-youth flic-"La Haine" to create the pseudo-erotic gothic sadness of "V.I"; to the punk fury of "Definitive Best" with it's syncopated beats that are synonymous with hard-core Drum'n'Base.

Of most surprise though is probably the humor of track 8 "Never Young Again." After an orchestral intro the tune breaks out into that irresistible rhythm used to such successful effect on the Title track to Madonna's "Music." You half expect Madonna to burst out in to song 'Music makes the people...' Mirwais exhibits his production wizardry to incredible effect. The track flirts with the audience, making them hungry to dance. Alternating between chilled-out, melodic strings and that big fat beat you are tickled, teased and tantalized, and left hungry for more. Mirwais and Madonna, both in their forties, must have laughed infectiously. On the one hand their desire to let loose and dance, on the other the fact that they will never be young again.

The greatest task facing Mirwais on this album was to create a credible, individual sound, that was distinct from his widely acclaimed work with Madonna, but at the same time was accessible and populist enough for the general listening public. The difficulty in mediating between these two conflicting concerns should not be under-estimated especially when you consider that many think of Mirwais as little more than Madonna's latest production puppy-dog. Although many would argue there is an awful lot of Production and not enough "Music," I think the compromise between pop immediacy and Dance obscurity has been synthesized perfectly in this Debut.

Who's in? Conference champs decide

In years past, the turn of the calendar from February to March meant that the majority of the NCAA tournament picture was forming. However, the combination of parity in college hockey and a new rule change means that many of the 12 spots are still in question at this point.

The regular season winner of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association, the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference, the Hockey East Association and the Western Collegiate Hockey Association no longer receives an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament. If that was the case, then Michigan State and North Dakota could book their tickets for the post-season right now.

Instead, the tournament winners of each of the aforementioned leagues earn an automatic bid to the tournament. In addition, the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference tournament winner will also advance to the post-season. This is the first season that the third-year league has been awarded the chance to compete for a national title.

Needless to say, the entrance of a MAAC team into the final field of 12 has caused some rumblings in college hockey circles. Only two MAAC teams – Quinnipiac and Sacred Heart – have even beaten a team from one of the "Big Four" conferences. In most cases, a non-conference game involving a MAAC team has been an easy win for the more established "Big Four" program.

This, of course, brings up the issue of expanding the NCAA tournament to 16 teams – a premise that would probably work best for all of the parties involved, but isn't feasible at this point because of both economic and gender-equity factors.

"What's not right is the NCAA not giving us 16 teams," said Northeastern coach Bruce Crowder in an article on United States College Hockey Online. "That's what's not right. I don't think you'd have the problem with the MAAC getting a bid or even [the CHA] getting a bid to promote college hockey, which is what we're supposed to do. [If we got to

Book a ticket

Michigan State – The CCHA regular season winners have been arguably the best team in the country from start to finish. The Spartans posted a 23-game unbeaten [20-0-3] midway through the season and have one of the top candidates for the Hobey Baker Award in sophomore netminder Ryan Miller.

Even if MSU doesn't win the CCHA tournament, they should enjoy playing in their backyard for the West Regional in Grand Rapids. The selection committee would be committing a travesty if the thought of sending the Spartans to Worcester even entered their mind. Michigan State deserves to stay at home for the opening stages of the tournament.

Michigan – Sure, the Wolverines have been second fiddle to their in-state rivals for most of the season, but Michigan has enjoyed another outstanding season. Sophomores Mike Cammalleri and Andy Hilbert have picked up offensively where former Wolverine and current Edmonton Oiler Mike Comrie left last year.

Coach Red Berenson's team is always in the national picture, and this season is no different. With a promising mix of veterans, such as All-American defenseman Jeff Jillison, and talented newcomers, Michigan will head back to the NCAA's. Don't be surprised to see the committee send the Maize and Blue out east to Worcester, like they did a season ago.

Boston College – Another model of consistency this season has been Boston College. The Eagles have been stationed at either the No. 1 or No. 2 spot nationally for most of the season and can clinch the Hockey East regular season title this weekend. BC's senior class wants to complete a four-year run to the Frozen Four, and is hungry to cap off their college careers with a national championship. Barring a late-season collapse, the Eagles should earn a bye and stay in the Bay State for the first round.

North Dakota – In what has been one of the strongest years of the WCHA in recent memory, the defending national champions have emerged as the best of the best. The explosive scoring ability of junior Hobey Baker candidate Jeff Panzer – 65 points to lead the nation – has propelled the Fighting Sioux this year, and UND should carry a load of momentum and experience into the post-season. It has been in the shadow of MSU and BC for most of the year, but could easily claim its repeat as NCAA champs.

Minnesota – Head coach Don Lucia has completed the rise to power for the Golden Gophers this year. After struggling a season ago, Minnesota has 25 wins and could make a run in the national tournament. Right now, the Gophers need a strong finish to earn a first-round bye in the NCAA tourney.

Closing in

New Hampshire and Providence – Both have been top-10 teams for the entire season, and probably have enough wins now to get into the NCAA tournament. The only way that either one or both teams might not get in would be if they falter mightily down the stretch and another team besides BC wins the Hockey East tournament.

Colorado College and St. Cloud State – I wasn't lying when I said that the WCHA was good this year. Both of these teams have been stellar throughout the course of the season and appear to be on their way to a bid. Even if they don't win another game, it would be awfully tough to deny either SCSU [25 wins] or CC [21 wins].

Best of the rest

At this point, there would only be three spots left – one of which goes to the ECAC winner and another to the MAAC winner. That leaves a handful of teams battling for the final at-large bid.

ECAC – Talk about a crazy league. There hasn't been one dominant team throughout the course of the year, but St. Lawrence and Clarkson appear to have the upper hand. In reality, anyone can win the league tournament. And, since the autobid might be the only spot that the ECAC gets, it's going to be a war in Lake Placid for the tourney championship.

MAAC – Mercyhurst may have won the regular season title, but don't count out Quinnipiac. The Braves won two of three meetings against the Lakers this year, claimed the last two MAAC regular season titles, and have plenty of experience against teams from the "Big Four." Iona, Canisius and UConn may also contend for the tourney title.

Others – Maine, Nebraska-Omaha, Western Michigan, Wisconsin. All four teams would truly benefit by winning their respective league tournaments. If they don't, it will be one of those four teams – and possibly six if either Clarkson or St. Lawrence doesn't win the ECAC – battling it out for the final NCAA spot.

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist.

Michael Kobylanski on CollegeHockey

COURTESY BC MEDIA RELATIONS

After a quick start to the season Matt Murley and RPI will have to win the ECAC tournament to advance to the NCAA tournament.

COURTESY BC MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Brian Gionta has been to three Frozen Four's in his time at BC. He will look to capture his first national championship this season.

COURTESY NEBRASKA-OMAHA MEDIA RELATIONS

David Brisson and Nebraska-Omaha have cracked the Top 15 for the second time of the season, but it might not be enough to get the Mavericks into the tournament.

Take a step toward success!
The Daily Collegian is hiring for the position of:
Layout Manager
•Work 2 hours a day Sun.-Thurs. laying out the paper and organizing ads.
•Great experience for those interested in a career in Advertising or Publishing.
If interested call 545-3500 or come down to the Campus Center Basement and fill out an application.

General Electric
PriceWaterhouse Coopers
NHL Corporation
MBNA Financial
Q: What do these companies have in common?
A: Former Collegian Finance Managers.
THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ASSISTANT FINANCE MANAGER.
CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.
APPLICANTS SHOULD CURRENTLY BE A SOPHOMORE.

THE ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM SERIES PRESENTS
A Two Day Cultural Festival at the University of Massachusetts
Illuminations from the Middle East
Anatolia in Concert
featuring Tajouka
Middle Eastern Music and Dance
March 10 at 8pm in Bowker Auditorium
A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy
Khalil Barkoum
March 9 at 4pm in Memorial Hall
Call the Fine Arts Center Box Office
1-413-545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS

NBA trade deadline passes with major moves for title contenders

It is time for NBA clubs to dock their boats because the 2001 trade winds have finally died down. On Feb. 22 at 6 p.m. the NBA trading deadline came and passed making the pretenders feel like contenders.

Contrary to last year's uneventful trading deadline which saw the Atlanta Hawks trade little used point guard Anthony Johnson to the Orlando Magic for a conditional second round draft pick, this season's produced multiple blockbuster deals.

In case you have not been informed here is a run-down of the trades:

76ers-Hawks

The best team in the eastern conference acquired the last healthy and pure center in the east, Dikembe Mutumbo, from the Atlanta Hawks in exchange for Toni Kukoc and Theo Ratliff.

All the talk this year has been how there is not one East team that has a chance against the powers of the West when it comes to decide an NBA champion. The East teams atop of the standings lacked a dominant center to contend with Shaquille O'Neal, David Robinson and Tim Duncan, until now. If the Sixers get to the finals they have a pretty impressive combination in Allen Iverson and the 7-2 defensive-minded Mutumbo.

A lot of critics say that Philly's management is ruining the winning chemistry that the team created by trading away Ratliff and Kukoc – two very productive players. However, Allen Iverson can defiantly score enough points to make up for the departed offense of Kukoc and Mutumbo has many of the same defensive skills as Ratliff. He is one the best rebounders and blockers in the league, plus he is a better one-on-one low-post defender than Ratliff.

Mavericks-Wizards

Once again Michael Jordan has shown that he is the most talented person to ever be around the sport of basketball. In a shocking turn of events, Jordan – the president of the Washington Wizards – pulled of the most unlikely deal. He traded the often referred to "un-tradable" Juwan Howard along with Obinna Ekezie and Calvin Booth to the Dallas Mavericks for Christian Laettner, Hubert Davis, Etan Thomas, Loy Vaught and Courtney Alexander. Howard has been a lone bright spot for the bottom dweller Wizards in the past couple of seasons. Now he gets his wish – to play for a winner.

Jordan has gotten his wish as well – after this season the Wizards will be finally below the salary cap due to the players they received in exchange for Howard.

The Mavericks are one of this year's surprises from the West and now they have a third scorer to accompany the dynamic duo of Michael Finley and Dirk Nowitzki.

Knicks-Raptors

The Knicks finally acquired a kind of player that they have needed for at least four years – a playmaking point guard in Mark Jackson. However, Jackson's return trip to his hometown has possibly come to late in his career for him to make an immense impact on the team's future this season.

On the other hand, Jackson will cure a major problem for the Knickerbockers. New York had had to balance the scoring between three very similar players – Allan Houston, Glen Rice and Latrell Sprewell. Jackson is a fabulous passer and he knows how to get everyone on the court involved in the offense. He has lost a step or two, however he still knows how to find the open man.

The Knicks also received the 5-3 Tyrone "Mugsy" Bogues in the deal that sent Chris Childs and a number one draft pick to Toronto. Bogues will probably not see much time – he will be the third string point guard when he returns from injury behind Charlie Ward.

Raptors-Pistons

Not every trade has to be a blockbuster one. Sometimes a team needs to make the moves that will fill the holes in their squad. The Raptors had that in mind when they made their second trade of the day. They acquired one of the most underrated power-forwards in the league, Jerome Williams, along with Eric Montross from the Detroit Pistons in exchange for Corliss Williamson, Tyrone Corbin and Kornel David.

Williams will be a great edition for the dinosaurs. He will also be able to learn the tricks of the trade when it comes to rebounding from two scrappy veterans – Charles Oakley and Antonio Davis.

That trade put a cap on a hectic day for NBA general managers and presidents. Teams need no longer to worry about improving their team through acquisitions till the summer. Now is the time for the winning teams to focus on how to improve their positions in the playoff race and the losers can wonder how they can get more balls in the draft lottery.

Questions around the league will be answered as well. Will Kobe Bryant and Shaq be able to co-exist and repeat? Are the Sacremento Kings really that good? And where are the Vancouver Grizzles going to play in 2001-02?

We will just have to wait and see.

Oh in case you were wondering, NBA journeymen Chucky Brown and Chris Gatling were not traded.

Glen Straub is a Collegian columnist.

UMass advances to NCAAs

Benjamin Hall
Collegian Staff

MIDDLEBURY, Vt. – If the Massachusetts women's ski team had held their breath any longer, the local EMT's might have had their hands full.

Instead, The Maroon and White broke free from the grasps of inconsistency and managed to place fourth in the USCA Regionals. This showing qualifies them for the USCA Nationals in Bogus Basin, Idaho next week.

Only the top five teams are eligible to compete at the nationals. At the end of the first day of slalom at Waterville the women were in fourth place. Lauren Brodey, a junior from Fayetteville, NY, helped her team out by finishing in sixth place overall with a time of 1:46.99.

The next day, Monday, saw the team back in sixth place after the first giant slalom run. On the second run, UMass's first and second racers finished well. The third and fourth members failed to complete their runs leaving their fifth spot, senior Margaret LaBombard, in the position of either making or breaking the season.

"I was so scared," said LaBombard. "Our assistant coach, Mike LeBlanc, said to me, 'Come on Margaret. You just have to finish. If you don't finish we aren't going to the nationals.' So I just made sure that I finished and that I ran a solid, clean race."

LaBombard did just that. Since only the best three times count in regional competition, her finish brought smiles to all of her teammates faces and sent them back to UMass having tied for fourth place.

The men's team, however happy for their partners, could not share in the womens' success.

"What really killed us was the slalom on Sunday," said head coach Mike MacConnell. "We were unfamiliar with the course setter. He set the gates further apart than usual. This makes for a faster course. Our team is better suited to a technical line that highlights our turning skills. I'm not complaining though, eighteen other schools had to race that course too."

"It is too bad that the guys couldn't step it up," remarked LaBombard. "I wish they had made it. They have been so supportive of us, especially when we have been inconsistent."

Finishing nearly two seconds behind the fifth place team, the men ended their season on a somewhat sour note. The squad was at a disadvantage to begin with, however, since racer Mike Hadden could not ski due to an ankle injury. The men will not travel to the USCA nationals.

On Feb. 23 and 24 both teams competed at the Middlebury Snow Bowl in the NCAA regional competition.

For all teams there comes a time when the shining star must fall from the sky. Lead racer Ken Thomas fell in his second giant slalom run. This was the first time in 42 races that Thomas has not finished.

Rick Granger finished 27th in the giant slalom (2:09.82). He was the men's top skier. Carolyn Lewenberg placed the highest for the women. She came in 37th place in the giant slalom (2:24.49).

The NCAA Regionals are an individual competition. Both UMass squads approached the event with the expectation that it would be a warm up for the Waterville Valley competition.

"Basically, the best teams are at Middlebury," commented MacConnell. "They are snow country teams that carry people from the U.S. national team, the Canadian ski team and they roster several European racers."

"We really enjoyed the support of the fans up at Middlebury," LaBombard said. "You feel a little out of you element because of the competition. But you have to test yourself to see how good you really are."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The UMass men's skiing team had its season come to an end Monday, but the women's team advanced to the NCAAs.

Coca Cola and Daily Collegian
Clue of the Week!!!
Prepare yourself for some fun.
The following is clue number one.
Being back in classes may make you want to bellow,
So run to the U-Store for some great Mellow Yello!
Now, before you walk out, keep the bottle and your receipt,
Or the Coke Scavenger Hunt you definitely won't beat!
Remember to keep tract of ALL items and bring them to the "taste of Umass". If you are the lucky winner you get a Cruise for 2.
From your Friends at COLLEGIAN

HAIR CUTS NOW WITH KATE
$20
(Weds. & Sat.)
ERIC SCOT
79 south pleasant street
Amherst
413.256.3440
Experience the art of hair for less.

Disney Internships.
Opening Doors Now.
WALT DISNEY WORLD® College Program
Open the door to your future with an internship at the Walt Disney World Resort. Network with Disney Management. Make amazing friendships. And earn crucial real-world experience. The key to your future is now.
Visit us at wdwcollegeprogram.com for more info. Then go to the presentation and interview for the internship of your dreams!
2/28/01 7:00pm
School of Management, 120
Walt Disney World COLLEGE PROGRAM
wdwcollegeprogram.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING.
✔ Student Discounts
✔ Professional Bartending Training
✔ Tips on Finding a Top Paying Job
✔ Become a Talented, Socially Conscious Bartender
✔ National Restaurant Association Alcohol Awareness Program
✔ Great Part-time or Summer Job
Learn to bartend in a weekend!
Classes Begin
Fri., March 2nd 6:00pm
Valentine Hill, Amherst College
Call now! Space is limited!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

SMOOTHE LEWIS
LIVE AT THE PUB!
10-1
Jammin' to techno funk originals including your favorite Rolling Stones, Greatful Dead and Phish covers and much more!
18 + welcome
THE PUB
21 + to drink

Atlantis
Behind Antonio's Pizza In Amherst
NO COVER $2 COVER AFTER 11 PM
TUES: Drum & Bass with Kid Viscious
WED: B-Ski's Bins "The best in disco & funk."
FREE Nachos 10-11 pm
THURS: "Under the blue" with DJ Big Phil
-hip hop and r&b
FRI: Growroom Records presents:
DJs Bon Bons & Salty
SAT: Straight Hip-Hop, No Chaser:
with DJs Double OC and XsO
"Ladies Night" - Ladies get in FREE
SUN: Drunk Monks open turntable night

UMASS BALLROOM TEAM presents
SWING into SPRING
Feb 28, 2001 • Student Union Ballroom
Free Admission and Refreshments
Demos by UMass Ballroom Dance Team
7pm: Free Lesson
8-12pm: Open Dance
no experience or partner necessary!
Questions? Call Danielle 546-2973
http://www.umass.edu/rso/ballroom

LIVE MUSIC
MCMURPHY'S Welcomes
The Guitar Dudes
Every Wednesday
NO COVER!
Positive ID Required

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Center of Town 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Saab Turbo 162K, sunroof, leather, 5spd. Good condition. $1100 o/b/o 413-367-7592

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Mothers Helper for 5 & 9 year old. Spring & summer. 10hrs a week. Car & references a must. Contact Jamie. 549-7788

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER & SUN ON CAPE COD! The Wychmere Harbor Beach Club is conducting interviews on our property for all our summer employment opportunities on March 8, 9, 10 & March 15, 16, 17. Interviewing for Wait Staff, Bus Staff, Culinary Staff, Lifeguards and more. On-site housing available. Check out our website at www.wychmere-harbor.com & call Amy at (508) 432-1000 x 129 for details.

The UMass Football team is looking for interested students to video practices and games for the spring 2000/2001 season. Experience preferred but will train. Scholarship and work study programs available. If you are interested please contact Bill Sisler at 577-0319. Come be a part of a championship tradition.

EMPLOYMENT

PT Help Wanted Amherst Greenhouse growing pesticide free, hydroponic herbs. 549-3558

Our Team & Make a Difference in a Child's Life 5 great children summer camps in NY, ME, PA, and WV seek General Counselors & Group Leaders, plus Activity Specialists who can teach/coach: tennis, swimming, waterskiing, sailing, caving, mountain biking, canoeing, windsurfing, woodworking, theatre, arts, photography, video, website design, fitness, golf, gymnastics, dance, volleyball, basketball, roller-hockey, lacrosse, baseball, and soccer. Nurses and kitchen and operation staff also needed. June 16-August 16. Benefits include training, room and board, laundry, and travel stipend. Apply on-line at www.horizon-camps.com or call 1(800) 544-5448

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons Recreational & competitive boxing. Retired pro Dajata Bumpus. 256-0364

Kickboxing Instruction and General Personal Training. All levels and abilities. Joe 548-8979

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITYBARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

MUSIC

Do you want your band recorded? Call Hellbent Studios. Digital and Analog Recording. $20 per/hr. 413-549-5942

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in Large 3 bedroom house. On busline 253-3670

Near UMass. Quiet setting. No smoking, vegitarian kitchen. Car needed. $325+ 549-4853

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. Avail 3/4 $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $179 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@goflip-trips.com

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-800-234-7007 endless-summertours.com

Spring Break - Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun and Jamaica from $499. Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and More! Organize small group - earn FREE trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-GET-SUN-1

Go Direct! #1 Internet-based Company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Lowest price guarantee! 1-800-367-1252. www.spring-breakdirect.com

YOUR AD COULD BE HERE!

CALL 545-3500

ADVERTISE TODAY!!

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board
3	CBS/Hartford
4	CBS/Boston
5	ABC/Springfield
6	UPN 20 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	UPN 20 Hartford
9	HSCN New Movie Channel
10	NBC 40 New Britain
11	Fox 61 Hartford
12	PBS 24 Hartford
13	NBC/22 Springfield
14	International Channel
15	UMATV (Academic Channel)
16	WB 30 New Haven
17	ESPN
18	CNN2
19	UVC TV (Student Channel)
20	Weather Channel
21	Channel 21/Gabel
22	C-Span
23	CNN
24	CNN Headline News
25	Lifestyles
26	USA
27	TBS
28	TNT
29	Sci Fi
30	Discovery
31	Nickelodeon
32	Cartoon Network
33	Nick at Nite
34	TV Land
35	Comedy Central
36	BET
37	Univision
38	Broadway Theatrical Network
39	College TV Network
40	MTV
41	VH1
42	The Learning Channel

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 28, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Kennedy Center Presents: "The Mark Twain Prize" (In Stereo)		Great Performances				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Beat Friends	Bette (N)	"Sanctuary" (2001, Suspense)	Melissa Gilbert			News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Beat Friends	Bette (N)	"Sanctuary" (2001, Suspense)	Melissa Gilbert			News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Mole (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		Drew Carey	Spin City	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek "Mind Games"		Jack & Jill (N) (In Stereo)	News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Live Deliberately" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	7th Heaven "Who Knew?"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Dawson's Creek "Mind Games"		Jack & Jill (N) (In Stereo)	News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Live Deliberately" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	70s Show	Grounded-Life	Temptation Island (N)	News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Live Deliberately" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Kennedy Center Presents: "The Mark Twain Prize" (In Stereo)		Great Performances			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	62	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Mole (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		Drew Carey	Spin City	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "Workforce"		Frasier	Mad Abt. You	Spin City	Spin City
WTBS	72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		WCW Thunder			Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	45		Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order		Biography: Civil Rights Heroes		American Justice		Investigative Reports (N)	Law & Order "Conspiracy"
CNN	20	21	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	53	29	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Ernest Rules" (1998, Comedy) Michael Keaton, Geena Davis.			South Park	TV Funhouse	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52		Venom		Wild Discovery: Little Killers		John Gotti -- Life Behind Bars		Summer of Terror: Son of Sam	Deadline Discovery (N)		Justice Files
ESPN	51		Sportscenter		College Basketball: Seton Hall at Villanova. (Live)				College Basketball: North Carolina State at North Carolina. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	59		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"The Secret She Carried" (1996, Drama) Pari Gilpin.		Fear (In Stereo)	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33		Direct Effect	Senseless	Celebrity	Cribs	Andy Dick	Jim Carrey Uncensored		Diary		Undressed	Andy Dick
NICK	55		Pinky & Brain	Cetdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Facts of Life	Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	Jeffersons
SCIFI	35		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		Outer Limits "First Anniversary"		s½ "Nightwatch" (1998, Suspense)		Ewan McGregor.		Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	79	28	Paramedics "On the Edge"		FBI Profiles: Criminal Minds		Super Structures of the World		World's Greatest Ships		World's Greatest Ships		Super Structures of the World
TNT	54		ER "Love's Labor Lost"		Pretender "Past Sin"		NBA Basketball: Miami Heat at Philadelphia 76ers. (In Stereo Live)					NBA Basketball:	Lakers at Nuggets
USA	62		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Yesterday's Heroes"		Nash Bridges "Ripcord"		s½ "Death Wish" (1974, Drama)		Charles Bronson. (In Stereo)	Merlin	Merlin
HBO	65		Real Sports		s½ "Blue Streak" (1999, Comedy)		Martin Lawrence. PG-13		Sex and-City	Arliss	Oz "Famous Last Words"	On the Record (N)
MAX	64		(5:00) "Event"		s½ "The Muse" (1999) Albert Brooks. PG-13		s½ "Drop Zone" (1994, Adventure) Wesley Snipes. R				s½ "American Beauty" (1999)	Kevin Spacey. (In Stereo)	R
SHOW	66		s½ "Twilight Zone: The Movie"		(1983) John Lithgow. PG		s½ "China Moon" (1994, Mystery) Ed Harris. (In Stereo)				Soul Food (In Stereo)	Resurrection Blvd. (In Stereo)

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman And Monty By Jim Meddick

IF YOU ARE TO RISE THROUGH THE RANKS OF THE GLADIATORS, YOU MUST MASTER NANNY WEAPONS
THIS IS A KLINGON BATTLE AXE AND THIS, A RIGELIAN VAN-KA. A BOLEMOK TEEL AND AHA! AND WHAT'S THIS?
THAT'S A VACUUM CLEANER ATTACHMENT

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I INADVERTENTLY GAVE ALICE VERBAL PRAISE.
IS SHE ADDICTED?
SHE'S BEEN LYING AND STEALING TO GET MORE.
SHE LEAVES US NO CHOICE.
I HAVE TO PROMOTE YOU TO MANAGEMENT

Robot and Spacemen By Jason Tocci

HI ERIN THIS IS SCOTT FROM YOUR PHYSICS CLASS. YEAH I'M THE ONE WITH THE SPIKEY HAIR. ANYWAY I WAS WONDERING IF PERHAPS THERE'S MAYBE SOME CHANCE YOU WANNA GO OUT SOMETIME... WHEN?
I'M SORRY! I'LL NEVER BOTHER YOU AGAIN! PLEASE DON'T CALL THE POLICE
WAIT WHAT DID YOU SAY?

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

LOOK WHAT I FOUND IN THE ATTIC.
COOL. IT'S DAD'S OLD COLLEGE DIPLOMA.
IT'S SO FORMAL AND IMPRESSIVE AND ACADEMIC-LOOKING. I WONDER WHY HE DOESN'T HAVE IT OUT WHERE EVERYONE CAN SEE IT.
MAYBE OL' ROGER FOX IS MORE HUMBLE THAN WE THOUGHT.
AND I WONDER WHY HE USED TO SPELL HIS NAME "ORGER."
MAYBE THAT'S LATIN.

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

A History of American Farming
By Peter Fox
...who had a very rough time getting out of bed this morning and didn't eat breakfast and who pinched his left thumb in his gym locker and left his favorite pencil in the library and whose day got even worse when...
I'M ASSUMING THERE IS SUCH A THING AS A SYMPATHY GRADE. YOUR TITLE PAGE IS LONGER THAN YOUR ESSAY.

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Kampus Kids By Adam Sauliere

I'm in the School of education
Hahaha...
What's funny?
That's redundant. All schools are schools of education...
What, do you read books that teach you how to read books?

The Masked Dropout By Robert Hewitt

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Who says you have to suffer in order to take care of yourself – physically or emotionally? Today, you can have it all the easy way!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You'll attract a number of followers today as a result of your enthusiasm and commitment. Take care that you don't let them down, however.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You'll receive a favor from someone who has been looking out for you – even though you may not know him or her at all. Show your thanks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – A discovery can be made before nightfall which will increase your chances for success in an endeavor that some might consider a lost cause.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Focus on doing things for yourself today that will do you good in the future. There is more to life than temporary satisfaction, after all!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – It may involve quite a risk today to help someone who has been critical of you in the past. Still, you'll realize that you have no choice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It's time to think of the past once more, as a way of answering two or three key questions you have about your future. Don't forget today!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The reaction of another to your habitual behavior today may take you by surprise. It may be time for someone to share a secret or two.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You'd better do what you are told and follow even unspoken instructions to the letter – at least during the first part of the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You will have to choose whether to remain true to your personal style today or to adjust to the desires of someone in authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Do you really know what you're up to today, and are you really able to control those instincts that are leading you down such a risky path?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It's important – even essential – for you to share your feelings with the one person who is most closely linked to you in every way.

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Great Beer Great Food Great Service
Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.
Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!
Thurs. Karaoke $2 cover
Sat. Trailer Park Sweaty Funky Horns $4 cover
Sun. Sarah Manning Jam on Cover
36 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst 413-253-4400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM

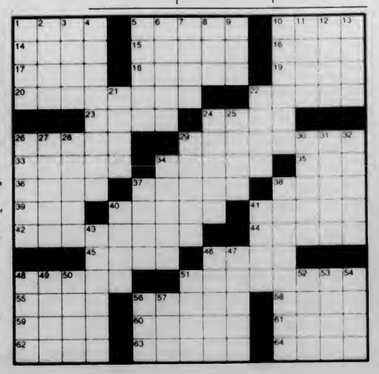
ACROSS
1 Jane Austen novel
5 Type of trashcooking
10 Yearn
14 Barrister
15 Welsh dog
16 Raised, as rabbits
17 Person who's easily duped
18 Gamut
19 Steak order
20 Fossil-fuel source
22 From Havana
23 Hemingway nickname
24 Kind of bar
26 — boom
29 Valuable mineral
33 Sour
34 Red crane
35 Food fish
36 "Garfield" pooch
37 Hale-Bopp, e.g.
38 Golf great Patty
39 Broadway's "— Mia"
40 Less bold
41 Clean off
42 With stars in one's eyes
44 Window parts
45 Combread
46 Sign on sale items
48 New growth
51 Garden squash
55 The A of WATS
56 Slacken off
58 "Dukes of Hazzard" spinoff
59 Lion's sound
60 Religious rule
61 Half
62 Crooked
63 The ones here
64 Stage award

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

K	O	H	L		A	S	T	O	R		C	O	W	L
I	D	E	A		R	H	I	N	E		H	A	N	A
D	E	N	S		S	A	L	T	S	H	A	K	E	R
		G	A	V	E	L		P	U	N	S	E	D
		G	E	L	I	N		W	E		E	V	E	N
N	U	C	L	E	I		M	A	T		E	V	E	N
E	R	L	E		C	H	A	N		R	O	V	E
I	D	A			A	R	E			G	L	O	W
O	L	I	V	E	O	I	L		D	U	K	E
H	E	R		P	I	E		P	R	I	M	E	R
		S	C	O	T		S	O	S		S	E	T	S
O	X	Y	G	E	N		L	A	U	D	S
G	R	O	U	N	D	B	A	L	L		E	D	A	M
A	L	A		E	V	E		E	N	E	M	O
E	Y	E	S		Y	E	A	S	T		T	E	A	M

1-11-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Hence
2 Hawaiian isle
3 Grinder
4 Pie seasoning
5 Junk
6 Australian animal
7 Seabird
8 Quiche ingredient
9 Cravat
10 Sudden
11 Complainer
12 Zeus' wife
13 Perfect spot
21 Cab
22 Players
24 Cut off
25 Skip past
26 Rake over the coals
27 Select from the menu
28 Clamor
29 Smelling like venison, var.
30 Dolphin's home
31 Vikings
32 Trims
34 Sherlock Holmes' creator
37 Facial feature
38 Cheapest
40 Dirty air
41 Bigger than life
43 Beehive
46 Turnpike vehicles
47 Public folks
48 "Two Muses for Bister —"
49 Front of a ship
50 Raise
51 Writer Grey
52 Fascinated by
53 Lunch time, for many
54 Early Cosby show
56 Emulate Brad Pitt
57 "— Numbugs!"



Quote of the Day

"The hornbill is perhaps the only bird that sounds like a pig throwing up."

-Islands Magazine

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 29 LOW: 10	HIGH: 29 LOW: 10	HIGH: 29 LOW: 13

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Beef Stew

Fish Munchies

Savory Rice & Spinach Bake (vegetarian)

Caribbean Jerk Tofu (vegan)

DINNER

Crab Newburg

Sweet Potato Quesadilla (vegetarian)

Ginger Black Beans (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Brian Smith
Photo Technician — Scott Eldridge
Copy Editor — Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor — Alan Basque
Production Staff — Kara Stelzer, Augusto Landaeta

INSIDE: NCAA hockey tournament guide.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

A monumental collapse

Minutemen squander 19-point lead; fall to eighteenth-ranked St. Joe's

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM

Shannon Crooks and the UMass men's basketball team gave up a 16-point halftime lead and lost a pivotal game to No. 18 St. Joseph's.

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times."

Although Charles Dickens penned those lines over 100 years ago in his classic novel, A Tale of Two Cities, in doing so he also unknowingly wrote the game story to yesterday's contest between No. 22 St. Joseph's and the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

In the first half, it was the best of times, as the Minutemen played some of their most outstanding basketball of the season, shooting 50 percent from the field, out rebounding the opposition 27-16 and taking a 49-33 lead into the locker room at the Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse in Philadelphia. It was the most points UMass had scored in the first frame all season, and it almost matched the 51 second half points the Maroon and White unloaded on George Washington back on January 6.

However, after the break, it was the worst of times, and the good feeling surrounding the Minutemen at the midway point quickly went away. The Hawks outscored Massachusetts 51-20 in the second half in order to collect the 84-69 victory, and with the win, propelled themselves into the position of regular season Atlantic 10 champions. St. Joe's also improved its record to 24-4 (14-1 A-10), while UMass dropped to 13-13 (11-4 A-10).

"If we put together two halves like the first one, than we can beat these guys," Micah Brand said, who notched 12 points and eight rebounds for the Maroon and White.

Marvin O'Connor was the main thorn in UMass' side throughout the night, totaling a game-high 21 points to go along with five rebounds and four assists. He was not alone, though, as Na'Im Crenshaw and Jameer Nelson also scorched the Minutemen for 17 and 16 points respectively.

For Massachusetts, Monty Mack led the squad with 15 points, but it came on only 4-for-17 shooting, including a woeful 1-for-11 second half performance. Jackie Rogers contributed to the stat line with 12 points and 11 boards of his own, but his success was also exclusively limited to the first 20 minutes, as he was only able to total a measly two points and three rebounds thereafter.

"They were backing off me a little too much in the first half, and I was scoring," Rogers said. "In the second half I was taking the same shots and making the same plays, but they just weren't falling."

UMass exploded out of the gates at the beginning of the contest by scoring its first 10 points in the paint, on its way to the four-point lead. A Crenshaw putback closed it to 18-15 eight minutes in, but Mack was able to answer with a pull-up three to extend his team's lead back to six.

With St. Joe's only down three a couple of minutes later, Rogers hit a layup on one possession, a jump hook on the next possession and then delivered a perfect pass to Shannon Crooks for the fast-break dunk after collecting a steal on the defensive end. All of this put his team up 29-20 with just over eight minutes remaining in the half, and up to that point, the Minutemen were executing their game plan of going inside perfectly.

Things soon got even better for the Maroon and White, as it used a 9-0 run to put itself up by 14. When Mack drilled another three from the left elbow with 3:05 remaining, it put UMass up 45-26 for its biggest lead of the contest. The Hawks were able to close the gap a little before the break, but it was still a very comfortable 16-point lead for the Minutemen when the halftime buzzer sounded.

In the second half, St. Joseph's wasted no time getting back into the game. O'Connor threw down a two-handed slam for the first points of the frame, and then dished out three consecutive assists in order to bring his team within 10 with 15:45 left.

When Nelson was forced to the bench with his fourth foul with his team down 55-47, it looked like the momentum might be turning once again in UMass' favor, but with the freshman sensation on the pine, the Hawks promptly ripped off a 14-2 run that put them up for good with 8:35 remaining.

"The trouble began when we started rushing it on offense," Brand said. "We would be one shot and out, and they would come down and hit a big shot and get the crowd into it."

"We just had a few defensive lapses," the sophomore forward added. "And they seemed to be hitting every shot."

Maroon and White guard Jonathan DePina was able to break the 14-2 run and close the gap to three by hitting a 19-footer with 7:46 remaining, but from that point on, the Hawks would slowly extend their lead and leave the Minutemen wondering exactly how they blew a 19-point advantage so quickly.

Overall in the second half, the Hawks shot an incredible 68 percent from the field, in addition to hauling down 22 boards to the Minutemen's 15.

Men's tennis starts A-10 with win

By Elena Ponesis
Collegian Staff

All season the Massachusetts men's tennis team has been gearing up for the all-important conference matches, which determine seeding for the Atlantic 10 tournament.

After a 7-0 blanking against conference rival Duquesne on Saturday, it is safe to say that practice makes perfect. The squad traveled to Burlington, Vt. to play not only Duquesne, but also a match against the host Vermont, a match in which it was highly favored. With a solid 6-1 victory under their belt the Minutemen went into the Duquesne match riding a wave of momentum.

"I think playing UVM first helped us get used to the facility and the courts," Todd Champeau said. "Duquesne flew in and they hadn't hit the courts. I mean UVM isn't that great and we knew we were going to win. But it was a great warm-up."

The Maroon and White took five of the six singles matches against the Catamounts in two sets with No.1 Steve Prisco posting an impressive victory of 6-1, 6-1over UVM standout Duncan McDonell. Freshman sensation Brent Davis continued his streak of success breezing past No.2 David Levin 6-3, 6-2.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM

The UMass men's tennis team opened its A-10 season with a win over Duquesne.

In doubles' action all three tandems successfully defeated the opposition capturing the point for the Minutemen.

"Though we won the doubles point I still didn't like what happened with the No.2 doubles," head coach Judy Dixon said. "I knew we had to turn it up three notches against Duquesne."

The No.6 ranked UMass squad turned it up at least ten notches as they breezed past a flat No.4 ranked Duquesne in this vital conference match.

"The match was huge," Rory Theis said. "It was a great step forward in our program. With this victory I hope we can get the one seed in the Atlantic 10."

Every player performed at the peak of his game with No.1 Prisco again playing superbly with a solid win 7-5, 5-7, 7-6 against David Brady of the Dukes. Davis played magnificently with a crushing victory of 6-4, 6-2 and senior Bill Greener enjoyed a similar win of 6-0, 6-3.

"Brent Davis continues to be the key to the team," Dixon said. "In duel matches he has been outstanding."

Champeau and Will Shaw in the middle of the line-up ended their sub-par play, which was a question mark for Dixon going into the match, as they stepped up big for the Maroon and White with two solid victories of 6-2, 2-6, 6-2 and 7-6, 6-4 respectively.

"Will Shaw and Todd Champeau came out and played extremely well," Dixon said. "And I think the doubles' point set the tone, which allowed the matches to fall."

The amazing tandem of Prisco/Davis racked up another strong victory for the Massachusetts squad 8-2. The pairing of Shaw/Champeau played with a hungry intensity that led to an 8-3 win for the duo. Theis/Greener also came up big defeating the No.3 Dukes doubles' team 8-3 in a fiery, competitive match.

With the Atlantic 10 tournament approaching the sixth-ranked Minutemen know the significance of this sweep in terms of seeding.

"Last year we played Duquesne at the A-10 tournament and we pretty much got killed," Champeau said. "We thought it was going to be tough. We didn't expect to beat them 7-0. St.Bonaventure, a tough team in the conference, beat the Dukes 4-3. The pre-season coaches poll picked us sixth, and Duquesne fourth. We wanted to make a statement that we are better than that."

"This is probably the biggest win for our program ever. This is a great win but it won't do us any justice unless we continue. A lot of guys stepped up and played great tennis. If everyone is playing great at the same time, we can beat anybody."

Women's tennis drops match to Army

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Certain personality qualities exemplify what our nation's army is looking for. Mental toughness. Resiliency. Physical fitness. The Army women's tennis team, judging by its performance against Massachusetts, has an abundance of each of these qualities to help its members "be all they can be".

The Cadets trounced the Minutewomen 6-1 Saturday on the campus of Hampshire College with hard-played tennis and an ethic that should be exemplary to all potential cadets. The victory came despite having a prior match in the morning at Boston University followed by the two-hour trek to the Pioneer Valley.

"I was shocked, but to Army's credit there were a couple of reasons why they were so well-prepared," head coach Judy Dixon said. "They are extremely deep, well-coached, and they are a team that comes to play every match. They really saved something for us."

The Maroon and White was only able to capture one singles victory on the day, as freshman star Francesca Mancini was rebounded from her leg injury sustained last week to dominate Army's Annie Weber 6-1, 6-0. Other than that, however, the Cadets were on cruise control for much of the evening as they captured the remaining five singles matches. Only one match in the quintet even went to three sets, as Helena Horak battled but ended up on the losing end of a 4-6, 7-5, 6-3 match to Army's Ali Rohr.

Dixon was impressed with the way the Cadets played, but was disappointed in the performance of her team, considering she regarded the Minutewomen as a slight favorite entering Saturday's showdown.

"I felt that we weren't ready for the match," Dixon said. "I think we were distracted because of the home match and the crowd. Army played very physical during the match, while at times we played very scared.

"We also haven't been taking things we've learned in practices and applied them to our matches."

The doubles point continued to be an Achilles heel for the Minutewomen as they again had a chance to start off the match with the lead but could not cash in on the opportunity that arose. The tandem of Mancini and Jafra Depontes won its match 9-8, but the other Minutewomen pairings fell. The team of Helena Horak and Susan Hyams fought but dropped a close battle, 9-8. In each of the Maroon and White's three losses this year, it has been unable to capture the doubles point, something Dixon feels hurts the team right from the start.

"I felt the doubles point was key, and we had opportunities to win it but couldn't finish," she said. "That really sets a tone which makes it difficult to come back from, since you're already down one."

After an impressive fall campaign in which the team finished 6-1, the team has stumbled out of the gates to a 2-2 record this spring. Dixon feels that the Minutewomen have the talent, but need to work on more than just their tennis to get where they want to be.

"We want them to recommit to much better physical fitness and to up their conditioning, and also to push themselves mentally," Dixon said. "I think they got a little too confident this fall, and when they went home they thought they wouldn't have to work as hard in the spring."

Still, the team still has a strong chance of reaching its objectives it set at the beginning of the season, which were winning the Atlantic 10 Tournament and receiving a sectional ranking, which means a berth in the ECAC tournament next year.

"The pressure's now on us, whereas a month ago we were in the driver's seat," Dixon said. "But our goals our still within our grasp.

The Minutewomen will be competing next on Sunday afternoon as they take on the Crimson of Harvard in another non-conference matchup.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM

The Minutewomen dropped a hard-fought match to Army, 6-1, at Hampshire College.

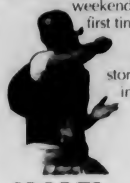
MARCH

Listen in to a conversation with Nullset's Ken Smith as Arts & Living takes a look at local music.

ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN



The UMass women's tennis team faces Harvard this weekend for the first time ever. Check out the story today in sports.

SPORTS p. 12

Volume CVII Issue 91 www.dailycollegian.com Thursday, March 1, 2001

First SGA meeting discusses ALANA and budget

SHALINI MARTI / COLLEGIAN

Jeff Howe addresses last night's SGA meeting.

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

At a meeting that could have been downright contentious, this semester's first Student Government Association meeting was more a happy get together than the place of the last seven months' bitter disputes.

The President and Trustee, the Speaker of the Senate, committee chairs, candidates for local office, all were complimentary of the student body. There was an air of hope in the room. That isn't to say that there wasn't the occasional mention of last semester's electoral fiasco or of a recently filed motion to throw out this semester's election, (Trustee Seth Avakian acknowledged that there might still be "bad blood" in the room) but what mention of problems there were tended to be in good humor.

The meeting started last night on shaky ground, par for the course a cynic would argue, when Jeff Howe had to delay the meeting the talk of last week's election after Chief Justice Gabriel Tavarez couldn't be found to swear in the new Senate. With a sheepish grin five minutes later Tavarez apologized and blamed a calculus test.

Standing in unison, Tavarez swore them in, and, in an unintentionally ironic moment, had the group repeat that they would "support the Constitution." It was that document that led to a decision last semester to nullify a fall election.

For Jim Eltringham, who had been at the metaphorical epicenter of all of the controversy, the meeting went well.

"It was a tough dynamic for us. For half the Senate, this was just another meeting after an extended winter break. For the other half, it's a totally new experience," Eltringham said. "The new half were elected during last week's election, one in which three times as many people won seats as lost elections."

The apparently unified Senate came together behind a couple of different campus issues, most notably expressing great concern during discussion of the decline of ALANA numbers on campus. Avakian attempted to clarify some of the issues that surround the decline, while Howe wondered why the UMass admissions office has been moved further away from campus than it was before.

There was also considerable discussion of impending campus budget cuts and who would be affected ("everyone" according the various speakers during the night) and a planned change in billing at University Health Services.

Howe said he wouldn't be pursuing any major legislative acts in his charge against both the enrollment and billing issues. He said he wouldn't pursue action because his term ends in 32 days, something that he both welcomed and dreaded.

Avakian said that he too wouldn't use the Senate as a place to make a statement, but did say that he hoped to keep the body informed and would consider the possible submission of legislation later in the semester. As opposed to Howe, whose term ends with April's election, Avakian's term is over at the end of the semester.

But the Senate wasn't all talk. Michael Whitehouse pushed the group toward immediate legislative action, noting that we "don't need to perpetuate the image that we constantly deal with internal issues while external issues go unaddressed."

He put forward three motions for consideration, about increased lighting on East Pleasant Street, improvement to YCMP, and about a change in parking policy.

Eyes on the Prize

Are UMass' stars bright enough for the NBA stage?

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

PHOTO BY DAN SANTELLA ILLUSTRATION BY SAGE BROUSSEAU

Micah Brand (front) and Kit Rhymer are two UMass players who could very well have the NBA in their futures.

The sun hits the streets of New York, the city. It plays off the windshields of the Bronx, into the eyes of the kids in the projects of Sound View. The kids have picked up a basketball, and have found a way to enjoy the warmth and the glow.

They sweat. They hustle. It is as if they are far away from the harsh realities of the streets that surround them, on an island ruled only by a game.

The sun hits his cheeks but it is nothing like the sun in St. Thomas. He's only in eighth grade but at 6-foot-5, he is in every game of basketball that is run. His shadow stretches across the court as his shot drops and he flings his arms up, not in response to the roar of a crowd but as a celebration of a single moment. A moment when there is only basketball.

The game is an escape for Kitwana Rhymer. Not a way out of the projects or the borough back to his native Virgin Islands, just a momentary doorway into that place where nothing exists but the game. There is no such thing as hoop dreams yet for the future Massachusetts center.

"Basketball was a way of getting off the streets, and that's really it," Rhymer said. "Everybody who plays and watches the NBA on TV says 'yeah, I want to get there.' But you never really think it's gonna happen to you."

Basketball is a game where the best players literally rise to the top. The best of the American playgrounds filter into the nation's thousands of college and university teams; the gate gets a little more narrow and the game gets a lot more refined. Players like Rhymer, who blossomed early enough to bring a pro-sized frame into collegiate ball, start to come up even bigger. They start to get noticed by certain people with big time ties. They start getting mentioned in sentences that end in "NBA."

Mike Procopio is one of the guys doing such talking. An independent talent scout who provides reports to eight different NBA teams, Procopio makes his living as a judge of college basketball's best. He has looked at over 300 individual players in the last year. On a chilly January night in Providence, Rhode Island, he has found an empty seat on press row at the Civic Center, to look at a single player in the UMass – URI game.

Within 10 minutes Procopio is on his cell phone, arguing the merits of a player from the Big East. On the screen of his laptop is a report from last year on a graduating senior from Temple. Minimized beneath it is the new report, the one in progress on the player in front of him. The player is getting whistled for leading with his shoulder.

"I look at so many guys, so many games," Procopio said. "I see some guys six or seven times. I'll see all these guys again, most likely."

The game before him is anything but memorable, a 32-point laugher that gives UMass its fifth conference win in a row. But there is one matchup that draws attention, and sparks conversations throughout the stands that inevitably end in "NBA."

Scoring for each team comes largely from the shooting guard spot, where UMass' Monty Mack and URI's Zach Marbury account for just under half of the 124 total points scored. Mack's 29 are a new season-high for the senior tri-captain, while Marbury's 22 are somewhat of a disappointment for the junior.

He had dropped 38 on La Salle three nights earlier.

Players like Mack and Marbury seem like locks for professional careers. Pure athletes who dominate the college ranks night-in and night-out, they have earned a career-long green light in terms of taking shots and a role as the nucleus of their entire team's offense. They are the matchup within the matchup. As Marbury says, it isn't just about UMass versus URI anymore.

"It's Mack versus Marbury," says the Brooklyn native. "Who doesn't want to see that?"

"I'm not here to look at either of those guys," says Procopio. "There has been enough written about both of them, and besides there's a much better prospect here."

His prospect has just turned the ball over, traveling before he even gets an opportunity to shoot.

The problem with Mack and Marbury is simple, according to Procopio: size. Collegiate hoops whittles the playground pack down exponentially, and the NBA then thins the herd down to 435 roster players. Those aren't just the best players; they're the biggest of the best. Any player with significant height, regardless of ability, is going to get at least a second look.

"Pure and simple, there just aren't a lot of big men out there," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint, who has seen two towering Minutemen make the jump to the NBA since he began coaching in Amherst. "People are always looking for big guys who can run the floor. Those types of guys will always get looked at."

Mack and Marbury are each listed at 6-foot-3, and neither weighs more than 200 pounds. They are too small for the two-guard spot at the pro level, where they would routinely be matched up with players in the 6-foot-5 to 6-foot-7 range. Even a sharpshooter like Mack would have a hard time finding his niche in the pro game, according to Procopio.

"Mack is the classic man without a position," Procopio said. "Yes, he can

UMass twin telescopes check out the nightlife

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

As the students at the University of Massachusetts hurry to class, head to dinner and enjoy alcohol in moderation here in Amherst, thousands of miles away in Chile and Arizona, the Astronomy Department is undertaking a far more ambitious look at nightlife.

Since 1997, the twin telescopes of the Two Micron All-Sky Survey, or 2MASS, have been scanning the sky and creating a map of the universe. This high-resolution digital survey of the complete sky is a project led by the UMass Astronomy Department, and is headed up by Professor Michael Skrutskie.

"These telescopes have given us the first detailed global view of our Milky Way galaxy as well as the galaxies which lie beyond," said Skrutskie. "The resulting databases and source catalogs are a treasure trove which will be mined for discovery by scientists and the public alike for decades to come."

The purpose of the 2MASS was to take the most thorough census ever made of the Milky Way galaxy and the nearby universe. The two telescopes are each only 1.3 meters across and take many small surveys of the sky.

"You can't be too ambitious when trying to make a map of this type," said Skrutskie. "If you used a bigger telescope, it would take longer to decode and sift through the data. By using smaller telescopes, we're taking a bigger bite out of the sky at a time because it is easier to decode the data and continue taking surveys."

Skrutskie explained that 2MASS detects infrared wavelengths that are beyond the red light in the rainbow of visible colors. Infrared is particularly effective for detecting objects that are eclipsed by the Milky Way, as well as cool and faint objects that give off very little light. It penetrates gas and dust better than visible light.

So far, the telescopes have collected more than 24 terabytes of images since they began working in 1997. That's enough to fill more than 2,000 hard drives on the average desktop computer. The catalogues contain over 300 million stars and galaxies in their images and are expected to yield significant discoveries in astronomy within the next few decades.

The project is a collaboration between UMass and the Infrared Processing and Analysis Center (IPAC) at the California Institute of Technology and Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena. While IPAC developed the software system that catalogues the data after converting it from the telescopes to images, UMass was in charge of the administrative side of the project, maintaining the budget and schedule, observing the facilities and upgrading the hardware. UMass researcher Rae Stiening was the project manager.

"The 2MASS telescopes and cameras operated with incredible efficiency and were workhorses for more than a thousand nights," said Roc Cutri, a scientist at IPAC. "The facilities collected data 99.5 percent of the available time during the mission, and only a few nights were lost due to hardware failures. That's a remarkable record for any astronomical observatory on the ground or in space."

Among the objects in the cosmos, the survey has uncovered numerous stars with such unique characteristics that astronomers needed to revise a century-old system of classification of known types of stars. The scopes have also detected previously unknown galaxies beyond the Milky Way. New star-birth regions have been mapped. Failed stars and cool brown dwarfs have been unveiled.

The hope of the researchers at UMass, IPAC and even National Air and Space Association (NASA), is that the new map and its findings will provide information that will be useful for astronomers and their research for years to come.

"Astronomy is entering a new

Turn to ASTRONOMY page 3

COURTESY OF INFRARED PROCESSING AND ANALYSIS CENTER/CALIFORNIA INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

The Ring Nebula in Lyra

NBA

continued from page 1

shoot; he can shoot the lights out. But from where? He's too small for the two, and I haven't seen enough footspeed from him to consider him a point prospect."

Not that Mack is at all concerned. The Presseus-o Atlantic 10 Player of the Year refuses to even entertain thoughts of his basketball future, steering the conversation instead toward his team's chances at postseason play. He looks away at the mere mention of the NBA.

"I don't think about anything but my team winning," Mack said. "Us winning games is more important than anything else, anyone else. Any time you start thinking of a team as one guy or concentrating on what one guy does, you're through."

That discipline may not come as easily for Marburv. His Rams are sitting dead last in the conference, and the eligibility problems of teammate Javorris Bell have forced Marburv to carry the Rams on his back in terms of offense. And then there is the shadow that the 21 year-old has always played in, that of his brother Stephon. That's the NBA All Star Stephon Marbury, currently playing a few hours south on I-95, with the New Jersey Nets.

The younger Marburv has always had his brother to look up to, to seek advice from, to show him exactly what the next level could bring.

"The biggest thing I've learned from him is that the NBA isn't going anywhere," Marburv said. "I know the scouts come to these games, but I just look at on my game and do my thing. I'm not worrying about the next level.

"I want the scouts to be here. I want them to see what I can do."

Procopio doesn't see anything from Marburv that he hasn't seen before; like Mack, the URI guard simply isn't big enough to bring his style of play to the NBA. But that's not to say that the scout doesn't see a future for either player at another tier of the "next level."

"A guy like Monty Mack could become a very wealthy young man by taking his game overseas," Procopio said. "He could make between 60 and 75 thousand dollars a year as the marquee scorer on a European team."

That is one version of the basketball last track that doesn't get much attention in the typical hoop dream, the international pro scene. The Continental Basketball Association (CBA) and other pro leagues have long harbored players without enough size or ability to jump straight to the NBA. A year out of college, getting paid to play basketball anywhere is at least a step in the right direction.

That was the case for Tyrone Weeks, who graduated from UMass in 1998 and was drafted into the CBA. The labor strike in pro hoops that year forced Weeks to instead sign on with Estudiantes, a team in Argentina.

"Going overseas wasn't my first choice of where I wanted to play, but I had really no choice because of the lockout," said Weeks, who finished his UMass career sixth in school history in rebounds (858), seventh in games played (125) and ninth in blocks (65). "I decided to just play one year over there and put some money in my pocket."

Now an assistant coach at St. Bonaventure, Weeks relishes the time he spent playing pro ball in South America. In spite of injury problems (a nagging left ankle forced him to retire from playing) the 6-foot-7 forward got an education of sorts in international culture while earning a living on the hardwood.

"I was the only black male in the organization, and one of the only people who spoke English," Weeks said. "It was kind of frightening, but it was also a lot of fun."

But the language barrier means little when you're there to play a big man's game and you have a big man's body; the hoop dream always comes back, inevitably, to a matter of size. Scouts like Procopio are in search of the kind of bodies that can accommodate not only the style of the NBA, but also its rigors.

The Civic Center lights flash in Procopio's eyes as UMass' Micah Brand, a 6-foot-11 tree of a sophomore from New York, snares a rebound. The scout shares his findings with a number of other scouts from across the country (his particular areas of concentration are the A-10 and the Big East), and most of the national interest in UMass is in Brand.

"Brand is the single best prospect on the team," Procopio says. "I just like the way he handles himself when he has the ball. For a sophomore, he has a good back-to-the-basket game in terms of getting the defender to go where he wants him."

The hype surrounding Brand is probably a little premature, at least in the eyes of his coach. Even as he acknowledges the age factor (Brand is 20), Flint feels that his young center has yet to live up to the potential that earned him honorable mention All-America honors from Street & Smith while playing prep ball in Connecticut.

"I don't know if I expect too much from Micah, but I think he could be better," Flint said. "He's really our best offensive big guy. I'd go to him a lot more if he could keep his fouls down and be more consistent defensively."

Procopio thinks such developments will come for Brand. He points to the 11 pounds Brand added in the weight room before this season and the gradual increase in playing time he has enjoyed as sure signs that Brand will achieve at a higher level. He goes so far as to mention another slender center who parlayed his UMass career into a ticket to the pros.

"Brand just has to learn; everything else is there," Procopio says. "He definitely has the body, people will make the obvious remarks about his weight, but they did the same thing when Camby was here."

When Camby was here. That phrase is like an outlet pass that keys a fast break of memories for followers of UMass hoops: the rise of the John Calipari-led Minutemen, the emergence of willowy center Marcus Camby as the premiere big man in the country, the team's march to the 1996 Final Four. UMass was at the heart of the college basketball scene that season, one of the country's hottest teams at a time when the collegiate ranks were ripe with roundball talent.

Scott McConnell was at the center of the Minuteman hoop hysteria, as an assistant sports information director (SID) for UMass during the Camby-Calipari era. That job meant dealing with the avalanche of media attention the program was receiving during the magical '96 season, as well as attending to the needs of the slew of scouts that dogged the Minutemen and their storied center.

"We had to accommodate anywhere between five and 15 scouts a game that year," said McConnell, who is now the basketball SID at Texas. "During the one game against Wake Forest, when they had Tim Duncan, there were upwards of 20 NBA scouts there." (Nick Joos, the current basketball SID at UMass, estimates that the team current draws an average of two scouts per game depending on the opposition.)

McConnell experienced firsthand the nuelstrom that swirls around an NBA lock like Camby (who earned Player of the Year honors and went third in the draft in 1997). He has since borne witness to the scouting and drafting of former Longhorn standout Chris Mihm, who now starts for the Cleveland Cavaliers. Though Mihm was a less heralded star on a less scrutinized program, McConnell feels that the development of the scouting process has fueled an increasingly frenzied search for the next NBA sleeper.

"There are so many scouts in the collegiate ranks now, if you're good you're going to get noticed," McConnell said. "If they're even remotely interested in a guy, they're going to do their homework and get a look at him."

That is precisely what Procopio is in Providence to do: get a good look at a guy who probably doesn't appear on too many NBA teams' wish lists. He is not there to witness the scoring prowess of Mack or Marbury and his sights aren't set on the prodigal paint play of Brand. He is there to look at the guy who spends almost half of the game on the bench, in foul trouble. The guy whose turnovers and fouls total exactly how many points he scores – six.

A guy who, according to the scout, has the best chance of being UMass' next NBA player.

"I'm here to look at Rhymer," Procopio said. "Size and strength are things you can always use more of."

The 6-foot-10 center has a woeful night against the Rams, playing only 23 minutes and notching as many fouls as field goals (two each). Procopio is unfazed by Rhymer's misfortune and instead focuses on the positives: Rhymer's inside muscling against 250-pound Marcus Evans of URI, his willingness to attack the hoop, his penchant for trailing fast breaks. The scout sees in Rhymer not a lack of refinement, but a wealth of potential.

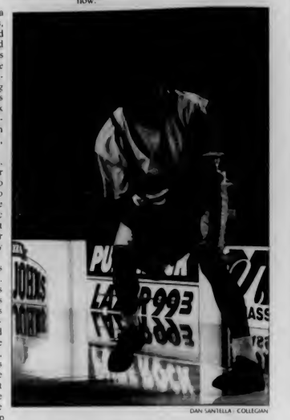
"Big, strong, runs the floor. Not much else you're looking for in a guy like him," Procopio says. It is then pointed out to him that Rhyrner is in the process of completing academic requirements for a fifth year at UMass. "If he comes back for another year, he could absolutely be an NBA draft pick."

It is a pity that Procopio is not at UMass' William D. Mullins Center three weeks later, when Rhymer wreaks some revenge on URI. He scores a career-high 30 points on 10-of-13 shooting from both the field and the free throw line in the Maroon and White's 82-67 win, making the 35 combined points of Mack and Marbury a mere sideshow. Mack says later that he saw a look in Rhymer's eye that made him want to give the center the ball on every trip down the court.

When the glow of the TV camera lights finally fades from his face, Rhymer has time to put his night, and his future, into perspective.

"You hear people talk about 'the zone,' well, tonight was one of those games for me," Rhymer said afterward. "This is the kind of game that I want people to see, to see what I am capable of doing when I'm just having fun and playing my game.

"If there are scouts here, thank you for coming," Rhymer said. "Believe me, if I could go out and score 30 points a night, I'd have no problem with that. But it's just a matter of taking it as it comes. Like the NBA. I'll take it if it comes, but I'm not going to let it bother me now."



DAN SANTELLA - COLLEGIAN

Though Monty Mack faces a good chance of continuing his roundball career, his NBA future could be blocked by one factor: his size.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Five-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hummel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Gargantta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

General Electric

PriceWaterhouse Coopers

NHL Corporation

MBNA Financial

Q: What do these companies have in common?

A: Former Collegian Finance Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ASSISTANT FINANCE MANAGER.

CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.

APPLICANTS SHOULD CURRENTLY BE A SOPHOMORE.

This is your school.
GET INVOLVED.
GET INVOLVED.

President Trustee and Area Government Elections

Nominations:
Open: Thursday 3/01/01
.....at 12:00 pm
Close: Thursday 3/15/01
.....at 5:00 pm

Elections:
Held: 3/28/01 and 3/29/01

· Pick up nomination forms in the SGA Office room 420 of Student Union

· Questions call the SGA Office 5-0342

Students called; admin answered

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

Whitmore settled down to business as usual yesterday after Tuesday's temporary occupation of the Chancellor's reception area.

"We have to do our normal work," Vice Chancellor Javier Cevallos said.

On Tuesday evening, Chancellor David K. Scott sent out an email to the campus community. In it, he reminded students that while they do have a right to protest, there are limits as dictated by the Picketing Code.

"It is vitally important to draw a clear line between dissent and disruption. From time to time, in any community, there will be disagreement," Scott wrote. "But I do not support, nor will I tolerate, disruption of the activities and offices of the University, of people's lives, work and rights. The guidelines are clear in drawing a distinction between expression of dissent – in the appropriate time, place and manner – and disruption."

Cevallos assures that this message from the Chancellor was merely a restating of policy, and was not necessarily an official response to the recent protests.

"Four years ago the President's office sent these guidelines to the campuses," Cevallos explained. "This is an occasion where it's a good idea to remind the campus of these guidelines."

The guidelines set forth in the picketing code prohibit student protestors from "blocking free entry to or free exit from buildings" and threatens expulsion or other sanctions for violators of the code.

"All students, undergraduate and graduate, have a right to demonstrate on University premises provided, however, that no such demonstration shall be permissible which for any reason of time, place, or type of behavior materially disrupts class work or other University business, or involves substantial disorder or invasion of the rights of others," the code states.

In addition to the Picketing Code, the Chancellor reminded students that there are other guidelines. The University has several guidelines that deal specifically with the administration's responses to occupations, called the Guidelines for Responses to Demonstrations on University Property.

"Some members of the University community on occasion have exceeded the bounds of appropriate expression during the course of demonstrations, by interfering in the educational activities and business of the University and with the rights of others," the policy states. "It is therefore desirable to re-affirm the importance of appropriate time, place and manner restrictions on demonstrations."

The administration is working to present numbers and statistics regarding the population, retention and enrollment of ALANA students. These figures should be available today, Cevallos said.

"We are looking to present some information to the community, real facts and numbers," Cevallos said. "We are working very hard."

astronomy

continued from page 1

era," said Skrutskie. "Now we're looking at a time when people do astronomy from the desktop and from databases. It's on a scale that no one group could have produced."

The two telescopes are located at both the National Science Foundation-funded Cerro Tololo Inter-American Observatory In Chile, and at the Fred Lawrence Whipple Observatory on Mount Hopkins, Az. Although the Chilean telescope began scanning in 1998, a year after the one in Arizona, both telescopes finished their survey on Feb. 15 of this year.

In addition to the work of 2MASS, the University of Massachusetts Astronomy department is also working on a few other projects, including a big Flagship Large Millimeter Telescope (LMT) currently being built in Puebla, Mexico. The LMT will be a radio telescope on the lookout for galaxies and will be used for cosmology-the study of the universe as a whole. The giant telescope will be taller than the Lederle Graduate Research Towers when completed.

UMass also has a project called IOTA: Infrared Optical Telescope Array in Arizona. It is an interferometer-multiple telescopes to form a giant telescope. It increases the power of the telescope at different distances.

"The IOTA studies binary stars-multiple stars orbiting each other," said Tim Brothers, a junior Astronomy major who worked on the project last summer. "We're doing something that's never been done before, seeing if stars that are facing each other are actually brighter on their facing sides."

Although there are not any undergraduates from UMass currently working on the 2MASS project, it is believed that this, and the other projects, will benefit all students.

"The data will give us a better understanding of how our universe works," Brothers said. "It's really exciting as a student because we can learn more about how stars evolve and the formation of our own solar system. Besides, the pictures are hella-cool."

Brothers also explained that the Astronomy department has taken on so many projects "in order to put UMass up there with the rest of the schools in research in terms of Astronomy."

"We're doing a broad range of research from basic stars up to cosmology," Brothers said. "The combined programs show that UMass is a serious Astronomy department. Its goal is to be one of the top research departments in the US in the next decade."

UMass also owns and runs a telescope at the Quabbin Reservoir and uses the Observatory behind Orchard Hill for Astronomy classes, and open to the public on clear Thursday nights from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m.

More information and more images are available online at: www.ipac.caltech.edu/2mass/, www.astro.umass.edu, and http://pegasus.astro.umass.edu/GradProg/2mass.html.

COURTESY OF WORLD WIDE WEB

Messier 8 Lagoon Nebula

Golden arches coming soon?

By Katy LoConte
Collegian Staff

It's been almost a week since the campus voted on the Student Government Association referendum questions, yet the students minds are still buzzing with thoughts on the issues and what, if any, action will be taken on the issues.

The referendum questions asked students for their vote of "yes" or "no" on three different issues. The questions were as follows:

Question number one: Would you like to see an establishment such as a McDonald's, Wendy's or Burger King in the Campus Center? (Yes 704, No 430).

Question number two: Would you like to be able to purchase the UMass Index Yearbook through a positive check box on your fall semester tuition bill your senior year? (Yes 725, No 430).

Question number three: Should we have a bar on campus? (Yes 767, No 305).

Gayle Hoisington, an undeclared freshman, said that she believed all questions were important to campus life. "I think all the questions are valid," she said.

Karolyn Meyers, a sophomore Mathematics major, had a different opinion on the subject.

"I'm guessing the questions were probably pretty pointless," said Myers. "I guess I really haven't thought into them much because those votes really don't matter."

When asked about partial privatization on campus, Myers said that chain restaurants could be a very real possibility for UMass.

"The way things are going I could see that happening with privatization and everything," she said.

Igor Bril, a freshman Pre-Computer Science major, agreed.

"I think most students would be for it [question number one]," said Bril. "I don't see why not. Cheap junk food is always good.

"I suppose if enough people stood behind it, it could happen. If enough people wanted a McDonald's I don't see how they could resist."

Hoisington also said that question number two could make student life easier.

"I think that question number two would be good because it would be more organized," pointed out Hoisington, "and then they would know right from the start who has paid."

Question number three seemed to be the most controversial, however.

"I can't see the administration ever letting us have a bar on campus," said Meyers.

Hoisington said that an on-campus bar might help curb alcohol-related accidents.

"It would help prevent drinking and driving," she said. "I don't think it would promote drinking. I don't think any more people would start drinking than already do."

"It would make the designated driver thing simpler," said Bril. "You don't have to drive so you don't have to worry about car accidents as much.

"I'd personally rather have a bar on campus so I don't have to worry about getting home."

Bril expressed optimism that the bar will become reality.

"I don't see why not. I mean it's a bigger pain in the ass to go off [campus]."

Visit www.dailycollegian.com on the net!

UMASS Muslim Students Association
Proudly Presents:

EID-AL-ADHA
POTLUCK DINNER
Tuesday March. 6th
Commonwealth Room
(next to MSA office)
@ 6:30 pm
Eid is on Monday the 5th
Contact : Navid @ 577-2205 -or- muslim@student.umass.edu
www.univ.oit.umass.edu/~muslim [321-Student Union]

MARCH ON OVER TO LIQUORS 44 FOR THE BEST DEALS AROUND!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink & Drive
EVERYDAY PRICING
1/2 KEGS BUSCH LIGHT, MICHELOB LIGHT $44.99 + tax
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB $45.99 + tax
1/2 KEGS NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $37.99 + tax
1/2 KEGS BUDWEISER, BUDWEISER SELECT, ALL FLAVORS $88.99 + tax
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 30 PACK $12.99 + dep
BUD & BUD LIGHT CASE $15.99 + dep
KILLIAN'S IRISH RED 12 PACK $9.49 + dep
GRANITE BREWERY PUB DRAUGHT 4 PACK $4.99 + dep
DINKEL ACKER PILSNER 12 PACK $9.99 + dep
PABST BLUE RIBBON CASE $8.99 + dep
WINES OF THE MONTH
COVEY RUN $6.49
MARCH "MADNESS"
CORBETT CANYON $6.49
C.K. MONDAVI $11.99
MERIDIAN WINES $15.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF $7.99
CONCHO Y' TORO $6.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM 1.75L $18.99
JAMESON IRISH WHISKEY 750 ML $15.99
RUBINOFF VODKA 1.75L $8.99
CAROLAN'S IRISH CREAM 750 ML $9.49
BALLANTINE SCOTCH 1.75L $20.99
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
The Holyoke store WILL REMAIN OPEN during renovation of the Stop & Shop Plaza
SALE PRICES THURS 3/1/01 THRU WEDS 3/7/01

SHOOT...SHOOT...DRIVE (away)
The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN PRESENTS... Atlantic 10 ShootOut
CO-ED TEAM HOOP SHOOTING CONTEST
Win a Trip to Philly and a 2001 Chevy Tracker
SHOOT...From six spots on the floor. Qualifiers shoot at halftime of a Men's Game
SHOOT...Winners ShootOut in Philly at the Atlantic 10 Championship— March 9 & 10
DRIVE...The ShootOut Champions drive away, EACH in a New Chevy Tracker
Official Sponsors: CHEVY TRUCKS, LIKE A ROCK, GMAC, verizon
QUALIFYING ROUND:
Thursday, March 1st @ The Cage @ 3pm
CAMPUS SHOOTOUT FINALS:
Halftime - March 3rd vs. St. Bonaventure @ Mullins Center
FREE & OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS TO ENTER:
LOG ON: www.atlantic10.org
Or See Intramural Director for Details
2 Year Lease

Trip-On: Amsterdam Barcelona Berlin Brussels Dublin London Madrid Paris Rome
PACKAGES INCLUDE: • Roundtrip airfare • 2 nights accommodation • Airport transfers† • Travel Card† • Camera, document organizer, discounts, guidebooks, maps and more.
STARTING AT
London $444*
Madrid $502*
Amsterdam $509*
Rome $499*
44 Main Street
413-256-1261
counciltravel.com
Council Travel
America's Leader in Student Travel
†Select cities only.
*Prices are per person, double occupancy, based on departures from Hartford Bradley and minimum 2-night stay. U.S. departure taxes and airport fees are additional. Departures from other major cities are available. Prices are subject to change.

BRUISED BODY?
Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Thursday, March 1, 2001
Ed/Op Editor • Rob Schulze
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Let there be rock:

Spring Concert must go on

On one level or another, everyone wants to rock.

This is why we need the Spring Concert.

The Spring Concert can be a massive event for the UMass community, a watershed happening at the end of the year. It can bring the campus together with an array of crowd-pleasing, diverse music, and formulate memories which can last the rest of our lives. A good, well-planned and thought-out Spring Concert can be the highlight of a University of Massachusetts spring.

This year, however, there have been obstacles. In an article which appeared in last Tuesday's Collegian, the lack of funding which University Productions and Concerts (UPC), the organization which puts on the Spring Concert, has received was detailed. Basically, UPC is not getting the cash to put on the show from the SGA, and the student body is running the risk of missing out on some great possible acts.

Now, we at the Collegian are not fools. We realize that a concert is nowhere near as important as other issues on campus, issues such as the decline in ALANA enrollment, the possibility of losing the voting booth in Southwest, and the real chance that budget cuts in the departments will continue. However, as serious as those issues are, we also know that people care deeply about the Spring Concert, for different reasons, but no less passionately.

As such, the Collegian has chosen to take an editorial stance on this subject: we believe that the SGA should free up whatever funds are necessary to ensure that the Concert progresses.

The concert is one of the few chances that the students have to actually see the money that they pay in fees to this University used in a way that directly benefits them. It shows them that someone, somewhere, is thinking to give them what they want, rather than what they are told is good for them.

It can also, if the SGA and UPC can come to an agreement, that student government and student organization can accomplish something that is legitimately worthwhile and pleasing to the students. A well-done Spring Concert can redeem the reputation of all associated with it.. students appreciate it when people do things that they like.

Finally, though, we have a chance to come together as a group for something that we can all enjoy. Not only might we have the chance to enjoy the bands that play the style of music which we prefer, but we can expand our horizons. Who knows how many rock fans could be converted by a stellar hip-hop act? Vice-versa?

Now is the time, SGA. Your elections have been confirmed. Do something with yourself that will benefit your constituents directly. Work with UPC, not against them. Get the job done, do whatever it takes. If the Spring Concert fails to materialize, we will know the cause.

And we don't forget.

This unsigned editorial represents the opinion of the Collegian Diversity board.

Earnhardt remembered

BRIAN LOHNES

When the black # 3 car struck the outside wall of the last turn at the Daytona International Speedway two Sundays ago, many people, myself included, didn't think twice about it. After all, as an avid fan, participant and writer about motor sports, I had witnessed scores of wrecks at racetracks, many more violent that that. Or so I thought.

The wreck that killed Dale Earnhardt was very unspectacular. It was in many regards mundane when compared to the massive wreck involving almost twenty cars earlier in the race.

That was a wreck where a car literally became airborne and then landed on top of another car at well over one hundred miles per hour, flipping over several more times before coming to a rest. In that wreck, the driver suffered only a concussion. Dale's accident was like so many others we have seen on racetracks where the driver climbs out of the car, spots a wave to the fans and walks safely to the infield. We all thought that was what Dale would do.

People attend all kinds of auto racing events across the world. In fact, worldwide auto racing is the most popular spectator sport. People attend and watch racing on television to watch drivers hang it all out on the ragged edge. People also like seeing wrecks. It's a fact of racing. They enjoy the wrecks because the drivers cheat death and are able to get out of the cars and safely walk away. They do not go to races to watch racers die. The racers are their idols, people they aspire to be like. Like any sport, people love certain racers and hate others, but they respect them all. To sum it up, this is the equivalent of Michael Jordan dying on a basketball court.

I have become increasingly annoyed with the television coverage of the death of Mr. Earnhardt because it seems more and more like this event is being covered by people who don't know their ass from their elbow when it comes to racing. The hot topic in the media right now is "How can they make these cars safer?" Here's the simple answer: they can't. Dr. Jerry Punch, who is probably the most respected motor sports journalist on television, has argued that NASCAR is the safest form of professional motor sports in the world. People who don't know anything about racing ask questions like this because they have no inkling about how much safety is built into racing cars. Dale Earnhardt was not driving some sloppily built hot rod at 185 miles-per-hour. He was driving a vehicle that has been refined over the 50 years of NASCAR's history into one of the most precision built machines in the world. The car didn't fail Dale Earnhardt on Sunday. Physics did.

Earnhardt died because when he hit the wall, the car stopped but inertia carried his body, more specifically his head, forward. His head hit the steering wheel and since he was wearing an open face helmet, It allowed his jaw to strike. The trauma his jaw suffered was transmitted into the back of his head and the ensuing skull fracture killed him.

The car did everything right. It is built to absorb most of the impact. Did you see the wheels break off and the front crush in the replay? That is all engineered into the car to absorb the impact before the body does. Unfortunately, no technology exists on the planet Earth to build a car that will absorb the impact of a 184 mile-per-hour impact with a concrete wall. So what is the answer? Do we slow the cars down? The answer to that is no.

Racecar drivers are not stupid people. I can attest to that because I am one. I also have many friends through racing who all know that there is an assumed risk every time you strap yourself into a car on the racetrack. There is a very real chance you could die. Every driver in NASCAR knows that. Dale Earnhardt knew that, and if you ask any of them if the cars should be slowed down, they will emphatically tell you that they shouldn't. Dale Earnhardt would roll in his grave if he knew that NASCAR slowed down racecars because of his death.

Another point the media has harped on is the fact that NASCAR will continue on with its schedule and not cancel any races because of Earnhardt's death. Last year two drivers died at New Hampshire International Speedway in separate incidents and no races were cancelled for them. Granted, Earnhardt is a premier name in the sport and they did not have his kind of stature, but still, he would not want them to cancel any races. He would want them to continue on, and learn from what happened.

The driver that many of the uninformed are "citing" for the Earnhardt wreck is Sterling Marlin. He is no more at fault than you or I watching the broadcast. Marlin was racing close and fast. He was racing behind Earnhardt, trying to make a pass. Dale was blocking for his son and his other driver Michael Waltrip, who were charging for the flag. Marlin did nothing dirty, illegal, or wrong to cause this accident. The man will forever have to live with the fact that he will be immortalized as one of the people involved in the wreck that killed Earnhardt.

Finally, I asked Adam Volpe, a close friend of mine who had a scary incident on a racetrack last summer, exactly what a driver experiences when he loses control of his car. In Adam's case, he was rounding a corner at New Hampshire International Speedway at a shade over one hundred miles-per- hour when his car lost grip and spun completely around, narrowly missing on coming traffic. After the spin, Adam was so shaken that he could barely get the car into gear again. But he got back into the car the next day and got back out on the track. Racecar drivers have been doing this for decades and they will continue to do so in the future. That's why these men can be considered heroes.

Dale Earnhardt was an icon in racing. He was a man who many said could will a racecar around the track if he had to do so to win. He died doing what he loved to do. I just hope that his legacy isn't lost to questions being asked by people who never knew him, or the sport he loved so dearly.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian Columnist.

DUE TO THE INAVAILABILITY OF FUNDING, THE HEADLINERS FOR THE SPRING CONCERT WILL BE "JED'S JUG BAND"... A LYNRD SKYNRD TRIBUTE GROUP. (THIS CONCERT WILL BE FREE TO UMASS STUDENTS)

Taking time to look around

ROB SCHULZE

It's strange how much depth there can be to a dorm room. You move in on a disgustingly hot September day and it's bare, sanitary and entirely anonymous. By the time you leave it's become enriched with your personality, your life, your memories. Just as an example, let's take a quick tour of my Z room in Southwest... as you can see what I mean...

You walk in the door. On the wall to the right is a UMass hockey poster from the first game I ever attended. I was a sophomore, and me, Ryan Benharris, and the Driscoll brothers went and checked it out from sheer boredom. I was converted instantly. Also on the wall are large posters of Rage Against the Machine, Pantera, and a smaller one of Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band – the first two store bought at Newbury Comics in Amherst, the Boss purchased at an actual concert from his reunion tour at the Fleet Center in Boston. Under that is the futon I've had since my freshman year. I spent my very first hangover shuddering on that futon wishing the sun would explode. Also on the futon is the blanket that my mom got me when I complained of the cold in my room when I still lived at home and Little John, less May's huge turtle. She let me borrow him to keep me company one night when I was working late.

On the other walls are more posters, each with its own history – the WWI one that was a Christmas present from Jenny this year, the WAAF one that I got at a wrestling match when I was a freshman, the Vans poster I got at the Warped Tour this summer, and the Sox license plate I got at my very first every Fenway game, with my dad and my Uncle Bill, when I was in the fourth grade.

There's the TV that I bought used when I got my first job in high school. On top of that is a picture of a bottle of vodka with an out-of-focus thumbs up in front of it, courtesy of Mike, and the plastic Sox hat that I got, filled with vanilla ice cream and jimmies, this past summer at the Dairy Queen in Middleboro.

Moving into the other half of the Z (I'm an RA, with the requisite double single – nuwahahahaha) we find my desk. It is dominated by the wall of CDs which line the bookshelf – each, in itself, a reminder of a time and place in the near or faint past. There's the moose in the Mountie hat that Jess Cornwall got me when she went to Montreal, the box that my blue Chuck All-Stars came in (the coolest shoes ever, I might add), a dried rose with a sea horse hair clip on it which means so very much to me, a banana slug postcard sent to me by someone special. There are pictures of me and four friends at my high school graduation party, none of whom I talk with anymore, and of my girlfriend on the beach, looking beautiful as usual.

On the far wall (the one with the windows) are my books, both from a lifetime of pleasure reading and three years of classes. There's the tapestry of Ireland which belonged to Nanny Davis, who departed, God, five years ago now. There's my phone lists – emergency numbers, cluster office numbers, numbers of other RAs; all evidence of the joys and trials of the job. There's the picture of Peter Steele that I took for the Collegian, which made me happier than almost anything else I've done at the paper. There's a frame with pictures of me and Jess, me and Mike, me and Desiree – all happy moments frozen in time. A postcard of lips from a Valentine's Day past and a picture of Count Chocula stolen from the DC. A drumstick from the 7th Rail Crew show at the Skybox last year leans against the big window. My nail polish... some of which I bought as a stupid fashion statement last year, the rest of which were gifts from people who approved. The UMass shot glass I got from Secret Snowflake on 5 Web my freshman year is tucked in the corner as a decoration – I never take shots. A Plymouth Rock postcard reminds me of home.

On the back wall is my bookshelf with my toys (Captain America, Hulk Hogan, Michaelangelo of the Ninja Turtles, etc.), my fish (inevitably named Chicken Nugget), the Shrinky Dinks that Scott got me for my 20th birthday, my prom pictures, the Winnie the Pooh less drew for me when I got dumped and the menu from Spuds that we stole after Jenny's graduation party, among other things. There's my essential coffeepot, a remembrance of my fatal addiction, and the Moo Frog that Jen made for me. There's my tray named Sled from when Tibi and I went for a romp in Central on the Big Snow Day earlier in the semester. Above that is the Three Stooges poster I got at Eddie Andelman's Hot Dog Safari a couple of summers ago.

Under the bed is a huge stack of Collegians from this year, memories of a semester of blood, sweat, and tears by a great pack of humanity – my best friends and family, really. There's also garbage and dirty dishes that I'm too lazy to clean up, and Nana Schulze's fan from the fifties that still works like a charm, even if it does sound like a plane's taking off in the room when I turn it on.

I'm going to stop here. I could definitely go on, be more specific, talk about more objects, but I'm sure I've already made my point. Look around you. In this sterile, faceless box you find in the summer you erect your life. Take a look around and see how much joy you can find in the contemplation of such seemingly mundane objects as a banana slug postcard. If you don't find any joy at all... maybe it's time to reevaluate how you're spending your college experience.

For most people, however, taking the time to simply appreciate the depths of their memories from the things around them can be a wonderful way to waste an hour before class. And I, for one, am all in favor of wasting time on wonderful things.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian Columnist.

A civil war

SAM WILKINSON

There's a war brewing in Northeast, in the Johnson/Thatcher/Lewis cluster – that's what I've been told, and I've also been told that it's getting nasty. Apparently an RA and his/her charges have seen the ground split between them, and Residence Life, who should have stepped in, has kept their hands off the situation in embarrassing fashion.

But first the story. Or at least, what I've got of it because most everybody won't use a name at the bare minimum.

The unnamed RA won't talk because of a contractual agreement not to. The only available comment is no comment. At least one cynical RA told me that "they'd" got to him, probably meaning Eunice Ro, the RD in this situation, or her bosses.

Meanwhile, the students are anonymously pissed.

Listen to them and they'll tell you about an RA who's sexually harassing the female residents, who's enforcing every rule that Housing has to the specific letter, who's writing people up whenever he feels like, who's making life difficult for everyone. Some of the people in his building, on the condition of an extreme sort of anonymity, told me all kinds of horrible stories starting with his predilection for revenge.

He likes to hold write-ups over students' heads, like some sort of potential axe that he has the power of. ("I could have written you up but didn't..." type statements.) I heard stories about kids written up because this particular RA felt like it, not because they did anything, and repeated stories of charges being dropped by the Dean of Students, again and again even after students were written up. The students are circulating a petition against him and they've got fifty signatures describing his behavior.

In his defense, he has told stories to others about having his clothes stolen while he showers (funny), students threatening his well-being (not funny), and students stealing his peephole (funny).

As stated, a civil war is brewing and the worst part is that the slimy slugs that are truly responsible aren't doing a thing. Residence Life should have taken care of this fight a long time ago. Residence Life never should have let this chasm develop.

Residence Life never should have looked the other way.

It claims that nothing's a proven fact.

What we do know for a fact is that numerous charges against students have been dropped, something I've heard that from a number of sources within the dorm/battlefield. Students feel they are being ceaselessly harassed and intimidated. Included in the petition are all the allegations that I have relayed. Of course, some of the things in the petition, such as that he won't allow even moderate drinking, are ridiculous. An RA can't oppose the laws of these here United States – it's the harassment, not the policy enforcement, that is problematic.

This petition hasn't been sent yet, an unfortunate situation, as more and more students need to stand up for themselves in the face of overly aggressive RA's. When it is, everyone from Paul Vasconcellos in the Dean of Students office to Housing Director Iron Mike Gilbert will get a copy, but will the system change because these people get a petition from a disgruntled floor in Thatcher/Lewis/Johnson? Will it change because this character has burned his bridges in every possible way, according to one resident?

Will Residence Life ever own up to the fact that they've let the decent relationship that's supposed to exist between an RA and his/her residents go to hell without intervention?

But wait! Can this "change" argument really be that simple, that RA's are too aggressive and all students are suffering and it needs to be stopped? Of course it isn't that simple; is anything. Ask rhetorically?

Resident Assistants dance a tough mambo on this campus – to who are they more allied, the students or the bosses at Residence Life? Some RAs say the students (they're the good ones), and some say Residence Life (it gets buckets of urine wedged against the door, similar to what happened in Southwest to one particularly picky RA). RL would like to believe that the best RAs are the ones that enforce the policies the strictest and almost nobody would agree, while students are in love with RAs who could care less about their well-being.

Or at least some students are.

Want to talk about a complicated situation? Orchard Hill students are apparently, by most accounts, a bunch of whining babies who need coddling and immediately, while Southwest students tend more towards the Sandanista rebel mode when it comes to oversight.

What's an RA to do?

Be bound by the feet attached to arms behind the back, apparently. They can't win if they follow the rules to the letter because the floor (and building perhaps in the anonymous RA's case) is going to hate the Resident Assistant. Course, if Residence Life gets wind of lackadaisical work by the RA staff, that same staff member can expect to have a meeting of admonishment and condemnation.

Which leads back to the RA, the literary anti-hero of this column.

Let's face it – if he's really doing the things that he's been accused of, he should have been fired months ago. If charges are being dropped left and right that he's levying, why isn't someone taking notice? If a building of RA's aren't writing as many students up as he is, why isn't anybody paying attention?

For Residence Life, there cannot be a simple embrace offered for students who write everyone up over and over – the write-up must be responsibly used. If it is not, there's just no point in the write-up, as no one will respect it when it happens.

His Resident Director, the Big Bosswoman, Eunice Ro, whose only comment about all of this was that the matter was being looked into because students concerns are taken seriously, should similarly be admonished, nay investigated, for simply passing the proverbial buck when it came to dealing with a Civil War. The system can't simply look the other way because it feels that makes more sense – students are legitimately suffering enough to write petitions. RDs, who get paid to protect RAs more or less, have to be willing to take a critical eye at their own employees.

Part of that critical eye is allowing their employees a little leeway when it comes to the nasty enforcement of rules that are more the work of over-zealous parentage than any sort of responsible rule making. Turn down that music and put away that candle – lord knows you might blow a hole through or burn to the ground one of the various concrete kingdoms we have on campus and call home. Those are the rules that everyone wants enforced, but enforce them all the time and there'll be hell to pay.

If this RA hasn't done the things he's been accused of, he still better get the hell out of Northeast – seems like his residents think of him as a Frankenstein, a monster that is better burnt at the stake than understood. Facts are facts: This character has got to go because the relationship between him and his residents is only going to get worse.

It might be a Civil War in Northeast, but somebody better stop and look at Residence Life; this is its fault, for allowing one of two situations to go unchecked until both sides are suffering away.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

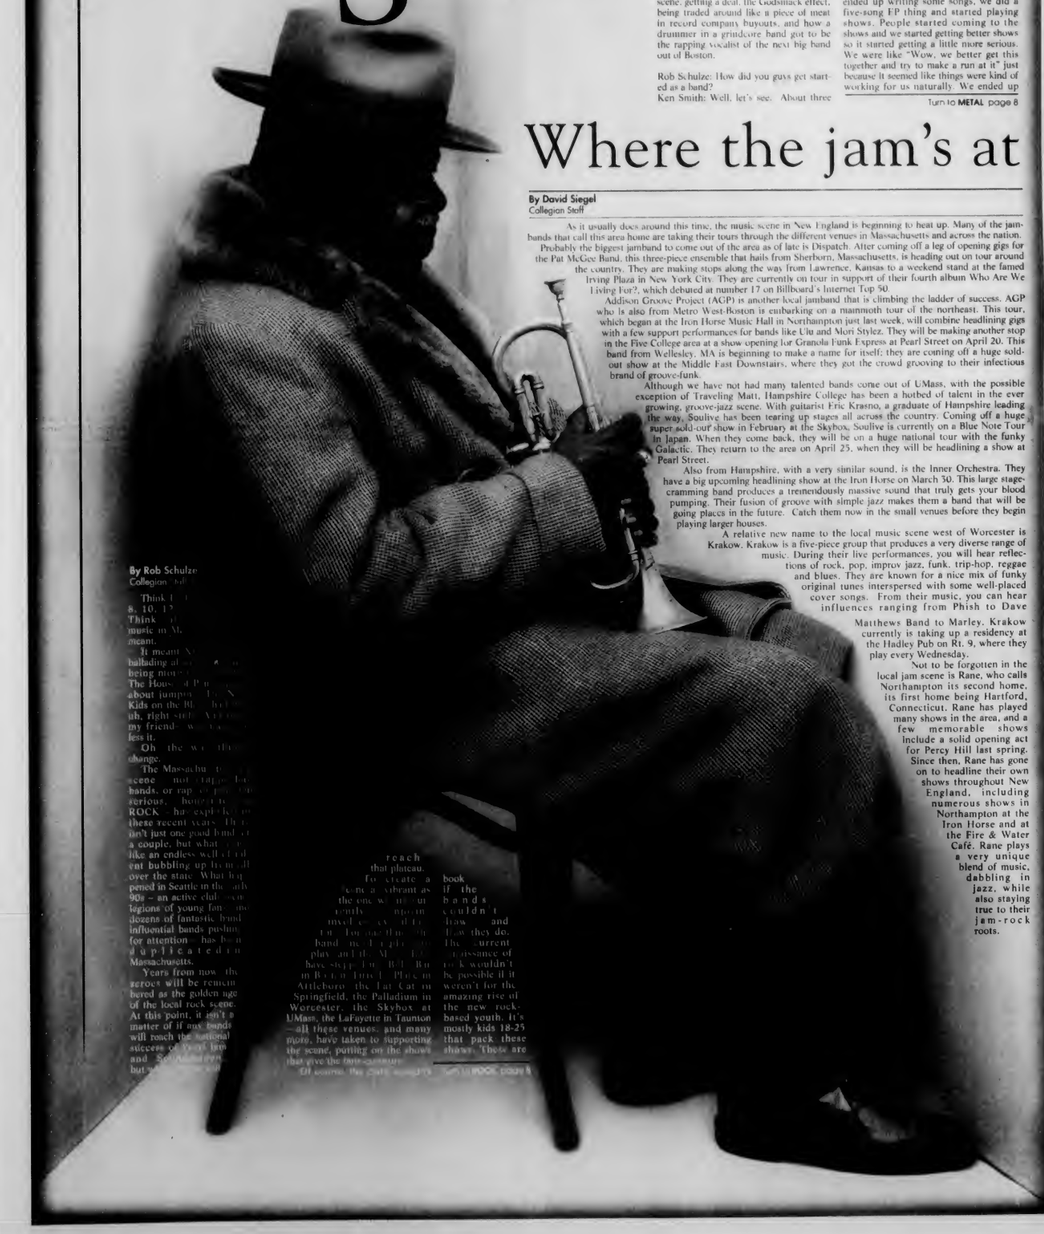
ARTS and ENTERTAINMENT

Local Music Scene



A serious chat with local metal

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

In a backroom behind the bar at Jarrod's Place in Attleboro, surrounded by empty cases of cheap beer and constantly interrupted by guys with mullets, I had the opportunity to speak with Nullset singer Ken Smith before the band's WAAF Real Rock TV taping. These are heady times for Nullset – their first major label EP, for the song "Smokewood," comes out April 10 on Grand Royal records, with their debut album to follow. That song is already one of the most requested on WAAF and consistently in the top 10 mp3s downloaded from boston.com, and has the makings of national hit all over it. Nullset is blowing up... and Ken Smith if the figurehead for it all.

As manic as Smith is on the stage, in person he's one of the nicest guys you will ever meet – talking to everyone, recognizing every fan and answering every question with a grin and a natural laugh. In a long conversation we discussed the local scene, getting a deal, the Godsmack effect, being traded around like a piece of meat in record company buyouts, and how a drummer in a grindcore band got to be the rapping vocalist of the next big band out of Boston.

Rob Schulze: How did you guys get started as a band?
Ken Smith: Well, let's see. About three years ago, it was kind of a thrown together, not-so-serious band that was looking for a singer. The band was the drummer that we had, the guitar player that we had, and then we had Jim, the current bass player and Fitzy the current guitar player, and they were just kind of messing around. I was actually down the hall watching my friend's band, which I used to play drums in, which was Controlled Aggression. I was down just hanging around with them, checking out their new drummer, and we were just having a few beers and then they said "hey, let's go down the hall, these guys are looking for a singer," you know, "let's go hang out and see what they've got going on." So we went down there and one thing led to another and they were like, "Hey, Ken, do you want to do some stuff on the mic," because you know, whatever, I did some backup before We started horsing around and they were like "hey, that's pretty cool, you want to come down and audition for this band," and I was like, "well, I'm not really a singer but I'll try it anyway." We ended up writing some songs, we did a five-song EP thing and started playing shows. People started coming to the shows and we started getting better shows so it started getting a little more serious. We were like "Wow, we better get this together and try to make a run at it" just because it seemed like things were kind of working for us naturally. We ended up

Turn to METAL page 8

Where the jam's at

By David Siegel
Collegian Staff

As it usually does around this time, the music scene in New England is beginning to heat up. Many of the jambands that call this area home are taking their tours through the different venues in Massachusetts and across the nation.

Probably the biggest jamband to come out of the area as of late is Dispatch. After coming off a leg of opening gigs for the Pat McGee Band, this three-piece ensemble that hails from Sherborn, Massachusetts, is heading out on tour around the country. They are making stops along the way from Lawrence, Kansas to a weekend stand at the famed Irving Plaza in New York City. They are currently on tour in support of their fourth album Who Are We Living For?, which debuted at number 17 on Billboard's Internet Top 50.

Addison Groove Project (AGP) is another local jamband that is climbing the ladder of success. AGP who is also from Metro West Boston is embarking on a mammoth tour of the northeast. This tour, which began at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton just last week, will combine headlining gigs with a few support performances for bands like Ulu and Mori Stylez. They will be making another stop in the Five College area at a show opening for Granola Funk Express at Pearl Street on April 20. This band from Wellesley, MA is beginning to make a name for itself; they are coming off a huge sold-out show at the Middle East Downstairs, where they got the crowd grooving to their infectious brand of groove-funk.

Although we have not had many talented bands come out of UMass, with the possible exception of Traveling Matt, Hampshire College has been a hotbed of talent in the ever growing, groove-jazz scene. With guitarist Eric Krasno, a graduate of Hampshire leading the way, Soulive has been tearing up stages all across the country. Coming off a huge super sold-out show in February at the Skybox, Soulive is currently on a Blue Note Tour in Japan. When they come back, they will be on a huge national tour with the funky Galactic. They return to the area on April 25, when they will be headlining a show at Pearl Street.

Also from Hampshire, with a very similar sound, is the Inner Orchestra. They have a big upcoming headlining show at the Iron Horse on March 30. This large stage-cramming band produces a tremendously massive sound that truly gets your blood pumping. Their fusion of groove with simple jazz makes them a band that will be going places in the future. Catch them now in the small venues before they begin playing larger houses.

A relative new name to the local music scene west of Worcester is Krakow. Krakow is a five-piece group that produces a very diverse range of music. During their live performances, you will hear reflections of rock, pop, improv jazz, funk, trip-hop, reggae and blues. They are known for a nice mix of funky original tunes interspersed with some well-placed cover songs. From their music, you can hear influences ranging from Phish to Dave Matthews Band to Marley. Krakow currently is taking up a residency at the Hadley Pub on Rt. 9, where they play every Wednesday.

Not to be forgotten in the local jam scene is Rane, who calls Northampton its second home, its first home being Hartford, Connecticut. Rane has played many shows in the area, and a few memorable shows include a solid opening act for Percy Hill last spring. Since then, Rane has gone on to headline their own shows throughout New England, including numerous shows in Northampton at the Iron Horse and at the Fire & Water Café. Rane plays a very unique blend of music, dabbling in jazz, while also staying true to their jam-rock roots.

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

Think [illegible]
8, 10, 12
Think [illegible]
music in M[illegible]
meant.

It meant N[illegible]
balladin[illegible]
being mi[illegible]
The Hous[illegible]
about jumpin[illegible]
Kids on the Bl[illegible] uh, right [illegible]
my friend[illegible]
less it.

Oh, the w[illegible]
change.

The Massachu[illegible] scene – not stage-ba[illegible] bands, or rap or pop – is serious, home to a ROCK – hu[illegible] these recent years. It is isn't just one good band or a couple, but what like an endless well of ta[illegible] ent bubbling up from all over the state. What is pened in the early and 90s – an active club
legions of young fan[illegible] dozens of fantastic band[illegible] influential bands pushin[illegible] for attention – has b[illegible] duplicated in Massachusetts.

Years from now, th[illegible] zeroes will be remem[illegible]
bered as the golden age of the local rock scene.
At this point, it isn't a matter of if new bands will reach the national success of [illegible] and [illegible]
but [illegible]

reach that plateau.
To create a scene as vibrant as the one we [illegible] cently experiment[illegible]
[illegible] to [illegible] band in Eagle play and fill
have stepped [illegible]
in Boston [illegible]
Attleboro, the Fat Cat in Springfield, the Palladium in Worcester, the Skybox at UMass, the LaFayette in Taunton
– all these venues, and many more, have taken to supporting the scene, putting on the shows that give the fans exposure.
Of course, the [illegible] book

if the bands couldn't draw and draw they do.
This current renaissance of rock wouldn't be possible if it weren't for this amazing rise of the new rock-based youth. It's mostly kids 18-25 that pack these shows. These are

Turn to ROCK, page 8

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian Every Thursday!

Melinda Corazon Foley will perform at the W.E.B. DuBois library on March 5 at 6:30 p.m as part of the "Words She Spoke" Poetry in Performance Series presented by the New World Theatre.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – "Christopher Wilmarth: living inside" presents a selection of sculptures, drawings, and prints by an artist best known for a sparely sensuous style that marries formal elements with mysterious reverie. "Brenda Zlamany: Figure Ground" and "Our Studies of Chicks: Close, Friendly" Holyfield, and John Yau" features this artist's most recent paintings series which marks a further step in her ongoing investigation of color and light as they are translated into psychological content. "Christopher Wilmarth" will be on view from February 3 through March 16 and then April 1 through May 18. "Figure Ground" will be on view from February 3 through March 16.

UMASS – "Dreaming: Prophecies, Speculations, and Good Guesses." A collection of works created to reflect a visionary gaze into the personal and social future of society. "Dreaming" will run from February 12 to March 9 in the Augusta Savage Gallery.

UMASS – "The Jesus Show." Photographer James Gehrt has traveled the U.S. and collected pictures of religious icons, from the modest to the grand. Central Gallery, March 1 through 25, with a gallery talk at 2pm and an opening reception at 5 p.m. on March 11, Central Gallery.

UMASS and HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "New England, New York, New Talent 2001." At UM, in the Hampden Gallery, and at Hampshire in the Johnson Library Center. These exhibits will work in cooperation to display new works of art by emerging artists. March 4-25, with an opening reception on March 4, from 2-5 p.m.

SMITH COLLEGE – "The Refugees." Two life sized sculptures by artist Judith Peck depicting refugees carrying a child and all their worldly possessions. Part of the Khan Institute's "Anatomy of Exile" project. Through May 28. For more information, call (413) 585-4292. Third floor, Neilson Library.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Biblical Women." Story quilts by artist Lee Porter, depicting several scenes women from the Bible. Through March 30. For more information, call (413) 585-2043. Alumnae House Gallery, 33 Elm St.

NORTHAMPTON – "Exposed Surfaces: Architectural and Other Moments." Black and white photography by Michael Shally-Jensen centered around the surfaces and textures of architecture. February 3-March 1 at the Forbes Library.

WILLIAMSTOWN – "Photography EXPOSED." Includes 45 examples of portraiture as part of the Williams College Museum of Art's 75th anniversary celebration. The exhibit will continue until September 3, 2001. The Museum is open Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 a.m., and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

THEATER AND DANCE

UMASS – "The Crucible." This Arthur Miller classic depicts the Salem Witch Trials, and is based on actual events. Performances will be on March 1-3, and 8-10 at 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. Tickets are $7, $4 for students.

UMASS – "Native American Hoop Dancing." Cliff Mattias will present hoop dancing that tells a story to the beat of a traditional song. Matias has traveled throughout Indian Country, gathering dances, songs, and stories for his performances. The show will take place on March 6 at 7 p.m. at the Augusta Savage Gallery.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Antigona Furiosa." A contemporary version of Antigone, the play explores a furious woman defying authority in Argentina, in the 70s. On a double bill with "Giving Up the Ghost." The show is at the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre, February 22 through the 24, and February 28 through March 3, all shows at 8 p.m. Call (413) 585- ARTS for more information.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Giving Up the Ghost." A poetic journey about growing up in transcultural America, and the struggles and triumphs of being a woman. The show is at the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre, February 22 through the 24, and February 28 through March 3, all shows at 8 p.m. Call (413) 585- ARTS for more information.

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – The Grieg Trio, featuring violin, cello, and piano, will perform in the Bezanson Recital Hall on Thursday, March 1 at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $20 for general public, $10 for children age 17 and under, and $7 for Five College students. For tickets and information, call the Fine Arts Center Box office (535-2511).

UMASS – Ensembles from UM will perform jazz, percussion and vocal music, in collaboration with Springfield Public School students, at Central High School March 9 at 7 pm.

UMASS – The National Orchestra of Spain, featuring world-renowned classical guitarist Pepe Romero, will perform the works of nineteenth and twentieth century composers at the Concert Hall on March 8 at 7:30 pm.

MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE – The Concordia College Choir of Minnesota will perform a concert of sacred a cappella music at Abbey Memorial Chapel on March 1, 7:30 pm. Tickets may be purchased in advance by calling (413) 538-2306, and are available at the door.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Sage Hall Concert: Triple Helix." This acclaimed trio will perform Haydn's C Major Trio, Op. 8. Tickets are $7 for students, March 2 Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at 8pm. Call (413) 585-3197 for reservations.

READINGS/LECTURES/ACADEMIC EVENTS

UMASS – Ben Marcus. A reading by Ben Marcus, author of The Age of Wire and String, the award-winning writer and professor at Columbia University will read from his fiction on March 1 at 7 p.m., in the Augusta Savage Gallery. Admission is free and the lecture is open to the public.

UMASS – "A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy." Professor Khalil Barhoum of Stanford University will present a lecture on calligraphy, which is the primary form of visual expression in the Islamic world. March 9 at 4 pm in Memorial Hall, free for students.

UMASS and Smith College – "Words She Spoke." This part of the Poetry in Performance Series is presented by New World Theater, emphasizing the connections between spoken word, theater, performance poetry, Hip-Hop and youth performance culture. Tracie Morris will perform at Wright Hall, Smith College on March 1 at 7:30 pm. At UM, Staceyann Chin and Melinda Corazon Foley will perform at the W.E.B. DuBois Library on March 5 at 6:30 p.m.

AMHERST – Food for Thought Books will host columnist and cultural critic Alexander Cockburn, will be signing his book 5 Days That Shook the World: Seattle and Beyond, and will lead a discussion about the World Trade Organization. Tuesday, March 6 at 7 pm.

Crucibilic!

By Julie Burrell
Collegian Staff

Can The Crucible still work? In a contemporary context that is almost entirely removed form the hyper-paranoid era of McCarthyism, does this play still hold meaning? Tim Mahoney thinks that it does.

Arthur Miller's classic play is set in Salem, Mass., in the 1690s. It centers on the hysteria surrounding the Witch Hunts and Trials, in which local citizens were accused of practicing witchcraft. Miller wrote the play about there apparently false accusations as a commentary on Joseph McCarthy's and the House Un-American Activities Committee's hunt of supposed communists within the government. This hunt led to accusations of communism within Hollywood, and as a result, artists were blacklisted.

"One of the questions that kept coming up, over and over, was whether or not this play was relevant to today's issues," said Mahoney, who is director of this production of the UMass Department of Theater. "The contemporary environment is not as severe or paranoid as when it was originally produced, but it is still compelling."

Mahoney believes in the inherent truth of the show, which transcends time restrictions. After all, Miller has penned a drama that can stand alone, out of the Cold War feelings that were present at the time. Part of the truth of the play involves basic human emotion. The work also focuses on the person of John Proctor, who is involved in an extra-marital affair with a local girl, Abigail Williams.

"Proctor goes through a trial as well. But, it is a different sort of trial. He sticks to his personal morals," Mahoney says.

The concentration of Mahoney's vision rests on the events in the text. He wonders whether or not the girls were lying about the supernatural suspicions.

"There are elements of mystery and many things that cannot be explained," he says.

Everyday life presents a wide array of inexplicable things, and perhaps this is what the girls were reacting to. Mahoney says "the performers and designers have captured a sense of mystery, of eeriness."

Take away the element of McCarthyism, and that the girls were lying can no longer be taken for granted as fact. What Mahoney has left to work with is an ambiguity. The audience, then, must question the motives of the girls. They must question whether or not there was an actual supernatural force behind the girls' reactions.

The costume and set designers, Kate Shaw and Steve Hayes, have also looked back to the history behind the show for the inspiration. They have studied paintings of Puritan origin, and their designs are derived from those.

The Crucible will be presented at the Rand Theatre, located in the Fine Arts Center, on March 1- 3 and 8- 10. Tickets are $4 for students.

The UMass Index
UMASS Yearbook
ATTENTION!!!
CLASS OF 2001
SENIOR PORTRAITS
Beginning February 26th.
Make your appointment now by calling
1-800-OUR-YEAR or log on to www.ouryear.com
School Access #147
(You need to know the access number when you make the appointment)
DAVOR PHOTOGRAPH
Walsworth Publishing Company
Order Your 2001 Yearbook
ONLY $50.00
Log on to www.walsworth.com or
Call 1-800-929-1503
(Service Charge of $2.95 for orders placed by phone)

BRAD PITT JULIA ROBERTS
THE MEXICAN
love with the safety off
DREAMWORKS PICTURES PRESENTS IN ASSOCIATION WITH NEW WMA/BIET A LAWRENCE BENDER PRODUCTION A GORE VERBINSKI FILM
JAMES GANDOLFINI "THE MEXICAN" JEAN CHAPPET ALAN SILVESTRI WILLIAM S. BEASLEY COLLEEN ATWOOD JOHN CRAIG WOOD
CECILIA MONTIEL DARIUSZ WOLSKI, A.S.C. WILLIAM TYLER CHRIS J. BALL AARON RYDER J. H. WYMAN
J. LAWRENCE BENDER AND JOHN BALDECCHI J. H. WYMAN GORE VERBINSKI
R RESTRICTED
DREAMWORKS PICTURES
Official The Mexican website at dreamworks.com

"Greatest Hits" from Modern English?

MODERN ENGLISH
The Best of Modern English: Life in the Gladhouse 1980-1984
4AD

Clever joke: "I'd stop the world to melt so I'd never have to listen to this album."

This is quite possibly the worst idea for a "best of" album that anybody's ever had. Not only did Modern English score but one major hit during their thankfully short career (the catchy "I'd Melt With You") they didn't even have a good hit.

Which leaves us with the rest of The Best of Modern English: Life in the Gladhouse 1980-1984. This album is nothing more than a collection of throwaway songs that perfectly mesh wholly unappealing elements: very early synth music, Billy Corgan-like angst, attempted pop hooks, and the occasional melodic sound of a car crash. The problem with Modern English is that they've been survived (kind of anyway) by at least one band that did depressed synth/goth/rock better than everyone else: Depeche Mode.

The two greatest hits album released by Mode were brilliant excursions into a catchy sort of way. Modern English desperately wants to be Depeche Mode, thus reducing them to the sort of secondary role that's equivalent to the Spin Doctors' relationship with Blues Traveler. John Popper's band has stuck around while the good Doctors have declined away to nothingness after a brief string of popularity.

Apparently for poor Modern English, they never even achieved in quite the same way that the Doctors did. According to Tom Frazer, resident Englishman at the Collegian, he's never heard of them. The following actually took place.

"Tom, what do you think of Modern English?"

"Writing?"

"No, the band." CD is waggled at him.

"Never heard of them," he said, hands in the air like he's innocent.

That exchange relayed, again for comic relief, the serious note is that Modern English is a terrible band. Songs like "Mesh and Lace", "Rainbows End" and "Machines" are true standouts of mediocrity, thus making them far superior to "Swans on Glass", "Blue Waves", and "Black Houses." A collection of worthless synth, simple drum beats and badly written lyrics, the problem with this album is that it lacks any sort of soul. If Gladhand was a color, it'd be that brown that comes about after all the crayons are used together.

Greatest hits albums should be reserved for bands with great hits, not a great hit and a collection of otherwise worthless songs. (Sam Wilkinson)

POWDERFINGER
Odyssey Number Five Universal

Recently we have been witness to a resurgence of alternative rock (if such a title is even worth using). Commercial radio is still happily in the throws of homogeneous post-grunge bands, and the music-listening public, wanting a rest from all of the masculine riffing, has been looking for a change of pace. And largely, they have been looking to England. Bands like Travis, Coldplay, and Belle and Sebastian have found their soothing, straight-up Beatlesesque pop in demand from a demographic grown tired of all the angst and rage.

The latest such band to be embraced may not come from England, however, but from Australia, as Powderfinger prepares to release their fourth record, Odyssey Number Five, to the American market. Led by frontman Bernard Fanning, whose wounded and heartfelt crooning fits in perfectly with the band's Bends-era Radiohead sound, Powderfinger has crafted a near-perfect album of alternative rock ripe with sinuous melodies and fresh, clean, and sincere songwriting.

The first track, "Waiting For The Sun," offers everything that makes rock and roll fun: an emotionally thick guitar figure, a chorus that demands to be sung along with, and lyrics that gesture toward dissatisfaction with the status quo without taking up some needless political or emotional torch. The second song, "My Happiness," opens with an acoustic guitar, and reassures us that Powderfinger isn't interested in knocking us on our ass; they just want to offer us some good music. And good music they do offer, as the album moves from one worthwhile tune to another. Production doesn't stray too far from your standard guitar-pop lineup with some orchestration and lushly overdubbed backing vocals, which allow the songs to carry their own weight (which they do quite competently). Certain numbers work better than others, there's no filler to be found, and anyone interested in a disc of excellently edgy Britpop shouldn't hesitate to pick this album up when it comes out next month. (David Troupes)

CACTUS HIGHWAY
Cactus Highway
Self-released

The Cactus Highway is, probably, a pretty good thing when it limits itself to the advertised product: "an original acoustic duo." Rob Duquette and Andrea Wollstadt, from UNH and now living in the Boston area, are sold as a duo experimenting with folk by bringing in Wollstadt's flute and saxophone (both sing and Duquette plays 'percussive' acoustic guitar.) The formula seemed exciting until I heard their highly unfortunate debut CD. The sound of the album resembles the taste of Velveeta – processed. There is not a note of spontaneity anywhere.

I'm sure that their hearts were in the right place. They really wanted to make a good album, they slaved over the songs, over the production, and over the presentation. They reached for perfection, maybe even a profound contribution to music. Sadly, the record sucks. I think of a child raised as an artist, given an exacting technical education, provided with all the necessary materials, allowed all the time in the world to hone his craft, and ending up with a lousy product because the ideas just aren't there. And if there is good thinking present he hides it with a narrow pursuit of polish, by the need to show off all that he has learned in one piece, by burying something that should be fun in an oppressive seriousness.

For Cactus Highway Duquette and Wollstadt opted to fill out their sound with a full band, including keyboards and loops, and it's a shame. The promise of a fusion of jazz and folk is answered with what sounds like a Rod Stewart backing band warming up. The ridiculous lyrics ("...But Mother Nature is stronger than you and me / yeah Mother Nature will be here / longer than you and me...") would have been easier to ignore if they were part of a more interesting whole. Overall, the Cactus Highway leaves the listener longing for a rest stop. (Jason Hill)

MUSIC FROM MALCOLM IN THE MIDDLE
Various Artists
Rentless Records

It's a hell of a show.

Ahem.

Soundtracks for television shows are somehow worse than soundtracks for movies – not only are film soundtracks gleaned from the singular experience of a film, they tend to flow with the arc of the movie. One can hear the highs and lows of the story on a filmed soundtrack.

Which is exactly why television soundtracks generally aren't such a good idea. An average movie is a couple of hours long, the average televisions season is something like seven hours worth of shows. Make for multiple seasons and there's just no way that the ebb and flow of a soundtrack will tell the story of a show, especially as one as comedically off the wall as Malcolm in the Middle.

That said, this is a fine compilation of almost hits from bands that have almost made it. They're the pop filler songs between Britney Spears' newest single and a Backstreet Boys throwback.

Everyone's former favorites are on the album – Hanson, Baha Men, Eagle-Eye Cherry, OPM and they of "Cotton Eye Joe" fame, Rednex. All of their songs are perfectly acceptable if listened to only once while in the car driving to the Dairy Mart for a Slurpee.

Which is unfortunate, because buried on this mostly forgettable pop excursion are some songs that are something more than music from the Orange Lazarus. They Might Be Giants, who have strangely redefined themselves as soundtrack stars, have two songs including Malcolm's title song, "Boss of Me." Infused with the New York band's brand of strange pop, the song is a perfect introduction to the show.

What's strange is the fact that TMBG's first single on the album is the only song that truly fits on the albums. The rest of the album is suspect, the best song on the album, the Screamin' Cheetah Wheelies' cover of Dr. John's "Right Place, Wrong Time" sounding suspiciously out of place. It was probably used hilariously within the context of the show, maybe, but there's something about esoteric piano driven hits from the 70's being covered with a hint of technonica that doesn't attach itself to the show in any way.

Nothing on this album really fits – that's the drawback here, not because the songs are good, but because they have no real attachment to the show. It could have just as easily been called "Random Radio Hits You Can't Remember the Name Of." (Sam Wilkinson)

MOUNT FLORIDA
Arrived Phoenix
Matador

Mount Florida's Arrived Phoenix is the kind of music that keeps you thinking – the songs are filled with great beats, with the occasional melody line that will get your body moving, but then suddenly there will be a creepy organ lick or a weird lyric that will leave you feeling disturbed.

The first track on the CD is brief, with a deep voice stating "I had listened to it all, a lifetime of music/And I came to understand, I had found peace through sound." This may have been what they were going for, but it was not the effect achieved. The music sounds like the soundtrack to an artsy psychological thriller – it keeps you on the edge of your seat, with eerie crescendos and discordant tones. The song "Space, Echoes" features a young woman singsonging "Lost In Space" like a brainwashed cult member. The beat was excellent, but I couldn't help but feel caught in a troubling dream, much like the time my yoga teacher started banging a gong during meditation.

The "Ultimo" has a cool Shaft-like bass lick – but like all the other songs, it builds up and up, and then drops off before it ever really gets anywhere. "Celebration," while not really being exciting enough to deserve that title, was a relaxed song that was the only song on the CD that I actually liked and would ever wish to listen to again.

I can't say that I disliked the CD, but I didn't like it either. It was a mediocre attempt – with the good balancing out the creepy, leaving one ready to move onto something a little more tuneful and leaving one without the insightful reflection that Mount Florida was apparently hoping to leave their listeners with.

significant
others

The CD lacks the intensity to dance to; its random features thrown into the occasional song are long and boring, and the songs lack the melody to listen to on the ride home... but for background music, if you're all about creepy melodies and strong bass, it's a possibility. (Shauna Billings)

MATH AND SCIENCE
Math and Science
Brick Red Records

The liner notes to Math and Science explains the album's title, saying that math and science were the two subjects that singer-songwriter John Wolf never did well in during school. Don't be fooled, though, Wolf was doing his homework. He may have been flunking chemistry tests, but he was also conducting some serious research on the musical alchemy of songwriters like They Might Be Giants, Beck, The Violent Femmes, and Weezer. And it shows on Wolf's debut effort.

From the opening feedback to the final crunch chords, Math and Science is a collection of pop songs as fine-tuned and carefully crafted as they come. Beneath the album's multi-tracked vocals, Casio-style keyboard crackles, and filtered drumbeats is a self-conscious studio wizard eager to wear his heart on his sleeve. On the song "Soundbite," Wolf sings "I'm thinking of an explanation/to convince you that I'm all the hype/in stereo separation/I'll be your soundbite." Is it profound, meaningful, or groundbreaking? Well, no. But is it catchy? ...Yup.

Unfortunately, I'm not so sure Wolf uses all the stay-in-your-head-for-three-days pop hooks to his advantage. After listening to Math and Science, I somehow feel like I got too much of a good thing. Instead of soaking up melodies I feel drown in a sea of sweet, syrupy pop. By the third or fourth track, one gets the sense that every song is a little too radio-ready, predictable, or begging for a sing-along. I almost want one song to be downright terrible, so that I could skip it and be excited about the next one. But every track presents the same good – and totally formulaic – songwriting.

Although Wolf learned his lessons well from his predecessors, there's an important element missing from his music. Because while head-in-the-clouds pop is enjoyable, it is best appreciated when it stands relative to a healthy dose of feet on the ground realism. People like songs about girls, movies, and being fifteen; but I was also waiting to hear something poignant, lonely, or just a line that didn't rhyme. John Wolf is definitely a solid pop songwriter, and Math and Science certainly caught my attention. But as much as I wanted it to, it could not hold my attention. (David Piper)

MARK ERELLI
Compass and Companion
Signature Sounds

The next best thing to innovation is maturity and precision, and that's exactly what upstart singer-songwriter Mark Erelli offers on his latest album, Compass and Companion. The album's eleven tracks run the gamut of folk and country music, embellished with electric guitars and a solid studio band but always centered around Erelli's competent acoustic compositions. From the romping "Miracle Man," to the to the touching "Before I Knew Your Name," to the inevitable him/her duet on the title track, the songs exhibit stylistic variation and a wonderful consistency of quality. Mostly, though, they're lively and fun, punctuated by Erelli's trilly voice and a some moments of excellent musical showmanship.

The album's only true shortcoming is its reliance of previously-established formulas – even if you've never heard these songs before, there's an instant familiarity about then which, although inviting and enjoyable, is also limiting, and may ultimately shorten Compass and Companion's shelf life. Taken as the standard acoustic fare it is, however, it should have a place on the wish-list of any fan of folk and country. (David Troupes)

PROJECT PAT
Mista Don't Play
Loud Records

I honestly wish I could get back the time that I wasted listening to this CD. Fifty-seven minutes is way too much time for any decent human being to spend filling his ears with unoriginal, generic crap. The newest album by Project Pat, a protégé of the Infamous Three 6 Mafia, recently allowed me to appreciate fifty-seven minutes like I never have before.

I understand that it's tough to be original and come out with good, new rap music in today's saturated market. Unfortunately, I can't even give Pat credit for trying, because he doesn't come close. The track list reads like a dictionary of every rap cliché that went out of style three years ago. "Whole Lotta Weed," "We Can Get Gangsta," and "Chickenhead" will make you cringe in fear just by looking at the back of the case. When you put actually put the disc in your CD player, your mood will definitely not improve.

Every song is either a slow, drawn out rant about being high, or a faster number using a bland beat and uninspired production. I'd be willing to bet Pat whipped up every track in three days while kicked up in a room with a keyboard and a few pounds of hash. Southern rap, which has seen immense success in groups such as Outkast, fails miserably when combined with a second-rate, No Limit thug presentation.

If you want good, creative lyrics, go somewhere else. The entire disc is laid down with Pat's "Memphis" style, which basically means that my grandmother could rhyme better than him and the clowns that he has as guests. Sampling a few of his lyrical masterpieces will reveal such gems as "Don't save her/she don't want to be saved" and "Taking chance after chance/but I got to dance."

The first single off of this disc is the aforementioned "Chickenhead." This track features an annoying squawking sound in the background and a godawful hook that repeats "Chicken Chicken/Chickenheads" until you want to kill yourself. Appearances by 1a Chat and Three 6 Mafia do nothing to help this disaster.

Project Pat is another complete failure in modern rap. Mista Don't Play will go down as another easily forgettable project, just like his first two albums. Save your money, and more importantly a precious fifty-seven minutes, for another day and a better CD. (Justin Cormier)

Stinking gold with junk

Since being anointed by Ryan Benharris last year to take over this spot, as writer of Tubenotes (with thanks also to Scott Newport for his contributions) I have done my best to bring you, the collective UMass population, and the best shows that can be found on television. Today, I bring you another one. It's for all of you out there who like the science of "Battlebots" but crave the accents of "Bob and Margaret." The network is TLC and the show is "Junkyard Wars."

That's right – I watch TLC and I am not afraid to admit it. They have brought us inside the ER, shown us that neighbors can change each other's houses with under a thousand dollars, and gave us the stories of babies, weddings, and dating. By far their best original program, however, is the fun, thought-provoking, and stimulating "Junkyard Wars." Two teams of four meet in a junkyard and are given ten hours to build an object that the host tells them about. The players don't know what they have to build until the host tells them. Quickly they scurry to their respective aides and start planning. All of these contestants (except one police officer) are engineers for either the British Navy or the Royal British Corps of Engineers, and let me just say that if the world was ending I would want these guys to be on my team. The only items they have in the beginning are tools like welders, saws, nails, hammers and other specialty tools depending on the task. They quickly draw their sketch of what they want then they send teammates out into a large and well-stocked junkyard.

I wish every junkyard were like this junkyard; it's a packrat's dream. There are cars, engines, boats, and even a single engine airplane that the teams can forage through and skim off of to complete each mission. But we're not talking about pristine trash here – when I say trash I mean stuff that's in a junkyard because it does not work. Every time a team gets an engine that they basically have to repair. The show is hosted by a wacky British man who rules this kingdom of garbage and narrates the events of each match.

For example, in of the episodes, they have to build a machine that will launch cabbages across the trash yard at a target that resembles a medieval tower. To help out the team a specialist is brought in and designs and explains to them how exactly the implement of destruction is supposed to work.

I have never seen people work as hard as these people do; in less than ten hours they have put together a truck for a tractor pull, an off-road vehicle, a deep sea diver's helmet (with oxygen pump), and a motorboat. I can barely make a paper airplane fly and these people put together an actual running vehicle. The machines aren't pretty and yeah they might break down after the race or during the event, but even to make it work in just less than ten hours is amazing. If you think there is nothing good on television, watch "Junkyard Wars" every Monday at 8 p.m. Or, if that interferes with your pro-wrestling fix or "Boston Public" addiction, it is repeated at eleven. You will not be disappointed.

An Official Apology

While writing for Tubenotes I have recommended many shows that I think are the best shows on television. My stamp of approval, however, must not be strong enough, because five of my recommended shows have since been cancelled: "Cupid," "Brimstone," "Sportsnight," "Wonderland" and "Action." I do not apologize for my selections, because they were good, well written shows. I wish to apologize for something that I said would be great, but even I have stopped watching. Three weeks ago I explored the wonder that was the XFL. I want to be clear that I still like the concept of Vince McMahon's football league. I like the camera angles and the way that I am brought into the game. I still hope that the Las Vegas Outlaws are able to win it all, but I do not approve of NBC putting it on Saturday during primetime – it is a waste of airspace. So I am taking of the XFL off my list of shows that you should watch on a regular basis. Watch it, but only in moderation.

What to Watch

Better catch Mathew Perry on the upcoming episodes of "Friendsm" because Chandler Bing is back in rehab – just as the show was getting funny too. And be sure to catch the premiere of "The Lone Gunmen" of FOX; the quirky conspiracy buffs from the "X-Files" now have their own show. Will it be good? I hope so. Also for those of you who have Cable, America's favorite combination of Mafioso and family values, "The Sopranos," returns for the third season.

Next Week on Tubenotes

The final episodes of "Temptation Island" and "The Mole" in review and "Survivor's" mysterious "kucha accident."

Nicholas Pizzolato is a Collegian columnist.

March '01

ARTS ON CAMPUS...

A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Thursday, March 1
LECTURE: Ben Marcus reading by award-winning writer 7p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery 545-5177.
LITERATURE: The Massachusetts Center for Haibook opening event 7p.m. on the Main floor of the W. E. B. Du Bois Library 545-2059
MUSIC: The Grieg Trio Solve Sigerland, violin, Eileen Margrete Hejno, cello, and Vebjorn Aniik, piano, 7:30p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511
THEATER: The Crucible By Arthur Miller 8p.m. in the Rand Theater through 3/3 & 3/8-10 $ 545-2511
Saturday, March 3
THEATER: MISSION IMPROVable 8p.m. in Campus Center Room 163C. Also 3/24 & 3/31 545-3600
Sunday, March 4
LITERATURE: Writing from the Belly with Magdalena Gomez 6:15p.m. in the Everywoman's Center. Wilder Italiano 3/13, 3/27 & 3/30 545-5829
MUSIC: Godsmack 7p.m. in the Mullins Center. $ 545-0505.
Monday, March 5
POETRY: Staceyann Chin and Melinda Corazon Foley reading 6:30p.m. in the Main Lobby of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library 545-1972
MUSIC: Latin Jazz Eduardo Leandro & Jeffrey Holmes, directors. Music from Argentina, Brazil, Cuba and Trinidad-Tobago played by the UMass Percussion & Jazz Ensembles, 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511.
Tuesday, March 6
LECTURE: Cliff Matias Demonstration of traditional Native American Hoop Dances by Taino/Cherokee performer. 7p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery 545-5177
MUSIC: The New Guitar Summit Featuring blues and rock guitarists J. Geils, Danny Beaudoin and Duke Robillard. 8p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall $ 545-2511.
MUSIC: Faculty Recital Featuring David Sporny, trombone, with Nadine Shank, piano & others. 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511
Thursday, March 8
XFILM: On & Off The Rez w/Charlie Hill With a special appearance by comedian Charlie Hill. 7:30p.m. in Herter Auditorium 231. 545-3659
MUSIC: The National Orchestra of Spain Guitarist Pepe Romero joins the National Orchestra of Spain. 7:30p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511
Friday, March 9
LECTURE: A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy Interactive lecture-workshop on the major forms in use today across the Muslim world. 4p.m. in Memorial Hall. $ 545-2511
Saturday, March 10
Theater: The Theater Guild is sponsoring acting and vocal workshops 1 p.m. to 6p.m. in Campus Center room 168C. 545-0415.
COMEDY: The Stonewall Center Celebrates 15 year Anniversary with comedians Harvey Fierstein and Kate Clinton, 8p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall $ 545-2511.
MUSIC: Musical Illuminations from the Middle East: Anatolia in Concert Jewish and Arabic music. 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.
MUSIC: Peter Prince's Moonboot Lover Funk, groove and jam music at 8:30 p.m. in the Skybox. $ 577-4751.
Tuesday, March 13
MUSIC: 20th Annual Jazz Showcase: "Spotlight on the Trumpet" Ensembles: Jazz I, Chapel Jazz, Jazz Lab, Vocal Jazz & Chamber Jazz Ensembles. Directors: Jeff Holmes, Catherine Jensen-Hoke, Adam Kolker, Chris Kozak & David Sporny. 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511
Wednesday, March 14
DANCE: Aeros Choreography by Daniel Lemoine, Moses Pendleton and David Parsons. 7:30p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511
Thursday, March 15
FILM: Divorcing Jack 7:30p.m. in Herter Auditorium 231. 545-3659
MUSIC: Violin, Cello and Piano in Concert Charles Treger, violin, Matt Haimovitz, cello & Estela Olevsky, piano. 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511.
Tuesday, March 27
THEATER: Toast Improvisational Group 8p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. 545-3600
MUSIC: Sam Rivers performing on tenor and soprano saxophone, flute and piano. 8p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511
Thursday, March 29
LECTURE: The Flow of Yin & Yang: Chinese Calligraphy Professor Zhangwei Shen on the Chinese principals of Yin and Yang as they affect the artist, his spirit and the Universe. 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall $ 545-2511
FILM: Walled City, Stories and Peace of Mind Coexistence Through the Eyes of Palestinian and Israeli Teens Diana Coryat, Co-founder and Co-Executive producer of the Global Action Project, will be present 7:30p.m. in Herter Auditorium 231. 545-3659
Friday, March 30
THEATER: Michael Moschen has elevated juggling to a new plane of artistry and creativity. 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall $ 545-2511.
Saturday, March 31
LITERATURE: Perspectives in Children's Literature Conference 8:30a.m.-4:30p.m. at Furcolo Hall $ 545-1116.

Exhibits

AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
101 New Africa House 545-5177
M-W 10-7 pm, T-F 1-5 pm
DREAMING: Prophecies, Speculations, and Good Guesses
through Mar. 9
Origin: Breaking Out of the Box by Beverly Naidus
Mar. 12-Apr. 6
Reception: Mar. 27, 5-7p.m.

CENTRAL GALLERY
Central Residential Area
Elsmary Way-Wheeler House
545-2511
M-TH 3-6 pm; SU 2-5 pm
The Jesus Show by James Gehrt
Mar. 1-25
Reception: Mar. 11, 2-5p.m.
Gallery talk Mar 11, 2p.m.

HAMPDEN GALLERY & SCULPTURE GARDEN
Southwest Residential Area 545-2680
M-TH 12-6, SU 2-5 pm
New England/New York/New Talent 2001
Mar. 4-25
Reception: Mar. 4, 2-5p.m
In the Sculpture Garden: King and Queen by Ryan Thomas through May 30
Asterism by Jason Yelle
through May 30

HERTER ART GALLERY
126A Herter Hall 545-0976
M-F 11-4 pm, SA-SU 1-4 pm
James Hendricks
through Mar. 28
Kinds of Drawing group exhibit
Mar. 12-Apr.15
Reception: Mar. 12 4-6p.m.

STUDENT UNION ART GALLERY
Student Union Building 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm, F 10-3 pm
Outrage into Action: Feminist Organizing at UMass Amherst
by Michelle Gallinelli and Nicole Gottwald Self Portrait Retrospective
by Raymond Majersky
Mar. 2-30

SUNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center 545-3670
TUE 11-4:30 pm, SA-SU 2-5 pm
Christopher Wilmarth: "Living Inside" through Mar 18 & Apr 1-May 18
Brenda Zlamany: Figure Ground: Color Studies of Chuck Close, Evander Holyfield and John Yau through March 16

Five College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events.
Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

3/01

UMass Arts Council·101 Hasbrouck Lab·545-0202

■ metal

continued from page 5

getting him on the guitar, another guitar player, and then ended up having another drummer come in, which is Mick, and those guys all basically defected from Controlled Aggression as well, so there's a lot of seeds from that band in this band now. That's kind of how it happened. It wasn't supposed to be a serious thing at all, just all of a sudden the shows started getting crowded and we started taking it a little more seriously.

RS: Well, tell me about the record deal with Grand Royal, how that came to be.

KS: That's a wicked long story. It was in September '99 when we started getting label interest and we had a few labels come and check us out, and one of those labels was Den Entertainment, which is now no longer. That was supposed to be an Internet-based label, and the idea was that we were going to record and put out a record in the year 2000. That was the reason we chose that label, we thought great, we can get a record out right away on a non-conglomerate label. So, they ended up getting sold to Grand Royal and then Grand Royal merged with Virgin as their distribution company, and that sale and the merging that took place kept pushing our whole project back constantly, constantly, constantly. That's how it ended up – we didn't sign with Grand Royal, we signed with a company called Den Entertainment. When the merger went through and the sale went through, part of the deal was that the three bands that were on Den went with it. We didn't know if we were going to get dropped or what was going to happen, but they decided to keep it going. They spent some money, you know, they spent a lot of money making the record, they got the record back and they liked it and they're like "we're gonna try and do something with this," so we're pretty excited about it. We just kind of ended up on that label, basically.

RS: What sets you apart from the other bands of the local scene?

KS: I don't know... I mean, we're a big believer in the songwriting. The songwriting's probably the number one thing in the end that's going to give your band longevity. I mean, there are a lot of energetic bands out there, there's a lot of bands that put on great live shows, there's a lot of bands that make pretty damn good recordings without having a lot of money at their disposal, but ultimately I think that the record companies are looking for strong songs, for really good songwriting. They're looking for a band that has three or four really good-sounding demos that they think they can make some cash from (chuckles). I think it's songwriting, I dunno. There's a lot of good talent around here.

COURTESY THE CRETCHE BOMB

Luxx and their frontwoman, Katrina, who opened for Nullset at Jarrod's Place.

RS: How to you feel the scene is?

KS: It's as good as it's ever been. It seems like it's changing a lot in a short amount of time, but I mean obviously you have the Powerman thing, and the Godsmack thing is larger than life right now, and Staind got gigantic, so that just drew a ton of attention to the area. I think those guys brought a lot of attention to the scene and, because of that, a lot of bands started getting a lot more interested, saying "man, we're in a great area at a great time," kind of like you fish where the fish are, right? There's a lot of fish out there, and there's a lot of people fishing for them right now. There's a good active scene happening. You gotta get some momentum going, you know? There's a lot of good bands that just don't get the momentum. You almost just need to be lucky, too. Get the breaks, get the gigs – you know, it's like a catch-22: you don't get the good gigs unless you know the people, but you don't get the good slots unless you luck out at the beginning and have a few bands kind of hook you up with some shows, you know?

RS: What are your favorite bands right now?

KS: In the area? A lot of the bands that we play with, you know we're really fond of them, we've done quite a few shows with Tree, 7th Rail Crew, Controlled Aggression, Trustfall, umm, Colepitz, Johnny Wishbone, the bands here tonight: Luxx, Powderburn. There's a lot of good bands around, I know I'm forgetting a bunch... oh yeah, Eastcide's another one, they're a really, really good band. I can't believe they haven't been snatched up yet.

RS: They have been, actually, Universal got them.

KS: They are now? Well there you have it, you heard it! Simple. Simple are a pretty good band, Gargantua Soul. They're all linked on our website, pal. (chuckles)

Ken Smith, Nullset's singer and one chatty fellow.

RS: How far do you think your record will go?

KS: I don't know. The record's not coming out until June, the EP's coming out April 10. That's just going to be a three-song thing hopefully to drive the buzz on the record, which now they're talking early June, but it's been moving a little bit closer, which is good. I think once the national campaign gets rolling for the single, that'll tell. It's a lot easier to get your song on a local station for them to back it, and fortunately they did and it actually caught. Kids called up, and the station has said that people actually like the song and they're calling to request it so they're gonna keep playing it and... I really don't know, we're hoping that will spill over when the label does the full-on campaign all over the country to push that single. I don't think that was gonna be 'the single' they were gonna push, but now they're like "now it's already got wheels under it, let's keep it going."

RS: So it kind of chose itself?

KS: Yeah, in a way.

RS: Do you have any tour plans? For the summer when the record comes out?

KS: No, we don't, actually. We don't have a booking agency right now. We showcased for one at CBGB's like a month and a half ago and they passed, so now we have to go back and do the whole showcase thing again.

RS: I know some of the songs are from the old LP. How did that come about?

KS: Yeah, "6.5," "Kingpin," and we redid "Suplex" but it's not going to be on the record, it's going to be in the EP. When that comes out April 10, it's going to have "Smokewood," "California," and "Suplex," but you won't be able to get "Suplex" on the record. It's going to be an extra, promotional thing. We wanted to record as many songs as we could, you know, we wanted to redo "Godzilla" too, just so we could have it in the archives. But those were the three most radio songs, and they really wanted to have "Kingpin," just in case they needed a single. "6.5" we asked if we could do it and they were like sure, it's a cool song. "Suplex" was a last minute decision, we had some money left over in the budget and we had some time left as we asked if we could do that and they were like yeah, go ahead, so we just one-taked it. The label didn't spend a lot of money on that song, but it came out good.

RS: Any parting shots for the student body of the University of Massachusetts?

KS: Parting shots? God, I guess I have to give a big shout-out thanks for the support out there, thanks for supporting us at the Skybox while we were out there, and hopefully we'll see you at the Mullins Center sometime, right?

■ rock

continued from page 5

the people who got disgusted with the crap that radio and MTV was shoving down their throats – the kids from your high school who listened to Korn are now fueling the rock movement nonstop. Can the scene be viewed as a reacting against the alt-pop crap, hip-hop, and boy bands that have been force-fed to America, leading the young to look for sincere rock music, and discovering it all around them? Perhaps. Then again, if you were to ask the people at the shows, you'd mostly discover that they just go where the good music is – and that's here.

The scene has already spawned some national acts which have drawn yet more attention to Bay State rock. What some have called the "Godsmack effect" is now in firm hold – one band makes it huge nationwide, and the record companies want more of the same. They've found it, too. After "Whatever" blew up and Godsmack went nuts, Staind followed suit. Reveille toured on the Ozzfest, Powerman 5000 scored major radio hits and got mucho MTV play. All of a sudden the record companies realized that there's something special going on in Massachusetts, and that people all over the country want to hear it. The frenzy to find the Next Big Act has begun. Who will it be?

Let's take in the cream of the scene on an area-by-area basis:

Boston: Boston is the epicenter of the local hard rock scene, and as such has the most contenders for the throne. Bow in awe to the majesty of the bands you are about to behold.

Nullset: If you want to read more about Nullset, see the interview with singer Ken Smith in today's paper. All that needs to be said here is that this band puts on some of the best live shows in the entire scene, they're great guys, and their songs rock. They are going to be bigger than Godsmack.

Essential MP3s: "Smokewood," "Godzilla"

7th Rail Crew: Right up with Nullset in the Boston hierarchy. Their two indie albums, Static and Open Your Eyes, are textbooks in a New Rock sound – not rapping, not straight singing, but always loud, always intense, with great songwriting and tunes that were designed to be performed live. The only band on the scene to feature a bongo player. Lead singer Siete is one of the most charismatic frontmen to work the club crowd, and he also lived in Kennedy tower for a while as a UMass undergrad. A show and a band not to be missed.

Essential MP3s: "Genuflect," "24-7"

Tree: The legends. They've been around forever, even during the House of Pain days, keeping the torch alive, and they've only improved with age. Having progressed from their early Dead Kennedys-esque sound to a more modern metalish feel, the band are poised to break through big. Of course, we've been saying that for years.

Essential MP3s: "Spermicide," "Death Walk"

The South Shore: The sticks, all cranberry bogs and farms and an unlikely hotbed of rural angst and pissed-off metal.

Eastcide: Intense rapmetal. Manic, energy-filled insane live shows. Eastice are definitely one of the loudest bands on the scene, and not for the faint of heart. If you like your music heavy and absolutely insane, though, this is one band that is going to kick your lilly ass. People know it, too – these boys just got a major-label deal.

Essential MP3s: "Bucolic," "Mama Said Knock You Out"

Darkbuster: Oi-ska-punk that isn't out to be funny or cute – these guys are all older, they've been through the wars of being depressed, alcoholic, and out of luck in the small town, and they aren't afraid to talk about it. Brutally honest lyrics with old-fashioned punk sing-along choruses. For the introspective punk.

Essential MP3s: "Hometown Zero," "Mr. Naughty"

Springfield: The closest city to us, and the last to develop a really good scene, but most definitely working in it.

Simple: Modern nu-metal. A straight-ahead rock band that isn't ashamed to be so. Simple have amassed a large following in the western part of the New England and are expanding their reach further every day.

Essential MP3s: "Middle Skool," "168"

Worcester: Rapidly growing to be one of the extreme metal capitols of the world (no joking), Worcester is where the insane harcore deathmetal resides.

Shadows Fall: The finest of the American extreme metal bands, rivaling their Swedish counterparts for melody, brutality, and songwriting craft. Shadows Fall have toured nationally with some of the best bands in modern extreme music: Equal Parts, In Flames, Fear Factory, and Iron Maiden. These boys will kick tour ass and you will love it.

Essential MP3s: "The First Noble Truth," "Of One Blood"

Write for Arts & Living !

Lacrosse landscape shaken up

A massive shockwave was sent through the college lacrosse landscape over the weekend. Randomly occurring upsets shook the very ground while hotly contested games created so much pressure gas pipes were exploding everywhere. The quake registered a 4.0 on the Richter scale, but nothing could compare to the tremor it sent through the weekly NCAA Lacrosse Poll.

No. 11 Massachusetts – 17

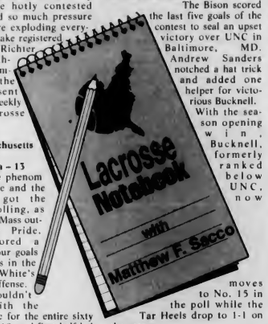
No. 13 Hofstra – 13

Sophomore phenom Kevin Leveille and the Minutemen got the upset ball rolling, as then No. 19 UMass outgunned the Pride. Leveille scored a career high four goals and six points in the Maroon and White's run and gun offense.

Hofstra couldn't keep up with the UMass offense for the entire sixty minutes, as a 10 goal first half led to only three in the second. Seniors Rich Kunkel and John Madigan notched two goals a piece in the victory for the Minutemen.

No. 15 Bucknell – 9

No. 18 North Carolina – 4



The Bison scored the last five goals of the contest to seal an upset victory over UNC in Baltimore, MD. Andrew Sanders notched a hat trick and added one helper for victorious Bucknell. With the season opening win, Bucknell, formerly ranked below UNC, now moves to No. 15 in the poll while the Tar Heels drop to 1-1 on the year.

No. 12 Maryland-Baltimore County – 9

No. 14 Navy – 8

Two Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference foes squared off in probably the best game of the weekend. The formerly No. 15 Retrievers scored a huge overtime victory over conference foe Navy.

The Midshipmen erased a two-goal fourth quarter deficit only to see Josh Hahn score his fifth of the game in overtime. UMBC moved up to No. 12 with the conference win while Navy dropped to No. 14.

No. 5 Georgetown – 10

Ohio State – 6

Reigning ECAC champion Georgetown was also in action over the weekend but the Hoyas had no problem bucking the Buckeyes. Scott Doyle and Mike Hammer both notched hat tricks, as the Hoyas played the role of national powerhouse in Columbus.

No. 10 Notre Dame – 10

No. 20 Penn State – 8

The Nittany Lions fought the Irish but lost in another exciting weekend match-up. ND's superstar Tom Glatzel entered the locker room at halftime with zero goals on the board and his team up only one goal. When he entered that same locker room after the game, Glatzel had five markers on his score sheet and the Irish had its first win of the year, over perennial powerhouse Penn State.

springbreakparty2001.com
Message Board - Picture Post
Streaming Video - Online Contests

Sponsored by the Amherst Health Department
The only thing smokin' in Amherst is the atmosphere!
* See what you eat!
* See what you drink!
* See the entertainment!
You Are Here UMASS — See You There — DOWNTOWN AMHERST
North Pleasant
Experience Downtown Amherst and its Smoke-Free Establishments

UNIVERSITY LIQUORS
liquor • beer • wine • lottery • phonecards
Honey Brown 12 pack ..... $8.99 + dep.
Amstel/Beck 12 pack ..... $10.99 + dep.
Saranak 12 pack ..... $9.99 + dep.
Bolla 1.5 all kinds $10.99
Sutter Home Chardonnay $4.99
Jack Daniel 1.75 ..... $25.99
Crown Royal 750 ..... $19.99
Dewary's 1.75 ..... $32.99
Gilbert Bourbon/Scotch $8.99
visit our beer and wine of the world section for house specials!
Register for Mirror

Thai Corner "Home Style Thai Food"
Serving Lunch From 11:30-3:00
Monday- Saturday
Take-Out Available
• Curry Dishes
• Stir Fried
• Soups
• Salads
• Noodles
31 Boltwood Walk, Amherst MA 253-1639
located down the alley from Antonio's Pizza
Hours: Sun 5-9, Mon-Wed 11:30-9, Thurs-Sat 11:30-10

STEM TEC
SCHOLARSHIPS for Future Teachers!
NSF
want to find out about careers in K-12 teaching? Want a scholarship to help with your educational expenses while you learn? Pick up an application for an NSF-STEM TEC Teaching Scholar Award!
Also, learn about the STEM TEC/Five College Science and Math Pre-Education Program that can help jump-start your career!
Monday, March 5, 12:20 p.m., 1033 LGRT
light refreshments
Applications due March 28, 2001
Part-time and post-baccalaureate students are eligible
(Questions? Can't make it? Give us a call at 545-0734, stop by 217 Hasbrouck Lab, drop us an e-mail at st-ss@k12s.phast.umass.edu, or check out the STEM TEC website for more information and/or to download an application: http://www.k12s.phast.umass.edu/~stemtec/stss/scholers/scholers.html

Geometric Tank...
$28
ZANNA
downtown Amherst
www.zanna.com

Crusing down the interstate

Men's gym seeks New England crown

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team will be hoping for deja vu this weekend as it heads to Springfield for the New England Championship meet.

Just down Interstate 91 the Minutemen will meet up with host Springfield College, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Vermont and Southern Connecticut. All four teams were in attendance last December when UMass hosted the UMass Open. The Maroon and White was able to capture first in its opening meet, surpassing Springfield by 15 points, MIT by 53 points, UVM by 40 points and Southern Connecticut by 56 points.

Host Springfield is coming off a surprising win against Temple last Sunday night after the Owls left Boyden Gymnasium. Springfield will have freshmen Michael Smith, who was named last week's Rookie of the Week in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC). Normally, Springfield is not one of UMass' top concerns.

"Last weekend's win will give Springfield the incentive," said head coach Roy Johnson.

The Engineers are coming off a meet against Vermont last weekend, where they won by just one point. UVM is coming off the tough lost against MIT, but it also has suffered a prior loss to Southern Connecticut, another team scheduled for Sunday. The Catamounts' loss was 18 points against Southern Connecticut.

Southern Connecticut has met up with the Minutemen twice this season already. The second meet, just last week, was a lashing by the Minutemen, drilling the Owls by 15 points. The third time looks like UMass should come out on top again.

"We'll go down there and do our normal thing," said Johnson.

For the Minutemen, senior Andy Leis and freshman Pat McFarlin are looking strong for Sunday. Darren Morais and Ryan Roberts also look promising.

Leis last week took first place in the rival meet against Temple. In the past weeks the senior has been strong on the vault, helping to bring the team average up to a 9.0. The pommel horse has also been a strong point for the veteran. Johnson has praised him for being a strong leader for the gymnasts on the team.

McFarlin has had a promising first season with the Minutemen. The frosh has placed first in most events, taking first in the floor exercise several times throughout the season. McFarlin has also earned recognition from the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference with Rookie of the Week honors at the close of January.

The Minutemen have practiced hard this week but are still reveling off the win against Temple. UMass is heading off to the weekend with a bang but is trying to keep its mind and body in order.

"We've practiced hard, and I'll give them a day off," said Johnson.

The Minutemen will head to Springfield on Sunday for the five-teant matchup.

Tumbling into Bridgeport

No real rest for busy women's gym squad

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

There's no rest for the weary.

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team is coming off a two meet weekend against Penn State and Temple, two of the toughest teams it will face this season. With only two days rest from practice this week, a win against Temple is sending the Minutewomen tumbling into a match up against Bridgeport.

The Maroon and White will head to Bridgeport tomorrow for a 7 p.m. start.

Sophomore Jen Gendron will be one of the toughest weapons that UMass holds for Friday. Gendron earned her second honors as Atlantic 10 Performer of the Week.

"I'm really surprised and exteremely happy," Gendron said.

Gendron, who notes herself as usually being strongest on the floor exercise, has been performing especially well on the balance beam. The second year gymnast has had top points in several of the meets this season.

"Floor's always been my stronger routine, but I've been hitting my beam sets and it's made all the difference," Gendron said.

Senior Mary Moore has also been strong for the Minutewomen over the last couple of meets. Moore tied with Gendron for first on the beam last Sunday, and took first flying solo on the beam against New Hampshire.

Sophomore Katie Teft has been a post for the team in her recovery from an injury earlier in the season. Teft runs a great routine on the uneven bars, and has taken first in the meet against UNH, and at a quad meet against Alaska-Anchorage, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Yale. Teft did not compete as a freshman against Bridgeport because of a shoulder injury.

Tracy Chew, a leader of the team, has shown strong promise throughout her junior campaign. Last weekend Chew took first place on the vault at Temple. The Maryland native has been a gymnast for UMass for three seasons now, earning honors in the gym and in the classroom.

The Minutewomen will face Bridgeport looking to repeat their meeting last season. The Maroon and White was ahle to capture a win against Bridgeport at home during the annual senior night. UMass claimed victory by five points. Bridgeport has been compared with Temple, the Minutewomen's last victim. The match could be close, but UMass is expected to win.

"We're really looking forward to it," Gendron said.

The Minutewomen only have two meets ahead of them the rest of the season. Rhode Island will be next to visit Boyden Gymnasium in the first matchup of the season, and Yale will close out the season for the Minutewomen. The Bulldogs are a team that came to Amherst just two weeks ago and left scathed by the wrath of the Maroon and White.

At the end of March, the Minutewomen will be attending the Atlantic 10 Championship in Washington D.C., and then the NCAA Regionals. The Minutewomen have had a promising season and the postseason could be just as bright.

■ baseball

continued from page 12

said, noting, however, that any number of variables could alter that. "We only lost one pitcher from last year's staff, really, so we should be ok. You just don't know. It's tough to predict, especially in baseball."

Keeping in step with Stone's one game at a time philosophy, the only item on the Minuteman agenda for now remains Oral Roberts. Skirkanich will get the nod in the first game on Friday night, with Szado and Hourigan starting games two and three, respectively, on Saturday. For Stone, more than anything else, this weekend will allow the players to see themselves and let the tone be set from there.

"[Oral Roberts] is a good team. It's going to be tough to beat a team like that; we're going to have to play almost perfectly the first time out. But you never know; we come out of the blocks hard, get some relief pitching, who knows.

"I hope we hit the ball a little better than we did last year, to make things happen offensively. We're just looking to make the routine plays on defense; if those things happen, we've got a chance to be a pretty good team."

■ Flint

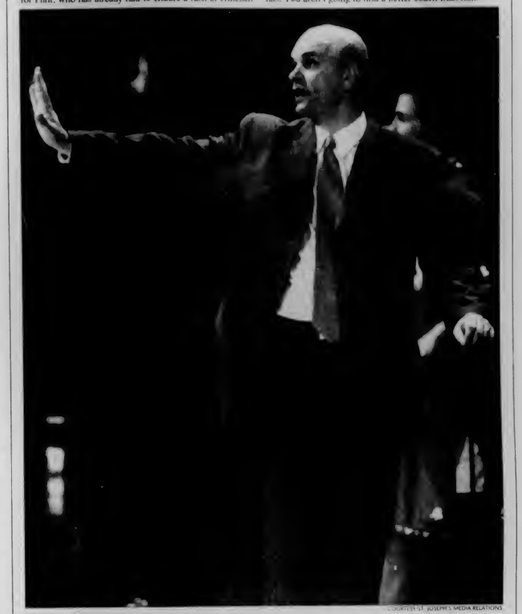
continued from page 12

"Pure and simple, you cannot guard any better than Jameer guards," Martelli said.

That ball-and-chain defense was only a part of the hardwood mastery displayed by Nelson and the Hawks against the Minutemen. When the smoke cleared on the home team's 84-69 Senior Night victory, the Hawks were left to celebrate their A-10 regular-season championship while UMass was left wondering what went wrong in its second half collapse. It certainly wasn't the best of homecomings for Flint, who has already had to endure a rash of criticism this season regarding both his coaching ability and his job security.

Martelli feels that such criticism is more of an atrocity than anything Flint's team has or hasn't done on the court.

"I think that's bullshit," Martelli said with a scowl. "I think you should be embarrassed to go to UMass if it's a place where a guy like that has to fight for his job. Just look at what he's done, turning around a 2-9 team like he has. You aren't going to find a better coach than him."



COURTESY ST. JOSEPH'S MEDIA RELATIONS

After guiding the Hawks to the Sweet Sixteen in 1997, St. Joe's coach Phil Martelli has his team primed for another NCAA Tournament run this season.

Done your homework for LIFE 101 lately?
Purpose for Life = Loving God + Loving People
Sunday Morning Celebration - 11am in the Jones Library Conference Room
43 Amity St. - downtown Amherst
MERCYhouse — It's a church! www.knowmercy.org

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
Two 5-week Summer Sessions
Session I: June 3-July 5
Session II: July 9-Aug. 10
Over 100 Courses
French Immersion
Other Special Programs
Tel: (33/1) 40 62 06 14
Fax: (33/1) 40 62 07 17
or in NY (212) 983-1414 summer@aup.fr
www.aup.edu
Summer in Paris 2001

OVER 2,000 SEASONAL JOBS AVAILABLE!
JOB FAIR
at Six Flags New England Human Resources Building (across from the park)
SATURDAY, MARCH 3rd 10 am - 4 pm
SUNDAY, MARCH 4th 11 am - 4 pm
Opportunities exist in the following areas:
• Front Gate Operations
• Rides & Games
• Security
• Marketing
• Retail
• Food Service
• Water Park Attendants/Lifeguards
• Medical Services
• Landscaping
• Shows/Entertainment
• Human Resources/Wardrobe
Six Flags NEW ENGLAND
ECE Six Flags supports a drug free workplace
Applications will also be taken Monday through Friday, between 9 am and 5 pm at the Human Resources Office (across the street from the park) at 1756 Main St., Agawam, MA. Or, apply on-line: www.sixflags.com
For more information, contact: Human Resources: (413) 789-9998 ext. 0
LOONEY TUNES characters names and all related indicia are trademarks of Warner Bros. © 2001. Six Flags and all related indicia are trademarks of Six Flags Theme Parks Inc. © 2001

Atlantis
Behind Antonio's Pizza in Amherst
NO COVER $2 COVER AFTER 11 PM
TUES: Drum & Bass with Kid Viscious
WED: B-Ski's Bins "The best in disco & funk."
FREE Nachos 10-11 pm
THURS: "Under the blue" with DJ Big Phil
•hip hop and r&b
FRI: Growroom Records presents:
DJs Bon Bons & Salty
SAT: Straight Hip-Hop, No Chaser:
with DJs Double OC and XsO
"Ladies Night" - Ladies get in FREE
SUN: Drunk Monks open turntable night

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
The Finest silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324 M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 M-Sat 10-6, Thurs 'til 7, Sun 12-5
800-729-8971 • www.silverscapedesigns.com

THE CRUCIBLE
BY ARTHUR MILLER
UMASS theater
March 1, 2, 3 and 8, 9, 10 at 8 p.m.
The Rand Theater, Fine Art Center
Tickets: $7, $4 students/seniors
Call 545-2511

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts.com or 549-0600.

Center of Town
1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos
3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Saab Turbo 162K, sunroof, leather, 5spd. Good condition. $1100 o/b/o 413-367-7592

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Mothers Helper for 5 & 9 year old. Spring & summer. 10hrs a week. Car & references a must. Contact Jamie. 549-7788

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER DAY CAMP
Looking for a fun summer job? Here it is! The Girl Scouts has camp openings for waterfront director, counselors, lifeguards and crafts and nature specialists in South Hadley. July 2 - August 11. $200-$285/week. Training is provided. Limited transportation available. Contact GSCWM at 800-462-9100 x11 for information. AA/EOE

Needed Immediately Town of Amherst Leisure Services Department is looking for volleyball officials for it's adult volleyball league. Matches are held Sunday afternoons and are located 1/2 mile from UMass. $12-$14 per match. For more information contact Mike Thomas, Sports Director, at 413-256-4065 ex. 105 or e-mail at thomasm@town.amherst.ma.us

The UMass Football team is looking for interested students to video practices and games for the spring 2000/2001 season. Experience preferred but will train. Scholarship and work study programs available. If you are interested please contact Bill Sisler at 577-0319. Come be a part of a championship tradition.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. (2 hours form New York and Philadelphia), Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, WSI, waterfront activities, scuba, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, gymnastics, fishing, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20-8/17. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS - NE Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/01). Directors for Gymnastics, Fine Arts, Camping/Nature, Golf, Swimming. Couselors for : Tennis, Team Sports, Ropes, Self-Defense, Gymnastics, Aerobics, Cheerleading, Swimming, Sailing, Waterskiing, Fine Arts and Crafts, Piano, Drama, Photography, Guitar, Video, Group Leaders. On Campus Interviews March 6th. Call 800-279-3019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com

PT Help Wanted Amherst Greenhouse growing pesticide free, hydroponic herbs. 549-3558

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER & SUN ON CAPE COD! The Wychmere Harbor Beach Club is conducting interviews on our property for all our summer employment opportunities on March 8, 9, 10 & March 15, 16, 17. Interviewing for Wait Staff, Bus Staff, Culinary Staff, Lifeguards and more. On-site housing available. Check out our website at www.wychmereharbor.com & call Amy at (508) 432-1000 x 129 for details.

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

Join Our Team & Make a Difference in a Child's Life
5 great children summer camps in NY, ME, PA, and WV seek General Counselors & Group Leaders, plus Activity Specialists who can teach/coach: tennis, swimming, waterskiing, sailing, caving, mountain biking, canoeing, windsurfing, woodworking, theatre, arts, photography, video, website design, fitness, golf, gymnastics, dance, volleyball, basketball, roller-hockey, lacrosse, baseball, and soccer. Nurses and kitchen and operation staff also needed. June 16-August 16. Benefits include training, room and board, laundry, and travel stipend› Apply on-line at www.horizoncamps.com or call 1(800) 544-5448

FOR SALE

Big Bear exercise bench with barbell and weights $100, Sharp portable TV/VCR $50, collect from Puffton Village before 15 March, ndr@wigeon.astro.umass.edu, 545-3556.

For Sale: Brother word processor, good condition. $100 549-6077

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENT

Welcome to the new members of spring 2001: Moira, Chrissy, Erin, Cara, Michelle, Kristen, Alicia, Gen, Beth, and Nikki! Love the Sisters fo Sigma Kappa

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons Recreational & competitive boxing. Retired pro Dajata Bumpus. 256-0364

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITY-BARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner. Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-8, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

MUSIC

Do you want your band recorded? Call Hellbent Studios. Digital and Analog Recording. $20 per/hr. 413-549-5942

ROOM FOR RENT

Near UMass. Quiet setting. No smoking, vegitarian kitchen. Car needed. $325+ 549-4853

1 Bedroom in Large 3 bedroom house. On busline 253-3670

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. Avail 3/4 $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-800-234-7007 endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

Spring Break Still Available! Deluxe Hotels, Reliable Air, Free Food, Drinks and Parties! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Mazatlan & Florida. Travel Free and Earn Cash! Do it on the web! Go to www.StudentCity.com or call 1-800-293-1443 for info.

Spring Break! Last Minute Deals! Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Jamaica & Mazatlan. Join MTV and Baywatch for Spring Break! Call for a free brochure and ask how you can organize a small group & Eat, Drink, Travel Free & Earn Cash! Call 1-800-777-4642 or e-mail sales@suncoastvacations.com

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner. Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-8, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

Go Direct! #1 Internet-based Company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Lowest price guarantee! 1-800-367-1252. www.springbreakdirect.com

TRAVEL

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $179 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@gofliptrips.com

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Spring Break - Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun and Jamaica from $499. Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and More! Organize small group - earn FREE trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-GET-SUN-1

The Collegian Classifieds
The Place To Advertise!!
Call 545-3500

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 - HSCN Bulletin Board
3 - CPS-3 Hartford
4 - CPS-4 Boston
5 - ABC-40 Springfield
6 - PBS-57 Springfield
7 - HSCN Music Channel
8 - UPN-20 Hartford
9 - HSCN New Movie Channel
10 - NBC-10 New Britain
11 - Fox-61 Hartford
12 - PBS-24 Hartford
13 - NBC-22 Springfield
14 - International Channel
15 - UMASS Academic Channel
16 - WB-30 New Haven
17 - HSCN
18 - HSCN2
19 - UVC TV (Student Channel)
20 - Weather Channel
21 - Guest to Guest
22 - C-Span
23 - CNN
24 - CNN Headline News
25 - Lifetime
26 - USA
27 - TBS
28 - TNT
29 - E!
30 - Sci-Fi
31 - Discovery
32 - Nickelodeon
33 - Cartoon Network
34 - Nick at Nite
35 - TV Land
36 - Comedy Central
37 - BET
38 - Univision
39 - Bloomberg Financial Network
40 - College TV Network
41 - MTV
42 - MTV2
43 - VH1
44 - The Learning Channel

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 1, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
									Gene Pitney on Stage (In Stereo)			Wait for God	The Old Hse.
WEDH	2	12 Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Gene Pitney on Stage (In Stereo)						News	Late Show
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Survivor-Aust. Outback		CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.	Big Apple "Pilot" (N)			News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor-Aust. Outback		CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.	Big Apple "Pilot" (N)			News	Nightline
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	Primetime Thursday (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Charmed "Sight Unseen"	News			Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Friends	Will & Grace Just Shoot Me	ER "Witch Hunt" (In Stereo)			News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Seven Smarts	Blind Date	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Charmed "Sight Unseen"	News	Arrest & Trial		Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	8	News	NBC News	Extra	Inside Edition	Friends	Friends	Will & Grace Just Shoot Me	ER "Witch Hunt" (In Stereo)			News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	World's a Funniest! (In Stereo)		Truth Behind the Rumors ?	News			Friends	Fraser
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Friends	Will & Grace Just Shoot Me	ER "Witch Hunt" (In Stereo)			News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse. DoctorCall		Mystery! "Trial by Fire" (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	Primetime Thursday (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fraaier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				Frasier	Mad Abt. You	Spin City	Spin City
WTBS	72	Rosanne	Rosanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "Fargo" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Frances McDormand, Steve Buscemi					★★ "Sniper" (1993, Drama) Tom Berenger
A&E	41	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order	"The Blue Wall"	Biography: Ethel Kennedy		Behind Closed Doors		Investigative Reports		Law & Order	Deceit
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour	(N)	Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Salute to Andy Kaufman			Battlebots	Battlebots	Sports Night	Daily Show	Turn Ben
DISC	42	Wild Discovery: Riddle		Wild Discovery: Twilight Zone		Lightning Strikes		Beyond Bizarre			Mysteries of the Unexplained	Justice Files
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Penn State at Iowa (Live)				College Basketball: Cincinnati at South Florida. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	69	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Taking Back My Life: The Nancy Zeigenmeyer Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	61	Direct Effect	Senseless	Celebrity	Cribs	Revenge of the Rejects		Journey of Dr. Dre (In Stereo)		Cribs (N)	Diary (N)	Undressed	Making-Video
NICK	68	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Facts of Life	Facts of Life	It's Company	It's Company	All in Family	Jeffersons
SCIFI	70	Hercules: Legendary Joys.		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	62	Paramedics	The Night Shift	Mysteries of the Bible		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Secrets of Forensic Science		Case of the Deadly Doctor (N)	Medical Detect	Medical Detect
TNT	44	ER "Full Moon, Saturday Night"		Pretender "Collateral Damage"		NBA Basketball: Phoenix Suns at San Antonio Spurs. (In Stereo Live)					NBA	"Rumble in the Bronx" (1995)
USA	45	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Chains of Command"		Nash Bridges "Sniper"					★★½ "Secret Cutting" (2000, Drama) Sean Young. (In Stereo)	Martin
HBO	33	★★ "Three Wishes" (1995, Drama) Patrick Swayze. PG				Reel Sports					★★ "Entrapment" (1999, Suspense) Sean Connery. PG-13	Reel Sex 22 (In Stereo)
MAX	34	(5:00)	★ "Simon Sez" (1999) Dennis Rodman. PG-13			★★★ "Pups" (1999, Drama) Cameron Van Hoy. (In Stereo)					★★★ "Halloween" (1978) Jamie Lee Curtis.	"Still Deceit"
SHOW	35	★★½ "Tea With Mussolini" (1999, Comedy-Drama) Cher. PG				★★★ "The Leaser Evil" (1999) Corn Feora.			Extras. Ripley		★★ "Reindeer Games" (2000) Ben Affleck.	"Macbeth in"

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WHAT IS THIS STRANGE AND BEAUTIFUL FEELING INSIDE OF ME?!
WAVES OF ECSTASY ARE PULSING THROUGH MY SOUL.
THIS IS WHY I ONLY GIVE POSITIVE REINFORCEMENT ONCE A YEAR.
I'M ALL TINGLY!

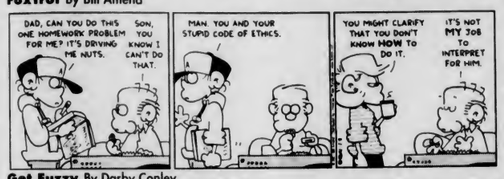
Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

HI, THERE, COACH. WHAT'S UP?
I'M UP AT DAWN-UPY, TRYING TO SIGN JIMMY FOXCROFT!
THE TAIL-BACK? I THOUGHT HE WAS A GOOD KID.
HE STILL IS. IT'S JUST A WEAPONS CHARGE. BUT HE WANTS JOHNNIE COCHRAN TO DEFEND HIM.
JOHNNIE COCHRAN? HOW ARE WE SUPPOSED TO GET JOHNNIE COCHRAN?
I DON'T KNOW. SHE BUT IT'S HIM OR NO DEAL.
MAYBE IF WE OFFERED HIM AN HONORARY DEGREE.
COULD YOU LET ME KNOW? I'M ON CALL BLOCK D.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I EXPERIENCED SOMETHING CALLED POSITIVE REINFORCEMENT TODAY
I'M ADDICTED TO IT NOW... BUT IT'S WEARING OFF... MUST GET MORE...
SAY SOMETHING NICE ABOUT ME!
FOR A CRAZY WOMAN YOU DON'T DROOL MUCH

FoxTrot By Bill Amend



DAD, CAN YOU DO THIS ONE HOMEWORK PROBLEM FOR ME? IT'S DRIVING ME NUTS.
SON, YOU KNOW I CAN'T DO THAT.
MAN. YOU AND YOUR STUPID CODE OF ETHICS.
YOU MIGHT CLARIFY THAT YOU DON'T KNOW HOW TO DO IT.
IT'S NOT MY JOB TO INTERPRET FOR HIM.

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

I HAVE TO RUN INTO THE STORE AND GET SOME SNACK FOOD, OK?
HOW IS THAT DIFFERENT FROM REGULAR FOOD?
YOU KNOW- JUST LITTLE STUFF NOTHING TOO FILLING OHHH, OK. LIKE CHIPMUNKS WHY DIDN'T YOU JUST SAY SO?
I MEAN LIKE PRETZELS.

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Memories will come to you today, fast and furiously. With help from a friend, you should be able to balance the past, present and future.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – The news you have to give to someone else will surely prove beneficial – but the good it does you may not be obvious upon first glance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Today is the day to get things off your chest in a big way. Don't make the mistake of underestimating the power of the truth, now and always.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You don't want to be throwing good money after bad today, so it's time to change your ways just enough to save a little more cash.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You may have to be satisfied with a second-place finish today. Tomorrow, however, you can be back in front – where you feel you really do belong.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Consider embracing, at least temporarily, those ideas which have seemed to be in opposition to your own. You'll learn an important lesson.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Someone you've been depending on for some time has broken a promise, and you must make it clear that you are expecting reparations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The news you're waiting for is likely to come your way before the day is out. You may have a reason, however, not to take the message yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – This is a good day to demonstrate your willingness to do what is necessary to succeed. The more daring you are the better!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You should be able to manage pleasing yourself today even while you bend over backward to please others. You know what's really important!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Your first guess may not be accurate today, but you are always willing to look further when you feel that something isn't right. Get the truth!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Your interest in the new kid on the block will reveal certain unknown aspects of your personality today. You'll learn something quite unusual.

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

The Masked Dropout By Robert Hewitt

IT'S BEEN GRANT SPENDING ALL THIS TIME TOGETHER!!
YOU'RE NOT SICK OF ME YET ARE YOU?
OF COURSE NOT!
HOW ABOUT NOW?
NOPE.
WHAT ABOUT NOW?!
CHECK PLEASE.

Robotman By Jim Meddick

AND THEN A QUICK UPPER JAB
ROBA ENOUGH BATTLE TRAINING LET'S TALK ABOUT SOMETHING ELSE FOR A CHANGE
I WAS ONLY PROGRAMMED FOR BATTLE WHAT ELSE IS THERE TO DISCUSS?
WELL LOVE, FOR ONE THING
LOVE? WHAT IS LOVE?
UMM... THAT'S NOT EASY TO ANSWER SOME OF THE GREATEST MINDS IN HUMAN HISTORY HAVE PONDERED THAT VERY QUESTION
AND NO ONE WITH THE POSSIBLE EXCEPTION OF BARRY WHITE REALLY KNOWS THE ANSWER

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

I'M... WHAT MADE YOU THINK ABOUT MARRIAGE AFTER ALL THIS TIME?
I WAS THROWN OFF LIVING ON THE KNIVES BOSE, MAN.
WHEN YOU LIVE TOGETHER EVERYTHING'S UNCERTAIN. BUT WITH MARRIAGE, YOU'D HAVE MY BACK. I COULD SCREW UP TOTALLY AND YOU'D STILL BE THERE!
UH, SORRY, UP?
YOU KNOW, IF I HAD A FLING OR SOMETHING WHAT?
ONE NIGHT ONE! I'M SURE SHE WOULDN'T MEAN A THING TO ME!

Quote of the Day

"I have this theory that if you do something really stupid in life but make a cool sound afterwards it makes up for it."

–Jess Grant

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Fried Clams

Southern 6-Bean Stew (vegan)

Vegetarian Paella (veg) (B, H, W)

DINNER

Roast Turkey (B, F)

Greek Style Tofu (vegan)

Wild Mushroom Strudel (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

Spinach Mushroom Strudel (vegetarian) (F)

Beef Forestier (H, W)

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 29 LOW: 11	HIGH: 27 LOW: 12	HIGH: 32 LOW: 16

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician	Shalini Marti
Copy Editor	Andy Voght
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	John Zawislak

Solid Custom Tattoo
460 West St. Rte. 116 Amherst, MA 549-0003
tues-sat 1-9
sun apt. only
A Tattoo is for life Know your artist

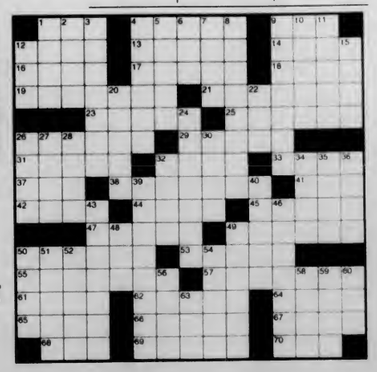
ACROSS
1 By way of
4 Old saying
9 Current meas.
12 Fluffy's warning
13 Loaf
14 Vietnam neighbor
16 "Right now!"
17 Lobster exporter
18 Teen problem
19 Maxis, as a salary
21 Facial expression
23 Board game
25 Boasters
26 Sniped stones
29 Group of three
31 Yank
32 Gentle
33 Tool
37 — roll: lucky
38 Locked displeased
41 Forest mama
42 Fishing gear
44 Apartment, e.g.
45 Throws off (heat)
47 Females
49 Dishes
50 Courtyard
53 Mitt
55 Naps for Pedro
57 Spectacular
61 Leftovers dish
62 Fabled creature
64 Salad-bowl wood
65 Buffalo's lake
66 Sea duck
67 Trick
68 Plus
69 Shops' poles
70 On many occasions

DOWN
1 Globetrotter's need

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

1-13-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

2 Author Dinesen
3 Phases
4 Military units
5 College administrators
6 — Baba
7 Crew
8 Use the gym
9 Apple pie option
10 Parrot
11 Puerto Rican port
12 Derby or pillbox
15 Plant
20 Bundle of grain
22 Nest-egg info.
24 Packing away
26 Ration out
27 Widow of Kelly
28 What Harriet smelled
30 Monthly expenses
32 Sharpen
34 Colleary exit
35 Learn by — memorize
36 "Untouchable" Eliot
39 Sifts through
40 Dig (into)
43 Rustled
46 Conductor
48 Not at home
49 Forces
50 Tennis pro Arthur
51 Jeweled headpiece
52 Varnish ingredient
54 Weaker, as an excuse
56 Fabric sample
58 Pierre's egg
59 Clipper-ship feature
60 — out, barely make ends meet
63 Harem room



INSIDE: Men's lacrosse week in review.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Thursday, March 1, 2001 | 12

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Teacher vs. pupil

Coaches Flint and Martelli share more than just Atlantic 10 sideline positions

COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM DAN SANTELLA - COLLEGIAN

UMass head coach James "Bruiser" Flint came face-to-face with his past on Tuesday night, when the Minutemen ventured down to his hometown of Philadelphia to battle his alma mater, St. Joseph's.

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA – Massachusetts men's basketball coach James "Bruiser" Flint will never be the poster child for restraint.

With less than nine minutes to go in Tuesday night's game at St. Joseph's, the fifth-year coach may have been in his most animated state of the season. His team had just squandered a 16-point halftime lead over its hosts, prompting Flint to leap a full six feet onto the court as he howled at both his team and the officials.

Roughly 50 feet down the sideline, Hawk coach Phil Martelli studied his counterpart with a knowing smile. This was not Martelli's first taste of the fiery Flint; In fact, few people in the building were more familiar with the young coach.

"He thinks he's still playing," Martelli said. "He was never real good with math back then, and he still isn't. Especially geometry; he still doesn't understand the concept of a box."

Martelli would certainly know. Prior to taking the head coaching reins at St. Joe's, he served a 10-year term as an assistant within the program. Martelli saw the Hawks capture an Atlantic 10 championship and an NCAA Tournament berth in his very first season, behind a scrappy junior point guard with hometown roots and a knack for finding the open man.

That point guard was Bruiser Flint.

"Bruiser wasn't half as good as he thought he was, and he wasn't a tenth as good as his father thought he was," laughed Martelli. "Really, Bruiser is a great guy and he was great to coach. A lot of players look at assistant coaches like they're invisible men; Bruiser was a guy who listened to everybody."

Recollections of Flint the player bring a grin to the 46 year-old coach's face. He played a hand in turning Flint into one of the most prolific passers in conference history, a true floor general who led the A-10 in assists per game his senior year.

Flint graduated from St. Joe's having left his mark on the school's roundball record books as well; His 401 career assists are good for sixth all-time in Hawk history, and his senior-year tally of 171 helpers is the sixth best single-season total ever at St. Joe's.

But that was 14 years ago. This year's Hawks are as dominating as any Flint-led team ever was, and Martelli can't help but compare Flint to his current point prodigy, freshman Jameer Nelson.

"Bruiser isn't going to like hearing this," Martelli said. "But whoever you think the best point guard ever to play in the A-10 is – including him – Jameer is going to challenge them. He's the best freshman point guard in America right now, and he has a chance to become the best at that position to ever play in the A-10."

As bold of a statement as that is, the numbers seem to be on Martelli's side; Nelson has been nothing short of explosive in his first season running the Hawks. His 6.2 assists per game rank him first in the A-10, while his scoring average (12.4 ppg), free throw percentage (.796) and steals (49) are all among the conference's top 20. He has started every one of the Hawks' games this season, and is arguably the single biggest reason for the team's incredible turnaround (13-16 last year to 24-4 now).

Nelson's importance to the Hawks was apparent Tuesday; even though he was plagued by foul trouble for much of the game (he logged only 27 minutes), Nelson still managed to rack up 16 points while playing some of the most smothering defense that UMass has seen all year.

Turn to FLINT, page 9

Scouting themselves

Minutemen prepare for 2001 season

By Matt Despres
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts baseball team travels to Oklahoma this Friday to kick off the 2001 season with a three-game weekend series against Oral Roberts University, head coach Mike Stone and Co. may find themselves face to face with an opponent other than the Golden Eagles.

Themselves.

"The first few games we have to play against ourselves," said Stone, contemplating the transition to regular season play. "That's the way you do it until you start to get out of your own way, and then you start to compete against the other team. A scouting report is irrelevant at this point. We just need to make the plays and play well. If we win, that's a bonus."

The Minutemen battled themselves all of last season, finishing the year at 26-22-1 and eventually bowing out to Virginia Tech in the Atlantic 10 tournament. Despite the premature exit, the closing series provided the team with both momentum and a positive mindset heading into the off-season.

"I think we played our best baseball in the A-10 tournament," Stone said. "We ended up playing in the championship game. I think we definitely improved, and when you play well against a Virginia Tech type of team, it's good. I thought we played our best at the end."

Saving the best for last, however, may no longer be a viable option for the Maroon and White. Highlights of that late season push were often provided by key role-players, some who have since been lost to graduation. Gone is the heart and hustle of second baseman Shaun Skeffington, now an assistant coach, as well as the poise of pitcher Travis Veracka on the mound.

"Shaun provided [leadership] for us, where he was a coach on the field, always scrapping and playing hard," Stone said. "Travis, from a leadership standpoint, was a guy who everyone felt good about being on the mound when we were on defense. You had a lot of confidence in a guy like that, he's a good pitcher. We'll miss those two guys."

Perhaps the most devastating loss facing the team, however, is that of catcher Chris Morgan. Morgan, a stalwart defender behind the plate and a powerful offensive weapon, has been lost for the season with torn ligaments in his left shoulder. Sophomore Tom Ellerbrook, who saw limited action behind the plate last season as a backup, will assume full-time catching duties.

"A player the quality of Morgan, you know, he's a key player," Stone said. "We're going to miss him, but we can't really dwell on that fact because that's not going to help us. We're going to miss him."

The hallmark of any Stone team, however, is not grieving the players who have been lost, but rather nourishing those who are capable of stepping up.

"The character of a team is molded by how we do, and how people react," Stone said. "In baseball, there is always a time when people struggle, and [we'll see] how people will deal with those situations.

The character trait that Stone is emphasizing for this year's team is its ability to adapt, to mold itself appropriately as new challenges arise. Mix into that an influx of new talent to compliment the veteran players, and the team has the potential to surprise at a number of positions.

Sophomore Jeff Altieri will take over at first base for the departed Kevin O'Connell. Altieri discovered his niche rapidly last year, particularly later in the season, and became increasingly more confident with each plate appearance. Junior Aaron Senez and sophomore Matt Boulanger are also back in the mix; however, according to Stone, the infield situation is still largely up for grabs, only two days before the season, with any number of players ready to step up if need be.

"We've had a lot of sickness and injury," Stone said, citing a lineup that could be juggled quite often. "We're keeping our options open in a lot of different positions."

The UMass outfield will return in full, with senior captain Nick Gorneault holding down center field. To his left and right, respectively, return junior Mike Kulak and senior Gavin Clark, who complete the trio that is built around both speed and power at the plate.

While the roster searches for a more definite form, the pitching rotation has taken on a more clearly defined shape and role. With Veracka gone, senior Craig Szado will ease into the go-to role, a transition that should remain smooth, provided that last year's performances remain an indicator of how consistently the right-hander can perform. Following in step are Nick Skirkanich, Jesse Santos and Brian Hourigan – all veteran performers with big game experience. As the season builds, says Stone, it may be the UMass pitching staff that will keep opponents in check.

"Our pitching staff should be our strength," Stone

Turn to BASEBALL, page 9

Women's tennis set for Harvard

Cambridge battle first ever for squads

By Ben Hall
Collegian Staff

In the days since the Massachusetts women's tennis team was upset by Army, the team has seen what time it has to dwell on the loss lessen.

On Sunday, the squad will take to the courts against New England powerhouse Harvard University in Cambridge. If it thought that the junior paratroopers packed some serious firepower, wait until it discovers what the Ivy Leaguers have to offer.

"This is the first time our team has played Harvard," said head coach Judy Dixon. "They called us in the beginning of the year. I take that as a real compliment to our program. It is a wonderful opportunity to play against some of the highest competition in the Northeast. Where Harvard stands now is where we want to take our team in the future."

According to Dixon, the women's team is using last weekend's loss as an example of how not to show up for a match. The past few days have been spent regrouping as players look toward themselves to be better prepared and more focused when taking on the competition. Each player has met privately with the coaching staff this week.

"We are going to work them very hard right up until Sunday," said Dixon. "After that, we'll give them three days to rest, then it's right back into it as we get ready to go to Boca Raton."

In the past six years the Crimson has won four Ivy League titles and has advanced to four NCAA Tournaments in consecutive years. Last season the team struggled with an inexperienced, injury-prone roster. So far, this season the women have struggled only winning two matches and losing four.

The biggest challenge for the Minutewomen will be whether they can match the depth of the Harvard program. The Cambridge team also benefits from the luxury of an on-campus, indoor tennis facility.

"Our girls get tired," said Dixon. "We practice every morning at 6:30 whereas Harvard practices in the afternoon. UMass does not have any enclosed courts, so we have to travel over to Hampshire College. This is by no means an excuse for not being prepared. It just means that our lives are a little more dislocated."

An exciting match-up is to be expected on the doubles court as the freshman pair of Francesca Mancini and Jafra Depontes take on one of the best doubles pairs in the region. Harvard's Andrea Magyera and Fleur Broughton lost to the Maroon and White tandem at the ITA Regional Championships in Williamsburg, Va. last November. Thus, all eyes will be watching to see whether Mancini and Depontes can pull off a repeat performance.

"After beating number one ranked William and Mary the day before Harvard just didn't seem that good," said Mancini.

When asked about her doubles partner, Francesca responded, "I love playing with Jafra. We get mad at each other sometimes, but it's just because we both want to win so badly. I really hope we do well this weekend."

"I'm looking forward to see how Francesca fares this weekend," said Dixon. "We would like to present her to the national scene next year. This Harvard team will be a good test for her as well as our team. I am excited to see what we can do."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Annie Hamilton and the Massachusetts women's tennis team face a deep Harvard squad this weekend in Cambridge.

As Godsmack is scheduled to roll through the Mullins Center, the Collegian speaks with tour mates Cold.

ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 92 | www.dailycollegian.com | Friday, March 2, 2001

The men's hoop team looks to finish its regular season on a positive note tomorrow. Check out Sports for details.

SPORTS p. 8

ALANA students react to Scott's email

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

In the wake of protests and rallies, African, Latino, Asian, and Native-American (ALANA) students answered Chancellor David K. Scott's direct address to the University of Massachusetts.

In an email sent to the University Community, Chancellor Scott explained the University's guidelines in implementing policies for demonstrations. The email was sent after nearly 100 students stormed the Whitmore administration building Tuesday afternoon protesting the decline in the admission of ALANA students over the past six years.

"Every member of the University Community should be fully aware of these guidelines for implementing existing policies on the Amherst campus," Scott wrote. "And, of the consequences for violating them."

Representatives from the ALANA community were insistent that the email was unnecessary, because they did not feel that they did anything wrong. "We didn't violate the picketing code," said Glennice Bowen, a Senior Biology major, and President of the ALANA Society. "If we were in trouble, why didn't we get escorted out?"

Some of the protest's primary leaders had some skepticism about the email. Tom Taaffe, a University graduate student, said that he never received it, and would like to know why. "Neither the President of GEO nor I got that email," he said. "I think Scott is trying to read marshal law on this campus."

Taaffe said he thinks that the email was sent as a deterrent, to "squelch the protests." He also claimed that no students were present when the contract was revised in 1995. The Collegian was unable to confirm the veracity of this statement.

Regardless of the Administration's response, protestors of ALANA numbers have continued to stay vocal in an unvocal manner. Silent protests have been taking place in the UMass campus center daily. The protestors wear duct tape over their mouths, and dress in sandwich style signs with university admission numbers printed on them. "We need students to know that we're not going down without a fight," said Tenesha Horne, Junior Biology major.

The students had some concerns about the condition of Whitmore when they arrived on Tuesday afternoon. "When we went in, doors were locked and offices were shut down," Horne said.

In an interview with F. Javier Cevallos on Tuesday, he assured the Collegian that he was unaware of any offices being shut down prior to the rally.

Protestors have been fighting admission policies that they feel are slighted against allowing ALANA students into the university. Yanin Acosta, a Spanish speaking University Sophomore said, "Getting 1000 on my Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) is [expletive] because English isn't my first language." She also said "A lot of people were yelling at him Tuesday were ashamed he was Spanish."

In response to Cevallos' statement, "The worst thing we can do is shoot for 's number of ALANA students as a goal, and just have them fail," Acosta responded, "How does he know that bringing those students in means they're going to fail?"

Taaffe accused the University of deliberately forcing people out of higher education. "To use the failure of students when they came here before against us now is like punishing the poor for poverty," he said. "It's an utter shame."

Not only did some feel that this statement was an utter shame, but some accused it of being out and out racist. "They act like there are no smart ALANA students," Horne said. "You're called stupid from the day you start school whether it's direct racism or indirect."

The protestors also said they had a problem with the University's athletic recruiting policies. "You're willing to fly 1000 miles from across the country to get student athletes, but you can't take an honors student from Holyoke?" Bowen questioned.

The cost of the admissions is on the minds of the protestors as well. "They're going to make this school unaffordable for the ones who can only afford to come here," Bowen said. "I got into Tufts University and the University of Pennsylvania. I cam here because it was all I could afford."

The protestors said that they are waiting for a discussion with UMass President William Bulger, because a conversation with Cevallos was not good enough.

"Honestly, Javier was full of hot air," Horne said, and chuckled. "I don't see a lot of people who look like me. I wake up every day and see less and less people of color."

COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM JANET BARRY - COLLEGIAN

Students organized a silent protest against declining numbers of ALANA admissions over the past five years.

"They act like there are no smart ALANA honors students. You're called stupid from the day you start school, whether it's direct racism or indirect."
- Tenesha Horne, Junior Sociology major, ALANA representative

Hall of Fame administrator at UMass

By Erik Haan
Collegian Correspondent

In a proud moment for the University of Massachusetts, it was announced late last week that Vice Chancellor for Student Advancement Royster C. Hedgepeth has joined the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame as Vice President of Philanthropy.

Hedgepeth, who has held his position at the University since 1995, will be starting his work at the Hall of Fame in early April. He expressed a great deal of excitement about the opportunity in a news release last week.

"The Hall of Fame is in the midst of an extraordinary transformation," said Hedgepeth. "I am delighted to be part of their team and help position the hall as a destination for generations of basketball fans and as a public voice supporting the values of teamwork and healthy competition."

John L. Doleva, Hall of Fame Chief operating officer, explained the importance of the Hall's new campaign.

"Having successfully raised the capital necessary for construction of a new building and riverfront development, it is time for us to focus our fund-raising efforts on securing resources for the establishment of an endowment fund," said Doleva. "As a nonprofit organization, the Hall of Fame has long dreamed of establishing an endowment fund which would provide the resources necessary to not only secure our position as a premiere, multisensory destination, but just as importantly, establish a Foundation which has a local, national, and international presence."

According to Doleva, the relevance of the Hall's new initiative made Hedgepeth just the man for the job.

"To have someone with the skills and experience that Royster brings is incredibly significant for the Hall of Fame and indicative of our vision of where this Hall of Fame is headed."

While at the University, Hedgepeth left a lasting impression. He was the designer and implementer of UMass' first-ever major philanthropy campaign, which reached its conclusion this past February. During this period he was able to meet the goals he was brought in to achieve, much to the pleasure of Chancellor David K. Scott.

"During his tenure, Royster Hedgepeth charted a new course in philanthropy and volunteerism for the University," said Scott. "He was recruited to lead a campaign to raise $125 million in five years, enhance the image of the institution, and secure advocates. Those goals were met a year ahead of schedule."

Despite his departure, Hedgepeth's efforts for UMass will be felt for years to come.

"Royster has positioned the University and laid plans for future campaigns to ensure that the entire Commonwealth understands the importance of the Amherst campus not only to its economy but to the future of its citizenry," added Scott.

Hedgepeth expressed both his satisfaction with what he had a part in achieving at the University and his gratitude to those he worked with.

"As I look toward the future, I...want to say that it's been exciting and fulfilling to take part in the successful campaign at UMass," he said. "The campaign was truly a team effort that would not have been possible without the hard work and generosity of many faculty, staff, students, alumni, other volunteers, the legislature, donors, and many more."

Faculty Senate discusses ALANA

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate created an ad hoc committee to review the University of Massachusetts' admissions policies as well as recruitment of minority students yesterday.

The move comes in the wake of recent protests by the Student Coalition Against Racist and Classist Education (SCARCE), as well administrative efforts to present their own numbers regarding the African Latino Asian Native American (ALANA) population. SCARCE alleges that students from families with a yearly income less than $60,000 have declined 40 percent over the past 15 years. The group also says that enrollment of African American graduate students has declined 51 percent over the past 26 years. The group has made other claims regarding declining ALANA enrollment figures.

"A significant number of these figures are either wrong or misleading," Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos told the Faculty Senate. "We have to keep in mind that we are a state university and we are bounded by the demographics by our state."

"The actual percentage of ALANA students that graduate from high schools in Massachusetts and go to four year colleges is somewhere around 14 percent," Cevallos added. "So if we have maintained 16 percent we are doing better than the graduation rate of ALANA students in the Commonwealth. It doesn't mean that we can't be doing better and we are working very hard to bring more students of color to the University."

This particular Faculty Senate ad hoc committee, like any other ad hoc committee must meet certain guidelines to be brought to the Senate floor. The guidelines include membership and composition, task and a deadline for any results. The ad hoc committee on admissions practices and minority recruitment will be comprised of administrators, faculty members, undergraduate and graduate students, and must deliver a final report no later than December 1, 2001.

"The Faculty Senate realizes the significant steps which have been taken to bring campus admissions practices into conformity with legal requirements and with University policy," the Committee's preamble reads. "The particular purpose of this Ad Hoc Committee on Admissions Practices and Minority Recruitment is to attend to appropriate strategies for promoting campus diversity, primarily through yield enhancement."

The motion received wide spread support from floor, as Senators and administrators rose to speak in favor of the committee.

"I would like to endorse the motion forming an ad hoc committee," said Vice Chancellor Cevallos. "I think it is a very good idea for us. I think the Faculty Senate should have a Standing Committee at some point in the future that would keep an eye on admissions over all."

Standing committees are continually filled by the Faculty Senate and do not expire after a dead line.

However, when the subject of retention was brought up, there was some issue over whether or not the number of students that remain at the University should be included in the motion.

Turn to Facsenate, page 3

Women's Studies spotlight:

Reproductive rights in Puerto Rico

By Tanya Mannes
Collegian Staff

Dr. Laura Briggs, an Assistant Professor of Women's Studies at the University of Arizona, talked about the controversial development of birth control in Puerto Rico last night, in a lecture on the University of Massachusetts campus entitled "The Gender of Development: Reproductive Politics and the Birth of Development Policy in Puerto Rico."

Briggs harkened back to President Truman's decision to raise foreign aid as a method to discourage countries from turning to communism, which became a catalyst for U.S. involvement in so-called Third World countries, including Puerto Rico.

She decried United States development policies for their reliance on an ideology of sexuality in what has been termed "The Puerto Rico Experiment," in other words, a proving ground for imperialism. She linked the much-attested theory of overpopulation with a pattern of the U.S. blaming native women for many of Puerto Rico's problems – many of which were actually linked with U.S.-instigated industrialization.

"[The ideology was that] It's not 500 years of colonialism causing poverty but rather families," she said with a wry smile. "Puerto Rico's problems were caused by women's unruly fertility."

The professed desire to help Puerto Rico was an excuse for the U.S. to impose two intertwined forms of development: industrialization, and contraception. Not only federal policymakers, but also American academics, missionaries, and evangelists embraced contraception as a solution to the perceived "people problem," she said.

Briggs drew attention to the fact that the Pill was distributed in the U.S. a relatively long time after researchers in the 1920s and 30s learned that estrogen and progesterone could suppress ovulation. She postulated that for complex reasons, Puerto Rican women were the intended targets of the Pill at its earliest inception, and final impetus for its development.

The reasons were linked to eugenics, specifically the classification of Puerto Ricans as non-white, and thus black, she said, citing this as the racist reality behind a steadfast refusal by the U.S. to grant the island its independence.

Because researchers could point to overpopulation as a grave danger, and because of subtle racism, they allowed themselves gross breaches of ethical conduct in the way they carried out studies on the Pill in Puerto Rico, including not informing test participants of the potential risks.

Briggs used finger 'quote marks' to indicate her skepticism of the assumptions of United States imperialism, such as that women benefit from being freed from their "oppressive" relationship to a culture, that science and medicine invariably provide health improvements, and that such improvements lead to decreased poverty.

"Today, free trade labor for women is often conditional on the suspension of their fertility," she said with an ironic tone, making a direct link between contraception and industrialization.

UMass Assistant Professor of Sociology, Latin American, Caribbean, and Latino Studies Agustin Lao-Montes attended the event.

"The way you discussed the colonial lab for sterilization was a welcome re-taking of this from the standpoint of post-colonial theory," he said to Briggs. "The cult of poverty and those two moments of development [industrial and contraceptive] are not usually linked."

COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM TABORA GIRLEY - ALUMNI COLLEGIAN

Dr. Laura Briggs, an Assistant Professor of Women's Studies at the University of Arizona, talked about the controversial development of birth control in Puerto Rico last night.

TIBORA GIRCZYC-BLUM / COLLEGIAN

A bit of Alaska

MASSPIRG demonstrates their views on oil drilling in Alaska.

Acquaintance rape reported in Central

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Both an acquaintance rape and an accident that caused personal injury to an UMass student kept the University of Massachusetts Police Department busy this weekend.

An acquaintance rape took place on the 20th, and was later reported on Friday the 23rd. According to Jim Lyons, the spokesman for the UMPD, the incident took place in a dormitory in the Central living area. No further information was available at press time.

"The case is still under investigation," Lyons said.

Christopher Higgins, 18, of Townsend was taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital on Saturday after his vehicle struck a tree on Fearing Street. He was later treated and released from the hospital.

"Officers noted that he had blood on his forehead," Lyons said. "He was taken to the hospital in case of a head injury."

Nineteen-year-old Robert Perkins of Wilmington was pulled over on Sunday for speeding in violation of the posted limit while driving on Governors Dr. and Commonwealth Ave. He was issued a field sobriety test and was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol.

Also on Sunday, 22-year-old Michael Cirullo of Huntington Park, California was arrested for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

"An officer was monitoring traffic with a radar around 4 am and noticed a car traveling at a high rate of speed," Lyons said. "He followed the vehicle as it ran through a stop sign. The driver was also operating a motor vehicle on a license that had been suspended."

A large plate glass window was smashed in the basement of Patterson Dormitory on Sunday morning at approximately 1:30 am. The item was 4 by 8 in size and the individual involved with the vandalism will be taken to court regarding the incident.

"No one was arrested for the crime but someone was identified as being involved in it," Lyons said.

A fight was reported by Student Security to be in progress in John Quincy Adams Dormitory on Saturday morning. The individuals had dispersed when officers arrived however police are trying to locate people on the scene for further questioning in the matter.

Officers spoke to a student near Cashin Dormitory on early Sunday morning for creating a hazard near the building. The individual was burning his baseball cap in close proximity to the residence hall.

A student reported his UCard as missing from Moore Dormitory. The UCard office informed him that there had been charges made to the account that totaled $51.75 missing dollars. There are no suspects in the case.

Officers were called into the Campus Center Hotel to deal with a group of loud individuals in a room on Sunday. Security personnel within the Campus Center already spoke to the people before the police were called.

Police were dispatched to the Recycling Facility after receiving a complaint of a sick coyote near the compost bin on Monday the 26th. Police destroyed the animal.

Police called for accidents, annoying behavior, vandalism and noise

Accidents
Feb. 23

A vehicle backed into another vehicle in lot 64

There was a minor two-vehicle accident on North Village Drive.

There was a two-vehicle accident in lot 22, an ambulance was dispatched but did not transport anyone.

An unknown vehicle backed into a parked vehicle in lot 64

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 23

There was a report of annoying behavior from Bartlett Hall.
Feb. 26

Graffiti was found on bathroom doors in Johnson Dormitory.

Bottles were thrown from Baker Dormitory.

Disturbance
Feb. 24

There was a fight reported to be in progress in John Quincy Adams Dormitory.
Feb. 26

A fight was reported between two individuals in Morrill Science Center. No charges will be sought.

There was a verbal argument that was resolved in Kennedy Dormitory.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 25

An individual was causing problems by blowing the horn in his vehicle repeatedly on Fearing Street.
Feb. 25

Loud individuals in the hotel were issued a warning.

There were loud individuals on the 5th floor of the Campus Center Hotel. A warning was issued to one room and individuals were evicted from another room.
Feb. 26

A loud band was shut down in the basement of Baker Dormitory.

Vandalism
Feb. 23

An individual was reported as throwing eggs at a vehicle
Feb. 24

There was damage to a vehicle in Lot 32.
Feb. 25

A large plate glass window was smashed in Patterson Dormitory.
Feb. 26

There was damage done to a vehicle in Lot 11.

A BB pellet, causing a small hole, hit a window in Prince Dormitory.

- Compiled By Melissa Hammel

Read Collegian News

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilnitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garguma Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

General Electric

PriceWaterhouse Coopers

NHL Corporation

MBNA Financial

Q: What do these companies have in common?

A: Former Collegian Finance Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ASSISTANT FINANCE MANAGER.

CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.

APPLICANTS SHOULD CURRENTLY BE A SOPHOMORE.

WANTED

Sales experience helpful, but not necessary

Collegian is taking applications for:

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major that can work for this semester

If you are guilty of any of these traits. Contact Eric or Kate at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement

APPLICATION DEADLINE March 14th

"Get Involved"

Nominations for President, Trustee and Area Government open Thursday 3/01/01
They close 3/15/01 at 5:00pm

Elections will be 3/28/01 and 3/29/01

You can pick up nomination forms in the SGA office, room 420 of the Student Union

If you have any questions call the SGA office at 545-2515

Campus Perspectives

Compiled By Katy LoConte
Photos by Tibora Girczyc-Blum

If the campus were privatized, what restaurant or store would you put in the Campus Center?

Ashley Koed
Communications
Freshman
California Pizza Kitchen

Andrea Dickey
Communications and Political Science
Freshman
Dunkin Donuts

Jeff Pettyjohn
Business Management
Sophomore
Taco Bell

Matt Seifert
Biology
Senior
Bucho y Sano

Erich Druskat
Biology major
Junior
Antonios Pizza

John Terrill
School of Management
Freshman
"I guess like a McDonald's. Maybe a Pizza Hut or Papa Gino's."

■ Facsenate

continued from page 1

Ad Hoc ALANA Committee formed, mandatory OIT fees debated in meeting

A motion by Senator Christine King to add the word 'retention' to the charge of the committee and to the motion was met with debate.

"I'd like to speak in support of the motion," King said. "Is there an interest in the Senate at looking at issues of retention? Certainly, we won't want to limit only to admissions practices and recruitment but also one of the issues I'm concerned about is ALANA student retention."

Debate followed, in which several points of view was raised for and against the addition of retention to the committee's charge.

"The key term here for me is 'yield enhancement'," said Senator Brian O'Connor. "I think 'yield enhancement' pertains to every student regardless of their ethnic background."

Senator Mary Wickwire raised the point that changing the wording of the charge would limit it to strictly minority students. The point was not lost on the assembled professors and administrators.

"We do not have a minority admissions," said Cevallos. "We have just an admissions office."

Debate was cut short however, after a motion was made to remit the charge back to the Rules Committee, which created it.

"I don't think this has been thought out well," said Senator Marios Philippides. "I'd like to make a motion to refer it back to committee."

"A motion to refer to committee takes precedence over any other motion," said Presiding Officer Frank Hugus. Hugus called the vote and the motion to refer failed.

The amendment to include retention in the charge also failed.

After this debate, the main motion of creating the ad hoc committee was called to the floor by Senator Jack Tager.

The motion passed.

A Special Report from the University Computer and Electronic Communications Committee was submitted to Senate for endorsement. The Report recommended that "every member of the University community should have access to Office of Information Technologies services without the payment of an 'optional fee'."

"The rapid growth of technology and pressures for its use in education necessitate a basic minimum authentication of and connectivity among all members of the University community," states the report of the committee, headed by Senator Joseph Kunkel.

The motion passed.

Faculty Senate members will be traveling to Boston to meet with legislators at the State House in the coming weeks to advocate for the campus. The Faculty Senate will meet again on March 15 at 3:30 p.m. in room 227 of Herter Hall.

MOLSON
CollegeFest
ONLY $259!
Springbreak
5 Days & Nights
SKI A TRAVEL
WWW.SKITRAVEL.COM

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
The Mighty Ross Tones
Every Sunday Night
No Cover
Positive ID Required
37 North
Pleasant St.

springbreakparty2001.com
Message Board-Picture Post
Streaming Video- Online Contest

STEM TEC
SCHOLARSHIPS for Future Teachers!
NSF
want to find out about careers in K-12 teaching? Want a scholarship to help with your educational expenses while you learn? Pick up an application for an NSF-STEM TEC Teaching Scholar Award!
Also, learn about the STEM TEC/Five College Science and Math Pre-Education Program that can help jump-start your career!
Monday, March 5, 12:20 p.m., 1033 LGRT
light refreshments
Applications due March 28, 2001
Part-time and post-baccalaureate students are eligible
Questions? Can't make it? Give us a call at 545-0734, stop by 217 Hasbrouck Lab, drop us an e-mail at st-ss9k12s.phast.umass.edu, or check out the STEM TEC website for more information and/or to download an application: http://www.k12s.phast.umass.edu/~stemtec/stss/scholers/scholars.html

Geometric Tank...
$28
ZANNA
downtown Amherst
www.zanna.com

Our returning staff know what a WILD experience camp can be!
Come check us out this summer work at CAMP!
Crossroads for Kids
Crossroads for Kids runs 3 great camps which serve AT-RISK YOUTH. These kids need people like you to care about their lives!
Opportunities are available for:
Cabin Counselors, Waterfront Staff, Program Specialists, Food Service Personnel, Nurses, Maintenance Staff, Housekeeping, and Office Managers
We will be at U-Mass Amherst Wednesday, March 14th
If this sounds like the type of summer you'd love, please call us so we can schedule an on-campus interview!

Budwiser Ski Night
at McMurphy's
Friday, March 2nd
9:30 - 11:30
1st 72 people receive a free numbered Budwiser mug.
GRAND PRIZE:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Heads up, UMass;
the home stretch is upon you

Days are beginning to get longer and the mountains of snow that fell just a few weeks ago have melted away, reduced to mere puddles. Roughly three months remain in this semester, with time taken out for Spring Break and, of course, finals. In between classes and work, however, there is time and opportunity aplenty to divert your attention from the studies at hand. We suggest you go out and find a way to enjoy every moment.

-Go and support the spring athletes. Take a free afternoon and head down to Earl Lorden field, behind the Mullins Center, and take in a UMass baseball game. Stroll over to the Softball complex to watch the women play. Men's and women's lacrosse, as well. These are the athletics that work every bit as hard as the high profile squads, and are a genuine pleasure to watch. As much a part of this school as anything else, the athletic program at UMass deserves your support. There are few better ways on campus to spend an afternoon.

-Take advantage of the surrounding towns. Get yourself out of your room and off of this campus. Let the PVTA pass and take a walk into downtown Center, or take the time to go to Northampton. Spend an afternoon searching for used books and music, or let it pass with a coffee in hand at Rao's. Look for the live music scene to warm up alongside the weather; any number of great bands are preparing to roll out their Spring tours, and likely have the Valley marked down as one of their stops. Support your local musicians as well; the area is rich with locally produced talent, and will flood area performance spaces as the warmer weather rolls in.

-Very simply, spend as much time outside as possible. Nearly every living area will have something planned soon enough, and if that's not your bag, do your own thing. Frisbee, Barbecue. Guitar in the quad. Djibouti. Whatever it is, bring some friends and simply enjoy. After all, when it comes time to stop calling UMass home, there will be precious little time for any of that.

-Above all, go to class. Warm weather and clear skies may be a convenient excuse for missing class, but you're only hurting yourself in the end. Do the work now, rather than struggling to make up the credits over the long days of summer. The effort is well worth your time.

There's no one piece of advice that can satisfy an entire campus, which makes Spring in the Valley a beautiful thing. Take the time to seek out what you know, and also what you've only heard about. With countless interests and people out there, there is guaranteed to be a wealth of new experiences to choose from this spring.

We at the Collegian hope you have a good one.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Voice your opinion.

Write for Ed/Op.

On a serious note

KATIE LANDERS

In this school year, as I've written my editorials, I've had people ask me why I don't write about serious things. This is true, because if you look back at all my articles, each of them are light-hearted and don't really have a point. I generally reflect upon the silliness of my life and what goes on around me. There are a few reasons why I don't choose to use this space as a soap box, the first one being that I can't stand it when people are angry or upset with me. Anyone who knows me knows that I get all nervous and discombobulated when people are mad at me. I just like to keep the peace. I don't hate anyone and I certainly don't want anyone to hate me. Second, some of my views could really make people mad. I take sides to situations, and I don't generally voice my side so when I do everyone is a little surprised. I would never purposely hurt someone's feelings or say anything hateful, but my thoughts just might step on some people's toes. And third, there's enough seriousness in the paper that I figure my one column every other week on Friday can be a little more relaxed.

However, this afternoon, as I just picked up my copy of the Collegian and saw my article on turning 20, I've become a little bored with myself. If I'm bored with me, I imagine you are bored with me as well. So for one editorial, I'll be serious. I'll tell you everything I believe in (I'll at least try) and show you my stance on some current issues. After this one I promise that I'll write my normal senseless Friday article, but this week I want to show people what I think. You might be a little surprised at what ticks in my head.

I think life should be about equality. For so many years everyone in this country has fought for rights and the opportunity to have the same standings as the person next to them.

I'm a firm believer on a woman's right to choose. In fact, the greatest commercial on television right now is the one that shows all different women, of all different ages and races voicing how they are their own person. Every woman is her own person. I don't think anyone should be able to decide what she can and cannot do to her body. Especially a man. Although he can create life, he will never understand the emotional and physical turmoil a woman can face in her lifetime. I'm not saying that pro-life is wrong. I'm just saying that every woman should have her own right to choose what to do with her body.

I'm also a firm believer that George W. Bush is an absolute idiot. In fact, we might as well have stuck Michael Dukakis in office. The only difference is that W's father aired commercials showing what an idiot Dukakis was after he let a prisoner go on a weekend melee. Al Gore should have aired commercials showing deaths that drunk drivers cause and the damaged brains cells that snorting cocaine inflicts. Has anyone ever stopped to think that maybe he sounds so dumb because his brain is absolutely fried?

I don't believe in affirmative action. I don't believe in quotas. I saved this one for the middle because it's going to make a lot of people mad. I have strong reasoning why I don't believe in them. I think life should be about equality. For so many years everyone in this country has fought for rights and the opportunity to have the same standings as the person next to them. I think the only purpose affirmative action serves is to fill quotas. For example, I think admission to colleges should be decided by a white-out committee. I know that some people don't believe they actually exist, but I think given the change they might just work. When people apply to school it should be based on their essay and activities, their grades and maybe how they did on required tests. On top should be a number that signifies who's application it is. There shouldn't be a name, an address, parents' names or what they do. Ethnicity should not be on the application, even though there is a disclaimer stating that it's for research purposes only. I strongly believe in equality, jobs, entrances to colleges, scholarships, etc. should be given to those who best qualify for the job, not for how many quotas another person can fill.

In athletics, I don't think that girls should play on a boys team. Now, this may seem to contradict my arguments on equality and a woman's right to choose, but hear me out. I think if women or girls play a sport such as football or hockey that's great. I just think that it should be on a women or girl's team. Same for a guy, he shouldn't play on a girl's team. If there isn't one, then start one. Genetically, females were made different from males. One reason is the unfair advantage that can be gained. In high school there was a boy that played field hockey on a team that my team played against. For years he had been a soccer player but his senior year he decided he wanted to make a statement by joining the girls field hockey team. He dominated the whole game whenever we played. The team used him for the whole field, which made the girls on the team miss out on opportunities that being on a girls team can have. Also, I think that by participating on a boy's team, girls are putting themselves up to being hurt. I understand that girls can get hurt playing on girl teams. I played field hockey. I got hurt plenty of times. I just think that the risk of injury can be lowered by playing with people of your own stature. Again, I know that guys are all different sizes and girls are all different sizes, and on athletic teams there are athletes of all different sizes. Think about it though, why complicate situations by having a 220 pound guy tackle a girl who weights a buck thirty. The best solution to this: for every men's sports team there should be a women's sports team. No switching sides.

My last complaint is parking services. My idea is that if you pay for a parking permit, you should be able to park wherever you want, first come first serve. If there's space in the front purple, then park in it. If there isn't, park in the back yellow. I have to park in Hadley in the yellow lot even though there's a hundred spaces open in purple, because the tow hungry people will take my car away. I walk through purple and it's not even close to filled. Not this semester anyway. Everyone who has a car paid their $40 so we should park where we can get the spot.

Now that you've read through my pearls of wisdom I'm sure you're ready to move on with your weekend. So enjoy yourself and consider what I've said. Cross your fingers that something funny happens to me in the coming week.

And don't be mad at me.

Katie Landers is a Collegian Columnist.

Defense of the ALANA seats

It seems it is not enough to claim our numbers our dwindling. We in the ALANA community warned this University of what was going to occur with the dismantlement of affirmative action. Not only were students of color who were struggling for good grades booted out, but other students of color (regardless of their academic achievements) would go with them after feeling the unwelcoming new atmosphere at UMass for people of color. And it occurred, as we predicted. African-Americans have gone down 45 percent and Latinos 41 percent, not to mention other ethnic and racial groups as well. Can any student of color honestly say he/she feels welcome here? It is such a simple question, yet its answer has and will continue to decide the destiny of students of color on this campus.

Although many issues have arisen that all have a cumulative effect on whether social and racial justice is achieved at this University, I will focus on one pressing one: the familiar ALANA seats in the Senate and the upcoming referendum asking for their removal. Throughout the years, the ALANA community has had to defend itself from the constant harassment from the conservative minded students. Although not limited to them, it has been primarily the Republican Club that has organized propaganda work, motions in the Senate, and other actions to support the dismantlement of these seats. I will attempt to examine their views, refute them with evidence, and express my point of view.

The Republican Club's claims are many, although the center point of their argument is this: appointed seats, of any kind, are an "affront" to democracy. The ALANA seats constitute 13 percent of the seats in the Senate. If one year there are 100 seats filled with elected senators, ALANA students are assured an extra (not taking away from the original 100) 13 percent of those seats (13 appointed seats). A total of 113 seats. Contrary to the propaganda work of the Republican Club, the appointed seats DO NOT take the seats from other students. It is an addition, and a very important one. While on the democratic question, I'd like to point out that the Republican Club bases its model of democracy on the U.S. national model. Not only is the U.S. model one in many different types of democracies, it is also one of the most deficient, uncooperative, and unrepresentative systems that exist. The U.S. model, based on a winner-take-all principle, is not truly representative of the actual society. This is because the U.S. model is not a model of proportional representation (a model used in other Western democracies, such as France, and even ironically, to a lesser extent, in its own colony, Puerto Rico). How does it work, you ask? Simple. Under a system of proportional representation, the percentage of votes a party gets is the percentage of seats a party gets in the legislature. In Puerto Rico, the model is a mixture of both electoral and appointment procedures. Each party on the island is assured at least one representative and one senator in the legislature through appointments if their district population numbers do not render an elected candidate. Members of the party (in this case, the Independence Party) vote in their own elections to choose a senator and representative. These appointments occur within the framework of general electoral democracy (in that the rest of the officials are elected) and have occurred for about 50 years under U.S. acceptance.

RENE GONZALES BERRIOS

Two things, then, must be brought to the spotlight. One, the Republican Club's vision of democracy in our SGA, modeled after the U.S. national model, is deficient, narrow-minded and unrepresentative. Two, their uncompromising defense of this model, while countered by other Western democracies, is made more idiotic by the fact that the U.S.'s own colony of Puerto Rico actually practices what they despise as undemocratic (a rare case of the colony being more advanced democratically than the metropolis!) And with the permission of the U.S. Congress! Their argument, based on the idea that appointments are an "affront" to democracy, is completely destroyed by the U.S. Congress (their heavenly pillar of democracy) sanctioning what they consider the "undemocratic". If Puerto Rico, a colony of the U.S., subject to U.S. laws and politics, can practice appointments and a limited model of proportional representation, why can't we in our small University Senate do the same? Their argument does not hold water.

What does this mean for our own SGA Senate? We must first answer a fundamental question and then proceed. Is the purpose of the Senate to A) model the U.S. Congress as closely as possible or B) to provide the utmost representation for all the diverse groups on campus for the ultimate purpose of uniting and building a more understanding community on campus? The answer to this question will decide which measures seem acceptable to us regarding the Senate composition. Obviously, the second answer more closely resembles the Senate's duties, and this raises another profound idea. If these are the Senate's duties, then the most important thing is to safeguard those Senate ideals by any means necessary. If we were more concerned with upholding the ideals of unity and representation in the Senate (and not with petty electoral policy intellectual masturbation), it would not matter how we composed the Senate, just as long as the Senate was unified and representative.

My final point. Whereas Democracy comes in many forms, some superior to our own U.S national model, appointments designed to remedy representation issues grounded on historical and current discrimination and population number deficiencies are completely constitutional within the U.S. political panorama (Puerto Rico) and in other Western democracies. The ALANA population has dwindled considerably, putting in question the representation the ALANA community would garner in strictly electoral forms, I propose that we as students take a bold step. Vote to keep the ALANA appointed seats in the Senate because, a.) Appointed seats ARE constitutional, viable, and necessary in democracies, b.) These seats would assure the ALANA community representation and the Senate the unity this campus so strongly deserves and needs, and c.) On a purely personal and individual level, doesn't it feel good to break free of the propaganda of the Republican Club once in a while? May the Senate be united again, and the ALANA community a part of this campus again.

Rene Gonzales Berrios is a UMass student.

UMass needs you

Nauseous: that's what the campus community is concerning the word "elections". This week the Miami Herald announced that their recount declared Bush the clearly still be the winner of the Presidential race. Bush announced his tax cut plan proving to us that he was listening when mommy read him those bedtime stories because, like Goldilocks, he found the last one "just right". And the Bush, who can barely speak English, wowed the United States by speaking Spanish! If the robot could do it, so could he.

Only 6.4 percent of the campus community voted in the recent senate elections, a number barely large enough to ratify the elections. This is a clear indication of the lack of faith students have in the student government and in the power of their single vote. A few items were decided in that election, including having a McDonald's and a Burger King in the Campus Center, and having a bar on campus. Can somebody, an engineer or an architect, tell me where a McDonald's and a Burger King are going to fit in the Campus Center?

Apparently there is a distinction between food and books, since we'll all whine and groan as Follett takes over our bookstore but we'll gladly line up to grab that McChicken, at the risk of squeezing out student businesses such as People's Market. If a bar suddenly springs up in the Bluewall, guess how much of our money will be wasted? Now we'll need more Campus Center security, as well as the UMPD patrolling the Campus Center for violent drunks in the middle of the school day. We can't have them harassing the tours and scaring away prospective students and their parents.

JAMIE LOO

The ALANA community on campus is supposedly up in arms, but they're not all fighting for the same thing. The press has decided that the acronym "ALANA" is one political issue, when in reality ALANA is a racial identity. There are four major factions of the ALANA movement at this time, the ALANA Caucus, the Office of ALANA Affairs, Student Coalition Against Racist and Classist Education (SCARCE), and the rest of the ALANA students. The Office of ALANA Affairs is concerned with all facets of the issues and is most concerned about educating the campus community. The ALANA Caucus is the representative voice of ALANA students within the Student Government Association. Within a few weeks, active campaigning on the behalf of the ALANA Caucus will begin, to ensure that diversity issues will remain a priority in the student senate. Last Spring the SGA decided that having an ALANA Caucus was unconstitutional and passed a motion to eliminate the ALANA Caucus. It was taken up in Student Judiciary, which ruled that the seats were constitutional and that It was up to the campus to decide in a campus-wide vote. That vote will happen along with the Student Trustee and Presidential Election at the end of March. If the vote passes to eliminate the ALANA Caucus, then they will slowly be phased out until 2002; if it passes to keep them, all the better for the ALANA community.

Then there's the rest of the ALANA community, which is probably somewhat confused about what all the fighting is about since they can only be fed by the interpretations of the student press or are completely apathetic. This apathy is rampant in ALANA students who live in places such as Northeast, where some Asian students have chosen to segregate themselves into the Dwight dormitory. This part of the ALANA community – the confused and apathetic – won't feel the real effects of this issue until their student organization takes a huge cut in their budget, which forces them to cancel cultural nights and other activities. Sorry students, because you neglected to vote in the elections your primary representatives, the ALANA Caucus, were taken out and now you have very few people left to fight for your rights. Why don't you go grab an order of McNuggets and watch reruns of cultural nights on UVC-19? Then you can sit around and talk about how "back in the day" there was actually a group of ALANA senators who understood how much your organization needed the money or actually cared when you said you were pulled over because of your skin color.

SCARCE is the militant activist organization that put up the graveyard on the Student Union lawn and has been protesting every week on the Student Union steps. SCARCE is under the impression that getting as much press attention as possible is the way to get students engaged and concerned in the ALANA enrollment. What I think many people are seeing is a group of angry, whiny minorities and students looking for a reason to protest.

Speaking of students looking for a reason to protest, what happened to protesting the budget cuts? The budget cuts are still happening everywhere on campus as administration hacks away the Consumer Studies degree and expects about 300 layoffs for next fall. Apparently the cool thing to do this semester is to protest for ALANA issues. Protesting the budget cuts was just so...last spring. The leaders and protestors are familiar faces in Whitmore and to many students, who are sick of hearing their platforms and sick of seeing their faces on the front page of the Collegian. Many of them are seniors looking to have another Goodell takeover, to leave some sort of legacy on this campus. SCARCE is armed with statistics from the late '90s but left out a very important recent one. The class of 2003 has one of the smallest percentages of ALANA students, with a slight increase for the class of 2004. SCARCE could have started protesting a long time ago. I don't see anything wrong with student activism, since in the history of UMass and this country, student activists have been able to initiate effective change. But protests every week? If there aren't new faces in these protests then something is going wrong.

ALANA students are in danger of being categorized as just an enrollment issue and a reason for protest. They are in danger of being manipulated to believe that ALANA students can be fairly represented in the senate without people of color as senators and are in danger of believing their vote really doesn't count. They are also in danger of the greater campus community labeling the issues as only for ALANA people to deal with, that it isn't a "white issue." Diversity is everyone's issue and anyone that opposes it on this campus doesn't belong here; a part of the mission statement of UMass includes promoting diversity. It is the responsibility of everyone on this campus to vote in elections to make effective change. Many of us may not have the initiative to run for office, openly protest in Whitmore, or write an angry letter to my editorial but a few minutes to vote can have a huge impact. We will never forget the impact votes made in the last national presidential election and how minorities were mistreated in the democratic process. On this campus your potential vote matters a lot right now to the presidential and trustee candidates as well as the ALANA Caucus, who are fighting for future self-preservation. With or without you someone will be elected and something will happen to the representation of ALANA students. The question is, will that someone and will that something be the best for UMass? That is up to you. Your vote does count.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

MONKEY-BOX BY PBJ

© 2001 www.monkey-box.net

THERE WAS NO DENYING THAT A DOG HAD JUST PARACHUTED INTO MY YARD, BUT IT SEEMED FRIENDLY ENOUGH TO KEEP.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Inside: An interview with Cold's Kelly Hayes, and heads up for some upcoming events in the area.

Arts Editor •
David Goupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com

Joplin Group creates beautiful, lasting music

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

JOSH JOPLIN GROUP
Useful Music
Artemis Records

Josh Joplin, a frequenter of coffee houses, bars and clubs across America, decided to settle down and play his guitar in a record studio one day. By the time he left that studio, he had recorded a remarkably impressive piece of musical brilliance.

Useful Music completely outshines every expectation for a debut album produced for any genre of today's music in a massively awe-inspiring way. Josh Joplin's band accompanies the empowering singer with such wealth. A variety of pianos, trumpets, organs, accordions, drums and just about every guitar imaginable blend together to construct incredulous harmony. When each note of every instrument is taken away from the song and examined on its own, it is beautiful fabrication by itself.

JOSH JOPLIN GROUP
DEEP US, MUSIC

The lyrics are intimate and tear-wrenchingly depressing. Miraculous terminology inspires so much more than just simple sentiment. Joplin's background in poetry is uncertain, but what is assured is that he is a brilliant writer. His words capture the passion of everything he is so clearly feeling. Not only does he exemplify passion. He creates it. He forces the listener to be cheerful or miserable with him. "I used to dream that I had a cape and I could fly/ I'd rescue my friends from burning buildings/ and no one would ever die," Joplin sings. "But costumes fade fast and super powers pass."

Joplin uses similes like he bought a potato sack full of words on sale. "I've seen the death of rock-n-roll and I am living proof," he croons on "Phil Ochs."

Joplin is a storyteller. On "Camera One," the album's first radio single, he tells the tale of three California suicides. Unlike angry pop-trash like Papa Roach, Joplin doesn't organize an army of self-hate and odium of everyone around him. He paints pictures of people we ultimately care about from a third person perspective.

Though most of the record is mellow, it deviates from its calmness on "Superstar." The track encompasses all forms of the rest of the album's musical excellence and lyrical intellect, but it is much faster, and Joplin turns into a borderline rapper. The song also includes back up vocals from established pop and folk singer Shawn Mullins. Mullins produced all of the songs on Useful Music.

Slight criticism arises in the tone of Joplin's voice. He sounds a lot like REM's lead singer Michael Stipe. The rest of the band, however, sounds nothing like REM. As a whole, the band resembles current light rock acts such as Blessed Union of Souls and Sister Hazel.

If you do not go out and buy this album, or download it from Napster, or whatever you have to do to hear Josh Joplin's magnificent combinations of sound, feeling and life, you are not only missing out; you are cheating yourself from indulging gratification that you truly deserve no matter what mood you've been in.

On "I've Changed," Joplin proclaims, "I wanted perfection from every song I've ever sung/ But that was wrong." Joplin can be as humble as he wants, but he really shouldn't be. Perfection is not too far away.

COURTESY OF ROADRUNNER RECORDS

Dreaming in Digital

Spineshank, shown here, play with Orgy and Tinfed Saturday night at the Worcester Palladium on a bill that mixes rock and electronic music. Spineshank will be promoting their most recent CD The Height of Callousness.

COURTESY OF NEW WORLD THEATER

Local Poetry

New World Theater presents Staceyann Chin as part of its Poetry In Performance series. She will be performing at the W.E.B. DuBois library on March 5 at 6:30 p.m.

COURTESY OF MYE SA SANTOS-KATSIA

Cold, pictured here, and Systematic will back up Godsmack and Staind this Sunday at the Mullins Center.

Cold guitarist confesses to Collegian

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

One of the most negative bands today, Jacksonville's Cold, comes to the Mullins Center on Sunday in support of Godsmack, Staind, and their album 13 Ways to Bleed On Stage.

"We're really good friends with Staind," said Cold guitarist Kelly Hayes in a phone interview. "All the bands [on the tour] really like each other... it's going great."

Indeed, the Cold/Staind connection goes far back, and Staind vocalist Aaron Lewis even appeared as a guest vocalist on two tracks from 13 Ways. Kelly dropped some hints that there might be an onstage appearance as well.

After this tour, Cold isn't stopping. They feel that 13 Ways has enough legs under it to release three more singles ("Confession," "Bleed," and "End of the World") in addition to the two already released: "Just Got Wicked" and current radio song "No One."

"I think those are the most radio-friendly songs," said Hayes. "I think the music [on the radio] is starting to change; rap-metal is starting to disappear. Music goes in cycles, you know, and right now people are into nu metal, but good rock 'n roll."

Cold has thirty minutes to open the show... look for "Go Away" from their self-titled debut and the rest to feature material from 13 Ways To Bleed On Stage.

Headlining the show are Massachusetts hard-rockers Godsmack, touring behind their sophomore release Awake. Their successful consecutive runs on the Ozzfest tour and with Limp Bizkit have lead to these headlining shows in arenas in their home state.

Staind, from Springfield, are the other major act on the bill. They are still touring on their debut Dysfunction and the unlikely acoustic hit single "Outside."

Tha Block is Still Hot: Wayne's latest sufficiently 'bout it

By Kurt Polesky
Collegian Staff

LIL' WAYNE
Lights Out
Cash Money Records

The epitome of "bling" rap – Cash Money Records – may be the most hook-happy, crystal poppin', club hoppin', and cheddar loving of the all the current rap labels. Heck, they even had a hit song called "Bling Bling" by label resident B.G. For better or worse, the Cash Money crew lead by producer extroldinaire Manny Fresh has made bling the thing in the rap game. As the youngest member of the Cash Money camp, "Hot Boy" Lil' Wayne added himself to the label's wall of platinum with his debut album Tha Block Is Hot in 1999. Wayne's latest, Lights Out, is at the same time both a small step forward and more of the same for the young rapper.

Lights Out paints a vivid picture of Wayne's urban fantasy, which includes the obvious Bentleys, hos, and crystal. There are a few moments when Wayne drops his guard, namely in the track "Grown Up," where the young Wayne spouts, "Oh man, it's complicated doing everything on your own man," as he struggles with his fame and newfound adulthood. Another is on "Everything," a track dedicated to Wayne's father. The album hits in this sense as it strays slightly from the usual simplistic Cash Money formula. Still there isn't all that much insight on the man behind the ice. No new ground is broken in the area of lyrical expressionism, as Wayne seems content rapping about the usual and the obvious. About his only issue seems to be his malcontent with the lack of respect he receives due to his age (he's just 17, or so his label says) "Age ain't nothing but some digits" as Wayne puts it.

Although lacking the "pork chop flow" of labelmate juvenile and other dirty south rapper Wayne's lyrical flow is acceptable. His style is both restrained, as he avoids spitting rhymes at propulsive pace (with the notable exception of "Fuck Wit Me"), and unique, with his youthful voice. The album's real strength, however, lies in its precise production.

Manny Fresh – the producer behind all of Cash Money's beats – is the true star of Lights Out. Fresh has always been known for his ability to produce original sounding hooks with danceable Dirty South edge. Comparisons with the likes of Dre, Swizz Beats, and Timbaland one of hip-hop's elite producers are not unwarranted. "Get Off The Corner," the albums first single, is the perfect example of how the perfect simple can make a track with little lyrical substance still sound good. The infectious hook is an accurate invitation for what the rest of the album has in store. Track after track survives on Fresh's skilled production and catchy repeatable hooks, so much so that Wayne himself seems like the side dish to Fresh's main course. The solid production results in several tracks that strike as single material, namely "Hit U Up," which features The Hot Boys, and "On The Grind." Still, most of the album isn't in the league of Cash Money's finest work. The label's best material, tracks like "I Get That Fire" "Stunna" or "Back That Azz Up" combine stellar production with skillful wordplay (how be that Tiger Woods line from "I Got That Fire"?). In this sense Wayne falls slightly short, as rhymes aren't as inventive, comical, or infectious as some of his labelmates.

From the first glance at the cover of Lights Out – where Wayne is all iced out with a off – it is obvious where the album is going. Still, if one can get past the overall cliched pretention, Lil' Wayne's latest offering can be an enjoyable, bounceable, and overall fun rap al

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Saab Turbo 162K, sunroof, leather, 5spd. Good condition. $1100 o/b/o 413-367-7592

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Mothers Helper for 5 & 9 year old. Spring & summer. 10hrs a week. Car & references a must. Contact Jamie. 549-7788

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

LapTop for sale; IBM Thinkpad 770 Windows 2000, call Steve; 256-4238

EMPLOYMENT

Needed Immediately Town of Amherst Leisure Services Department is looking for volleyball officials for it's adult volleyball league. Matches are held Sunday afternoons and are located 1/2 mile from UMass. $12-$14 per match. For more information contact Mike Thomas, Sports Director, at 413-256-4065 ex. 105 or e-mail at thomasm@town.amherst.ma.us

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

The UMass Football team is looking for interested students to video practices and games for the spring 2000/2001 season. Experience preferred but will train. Scholarship and work study programs available. If you are interested please contact Bill Sisler at 577-0319. Come be a part of a championship tradition.

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS - NE Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/01). Directors for Gymnastics, Fine Arts, Camping/Nature, Golf, Swimming. Couselors for : Tennis, Team Sports, Ropes, Self-Defense, Gymnastics, Aerobics, Cheerleading, Swimming, Sailing, Waterskiing, Fine Arts and Crafts, Piano, Drama, Photography, Guitar, Video, Group Leaders. On Campus Interviews March 6th. Call 800-279-3019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com

Cruse Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434

INSTRUCTION

www.cruisecareers.com UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITYBARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

Are you in a long-distance relationship? Feel better at www.sblake.com

ROOM FOR RENT

Near UMass. Quiet setting. No smoking, vegitarian kitchen. Car needed. $325+ 549-4853

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred

ROOMMATE WANTED

549-5975

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner. Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-8, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@gofliptrips.com

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-800-234-7007 endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break - Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun and Jamaica from $499. Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and More! Organize small group - earn FREE trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-GET-SUN-1

Time is running out!

Need to sell your car?

Need a roommate?

Advertise TODAY!!

Call 545-3500

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 - HSCN Boston Basic
3 - CBS/3 Hartford
4 - CBS 4 Boston
5 - ABC/40 Springfield
6 - FOX 61 Springfield
7 - HSCN Movie Channel
8 - UPN 30 Hartford
9 - HSCN New Movie Channel
10 - NBC 10 New Britain
11 - Fox 24 Hartford
12 - PBS/24 Hartford
13 - NBC/40 Springfield
14 - International Channel
15 - UMASS Academic Channels
16 - WB 56 New Haven
17 - ESPN
18 - ESPN2
19 - UVC TV Student Channels
20 - Weather Channel
21 - Gavel to Gavel
22 - C-Span
23 - CNN
24 - CNN Headline News
25 - Lifetime
26 - USA
27 - TBS
28 - TNT
29 - A+E
30 - Sci-Fi
31 - Discovery
32 - Nesn
33 - Cartoon Network
34 - Nick at Nite
35 - TV Land
36 - Country Central
37 - BET
38 - Univision
39 - Bloomberg Financial Network
40 - Cottage TV Network
41 - MTV
42 - MTV2
43 - VH1
44 - The Learning Channel

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 2, 2001

		C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ℠		Barbara Sher: Creating Your Second Life After 40 (In Stereo) ℠		Women of Wisdom				Women of Wisdom
WFSB	3	3	News ℠	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Miss USA Pageant (In Stereo Live) ℠				News ℠	Late Show ℠
WBZ	4	4	News ℠	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Miss USA Pageant (In Stereo Live) ℠				News ℠	Late Show ℠
WCVB	5	5	News ℠	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ℠	Two Guys-Girl (Norm (N) ℠		Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	20/20 ℠			Nightline ℠
WLVI	6		Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends ℠	Nanny ℠	Sabrina-Witch	Popstera ℠	Popular "It's Greek to Me" ℠		News ℠		Friends ℠	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ℠	Providence "Parenthood" (N) ℠		Dateline (N) (In Stereo) ℠		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	7th Heaven (In Stereo) ℠		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Sabrina-Witch	Popstera ℠	Popular "It's Greek to Me" ℠		News		Arrest & Trial	Blind Date
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Extra (N) ℠	Hollywood	Providence "Parenthood" (N) ℠		Dateline (N) (In Stereo) ℠		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons ℠	Fraser ℠	Seinfeld ℠	Friends ℠	e'lo "Sodden" (1998, Science Fiction) Kurt Russell, (In Stereo) ℠		Dateline (N) (In Stereo) ℠		News		Friends ℠	Fraser ℠
WWLP	9	22	News ℠	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ℠	Providence "Parenthood" (N) ℠		Dateline (N) (In Stereo) ℠		Law & Order: Special Victims		News ℠	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ℠		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	American Experience "Reagan: Lifeguard" ℠				Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ℠
WGGB	12	26	News ℠	ABC News	Seinfeld ℠	Fraser ℠	Two Guys-Girl (Norm (N) ℠		Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	20/20 ℠			News ℠	Nightline ℠
WSBK	11		Judge Judy ℠	Judge Judy ℠	Simpsons ℠	Fraser ℠	Gary & Mike ℠	Celebrity	Gary & Mike ℠	Celebrity	Fraser ℠	Mad Abt. You	Spin City ℠	Spin City ℠
WTBS	22		Roseanne ℠	Roseanne ℠	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Ghost" (1990, Fantasy) Patrick Swayze, Demi Moore.						★★½ "Basic Instinct" (1992)
A&E	10		Night Court	Newsradio ℠	Law & Order ℠		Biography: Ray Kroc		Competition (N) ℠		Point ℠		Law & Order "Big Bang" ℠
CNN	23	23	Worldview ℠	Moneyline Newshour (N) ℠		Crossfire ℠	Wolf Blitzer	The Point ℠	Larry King Live ℠		CNN Tonight	Spin Room ℠	Sports	Moneyline
COM	33	38	Saturday Night Live ℠		Daily Show ℠	Stein's Money	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	e'lo "Kissing a Fool" (1998, Comedy) David Schwimmer,
DISC	23		Wild Discovery: Grizzly		Wild Discovery		U.S. Navy SEALs		Marine Corps Boot Camp		Casino Diaries	After Midnight	Justice Files
ESPN	13		Sportscenter ℠		Outside the Lines (N) ℠		NHL Hockey: Pittsburgh Penguins at New York Rangers. (Live) ℠						Sportscenter ℠
LIFE	27		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Ava Gardner"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Precious Victims" (1993, Drama) Park Overall, Robby Benson, ℠				Division "Don't Ask" (In Stereo)
MTV	13		Daria ℠	Real World	Real World	Daria ℠	Daria ℠	Cribs	Diary	Ultra Sound "One Hit Wonders" (In Stereo)			All Star
NICK	15		Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold! ℠	Rugrats ℠	Rugrats ℠	Hey Arnold! ℠	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	It's Company	It's Company	All in Family	Jeffersons ℠
SCIFI	43		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		Black Scorpion "No Sweat" ℠		Farscape "The Locket" ℠		Adventures of Jules Verne		Black Scorpion "No Sweat" ℠
TLC	29	28	Paramedica "On the Streets"		Ancient Technologies		Beware! Conmen (N)		Ultimate Ten, the Stings (N)		Eye Spy: Caught in the Act		Beware! Conmen
TNT	45		ER "House of Cards" (In Stereo)		Pretender "Hajurde" (In Stereo)		★★ "Lost in Space" (1998, Science Fiction) William Hurt, Mimi Rogers.						★★ "Lost in Space" (1998) William Hurt,
USA	32		Walker, Texas Ranger ℠		JAG "The Stalker" (In Stereo) ℠		Nash Bridges "Revelations" ℠		e'lo "The Stalking of Laurie Show" (2000) Jennifer Finnigan, ℠				Farmclub.com (In Stereo) ℠
HBO	35		★★★ "Crime of the Century" (1996, Drama) Stephen Rea. "PG-13" ℠				e'lo "The Whole Nine Yards" (2000) "R" ℠		★★½ "Made Men" (1999, Action) James Belushi. (In Stereo) "R" ℠				Dennis Miller
MAX	45		(5:30) ★½ "The Haunting" (1999, Lam Neeson.				★★★ "The Matrix" (1999, Science Fiction) Keanu Reeves. (In Stereo) "R" ℠				★★½ "Point Break" (1991, Drama) Patrick Swayze, "R" ℠
SHOW	46		★½ "Teaching Mrs. Tingle" (1999) Helen Mirren. "PG-13" ℠				★★ "Sinking Distance" (1993, Drama) Bruce Willis, "R" ℠				Stargate SG-1	Stargate SG-1	Small Victories	"Running Red"

Buttercup Festival By Elliott Garbauskas

I WANT YOUR BODY.
YOU KNOW WHAT I WANT? AN OATMEAL AND OMETER SANDWICH, FORCE-FED TO ME BY FRED DORST
THAT'S PRETTY MESSED UP.
WELL, A MAN CAN DREAM, CAN'T HE?
GO AMERICA!

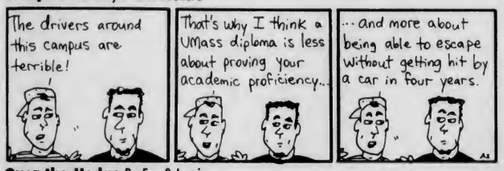
Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

TELL ME WHAT YOU NEED SON— WHAT FLOATS YOUR BOAT?
A BONG MAN!
I WANT TO GET OUT OF HERE! PLUS I NEED COUNSEL TO MAKE THESE BOOZE CHARGES GO AWAY.
WELL, SHOULD YOU AGREE TO ATTEND WALDEN, WE NATURALLY WOULD HIRE THE FINEST...
I WANT JOHNNIE COCHRAN.
AND I WANT JULIA ROBERTS. WORK WITH ME, SON.
HAVE A NICE SEASON

Robots and Spacemen By Jason Tocci

HI ERIN THIS IS SCOTT FROM YOUR PHYSICS CLASS YEAH I'M THE ONE WITH THE SPIKEY HAIR ANYWAY I WAS WONDERING IF PERHAPS THERES MAYBE SOME CHANCE YOU WANNA GO OUT SOMETIME... WHAT
I'M SORRY! I'LL NEVER BOTHER YOU AGAIN! PLEASE DON'T CALL THE POLICE
WAIT, WHAT DID YOU SAY?

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



The drivers around this campus are terrible!
That's why I think a UMass diploma is less about proving your academic proficiency...
...and more about being able to escape without getting hit by a car in four years.

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

RJ'S GUILT RELIEF! YEAR 2000 ABSOLUTIONS FOR BLOWN RESOLUTIONS
I RESOLVED TO BECOME THE PERSON I ALWAYS KNEW I COULD BE, BUT NEVER WAS.
WHAT HAPPENED?
I ALMOST BECAME THE PERSON I ALWAYS THOUGHT I COULD BE.
AND YOU ENDED UP MISSING THE PERSON YOU ALWAYS ARE...
YEAH, WHY IS THAT?
SOMETIMES YOU HAVE TO LOOK DOWN TO LOOK UP.

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Give advice only when asked today – or you're likely to find that few are willing to listen, no matter how valid your views may be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – There is no danger today in going out of your way to please others today. Indeed, you can enjoy great rewards for you extra efforts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You should enjoy an inspired, invigorating day – but you must take care that you leave something left over for that special someone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You'll be driven forward today by your own rich and complex objectives. You needn't explain yourself to your critics – just yet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You're more in the mood today for small, intimate gatherings than you are for a grand social event. Private talk results in a major discovery.

PISCES (Feb.19-March 20) – A challenge comes your way today, and you can embrace it with all the energy and passion you have. Seek a new method to achieve old ends.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Don't be lazy today, especially when asked a favor by another Aries or a Taurus native. These individuals mean more to you than others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – It's a good day to unleash your creativity and to explore the more unusual options available to you at this time. Don't be timid!

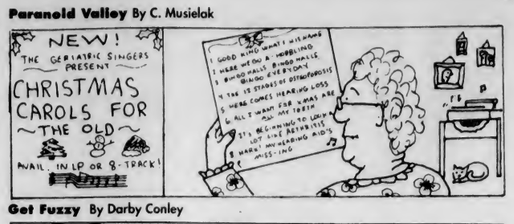
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – It's time for you to claim your rewards in an outright, honest and direct fashion. It's important that you not let others take advantage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Make no decisions today without first consulting those closest to you. What you do is sure to affect them for some time to come.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You can successfully turn around a negative trend today, and those around you will be impressed with your ingenuity and show their gratitude.

VIRGO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22) – Your first impressions are sure to prove more important than usual today – but you must keep your temper carefully under control at all times.

Paranoid Valley By C. Musielak



Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

OK, SO YOU'RE INSISTING THAT IT WASN'T YOU THAT RIPPED OPEN THE CHRISTMAS SALMON. FUNNY, 'CAUSE SATCHEL IS THE ONLY OTHER PERSON IN THE HOUSE
YOU THINK IT WAS HIM TOO, EH?
SEE IT'S REALLY MORE THE KIND OF THING YOU WOULD DO
OH, YOU KNOW HIM. HE'S INTO WHATEVER I'M INTO WHAT ARE YOU GUYS... EEW, RAW FISH YUK

Robotman By Jim Meddick

THIS THING YOU CALL LOVE, IT IS INTERESTING
THIS TOPIC IS FORBIDDEN!
THE ALIEN OVERLORDS WHO RULE THIS PLANET ONLY PERMIT TALK OF BATTLE. TALK OF LOVE WILL BE PUNISHED!
ACKK! THE COLLARS OF OBEDIENCE!
HEY! IF THE ALIEN OVERLORDS DON'T ENCOURAGE TALK OF LOVE, WHY ARE ALL THE WOMEN ON THIS PLANET IN SKIMPY, STAR TREK OUTFITS?
SMART-ASS REMARKS WILL ALSO BE PUNISHED
ACKK!

Quote of the Day

"Go ahead and make me look sad and pathetic in the paper!"

-Becky

Amherst Weather

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 18	HIGH: 28 LOW: 16	HIGH: 17 LOW: 14

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Reuben Sandwich (B)

Caponata Pocket (vegan)

Grilled Cheese on Multigrain Bread (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

Curry Coconut Chicken with Bok Choy (F, H, W)

DINNER

Cajun Lightning Chicken

Fried Shrimp

Algerian Stew (vegan)

Broccoli- Cauliflower Casserole (vegetarian)

We Deliver Deli

Boar's Head Brand

Starting every day at 11:00AM

549-7122

Claudia's Cafe
In the Amherst Carriage Shops
OCMP accepted

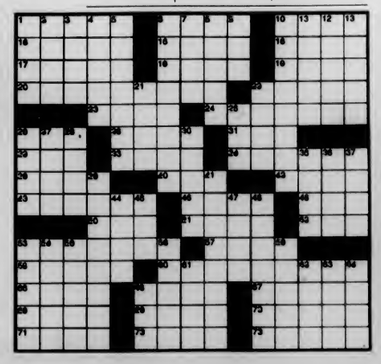
ACROSS
1 Winner, for short
6 Principal
10 Gets the crook
14 Less cooked
15 Actor Hay
16 ___-Mountains of Eurasia
17 Cry
18 Reverse, e.g.
19 Marathon unit
20 Colorful songster
22 Silly ones
23 Dry
24 Have an area in common with
26 Pep
29 Large rodents
31 Important period
32 "Block" ender
33 Fit of pique
34 Bank employee
38 Gunk
39 Bird baby
42 Eighteen-wheeler
43 Great house
46 Hard candy
49 Enjoyment
50 Remote
51 Cartoon bear
52 "Shame on you!" (a giggle)
53 Squelches
57 Bo Derek film
59 "Nancy" cartoonist Bushmiller
60 Unsightly
65 Longship phenomenon
66 Shopping locale
67 Increase suddenly, like electric current
68 Egret's cousin
69 Heed
70 Roundup target
71 Like a pin?
72 Org.
73 Noted Canadian physician

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

POLAR RAN PLATO
ALINE ALE HEIGEL
WINDOWBOX EMILE
NOT ABUT GELLED
MAXI YESES
OPPOSES SNAP
DROOPS TIPTOED
LAMB BOP FLOE
MEDDLER SATINY
WIN CHEESES
VOWED CAAN
BIDAL AGAR WOOD
BROIL DRIFTWOOD
SERVE ZEN LAZED
POSSE EWE CHESS

© 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Rocky ledge
2 Circle of light
3 Errant GI's status
4 Fakes
5 Likes better
6 Having the ability to attract
7 Sir — Gunneses
8 Utah neighbor
9 Postal-credit word
10 1 and 2, etc.
11 Storm in "The Tempest"
12 Model-airplane wood
13 Get some rest
21 Persia, now
22 "Pretty Woman" actor
25 Animal doc
26 Low-lying area
27 Bad time for Caesar
28 Lamb or pork
30 Do homework
35 Departed
36 Ostriches' kin
37 Hockey arena
39 Zaneski
41 Stiersand's birthplace
44 Fable
45 Before, in poems
47 Fairy-tale villain
48 "Guernica" painter
53 — one's ways
54 Cherokee or Seminole
55 Rajah's land
56 Thick pieces (of cheese)
58 Neighbor's on
61 Serve sights
62 Pecher Hershiser
63 Type of molding
64 Deborah of old films
66 Flightless bird



Today's Staff

Night Editor — Rob Schulze
Photo Technician — Tiboru Girczyc-Blum
Copy Editor — Matthew Despres
Production Supervisor — Roberto Delgado
Production Staff — Elana Premack, Adi Huseinovic

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Crunch time for UMass

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

It doesn't matter that this game is penciled in the first round bracket of the 2001 women's Atlantic 10 Championship. The NCAA tournament isn't expecting to find the Massachusetts and Rhode Island women's basketball teams on the guest list.

This is the end of the road. Both teams can extend the dotted yellow lines for at least another exit, but there's hardly a chance of getting out of Philadelphia alive.

Friday's 2 p.m. match up at the Liacouras Center (Temple University), isn't just an A-10 undercard, however. It's the ultimate rubber match. The winner takes the season series 2-1 and gets a bonus shot at No. 1 seeded Xavier on Saturday. The loser gets to watch it on A-10 TV.

"We have to go down there and take care of business," UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien said.

UMass (11-16, 6-10 A-10) carries the No. 8 seed into the tournament while Rhode Island (11-17, 4-12 A-10) sits in the No. 9 slot. Although both teams are charter members of the A-10, Friday's game will be their first ever meeting in the conference championship.

Rhode Island has lost four-straight opening-round games in the A-10 tournament, dating back to the 1995-96 campaign. Senior point guard Kathy Coyner plans on making that number five.

"We'll take care of Rhode Island," Coyner said. "We'll get a chance to play the big game against Xavier."

The last time the teams met on Jan. 31, URI beat the visiting Minutewomen 46-35 at Keaney Gymnasium. It was an all-out struggle for both squads, as they shot a combined 28-for-96 from the floor. Although many wearers of the maroon and white called the game a fluke, credit the Rams' fifth-best defensive performance in school history to UMass' offensive implosion.

Junior Yatar Kuyateh scored a team-high 16 points and grabbed six rebounds to end URI's nine-game losing streak at the hands of the Maroon and White. The backcourt duo of freshman Lindsey O'Neil and junior Neda Djuric added 21 points for the Rams.

Sophomore Ien Butler led all scorers with 17 points and pulled down 11 boards for UMass in the loss. The next-highest total for the Minutewomen was sophomore Amber Sneed with six points. Senior Kathy Coyner, UMass newest 1,000-point club member, went 1-for-12 and scored three points – by far her worst performance of the season.

Back on Jan. 9, Rhody visited the William D. Mullins Center for an opening overtime thriller. UMass outlasted URI in the extra period, 71-66 behind the career-high 28 point output. 17 of which came in the first half, from Butler. The Brooklyn, N.Y. native ended the game 10-for-15 from the floor and 8-for-8 from the free throw line.

The Minutewomen marched out to an early second half lead but URI tied the game up with about 14 minutes left and stayed close for the remainder of the half. In overtime, UMass converted eight times on 12 attempts from the charity stripe to seal the victory.

Coyner scored 14 points and added six assists while freshman Cleo Foster chipped in seven for the Maroon and White. Djuric had 16 points, Kuyateh had 12 and Shayla Johnson added 13 for the Rams.

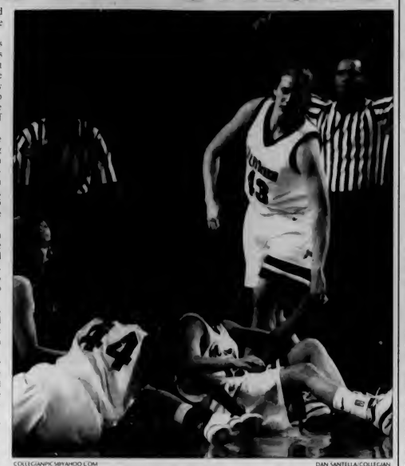
UMass is currently on a four-game slide and URI has lost two in a row. But the one positive factor is that the Maroon and White is shooting the ball better – the one thing they couldn't do last time against the Rams.

"We just have to focus in on ourselves," O'Brien said. "[Coyner, Paige Harris, Kristen Cannon and Sneed] all are shooting the ball a little bit better than they were in the beginning of February. So hopefully that tide will continue to go and we'll be able to knock down some outside shots to open up that lane for Ien. Caroline [Nehls] and Siiri [Liivandi]."

Today's first round match should be a dogfight. Both teams are coming off tough losses to other A-10 foes (Dayton 59, UMass 55; George Washington 81,URI 68) and, of course, both want to end their respective seasons on a relatively good note.

Coyner is the only graduating senior for the Minutewomen. Her presence will be a determining factor for the weekend.

"I think she's going to go out and have some fun," O'Brien said. "I think you'll see her play very, very hard. She wants to finish with some kind of good feeling about what she's doing out here and if it's one game, two games – whatever it is – I hope she's able to walk off the court feeling positive about what she's been able to do out there."



COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

The Minutewomen will have to get themselves up in order to topple the powers of the conference in the A-10 tourney.

Do or die time for Minutemen

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Three years ago, the Massachusetts hockey team entered the final weekend of the regular season needing a win in order to make the Hockey East playoffs. The Minutemen tied Maine, 5-5, in the season finale and ended up with an early start to the off-season.

At the time, the current seniors on this year's UMass squad were freshmen. Now, in what could be the final weekend of their collegiate careers, they are determined not to let a repeat scenario take place.

UMass will face New Hampshire in a home-and-home series tonight and tomorrow night. The Minutemen enter the weekend one point behind Merrimack for the eighth and final playoff spot. Depending on what the Warriors do in their contest against Boston University tonight, it is clear that UMass will need at least one point – and at the most three – in order to reach the post-season.

"Freshman year was a tough year because we had such a talented team, but we lost a few close games," senior assistant captain Kris Wallis said. "I don't think that any of us forgot about what the spring was like. We would have all rather been playing than in our mini-vacation that the coaches give us at the end of the season. That's something that's in the back of our minds. We've got to make the most out of the time that we have."

Added senior alternate captain Jay Shaw: "It's like déjà vu all over again. We experienced what it felt like to lose in the final weekend of the season. We swore to each other that we were going to do everything that we could to not let it happen again."

While there is no question that the Minutemen will play with a purpose this weekend, the same can be said for UNH. The Wildcats can sew up home ice in the first round of the playoffs with at least one win. However, a pair of UMass wins – and additional wins by BU, Maine and Providence – could theoretically send UNH on the road for the first round. If the Minutemen sweep the Wildcats, the Maroon and White could also move up to the seventh spot if Northeastern drops its final two games.

In the first meeting between the two clubs this season, UMass captured a 3-0 win at the William D. Mullins Center. At the time, the win leveled out UMass' record at 3-3-1. Since then, they have won only four of 25 contests [4-18-3].

Nevertheless, the Minutemen have had some success against UNH in recent years and are looking to quell the demons of the Whittemore Center, an arena that they have never won in [0-8-2]. Last season, UMass posted a 3-3 tie in Durham in the second-to-last game of the season to preserve a spot in the Hockey East playoffs. However, the Wildcats may still have an edge in the fact alone that their rink is the biggest in the league.

"I think that we have the ability to play on the large sheet because we play on a large sheet ourselves," UMass hockey coach Don Cahoon said. "Obviously, we have to look at what they're trying to do from the offensive standpoint and the transition standpoint. We have to make sure that the numbers at mid-rink are even.

"They play a very tight checking, left wing lock. They challenge you to get the puck out on that side of the ice. They prefer to steer you into the left side where it's congested once you get possession of the puck."

The Wildcats [19-9-6, 10-7-5 in Hockey East] are led by the goaltending of senior Ty Conklin. The reigning Hockey East Co-Player of the Year has recorded a 15-9-5 mark with a 2.13 goals against average and a .918 save percentage. UMass has only beaten Conklin once in his four-year career, yet is hoping to build off the year's first meeting this weekend.

"We have to be conscious of the opponent that we are up against," UMass senior captain Jeff Turner said. "We've run into him [Conklin] a couple of times in our career, and a few of us ran into him in juniors, too. He's not foreign to anybody and he's human just like everybody else. He has his weaknesses and it's a matter of exposing those weaknesses.

"[Winning the first game] gives us a little bit of an edge and personally, it gives us some confidence," he added. "Certain teams match up against certain teams, and we feel that we can match up with them and create scoring opportunities."

Offensively, UNH relies on speedy junior forward Darren Haydar (16g, 21a) and sophomore Lanny Gare (11g, 18a).

Needless to say, the Minutemen will look toward their senior class this weekend in order to vault their way into the Hockey East playoffs. As a whole, the seniors have been in this position before. In their four-year career, UMass has either clinched or had the opportunity to secure a post-season berth in the final weekend on three occasions [1997-98, 1999-2000, 2000-01]. Only in the 1998-99 season did UMass nail down a berth earlier – in the second-to-last weekend of the season.

"It always seems to come down to the last weekend for us," Wallis said. "Freshman year we didn't make the playoffs, but we have the last few years and I'm pretty positive that we're going to go again this year if we stick to the coaches' game plan on UNH."

Sophomore forward Tim Turner leads the Minutemen with 26 points on the season. Jeff Turner is right behind him with 24 points, while Martin Miljko ranks third with 22 points.

As far as goaltending is concerned, junior netminder Mike Johnson is coming off a stellar weekend against No. 2 Boston College in which he stopped 74 of 80 shots, including a 60-save effort in a 3-3 tie. The Excelsior, Minn. native earned Hockey East Defensive Player of the Week honors for his performance.

However, both Johnson and senior Markus Helanen have shown flashes of brilliance this season. Ironically, both goaltenders have also held their own against the Wildcats in recent years.

Cahoon did mention that his decision will be based on the team's best interest. In recent weeks, he has employed a platoon system, a trend that could continue again this weekend.

"All things being equal, they'll both play," Cahoon said.

Game time is set for 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night. In the home finale tomorrow night, UMass will honor its seven seniors – Joey Culgin, R.J. Gates, Helanen, Shaw, Nick Stephens, Jeff Turner and Wallis.

Men set for final home game

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

This is not the end. It is not even the beginning of the end. But it is, perhaps, the end of the beginning.

Winston Churchill probably wasn't much of a basketball fan, but his words apply rather nicely to tomorrow's noon showdown at the William D. Mullins Center. The Massachusetts men's basketball team will hit the hardwood for the final regular-season game of its 2000-01 slate in hopes of gaining some postseason momentum at the expense of visiting St. Bonaventure.

UMass (13-13, 11-4 Atlantic 10) should have no shortage of motivation against the Bonnies. Saturday marks Senior Day for the Minutemen, a special game to honor four of the team's best players. A victory would match the best conference record ever by a Flint-led team. And last but not least, a win would avenge the Maroon and White's first A-10 loss of the season, when SBU (17-10, 8-7 A-10) triumphed on an improbable three-pointer in the closing seconds on its home court.

"It's going to be a normal game, but it is my Senior Day and my last home game," said forward Winston Smith, who along with Monty Mack, Jonathan DePina and Kitwana Rhymer will likely hear his name called out over the Mullins PA system for the last time tomorrow. "I just want to go out with a win."

The previous meeting between the two teams was indeed a thrilling one, with multiple lead changes in the second half and a number of outstanding individual performances. UMass led by eight with seven minutes to play, only to watch the Bonnies build their own five-point edge with under three minutes left on the clock.

The Minutemen pulled back ahead, 65-63, on free throws from Rhymer and junior guard Shannon Crooks. SBU swingman Vidal Massiah then stunned UMass by drilling a tri-fecta off a designed play with 3.2 ticks remaining to steal the win for the Bonnies.

"We still have a bad taste in our mouths from that game," said UMass forward Micah Brand, who scored 11 points in the loss. "That was one that we definitely should have won, so it's nice to get another shot at then."

Mack paced the Minutemen with 20 points in the losing effort, while Rhymer chipped in 17 points and seven rebounds.

Tomorrow's rematch could have some bearing on the A-10 tourney seedings, though most of the impact will be on the Bonnies. A win would secure SBU a first-round bye, a luxury that the Minutemen wrapped up (indirectly) when Xavier beat Dayton on Jan. 29. A UMass win would give the team a chance at the tournament's No. 2 seed, provided Xavier loses its season finale at Dayton (both the Minutemen and Musketeers would finish with four losses, and UMass possesses the tiebreaker).

"We've already got the bye, and you would rather play a team that played the night before," Flint said. "If they win they can get a bye, so they're going to be ready to play."

A Maroon and White triumph would give the team its best conference mark since the '97-'98 campaign, when the team finished 21-11 overall and advanced to the NCAA Tournament for the second time in as many seasons under Flint.

And should the team need even more reason to leave it all on the court against SBU, there is one more factor to consider. Former UMass standout Tyrone Weeks is currently an assistant coach with the Bonnies, and is a guy who this year's seniors had to take on in practice back when they were freshmen and Weeks was putting the wraps on his UMass career.

"There's something special for me about going up against my old team," Weeks said. "Of course I want to win, but I'll laugh with the guys after it's over."

The laughing may have to wait a little longer than that, though. It may be the last game on their schedule, but the Minutemen are hoping it's only the start of this season's real glory.

COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Johnathan Depina and three others will play what will likely be their final collegiate home game tomorrow.

Homecoming for lax

By Matthew F. Sacco
Collegian Staff

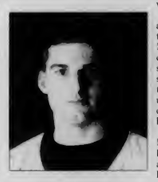
As the old adage goes, nothing is more dangerous than a wounded animal. Far be it for anybody to question an old adage, but one would think that a mysterious Seawolf would be a few more notches up on the danger gauge than a gimpy one.

Unfortunately for Coach Greg Canella and his staff, mystery is exactly what the Minutemen are looking towards this weekend.

"We haven't really scouted them," Canella said.

After an emotional 17-13 victory over rival Hofstra, the Massachusetts lacrosse team must battle a letdown while preparing for the enigma that is Stony Brook.

"Our guys have continued to work hard in practice," Canella said of a possible letdown after the Hofstra game.



CHRIS CAMPOLETTANO

Last year UMass, in its most decisive victory, handed the Seawolves a 17-4 schooling for its first conference win. In 2001, the Minutemen will look to repeat that success, as both teams open their Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference regular season tomorrow.

It's not that UMass (1-0, 0-0 ECAC) doesn't think that Stony Brook is a threat; in fact it is precisely that unknown factor that makes it dangerous.

One familiar face on the visiting sideline, at least to Canella, will be head coach John Espey. Before returning to his Alma Mater, Canella worked with Espey at Stony Brook for four years.

"I spey was my mentor," Canella said of his friend and teacher.

UMass' sideline leader will not be alone in the emotional load he carries into this weekends contest. Senior goalie Chris Campolettano also has some emotional ties to the enemy, as his brother, Matt, stands on the other side of the battle lines.

The rest of the Seawolf roster however, is relatively unknown, except for 34-goal scorer Kevin Pall. The junior attackman made a name for himself last year, by notching hat tricks against Virginia and Georgetown.

Pall was the team's only consistent threat to score a year ago, a fact that coach Espey will hope to remedy as his young squad will have to use that year of experience to break out of its training wheels.

If the Seawolves are young, then the No. 11 Minutemen are the complete antithesis. With 12 seniors on the roster, UMass boasts unmatched game experience and leadership.

Seniors John Madigan and Rich Kunkel paced the attack against Hofstra with two goals apiece, while the emergence of Kevin Leveille has given Canella just one more gun to throw up front.

"We're going to attack the cage," Canella said.

The Maroon and White will look to continue the run and gun style that put 17 on the board against The Pride while not allowing the Seawolves to slow the pace of the game.

On the other end of the field, Campolettano will continue to man the net for the Minutemen while "Big Nasty" Matt McFarland will clear the road in front of him.

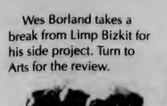
After the 13-goal win last year, motivating a team for a match-up against that same Stony Brook squad could be an absolute nightmare for a coach.

"You hope they don't overlook them," Canella said.

Even with last year's blowout win, it seems that the Minutemen are as motivated as ever to open the ECAC season with a win.

"I know Espey," Canella said. "They're not going to back off, so we better be ready."

Wes Borland takes a break from Limp Bizkit for his side project. Turn to Arts for the review.



Volume CVII Issue 93 www.dailycollegian.com Wednesday, Mar[illegible], 2001

Collegian

It was raining hats and d[illegible] Saturday at Garber Fie[illegible]as co-captain Jeremy [illegible]ski [illegible] Dop[illegible] Litt[illegible] each [illegible]otched [illegible]-hat tricks in UMass' 7-8 win [illegible]ver Stony [illegible]Brook

Snowed In

University ge[illegible]wo days off d[illegible]to storm

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts closed for two days on Monday and Tuesday due to a massive amount of snow, ice and rain. This marks the second storm this semester to shut down the University. An unofficial two-foot inches layered some parts of New England and the Eastern seaboard.

"It's a beautiful creation of God," said Sruli Adelman of Holyoke. "I knew school would be cancelled [Tuesday] when I couldn't even see out of my basement window."

Beautiful creation or not, the storm produced some incredibly scary depictions of how horrible nature's acts can actually be. More than 80,000 people lost electricity in Massachusetts, and car accidents were plentiful. Fortunately, as of 6:00 p.m. Tuesday, no deaths had been reported.

After Governer Paul Cellucci declared Massachusetts in a state of emergency, the Massachusetts Public Safety Office issued a roof collapse alert. According to the office, several roof collapses occurred in [illegible] collapsed, apparently because of an intense ice build up.

The storm had a huge impact in a decision whether or not local businesses and companies remained in service. The town of Amherst looked like a wasted ghost town after 4:00 p.m. Monday. Two hours later, the Pioneer Valley Transport Authority (PVTA) decided to stop running through the night and for the entire day on Tuesday.

Many people, like Senior Computer Science and Mathematics major Steven Williams, seemed to be happy with their days off. "It's great," Williams said. "I enjoyed it."

Williams said, since he is only taking two classes, the snow didn't affect him too much, and spent his time sledding near the Butterfield hill. Some of the things he saw on the hill, especially on the road quite surprised him. "I don't currently have a car, so I don't know how driving condi[illegible]tions were."

Williams was all iced over, and th[illegible]ple of people who wa[illegible]ir Sports Utility Vehicles to prove that they could [illegible]s forward and then tu[illegible]move in reverse, they fa[illegible]

Most people su[illegible] spent much of the t[illegible] working and relaxing[illegible] Annemarie Rabazz[illegible] Engineering major, who c[illegible] homework and laundry, did[illegible] er attempting to tackle the gr[illegible] doors."

However, some UMass stu[illegible] seemed to have negative opinion[illegible] the storm. "Everyone has cabin fev[illegible] said Brian Marchiak, Sophomo[illegible] Political Science major.

Kareen Billmeyer, a Freshman Biology major, who has been cooped up in Washington residence hall in Southwest, said something similar, only she referred to it as, "going stir crazy."

One of the more common sights around UMass yesterday involved people trying anything in their power to get their cars out of parking spaces. "I helped people shovel," Adelman said. "It was fun, and I helped a few people, but I do suggest [the [illegible]s a few students in [illegible]elp people get

College of [illegible] Resources major [illegible] Morning UMass," a show on WMUA (91.1FM) every Tuesday morning from 6[illegible] He said that getting to the station was extremely difficult. "I'm usually on at 6 a.m., but I couldn't get there till 6:30, because nothing was plowed," he said.

Frangules said that informing the public about the storm was one of his top priorities. "I did the cancellation list, and I concentrated on the five colleges and what was cancelled," he said. "Usually after I was done with the list, I got a few phone calls about whether UMass was cancelled."

Frangules also said that most of the calls were about the snow, and that his listenership was definitely up because of it. He received some calls that were a bit unusual. "A guy called, asking if he should open his personal business," Frangules said. "He was pretty persistent about me making his decisions for him."

Preparations for snow removal were consistent through the storm, and will no doubt continue over the next few days. The snow may be far from over. Another storm is predicted for Friday night and all-day Saturday.

Ken Campbell contributed to this article.

Two killed in school shooting

A 15-year-old high school freshman was taken into custody after allegedly killing two people and wounding thirteen others in a shooting incident at Santana High School in Santee, Calif.

The two dead have been identified as Brian Zschor, 14, and Randy Gordon, 15.

According to police, the shooting started around 9:20 a.m. Pacific time at the high school, which has about 1,900 students. Police said the suspect, armed with a .22 caliber revolver, reloaded at least once in the course of the shooting. A sheriff's deputy assigned to the school was wounded in the incident.

Witnesses say that armed authorities entered a men's restroom, and emerged with the suspect in custody and the weapon he had allegedly used. Area hospitals said that most of the injuries were non-life threatening and minor. Several victims have already been released from area hospitals.

According to San Diego County officials, the suspect will most likely be charged as an adult due to the "special circumstances" of the crime. Officials said the suspect, identified as Charles Andrew Williams, will be charged with murder, assault with a deadly weapon and firearm law violations.

The suspect allegedly discussed shooting up his school at a friend's house. When confronted about his comments, witnesses said the suspect claimed he was only joking. Santana High School counselors will be available at a nearby church to help those distressed with the matter.

President George W. Bush offered his sympathies to the families of the victims, calling the incident a "disgraceful act of cowardice."

"When America teaches our children right from wrong and teaches values that respect life in our country," Bush said. "We'll be better off."

The shooting is the fourth school shooting this year.

In late February, a six-year-old was shot and killed by a seven-year-old schoolmate in Mount Morris Township, Mich. just weeks after three people were grazed by gunfire in a Detroit elementary school. The shooter in the Detroit incident has not been caught.

In January, a 17-year old was killed outside his Baltimore, Md. high school. Police arrested two in connection with that incident.

Information from the Associated Press and CNN.com was used in this article.

-Ken Campbell

VP Cheney hospitalized

Vice President Dick Cheney was released from George Washington University Hospital on yesterday morning following an operation to repair a blocked artery.

The Vice President has a history of heart trouble, including four heart attacks. In November, one of Cheney's arteries became 90 percent blocked and was propped open by a surgical stent following a mild heart attack. Scarring from that procedure started to block the artery again, resulting in chest pains. Surgeons performed a procedure called cardiac catheterization to determine the extent of the blockage.

A tube was inserted into one of the Vice President's arteries and dye was pumped into his bloodstream. By using X-rays, doctors determined the location of the blockage. The surgeons then cleared the blockage.

Doctors assured the public that the Vice President did not have another heart attack, and that the problem, known as angina, is quite common in people with heart disease.

The 60 year-old Vice President will have to give up beef and exercise more, his doctors say.

"There is a very high likelihood he can finish out his term in his fully vigorous capacity," said Dr. Jonathan Reiner, the cardiologist who performed the operation.

Information from CNN.com was used in this article.

-Ken Campbell

PHOTO COURTESY OF SCOTT LEMIEUX AND JOHN LAMOS

Cultural Events Calendar

BENEFITS

NORTHAMPTON – Northampton Survival Center presents their Fourteenth Annual Benefit Boogie, featuring the band Trailer Park and a giant raffle, from 8 to 11:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 10 at the Inn at Northampton. Proceeds will help to provide food boxes to people in need. Tickets are 15 dollars, and are available at Beyond Words book shop in Northampton. Call (413) 586-6564 for more information.

CONTESTS

DEERFIELD – "Bright Spots." Create and submit 30 or 60 second video shorts promoting nonviolence and peacemaking. $2,000 in prizes will be awarded to groups and individuals in several categories. For more information and entry forms, see www.crocker.com/~traprock or call the Traprock Peace Center at (413) 773-7427.

SOCIAL EVENTS

AMHERST – "An Evening of Songs and Stories." Rabbi David Zeller, a pioneer in transpersonal psychology and Jewish spirituality, an internationally known teacher, counselor, singer and writer, will lead this event from 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday, March 26, at the Jewish Community of Amherst, 742 Main Street. Tickets are on a sliding scale, from 10 to 20 dollars. For more information, call (413) 259-1240.

FILM/VIDEO SCREENINGS

UMASS – A multicultural film festival, "Border Crossing: Cinema and Video at Century's Turn," will be held on dates from February 16 to May 10. The series highlights the fluidity and permanence of artistic, technical, geographic, cultural, political and personal borders and includes film and vide screenings and panel presentations. On April 5 at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 231 will be "Hamburger and Dolma: Cross Cultural Identities" presented by the director Caroline Babasan. Five Armenian women's stories are interwoven to shape a collective narrative about the intergenerational transmission of trauma, the complexity of identity and the abiding power of family and friendship. For more information call Film Studies at 545-3659.

RELIGIOUS

AMHERST – Shabbat services are held on Fridays at 6 p.m. followed by Shabbat dinner at 7:15 p.m. in Hillel House.

LECTURE/DISCUSSION

AMHERST – "Judaism and Controversial Subjects: The Death Penalty," a lecture featuring Senator Stan Rosenberg, Rabbi Kevin Hale, Professor May Page of Yale University and Attorney Myles Jacobson will take place on Thursday, March 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community of Amherst.

AMHERST – Jean Trounstine, a teacher of theatre in a women's prison, will be sharing her insights and reading from her book Shakespeare behind Bars: The Power of Drama in a Women's Prison on Thursday, March 15 at 7 p.m. at Food for Thought Books. For more information, contact Joan Barberich at 253-5432.

UMASS – "The Latke-Hamentashen Debate" will take place on Sunday, March 11, at 12:30 p.m. at Hillel House. Join faculty and staff members David Mednicoff, Larry Goldbaum, James Young and Eve Weinbaum as they defend their favorite Jewish delicacies. For more information, contact the Hillel House at 549-1710.

UMASS – "A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy," as part of the Asian Dance and Music Program's two-day festival "Illuminations from the Middle East," will be presented by Professor Khali Barhoum of Stanford University. The lecture, including a demonstration, will be held at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall on March 9. Admission is 4 dollars, free for students and seniors. For more information, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

SMITH COLLEGE – "The Future of Feminist Scholarship? A Glimpse at the Third World: Work in Progress." This lecture will be given by Kum-Kum Bhavnani, Senior Editor of Meridians and Visiting Professor of Women's Studies at Smith College, on Monday, April 16 at 4:15 p.m. in Seelye 207. Free.

CONFERENCE

SMITH COLLEGE – A four day international conference from March 8 to 11 will mark the launch of Smith College's new women's studies journal "Meridians: feminism, race, transnationalism" amid worldwide celebrations of international Women's Day on Thursday, March 8. Some 300 women scholars, activists, filmmakers, artists and poets will converge. Conference events are open to the public, free, and accessible. Registration is requested. See www.smith.edu/meridians for details. For more information, call (413) 585-4222 or 585-2206 (TTY).

MOUNT HOLYOKE – "Frances Perkins and Her Legacies: Labor, Women, and the Unfinished Business of the New Deal." This symposium will be held on March 8 and 9 at Mount Holyoke College. For more information, call (413) 538-3066.

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "From Abortion Rights to Social Justice: Building the Movement for Reproductive Freedom," an annual conference for student and community activists, will be held from March 30 to April 1. Free housing, babysitting, sign language interpreters, and meals are available by advance registration. The conference is free, but registration in advance needed. For more information, call (413) 559-5416.

THEATER/DANCE/SPOKEN WORD

UMASS & SMITH COLLEGE – New WORLD Theater's Future Aesthetics Project presents the intersections between theater and spoken word, performance poetry, hip-hop and youth culture. The final performance, featuring Caridad de la Luz, will be held at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery at UMass on April 5. Free admission to all events.

UMASS – To celebrate International Women's Day, all women are invited to "Open Room," an open mic event for women performers, at 7 p.m. in Wilder Hall on March 8. For more information, call the Everywoman's Center at (413) 545-0883.

UMASS – The Stonewall Center will host a 15th Anniversary Celebration, featuring celebrity comics Harvey Fierstein and Kate Clinton, at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Concert Hall on Saturday, March 10. Fierstein is an award-winning playwright, actor and gay rights advocate. Clinton is a political monologist and comedian. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "Stop Kiss" traces the experiences of Callie and Sarah, two young women who are dealing with all the usual young adult issues as well as falling in love with each other. The show explores the theme of honesty, and the hostility of a homophobic society to such honesty. The show will take place at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater on April 5 through 7, and April 10 through 13. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "Nuyorican Stories" will be performed with sidesplitting humor by the members of Culture Clash, who blend poetry, dance, music and visual arts. The show will be performed at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on Thursday, April 19. For tickets, which range from 5 to 10 dollars, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

UMASS – "I Remember Mapa," a comical one-man show starring Alec Mapa, will be performed one night only at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on May 10. Based on his true-life experiences, the piece chronicles Mapa's colorful adventures through rise, fall and rebirth as a gay Filipino American actor in the entertainment industry. For tickets, which range from 5 to 10 dollars, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – "The National Orchestra of Spain." Celebrated guitar player Pepe Romero joins the renowned National Orchestra of Spain in a concert featuring the works of three nineteenth and twentieth century composers on Thursday, March 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Concert Hall. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

SOUTH HADLEY – Andrew Russo, a graduate of the Juilliard School, has been called "a reincarnated Liszt." He will perform a program including Chopin, Copeland, Crumb, and Borodin at 3 p.m. on Sunday, March 11 in the Kosciuszko Foundation Southern New England Chapter. For more information, call (413) 734-7052 or 532-1546.

UMASS – "AEROS" features gold medal-winning gymnasts from the Romanian Gymnastics Federation, directed by Daniel Ezralow, David Parsons and Moses Pendleton in collaboration with "Stomp" creators Luke Cresswell and Steve McNicholas. This unusual performance troupe will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Hall on Wednesday, March 14.

UMASS – "Musical Illuminations from the Middle East." Hear cutting edge world music from Anatolia, a Massachusetts ensemble combining Turkish and Arab traditions to showcase the arts of the Middle East. The event will take place in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. on Sunday, March 10. Tickets range from $7 to $20, and are available through the Fine Arts Center box office (545-2511).

This calendar, which previews local events of interest to underrepresented groups on campus and in the community, runs on Wednesdays. Submit notices of events to Tanya Mannes, Diversity Editor or Chanel Dubofsky, Assistant Diversity Editor. Standard entry forms are available in the Collegian office.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Vidette. Vidette became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a bi-semester publication since January, 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Financial Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

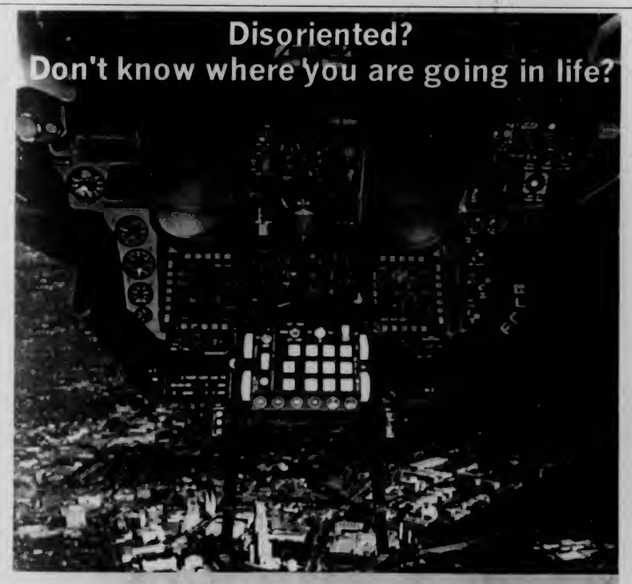
Disoriented?
Don't know where you are going in life?



WE CAN HELP

Contact us for more information on job and scholarship opportunities
Captain Chris Lane
UMASS Air Force ROTC
(413) 545-2437 afrotc@acad.umass.edu

GREAT Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass
2 A great place to get contact lenses
3 FREE sample start-up contact lens solutions
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases
5 Contact Lenses mail ordered directly to your home or office
6 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames

UHS Eye Care Services
For Appointments or questions, call 577-5244

Special Offer: $25 off any second pair of complete prescription eyeglasses within three months of a first complete pair of prescription eyeglasses (excluding insurance provided eyeglasses) at the UHS for the same patient.

"I invite you to use the Eye Care Services"

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services

Services held for Sociology professor

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

More than 200 people attended a memorial service for Professor of Sociology Andy B. Anderson Sunday afternoon. Anderson, 59, died on February 22 at his home after a long battle with pancreatic cancer.

Anderson taught at the University of Massachusetts for 25 years, and had received the Distinguish Teaching Award in 1984. He was nominated for the award, the highest honor awarded by the University for excellence in the classroom, several times.

The service, held at Memorial Hall, was packed with family, friends and colleagues who readily recalled Anderson's sense of humor. Childhood friend Lanette Grey remembered a particular incident in San Francisco. After dinner at a restaurant, Anderson left the group and concealed himself around a corner.

"Hearing our approach, Andy jumped out with a shout and a gorilla face," Grey said. "But it wasn't us."

Friends' and family's memories of Anderson painted a picture of a man who loved life, laughter and good friends.

"Andy loved life very much, and spent it fully," Brenda Stiers said. "To say that a man has died is half a truth."

Professor Randall Stokes, chair of the Sociology department, fondly remembered the time he spent with Anderson.

"He was a good friend," Stokes said. "He was the most admirable man I've ever known."

After the service, friends went to Anderson's office in Machmer Hall, where they were allowed to select a volume from Anderson's library as a remembrance.

Anderson is survived by his wife, Professor of Communications Carolyn Anderson, two daughters Marjane Glazebrook of Edgewood, New Mexico, and Jennifer Anderson-Tuttle of St. Bonafascius, Minnesota, and two stepchildren Kisa Takesue of Providence, Rhode Island, and Kimi Takesue of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Information from the Campus Chronicle was used in this article.

Due to the cancellation of classes yesterday, some of these stories appeared in the March 5, 2001edition of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

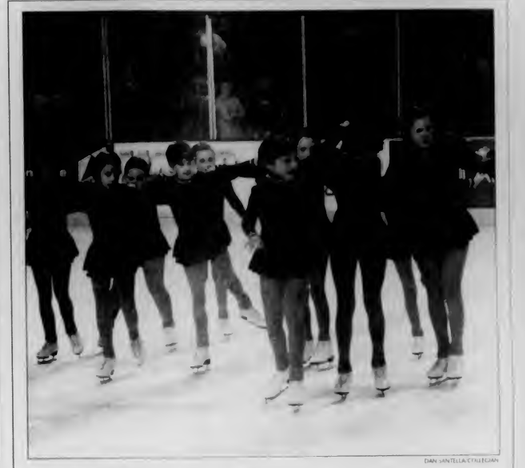
Interview For Temptation Island

JUST KIDDING! WE JUST WANTED TO GET YOUR ATTENTION
BUT, ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WORKING ON A PARADISE ISLAND?

Come Find Opportunities
At

Career Day 2001

Hospitality Career Fair
Over 75 Companies Attending
Wednesday, March 7th, 2001
Campus Center Auditorium
9:00am - 3:00pm
Presented by the Department of Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
All Majors Invited!



DAN VANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Watch out Tanya Harding!
These aspiring figure skating from Amherst got a rousing ovation from the Mullins Center crowd on Saturday night when they performed between periods at the UMass hockey game.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON

Summer @ UMass Boston

- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 29, July 2, and July 16
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- On-line, web-based courses
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost

UMASS BOSTON

To learn more, visit
www.conted.umb.edu
or call 617.287.6000

A great university in a great city

If You Can Say "YES" to These 3 Statements:

❑ I am 18-26 years old. ❑ I am Jewish.
❑ I have never been on a peer group trip to Israel.

Then you can go to ISRAEL for FREE this May & June!

birthright israel
www.birthrightisrael.com

The deadline to apply is March 11!
Register TODAY
at www.birthrightisrael.com
For more information, please call 1-888-99-ISRAEL

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

DEATHS TIED TO ALCOHOL: who should get the bill?

Anyone who frequents Liquors 44 in Hadley knows that it, like many other local liquor stores, strictly monitor who enters, who carries and who buys alcohol.

Anyone who goes uptown on Thursday night expects to be carded by the doorperson at the Amherst Brewing Company or the bouncer at Barcelotti's.

Anyone and everyone who buys sulfite-free wine at Bread & Circus had better have an ID, because the staff is required to check everyone, no matter how old he or she looks.

While it can be inconvenient, most students grin and bear the suspicious questions (Is this you?) and the rigorous identification checks, because they know the individual establishment does not make the rules. In the event of an alcohol-related incident, the liquor store, restaurant or bar that sells or serves can be held legally responsible. Even if no incident occurs, the establishment must pay a penalty if it is found to have admitted people under the age of 21. A fine is the least of the proprietor's fears, however: the owner may even do jail time for such a violation of the drinking age laws.

The Pioneer Valley, with its college demographics, seems to have an especially vigilant team of undercover officers who monitor the local establishments for underage drinking. Locally, several bars have paid stiff fines for allowing minors to enter. Therefore, that similar establishments keep tight security is not surprising. It is a matter of self-preservation.

The Sunday, March 4 edition of The Boston Globe reports on the lawsuit of a North Dartmouth bar owner whose bar served an 18-year-old who used a fake ID to drink liquor at his establishment. The youth was hit by a car and killed as he walked drunkenly along an interstate. The bar owner spent 30 days in jail for his part in the tragedy, and paid an undisclosed amount in money to the youth's family in order to settle a wrongful death lawsuit filed by the family against him.

The twist is that the bar owner has filed suit against the 18-year-old's friends, who not only gave him a fake ID, but also five beers on the way to the bar.

The bar owner argues that the important thing is not legal liability, but a more general issue of the legal responsibilities people have to each other. If he prevails, the friends would be ordered to pay a portion of the settlement reached with the youth's family, and the money would likely come from their parents' homeowner insurance policies.

It is unlikely that the bar owner will prevail. In the opinion of lawyers who were interviewed by the Globe. However, the Collegian believes the case raises a dilemma whose importance issues about the legal responsibilities of liquor establishments.

It is possible that the bar owner served the young man in good faith, believing that the fake ID was legitimate. He never intended to participate in the young man's death. It is conceivable that he had to spend time in jail, and pay a significant sum of money that could be the ruin of his independent business. It is conceivable that he wishes to recover some of the money he had lost.

Perhaps the culpable parties of this grisly story are the fiscally accountable, those parents who must pay for the actions of the young man. Should they be held responsible for the actions of their child?

Winter wonderful

JOEY VAN METER

You were tired of the cold, the snow, the cold, the wind, the cold, and how it was really, really cold out. You were tired of scraping your car off in the morning, tired of getting stuck in the ice in the yellow lot, tired of bundling up in five layers and wearing that big, fat winter coat that almost killed someone. You were tired of winter.

Ok, screw it, I don't know if you were tired of it, but I was. Bring on spring, I said, and baseball, and robins, and pretty people in tank tops. I couldn't remember the last time it was warm out. All my dreams involved Hawaii – there was that dream where I had to give a presentation in class (in Hawaii), that dream where the girl asked me out (in Hawaii), and that dream where all these beautiful lifeguards ran around, saving people (in Hawaii).

But noooooooooo, we live in New England. The place where even when it's summer, the ocean is still minus 70 degrees. People rant and rave about New England's proud history – our Pilgrim heritage, our apple pies, and our high taxes. But really, they should try living here all of their lives, like most of us have, and experience the frigid temperatures mixed with our sports teams' curious tendency to underachieve.

And then came Mr. Storm of the Century. Or "Really Big Storm!" or "Storm 2001!" or "$%$$& $%& %^$&!".

Please... was it that bad? I fully realize that the weather people ALWAYS hype these things up, because they are paid to do so, and are usually drunk on air. But this was ridiculous. So we got some snow. For about 5 or 6 hours Monday night, it was pretty bad out. Undrivable. A big storm.

But for the rest of the time, how was this different from any usual bad weather?

And that's when it all made sense. Now, I don't think it was a conspiracy – this column isn't going to be that ridiculous and stupid. It's ridiculous and stupid already, and it's going to be even more ridiculous and stupid, because I'm sitting here, writing it, on deadline day at 11 in the morning with a Cinnamon Crème Pop Tart Danish.

So no conspiracy. But maybe instead, a collective, Jungian, unconscious desire by every New Englander to say together, in poetic, brilliant unison, "I'm really tired of this crap."

So when we heard "Snow...again" earlier this past weekend, the people in charge thought to themselves for a second. They thought that as long as we're getting some snow again, we might as well make it into a full fledged two-day holiday. We could make it seem as if a hurricane was coming to town – meaning that EVERYTHING should stop working suddenly for two days while we all sit around and catch up on bad TV shows.

It's brilliant! I mean, if we're going to be getting a lot of snow, we might as well enjoy it, instead of it being just a giant, gargantuan annoyance. From now on, everything should be shut down when it even flurries a little – just in case more snow is on the way. Also, we should have no school when it rains and sometimes when the sun shines really brightly in our eyes.

I love days off. Days off are even better than weekends, because they are unexpected. There is NO BETTER feeling in the WORLD than when you wake up in the morning, expecting to go to school, and then find it's canceled, and you can fall back to sleep. Nevermind that you're usually not tired anymore because you're so excited that school is canceled, and you end up eating Pop Tarts, watching Sally Jessy, at like 10 in the morning. Nevermind that you had only one class anyway, and usually skip it. It's no school!

Which immediately takes me back to my childhood years, when the days I didn't have school were the happiest of my life. You remember it, right? You remember watching the news at 6 in the morning and waiting, ever so unpatiently, until the announcements at the bottom of the screen finally came to your school – and then seeing your school passed over. And yelling and yelling that your town sucked and telling your parents that "You hate them because they moved here."

This always happened to me. I live in Framingham, which had the curious habit of NEVER CANCELING SCHOOL. We were one of those schools, too, with no delay system, meaning we could either cancel school or have school. We had school a lot.

And of course, the town right after us in the list, Franklin, NEVER had school. What is in Franklin that requires them to treat their kids like spoiled little brats? To this day, I HATE Franklin with a passion, even though I've never been there. It just seems like a dumb place. I hate you, Franklin, cause whenever you showed up on the list I knew that Framingham, yet again, had school.

And so I'd sloppily get ready for school in the morning, a scowl on my face, not looking forward to walking or driving in the crap. I'd slowly shower, eat breakfast, and curse and hate everything, forever. Then I'd walk or drive to school, almost dying on the way, and sit through hours and hours of teachers trying to be funny, saying things like "Wow – you thought we'd have no school today!" or "Wow – I just came from Franklin and all the kids were home in bed!".

But now, we have our revenge. It's about time. A little tiny storm came, and we got two days off to do nothing and eat Pop Tarts. Finally, all is right in the world – we're the Franklin now, and I'm loving it.

Bryan McAllister is a Collegian Columnist.

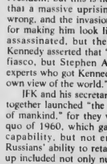
Write for Ed/Op!

Profiles in cowardice

"Some chinks are beginning to show in the Kennedy armor, and the truth about him is starting to come out."



SIMON PONGRATZ

Last Winter break, after a long hiatus from the movie theaters, I finally saved up $8.50 and went to see Thirteen Days. It was a great movie, despite Kevin Costner's ridiculous attempt at a Boston accent, which almost ruined it. As far as I know, the movie proved to be pretty accurate as a historical account of the Cuban Missile Crisis, and the scene in which Kevin Costner, as Ken O'Donnell, says something like "if the sun comes up tomorrow, it's only because of the will of great men," almost brought a tear to my eye. Almost.

While the movie was excellent, the message left a little to be desired, for Thirteen Days joins the rest of Hollywood and popular culture on the whole in presenting John F. Kennedy as something he was not. Kennedy, as far as great men go, was not one himself. Great men achieve things well beyond their means, and are more than they seem. Kennedy, throughout his entire life, had been given everything – just like our current not-so-great president – and he seemed to be much more than he was.

Some chinks are beginning to show in the Kennedy armor, and the truth about him is starting to come out. Books like The Dark Side of Camelot detail the President's sordid affairs, among other things. Seymour Hersh asserts that Kennedy didn't even write his book Profiles in Courage, but that his father paid someone else to do it. The rumors about election fraud in Illinois persist to this day as a kind of open secret.

The love for President Kennedy has become a sort of unofficial religion here – Kennedy is the Christ figure, the man-god who was struck down in his moment of glory. We hope for his Arthurian return to save us in our darkest hour. As a child, I remember reading a poem that went along with a picture of President Kennedy: "Don't let it be forgot; that once there was a spot; for one brief, shining moment; that was known as Camelot."

Chomsky's analysis of Kennedy points to the "moral cowardice and intellectual corruption that are the natural concomitants of unchallenged privilege." Popular history, which casts Kennedy as "the lonely hero, struck down as... he sought to prevent a U.S. war in Vietnam" could not be more wrong. Movies like JFK (or as Gore Vidal calls it, "the gospel according to Oliver Stone") and others irresponsibly foster this false image.

In fact, Kennedy deserves much of the blame for Vietnam. During his administration, the United States made the conscious decision to support the created state of South Vietnam, a position that was in most ways untenable. It was supposedly vital to our national interest to support the failing regime. But while the administration was speaking to the public about the relentless march of Communism, U. Alexis Johnson, Kennedy's Undersecretary of State, spoke to the Economic Club of Detroit, stating why the "great powers" (his words) were interested in Southeast Asia:

"First, it provides a lush climate, fertile soil, rich natural resources, a relatively sparse population... and room to expand. The countries of Southeast Asia produce rich exportable surpluses such as rice, rubber, teak, corn, tin, spices, oil, and many others..."

As soon as Kennedy was elected, he approved secret plans for military 'counterinsurgency' action in Laos and Vietnam, while increasing funds for the South Vietnamese army (ARVN). Despite speaking in 1956 about "the amazing success of President Diem," Kennedy allowed the CIA to support a coup against him in 1963, which resulted in Diem's execution. The number of American 'advisers' grew from a few hundred under Eisenhower to 15,000 by 1963.

Kennedy set the standard for American involvement in Vietnam, and Johnson and Nixon took the policies to the extreme. In 1964, Ambassador Lodge phoned General Khanh and stated that "The United States Government would in the immediate future be 'preparing U.S. public opinion' for actions against North Vietnam." This call came only two months before the Gulf of Tonkin affair, which prompted full scale American military action in Vietnam (notice the quoted phrase; it's the same today – the media 'prepares' public opinion for war). If Kennedy had been alive, it wouldn't have made any difference.

The invasion of Cuba (Bay of Pigs) in 1961 is often passed off as 'bad advice' from the generals to the President, but this is not entirely true. Kennedy's belief that a massive uprising would overthrow Castro was wrong, and the invasion was crushed. Furious at Castro for making him look like a fool, Kennedy ordered him assassinated, but the CIA just couldn't pull it off. Kennedy asserted that 'the experts' had led him into the fiasco, but Stephen Ambrose writes "It was not the experts who got Kennedy into the Bay of Pigs; it was his own view of the world."

JFK and his secretary of Defense, Robert McNamara, together launched "the greatest arms race in the history of mankind," for they were not content with the status quo of 1960, which gave the United States first-strike capability, but not enough missiles to destroy the Russians' ability to retaliate in some strength. The build up included not only nuclear weapons, but also conventional and 'irregular' or guerrilla forces as well. While Eisenhower had been forced to avoid involvement in Vietnam, "JFK wanted, and got, the ability to intervene anywhere."

Gore Vidal knew Kennedy personally, and he wrote a surprisingly optimistic article about him in 1961. A chilling line surfaces in the middle, which reads, "[the presidency] today is literally killing, and despite his youth, Kennedy may very well not survive." His vitality must have truly been amazing, and those who knew JFK say that life was just a little more fun when he was around. In an uncommonly positive conclusion to his essay, Vidal states that perhaps "a torpid society has at last been stirred by its youthful leader," thankfully, he says, "Civilizations are rarely given a second chance."

As a footnote, added in 1992, Vidal revises his view on Kennedy. "I liked Kennedy personally to the end. But I did not like his presidency from the day he invaded Cuba to the last month of his life when he turned the Cold War hot in Vietnam." He adds, "Secretly, I think he thought war was fun."

It is not likely that the popular view of Kennedy and Camelot will be revised anytime soon. Such icons are important to the national psyche. It should be understood, however, that in a country where moral courage is the most important – and usually nonexistent – quality of a President, Kennedy's elitist view of the world and his life of unchallenged privilege made him ignorant to the human qualities that will "transcend the rise and fall of every empire," in Robert Massie's words. Kennedy was, in the end, a failure.

Information from Gore Vidal's United States, Howard Zinn's The Twentieth Century, Noam Chomsky's Year 501, Stephen Ambrose's Rise to Globalism, and William Duiker's The Sacred War was used in this article.

Simon Pongratz is a Collegian Columnist.

An immodest proposal

BILL TARKIN

Anyone who has ever worked a job or managed finances realizes the importance of the dollars they keep at the bank. But regardless of its importance, every tax season the federal government seizes a percentage of that money and uses it to finance their operations, thereby obtaining the loss of that capital disrupts the lives of many Americans. Who wouldn't want to keep more of the money they've earned? From wealthy entrepreneurs to impoverished students, taxpayers lament surrendering their hard-earned cash to the IRS.

Over the next ten years, financial experts at the President's Office of Management and Budget [OMB] have predicted a federal surplus of $5.6 trillion. President Bush hopes that the greed of most taxpayers will support his use of the surplus for a gargantuan tax cut, legislation he believes will legitimize his administration. On Feb. 27, Bush presented both houses of Congress with an outline of his $1.96 trillion budget. By reducing funds for ten federal agencies including a 3.6 percent reduction in crucial Energy spending the plan will cut taxes by approximately $1.6 trillion over the next ten years. Overall federal spending will grow by four percent – barely more than the inflation rate – compared to the six-percent increase of each of the last three years.

On April 1, the House Ways and Means Committee took only six hours to approve a $1 trillion reduction in individual tax rates. The bill, approved by a partisan vote of 23 to 15, would retroactively create an interim 12 percent bracket and give a tax cut this year of $180 to individuals and $360 to couples. House Republicans estimated the cost of the bill at $958 billion over ten years, well within the affordable within their projected surplus. But Despite the GOP interpretation of the plan's price, Bush's tax proposal still costs too much for the federal government to afford. Hopefully, when the bill passes the floor of the House, the Senate does not act as hastily as its Capitol Hill counterpart in approving Bush's tax plan. By refusing to allow House Democrats to offer them an alternative tax proposal, the GOP has forced the Senate to make an extremely important decision about the future of the national economy. Although House Democrats have presented their Republican colleagues with a proposal costing less than half ($460 billion over ten years) of Bush's plan, the GOP stubbornly supports the President only. Committee Republicans dismissed a suggested Democratic provision to the tax bill that would cancel the cuts if the projected surplus disappears. Therefore, the Senate will have to decide whether or not to approve the President's plan. Bush dictates terms without question to the 212 House Republicans who outnumber their Democratic counterparts by ten, rendering that chamber unfit for legislative debate.

The President's budget proposal provides for three possible dilemmas. First, by returning more money to taxpayers while slowing domestic spending, the tax cuts may lower the value of the dollar and cause inflation. Second, by doggedly refusing Democratic "trigger" provisions to the tax bill, the GOP has threatened to undermine the Bush administration's promise to repay $2 trillion of the estimated $3.2 trillion national debt over the next ten years. Third, by returning to the upper class more money than the middle and lower classes combined, the tax cut may further widen the gap between social classes in the United States. According to Bush, the wealthiest one-percent of Americans would receive 22 percent of the money returned by the tax cut and 51 percent of the tax relief would go to Americans earning more than $100,000. If the grotesque disparity between classes perpetuated by trickle-down economics still survives in the memories of our U.S. Senators, then Bush's proposal won't leave Congress. Let's hope they're non-partisan students of political history.

Undoubtedly, many Americans would cherish extra money in their bank accounts. Early estimates predict that taxpayers could save anywhere from $500 to $3000 a year on their W-2s. However, Bush's tax proposal threatens the future of the American economy and should be stopped by Congress. While his tax cuts cuts appease the greedy eye, frugal irises are less easily misled. The success of Bush_s tax bill depends on the ability of the GOP to capitalize on their dominance of the Executive and Legislative branches, a federal monopoly that hasn't occurred since the administration of Dwight D. Eisenhower fifty years ago. However, Bush's plan represents nothing less than a throwback to a more recent year, 1981, when Ex-President Ronald Reagan introduced his proposed tax cuts. Certainly, the devastating recession of the 1980s provides an adequate warning against supporting such a tax cut. Hopefully, more of our senators would rather pay less than two dollars for a gallon of gas tomorrow than buy a diamond-studded wristwatch today.

Bill Larkin is a Collegian Columnist.

You've reached the emergency snow hotline for Wednesday March 07, 2001
The Campus is open today. Your Biology test will go on as Scheduled. You do have to give that speech at 8:00AM.
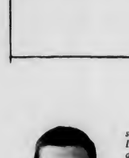
I bet you wish you didn't drink that 40oz while playing
Snood till 5:00AM
King Cobra
40 oz
LYON REINHARDT

Viva la vinyl!



MATT DESPRES

"See this needle. A-see my hand. Drop, drop, dropping it down oh so gently. Wall here it comes. I touch the plane. Turn me up, won't turn you away..."

To say music is an integral part of my life is to sell it short, to undermine the many, many times an album or song has managed to keep me afloat. There is no word, no single phrase, that sufficiently describes what music has given me. Everyone has their saving grace, that something that never fails to uplift and inspire. Music does that for me.

Even though I hold the relationship in high regard, I had come to feel as of late that it had hit a plateau of sorts, that little of the music I was hearing (the new material, at least) was raising the bar and challenging me in any significant way. That is, of course, the goal of any good recording: to engage the listener in an intimate manner, to move past the exterior and dissect the inner workings. What makes the song move? What's the thing that makes it flow, the transitions that make the next note or verse worth holding on for? A good song will introduce itself many times over, as the variables gain new values and alter the landscape for us, the listener.

Little of what passes for music on the radio these days is capable of that, a fact I had come to terms with some time ago. It's a pristine wasteland with no dimensions, fit only for parading act after act that sound no different from each other. It's a disheartening way to discover music, especially for the younger set, who perhaps will never know the feeling that older generations have had, that of being inspired by the simple turn of a radio dial. For most it's a bygone time, relegated to conversations of nostalgia between our parents.

Which brings me to vinyl.

"Spin, spin... Spin the black circle..."

My friend Tony and I had been discussing albums, and he made mention of an old turntable sitting at home, wasting away space. Less than a week later I returned home to find a beast of a machine sitting outside my door, bathed in dust and begging to be brought back to life. Next to it sat three bags of albums, real albums, like three old bottles with the genies of a thousand old musicians milling about inside, waiting to be released.

His collection was wildly eclectic, boasting of everything from Cat Stevens to AC/DC. None of it fit and yet it was perfect. There was U2's War, sandwiched between Floyd's The Wall and Goodbye Yellow Brick Road by Elton John. Boston? Check. Seger and the Silver Bullet Band? Check. Men at Work? Represented no less than two times in this collection.

"You're so warm. Oh, the ritual when I lay down your crooked arm."

Wet set it up, running the speakers through an old receiver, and let it breathe. It was like hearing music for the first time. Sure, there was an abundance of vinyl kicking around when I was young, and I had to play in and around my Dad's Beatles and Stones albums, but now I was old enough to truly appreciate it. Every pop and hiss, each scratch that knocked the album back a note or forward a beat. On vinyl, unlike CD, you never hear a song the same way twice.

Perhaps just as beautiful as the music inside were the album covers, large canvases that offer a sense of the artist, provocative imagery designed to reflect the music within. They represent a time when everything about the album mattered, from the music to the liner notes. Today's conventional CD packaging largely fails at that, because of size and the rush to get albums on the street.

Another beautiful thing about vinyl is that, technologically, it is far removed from what the present culture has told us to be the norm. It's not Napster; there's a mystery to finding a song on vinyl, a treasure-hunt quality that can't be replicated by any computer software. The search for the ratty black disc will lead you through music stores old and new, little Mom and Pop places saturated with dirty bins full of invaluable gems. At times, perhaps more importantly, the search becomes the people you meet along the way. Other people are out there, all members of the same community, drawn together by a love and fascination with the prehistoric medium. Each has a story, a passion they're willing to share, bred by the common interest in music. It's an exclusive community that continues to thrive because there is an honesty to it; a feeling of pleasure that comes from the simple things. Try and find that on Napster.

On vinyl, everything seems more honest. The music and the vocals retain an organic texture that is sacrificed in the transferal to higher mediums. A CD will give you pristine performance, but really, since when has music, real music, been looked upon as a pristine artform? It's all soul and sweat, a dirty energy that comes pouring uniquely out of every artist. Often enough, it's the imperfections that make a song special, not the forced efforts and studio trickery that gloss over the flaws. Take, for example, Led Zeppelin. They remain one of the dirtiest, most primal bands in the history of rock and roll, a band tailor-made for vinyl if there ever was one. Robert Plant sang from first place no singer has dared to near since, a voice so volatile and shifting that it seems only just to place it on vinyl. I realized I hadn't truly heard Zeppelin until the thunderclaps of John Bonham and the howl of Plant fought their way through the static and slight hiss of the turntable. It's a powerful thing, to connect with a band, a sound, an idea, on such a base level.

Vinyl albums will never enjoy the success they once did, but how something performs against the masses has always meant very little to me. Some bands still release albums this way (Pearl Jam, Radiohead), of course, for DJ's and other turntable enthusiasts. For everyone else, though, it's become a one-on-one relationship, a hobby that still exists for those willing to seek it out. I suggest you do.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist.

This is not a humor column

ELIOTT G. GARBAUSKAS

I'm not going to mince words here: I would very much like to see Kirsten Dunst naked. I think she's beautiful, and the fact that I don't know anything of substance about her has no effect on this. Similarly, I read recently that Republican politicians want to open up vast amounts of federal land currently protected as part of the national parks system for fuel prospecting. This worries me, because I've seen lovely photographs of the area, and I'm an outdoorsy kind of person.

I don't think anyone would argue with me that in the first half of that represents an objectification of women, or at least an objectification of one woman. Can we call the second half an objectification of land? Not being familiar with the land myself, I can only understand it as an idea, an abstraction, and the facts I read about it, and pictures I see of it, and nature programs I watch about it do nothing to change this. I am unfamiliar with it in all the ways that matter; it is an object, something which I can judge categorically but not understand intimately. Reading an article about Kirsten Dunst makes the idea of her more appealing, just like reading a pamphlet about the evils of drilling in federal reserve land makes the idea of that land more appealing, but neither of those turns the idea into true familiarity.

Here's where I'm going with this: the globalization of our media is turning us into a society of objectifiers. When I say media, I do not mean the literal mode of communication, but the newspaper, television, radio, and magazine conglomerates. I mean it as one might refer to the "liberal media."

I once waited in line on a hot day in the city for over three hours to get an album signed by the Smashing Pumpkins, one of my favorite bands. Hero-worship, sure. It's what any devoted fan would do. It's easy to answer the question of why I wanted to do this: I enjoy the band's music, and wanted to tell them so myself while getting a little personal remembrance of the event. This answer is only slightly less obvious: I wanted to bridge the gap that exists between drop-in-the-bucket fan and rock star; I wanted the band to be more than photographs in liner notes. This, however, is the phrasing I'm looking for: I wanted to de-objectify them, because I understood that an object is necessarily unreal, unfamiliar, shiny but without substance. Up until that point my understanding of the band, apart from their music, was composed of costumed images of them in their videos and the piles of facts I'd read in articles. Did I know them, truly, based on those images and facts? Of course not, which comes as no surprise, as such is the nature of rock stardom.

How different is the status of a rock star from that of this threatened land the Republicans want to tear into? Isn't the land, to me, nothing more than some images and facts?

Of course it is. And of course I wish it were more. I am, as I said, an outdoorsy kind of person who wants to care about environmental matters, and I believe strongly that our inability to place a dollar value on pristine public land is leading to horrible, shortsighted misuse. I believe that the only reason we are not, as a culture, more aware of our dependence on the environment is that only recently has the U.S. begun to run out of relatively untouched land to befoul. We have become so disconnected and regret our mistakes, and in the meantime people interested in making money have no patience to listen to people trying to prophesize this coming environmental funeral.

So I cannot truly care about this threatened land out west because of my awareness of it only as an object, a cloud of factoids and TV footage. Why is it only this? Because the media presents only that. Can we fault them for this? No, not really. It's all they have the time or ability to convey. Modern mass communication is undeniably interested in quantity over quality; from sitcoms to newspaper articles we have come to pop music, everything is about gloss and speed. Why? In the time it takes to establish depth and subtly, someone else can come along with a flashier piece of glass, and our attention, and therefore money, is lost. These pieces of glass, these objects, are all we have, therefore, from which to construct our world. Kirsten Dunst is a piece of glass, as is the land out west, as are the Smashing Pumpkins.

Now allow me to digress, but only for a moment.

The soundtrack for O Brother, Where Art Thou? begins with a brilliant piece of music: a southern chain gang singing "Po Lazarus" to the rhythm of their sledgehammers. One could write entire paragraphs about the unity of existence and expression here, about the harmonizing of circumstance, society and the human need to communicate into art, and the ensuing purity of that art; one could write about the way in which the film's environment, its reality, grows out of its music, and what that then says of the connection between art and reality, between the way in which we recieve the world, and the way in which we create it; one could say that such a song is no more art than living is art, than a momentary glance through a windshield is art.

So let us define art. I say that art is communication, even if it be self communication. And it is, in that way, an effort against objectification. It seeks intimacy through discourse. The prisoners in O Brother seek intimacy with each other to ease their plight; the filmmakers, through their selection of the song, seek intimacy between the audience and the prisoners, between the audience and the film's reality.

So if art is communication, can we call the anti-drilling pamphlet art? Of course. Is it an effective means of achieving intimacy between the reader and the threatened land? No, because it doesn't speak the same language as our sympathies; that is, it concerns itself only with factual knowledge and shallow emotional plays, and cannot speak to that part of our mind that produces true familiarity and intimacy. It is, therefore, an artistic failure. Which awakens in us more sympathy for the plight of starving people we've never met: a news broadcast on poverty, or a single, stark, black and white photograph? Which makes you want to visit the Rocky Mountains more: a vibrant oil painting, or a tourist brochure?

So politically motivated literature makes for bad art – not very profound. What about the movies that Kirsten Dunst makes, and the songs the Smashing Pumpkins write? The extent to which it grants its audience a true intimacy with something else in our world is the extent to which it succeeds (and, of course, no one will agree on exactly how successful they are – such is the nature of art's subjectivity). Art, of the capital-A variety, moves willfully towards such intimacy, while art of the mass media variety seeks only distraction and superficiality, or, at best, information devoid of nuance.

In other words, art seeks the same understanding as our newspapers and magazines and TV reports, but it does so not through the accumulation of bits of facts, but through the accumulation of a more essence-ial, spiritual familiarity. I know those chain-gangers, and I know the environment they inhabit, and even though all of it is fictionalized and none of it concerned with factual specificity, I cannot imagine anything media-produced that would offer the same effectiveness of communication. Art seeks intimacy between two things, and that intimacy, when successful, allows for a far greater education than any pile of facts.

And we can direct the attention of our art into the unknown, feeling our way through dark rooms until some item of truth is stumbled upon. Listen to Radiohead's Kid A closely enough and you can hear their exploration of what humankind has made of itself, you can hear their sounding-out of the dark space of modern alienation, groping for intimacy with something they cannot name. I will not pretend to know anything of substance about painting, but I cannot see a work by Van Gogh or Renoir and not see them pushing against literal sight for some greater intimacy with our world, and the way we see it. A tree is an object; a tree rendered in rough swirls is a movement, either successful or unsuccessful, towards intimacy and a greater understanding of what a tree means to he who looks upon it, and what it means to the tree to be looked upon.

There finally emerges a unification, after enough connections have been drawn. Like particles of flour and salt and sugar in dough being kneaded, we can come to understand our connectedness to everything, the intimacy reciprocal between any two things, which need not be created, merely uncovered. Lovely adolescence uncovers the connection you have with the patch of lawn your swing set used to sit on; watching an old man walk down the street uncovers the connection you have with old houses no one maintains near the center of town; love uncovers the connection you have with someone else's connections. Everything is a table waiting to have its dust blanket pulled off, and if there is one thing which will end the world, it is our willingness to walk through a blanketed house and read the signs that tell us what lies beneath, and never touch wood, and never smell fabric, and never recline in a room of texture.

Sometimes I think I could live in a painting, swim in a song, and never need anything not found there.

Elliott G. Garbauskas is a Collegian cartoonist.

An open letter to Spilman

SAM WILKINSON

Dear Zack Spilman,

Hey it's me, Sam Wilkinson, the Managing Editor of the Collegian. I'm writing this letter just to you. I'm going to offer you a piece of advice, from one newspaperman from another, from one journalist, if I might be so bold, to another. We don't have to really let others read what I'm going to tell you.

Anyway, I was reading the Minuteman the other day (you know, you guys over there are like the other white meat...) and came across your article called "An open letter to the UMass community" from your column called "From the Publisher." I just thought I'd respond. It's only appropriate when I receive a letter that I respond.

In that article, you spout off about how the rich earned their wealth, how the poor can work out of their poverty, how the State shouldn't be expected to foot the bill for some who simply don't want to work hard. You suggest that taxpayers are slaves to these chosen few who would rip off the system for their own benefit. You suggest that the State is being asked to take over the role of mother and father. Oh, and you helpfully state, thus relieving my stressed mind, that the "personal problems for a few minority students are not your fault."

In your article, you accuse these people (I'm guessing you meant these few minority students) of being "snakes, which lie in the grass as if waiting to suck away an infant's first drop of blood." Wow Zack, those are some harsh words for a group of students who are just trying to get a fair shake. But I guess you're against that fair shake.

As a taxpayer, you are strongly against your money being given to people who you feel haven't worked as hard as you have so that they can get the same education you do. You've worked for it, after all, and what were they doing? Wait: don't answer that. I wouldn't want to get your dander up. As a conservative, it's your job to oppose things that are liberal, be it the social ideas of leveling the playing field or the financial idea of taxing the rich to return that money to the poor. These are the kinds of things that people like you believe in. And that's fine, really.

But then I really thought about it. There you are, the Chairman and Publisher of the Minuteman, writing an article that basically opposes any sort of handouts for anybody. And you especially oppose handouts to people who don't agree with you. Those protesting minorities that you're writing about don't agree with you – they're pulling for the same things that you're opposing.

That's why you're different from them, Zack. That's why you have a diligent advertising staff working around the clock to sell the advertising you need to financially support your newsletter, right Zack? That's why you have a phone bank of caring Republican clubbers calling up other Republicans, asking for money, right Zack?

Oh. You don't, do you?

I think it's funny that you so vociferously oppose a government subsidy of people that you don't agree with. I mean, it certainly must be ironic for you, the publisher of the Minuteman, to oppose handouts to people you don't agree with considering that, without the handout you receive each year from the SGA, you wouldn't have a venue for your writing?

Each year, you get a chunk of money from a government (albeit a dysfunctional one) of the students. The Student Government Association gives you the money you need to publish your Minuteman. You don't get that money from advertisers, you don't get that money from donations (well, most of it); you get your money from students.

And those students whose money you use to publish your Minuteman, they don't have any choice as to how their money is used. They don't have any choice of what you publish or when you publish it or how you publish it. And the majority of students probably occasionally don't agree with what you publish and that's only because you publish occasionally.

You publish ignorant rants about how unfair it is that European history isn't considered for diversity credit (why the hell would it be?), you publish ignorant rants about how bad for us MASSPirg is, you publish lackass responsibilities across the campus, and nobody can ever check what it is that you do.

Who pays for it? I do, Zack, and so does the rest of my staff. So does the SGA. So do the minority students on campus. So does everybody. Each and every student on this campus pays for your ignorant newspaper, and then you use it to attack other students.

Zack, you're a damned hypocrite. How dare you suggest that minorities are thieves for doing something you yourself do? How dare you stand against those that would suckle off the government teat when you're busy doing the exact same thing?

Don't waste my time, don't waste my money, and don't waste the paper it takes to publish your garbage. You thought nobody would ever notice that you only have seven little club newsletter because students pay for it?

Instead of responding to legitimate critique of your woefully illogical argument, you're going to fire back, threaten, bluster and bully until you think you've won some small, pathetic little piece of justice for yourself. You'll pat yourself on the back, smoke a big stogie and celebrate the night away.

And then, when you've done all that, you march on back to the SGA and ask for next year's funding and you remember that you're a hypocrite.

Sincerely,
Sam Wilkinson
Managing Editor

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

The Mexican remains top at the box office.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Arts Editor • David Goupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com

Limp Bizkit's Borland launches side project

Wes Borland, his bro, and their high school pals.

COURTESY DAVE COULD

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

BIG DUMB FACE
Duke Lion Fights the Terror
Flip/Interscope Records

"You can never see it, or keep it in a jar/ You cannot escape it/ Not even in your car/ It is not a mineral, animal or plant/ You can never find it/ Don't try because you can't/ Make it so it hurts you face/ Then touch it/ Spank it till it stinks/ Then touch it baby/ It's weight doesn't matter/ Neither does its size/ If you look into it, it burns out your eyes/ Do not breath around it/ Sniffle sneeze or cough/ If you were to touch it/ Your skin would sizzle off...It's the mighty penis laser!" – Big Dumb Face, "Mighty Penis Laser"

An analogy about Limp Bizkit can be made. They're like that trendy kid you went to elementary school with, who gives everyone wedgies and eats half of your lunch without asking for any. They may be one of today's top draws, but no one will deny their piercingly irritating personalities. Everything they say and do simply support that annoyance. If that isn't bad enough, they're branching off.

Duke Lion Fights the Terror is the debut release of Limp Bizkit guitarist Wes Borland's side project, Big Dumb Face. Borland announced during Limp Bizkit's incredibly successful Anger Management Tour that, though he loves the band that has made him a superstar, he wants to try something new. He admitted that creativity would be impossible with Limp Bizkit because they bleed so incredibly in the body of mainstream rock's blasé ness. A side project for Borland was inevitable.

Big Dumb Face finds Wes Borland and his brother Scott valiantly taking the responsibility of lead vocals. Two other members of the five-person band went to high school with the brothers.

Big Dumb Face is certainly not Limp Bizkit. It is very different. There is not a heavy concentration on pre-recorded music, and there is no abundant presence of a huge lead singer. Instead we find a much heavier attentiveness to uniqueness of sound. In a pink-floydish way, the album is very eerie and interesting.

However, there is definitely an influence of Bizkit in Big Dumb Face. This could not be more present than on a track called, "Robot." "It's been way too long since an ass whipping when down," the band sings. "You beat up my cousin, so now we have to throw down." Hmm, beating people up and throwing down where have we heard that before?

That being said, the name of Borland's band suits the album perfectly. Each mind-numbing track is incessantly stupider than the next. The lyrics are ridiculous. Just look at the quote from the beginning of this review. On one of the wackiest songs on the record, "Kali is the Sweet Hog," the Borland boys sing, "Kali lights children's heads on fire." We don't ever find out why Kali lights children's heads on fire, but surely the lyric comes from some unintelligent inside the band joke. I suppose when you make four-bazillion dollars, you can afford to release something so idiotic.

Hopefully Wes Borland and Big Dumb Face do not take themselves seriously. With a band name like that, and the hideously stupid lyrics that Duke Lion Fights the Terror has to offer, it seems impossible that they do. However, if you're going to make a statement about the status of your future music and the blandness of sounds of your past, why do it in a way that simply makes you look more silly than the band you're so frantically trying to escape from. It seems apparent that for Borland, Big Dumb Face is a Big Dumb waste of his time, talent and money.

Gaza Strippers release a solid potpourri of old and new tracks

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

GAZA STRIPPERS
Electric Bible: The New Testament
Triple X

It seems as if the phrase "rock in the Hellacopters/ Supersuckers vein" has become cliché quicker than expected. There seems to be a lot of straightforward had-ass rock hands coming out nowadays, like The Hives, and while the abundance is only likely to be noticeable to the fan searching for the latest Gluecifer 12-inch, it's definitely a good thing.

COURTESY WORLDWIDE WEB

Former Supersuckers standout Rick Sims is now strutting his stuff with the Gaza Strippers.

Gaza Strippers are one of the latest entries on to the scene, but frontman Rick Sims is no new kid. He's played guitar for Didgits and Supersuckers, and his Gaza work should be recognizable to anyone familiar with those styles. For a good clue of the Gaza sound just check out the thank-you list: Nashville Pussy, Dictators, Rocket From the Crypt, you get the picture.

So there are no surprises here, but who cares? If you like this style than you probably already own Electric Bible: The New Testament. And really, this is a style that doesn't pride itself on variation from album to album or artist to artist. Chances are if you liked The Evil Powers of Rock 'N' Roll then you liked Purrin' the Dues, and vice versa. And what's not to like about these albums? They rock! Well, I can understand the schools of thought that would say otherwise.

A big turnoff of this style is the fact that for all the cranked-up volume, these bands are just hair-metal bands without the hair but with the same empty lyrics and predictable sounds. No, there will be no social commentary here in The New Testament about anything but the expected (girls, speed, success), and the music is exactly what one would foresee (short, fast, dirty). But I wouldn't agree that this is all bad. Rick Sims obviously is a very talented guitarist, and his melodies are nearly all memorable here (helps that it's a comp), hanging out behind the raging fuzzy drive of the song but there to find nonetheless. And the excess-laden content is a welcome antidote to today's prevalent mope-rock, right?

Right, but to a point. Gaza Strippers are good enough that they would rock out anytime (I can only imagine them live), but a scene dominated by bands like them might not be as cool as is believed. After hearing "Outside" or the latest self-loathing anthem on the radio for the billionth time, Gaza kicking out the jams through your stereo seems like a gift from above. But if the purists had their way and "real" rock bands like Gaza took over, the beauty of unabashed rock might not seem so great after the billionth song about driving fast or drunkenness at the strip club. Substance-light but attitude-heavy stuff like this is great, but in moderation.

That said, this album is really electric all the way through. It's a compilation of tracks from previous Gaza Strippers albums with some unreleased tracks thrown in, but the beauty of it is that it doesn't feel pieced together. Electric Bible sounds like a solid album beginning to end, so good work by whomever chose the songs and placement. There's no funny business going on here, just ten rockers with no slow songs, freaky instruments or wild experimentation to be found. There's even a riotous cover of Elvis Costello's "Lipstick Vogue" that's just as gldy and (un?)likely as the Supersuckers cover of Merle Haggard's "I Can't Hold Myself in Line." There's no point in going through the intricacies of the individual tracks, take my word that they're all solid, with "Laced Candy" being my personal favorite.

To the converted, let there be no delay, and to the curious, the Electric Bible is the perfect substitute for Sunday services.

Chris Rock stale in Down

By Nick Pizzolato
Collegian Staff

DOWN TO EARTH
directed by The Weitz Brothers with Chris Rock
playing at Cinemark, Hadley

COURTESY IMDB.COM

Chris Rock and co-star Regina King.

Chris Rock's new film Down to Earth is not really a film, but more an attempt to get people to recognize Rock as a comic and a leading man. His attempt to break through as a leading man in a comedy is poor and ultimately fails with this bland movie that is based on Warren Beatty's Heaven Can Wait. Despite Rock's enthusiastic performance and the support of popular actors Chazz Palminteri and Eugene Levy, this film is nothing but mediocre.

Chris Rock is Lance Burton, a street-smart bicycle deliveryman who gives his wit and sharp humor to those who try and stifle his creativity. By night he is a stand up comic trying to make his mark at the Apollo, but there is one problem: he gets stage fright and freezes on stage, getting him constantly booed off and earning him the nickname Booey. When he learns that the Apollo is being torn down he makes a promise to himself that he will be on the last show. As he is riding his bike and thinking about his new act, he is hit by a truck and is brought to Heaven by Eugene Levy.

It turns out that Heaven is a kicking nightclub, and instead of waiting to get into the gates, St. Peter is letting people into the club, telling one patron to "go to Hell." How original. Rock knows he doesn't belong there and once he talks to Chazz Palminteri (the head angel, who runs the nightclub a la DeNiro in Casino), he realizes that he was brought to Heaven too early. They work out a deal: Rock will go back to earth in another person's body. Unfortunately the only one that could be used at all is Mr. Wellington who is one of the richest men in America. So until they can find a body for amateur night Rock will inhibit the 50 year-old, rich, white Mr. Wellington. And in the words of Chris Rock himself, "comedy ensues."

But trust me, it doesn't. What does follow is Chris Rock being Lance Burton being Mr. Wellington. The rest of the film is poorly laid out, poorly directed and most disappointing, poorly acted. There is no story as Rock does his stand up act. And it's not even original stand up comedy: if you have seen his Emmy award winning "Chris Rock Show" or his brilliantly funny comedy hour "Bigger and Blacker" you have seen all the stand up comedy aspects of this movie. When Rock starts talking and there is a crowd around him, you have heard his rambling. This is what makes the movie drag and only halfway entertaining, the routine of hearing material that we have already been exposed too.

The funniest thing about the movie is that we see Chris Rock but everyone else sees Mr. Wellington. So when we see Rock singing along to "Gin and Juice" or bouncing to "Ride or Die" by DMX, everyone else sees Mr. Wellington singing the songs. But even that gets old and unfunny as the movie stumbles through its 90-minute running time.

The Weitz brothers, who directed American Pie, tried once again to bring that spastic humor to Earth but fail when their script simply doesn't take off. Even the performances by Chazz Palminteri and Eugene Levy are poor, both playing characters they have played in the past (Anaylze This and American Pie respectively).

Despite some laugh-out-loud-funny instances, Earth is perhaps one of the least funny movies I have seen in a long time. Rock either needs to find better scripts or go back to being the zany supporting character that we have seen in other films.

COURTESY IMDB.COM

Hijinks ensue.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Seawolf attackman Matt Campolettano had the unenviable task of going up against his brother, Minuteman netminder Chris Campolettano.

Lacrosse civil war unfolds

Brothers become foes at Garber

There is arguably no stronger force on this Earth than the bond among brothers. It is a force stronger than 9.8 meters per second, than 8.9 on the Richter scale, or even 18 inches of the white stuff. The power of brotherly love is such that nothing is ever placed before it and nothing can ever come between it, but for the brothers Campolettano an interesting dilemma arose over the weekend.

For Chris and Matt Campolettano, lacrosse has been a mainstay in their lives for many years. Unfortunately on Saturday, the two brothers were on opposing sides of the field and lacrosse is exactly what put them there.

Like two siblings facing each other in a civil war, the Campolettanos found themselves battling over a conflict of interest. Chris' interest lies in the Massachusetts lacrosse team for whom he plays goalie. Matt, a junior and one year younger than his brother, plays attack for Stony Brook, but more importantly the team that UMass defeated on Saturday.

"I didn't get much sleep last night, praying [Matt] didn't score and that would be the end of it," Chris said after the Minutemen's 17-8 victory.

Fortunately Chris only had to make one save on his brother, a wrap-around chance early in the second quarter, but that fact did nothing to lessen the intensity.

"He didn't call me last night, so I guess he wanted to play dirty," Chris said.

At least for one day, it seems there was no conflict of interest, as brotherly love may have been taken a back seat to team camaraderie.

Although Matt did not have many chances to earn bragging rights by burying a goal past his brother, his teammates were certainly not deterred from shooting.

Chris played an integral role in the UMass victory, making 10 saves and turning back a strong Seawolf surge in the second frame.

The senior goalie played a very aggressive style throughout the entire contest. The Maroon and White netminder was at the top of his crease to challenge every shot and he had no qualms about straying off his line to aid in clearing attempts.

Excuse the elder Campolettano if he was at an emotional high by game time; playing against your brother is the kind of thing you prepare for all week, not only on the day of the game.

"I talked to [Chris] last week and he said I hope [Matt] scores five goals and I hope we win 30 to 5," UMass head coach Greg Canella said.

The moment most indicative of the senior goalies intensity came on a chance midway through the fourth quarter. The Seawolves most dangerous scorer, Kevin Pall, received a pass behind the Maroon and White defense and was all alone on a breakaway. Instead of staying on his line Campolettano boldly moved towards the attackman. Pall, seemingly stunned by the goalie's audacity, forced a high shot that was deflected away by the senior who immediately pumped his fists in victory.

Maybe it had to do with a sibling rivalry, mutual respect, or possibly a grudging admiration, but what did Chris say he shared with his brother after the game?

"A little high five...that's all."

Matthew F. Sacco is a Collegian Columnist.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Chris Campolettano showed his little brother how it's done, stopping 10 shots en route to a Maroon and White victory at Garber Field.

■ lacrosse

continued from page 10

continue to play the way we've played but with more intensity and we need to be more patient on the offensive end," Canella said.

The Minutemen didn't have to be very patient at all, as junior Don Little recovered the opening face off of the half and found Jeff Seals who rushed the net and scored. The goal not only gave UMass an 8-5 lead, but it also sparked a seven-goal run that all but put the game away.

After attackman Dan Paccione and junior defenseman Matt McFarland netted goal to give the Maroon and White a five goal lead, co-captain Guski led by example, as he fired UMass' next two score

The senior's first goal was fairly routine, while his second was anything but. The play started with senior Kevin Dell corralling the ball behind the net. Dell avoided a check before finding a streaking Guski coming in from the point. The captain faked around one defender at the slot – he then moved right after receiving the pass and immediately flipped it behind his back for the goal.

"It just came naturally. I felt the kid coming on my left and I just stuck it around the back," Guski said of the spectacular play.

The Minutemen and the Seawolves matched goals for the rest of the quarter as the third frame ended with the Maroon and White up by eight.

UMass merely padded its stats in the fourth with Don Little finishing off his hat trick and senior Rich Kunkel tallying his third goal of the year.

The determining factor in the win was something that has become a theme in the early part of the season – balanced scoring.

"If some guys have an off day, other guys step it up," Canella said.

Two of the players that certainly stepped it up were hat trick mates Little and Guski.

Little was anything but gun shy in the contest and why should he be, as his heavy shot and his unbridled intensity led to three goals.

"What he has done intensity wise in practice has really carried over to the field," said Cannella of his feisty midfielder.

Although the level of competition was not at its peak on Saturday, this is still an important victory as far as the conference and the season.

"It's huge. To win the ECAC you have to beat a team like Stony Brook, you might have to win every game in the league," Canella said.

The Minutemen took their first step on Saturday; they moved just slightly closer to a conference title and a return to the NCAA Tournament.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

him with a blistering wrist shot.

"I was saying to myself 'just shoot it, just shoot it,'" Nizwantowski said. "Conklin's a great goalie, and he robbed me earlier, and the last five times I've deked and missed, so I just wanted to shoot it."

The Nizwantowski breakaway was the result of a UNH (19-10-6, 10-8-5 HE) defensive breakdown. Sean Austin was caught pinching in and Jay Shaw beat him in a race for the puck. The senior then found a streaking Nizwantowski behind the Wildcat defense for the goal.

Trailing 1-0 heading into the third period, the Maroon and White needed a goal to prolong its season, but was unable to solve Conklin. But it all changed in the blink of an eye as freshman defenseman Mike Lubesnick fell down in an attempt to clear the Wildcat zone and Jimmy Callahan was there to make UNH pay.

Callahan picked up the puck along the left wing boards and broke in alone on Conklin. The sophomore beat the Hobey Baker Award finalist over the right shoulder for the game-tying goal.

The Wildcat came early in the first when Matt Swain banged home the rebound of a Garret Stafford shot. Johnson made the initial save but the Minutemen were unable to clear UNH players from the front of the net and Swain was the beneficiary.

"Obviously I'm disappointed, that's all I have to say about it," UNH head coach Dick Umile said. "I don't think the weekend off had anything to do with it, there's no excuse."

UNH 3, UMass 0

Living for one more day turned out to be all that UMass (8-22-4, 7-15-2 HE) would be able to muster as its playoff hopes were shattered with a 3-0 loss to UNH (20-10-6, 11-8-5 HE).

On a night in which seven seniors were honored in a pre-game ceremony, the Wildcats spoiled their final game at the William D. Mullins Center in front of 3,788 fans.

With the loss the Maroon and White's valiant chase to catch Merrimack came to an end as the Warriors claimed the final Hockey East playoff spot with the Minutemen loss.

"I don't think we played bad [Friday]," Umile said. "We just didn't get it done and crazy things happen. The guys came out and we needed to get a win tonight and we did."

"I thought that played a little harder and with a little more passion than they did [Friday]," Cahoon said. "I thought that the biggest difference was our lack of energy and even our lack of emotion."

For much of the game it was a battle of the goaltenders.

"Markus [Helanen] stood on his head tonight," Cahoon said. "He's held this program together for three years and that is a huge weight to have to handle game-in and game-out.

"All-in-all I was really happy for him that he got to showcase his talents in his last game."

After a scoreless first period, UNH got on the board when David Busch netted a goal 7:15 into the second period. The goal was debated heavily as Helanen (37 saves) thought that he had covered up the puck, but referee Jeff Bunyon did not blow the whistle and Busch found the back of the net.

The Wildcats would add two goals late in third period to close the book on the UMass season. The first came off the stick of Joshua Prudden. A defensive lapse on a line change resulted in Prudden finding himself in alone on Helanen and the sophomore scored on a backhander.

Darren Haydar would add an empty-net goal in the last minute of play for the game's final tally.

With the shutout Conklin (17 saves) broke the Hockey East single-season shutout record with four and the UNH single-season record with five.

The Minutemen played without standout defenseman Samuli Jalkanen. The sophomore took a shot to the ankle Friday night and was unable to play because of the injury.

The senior class finished its four years in Amherst with a combined record of 37-87-14.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Toni Soderholm watched his UMass hockey team's postseason hopes fall flat in its home loss to Np. 7 New Hampshire.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

ished with a total of 35 rebounds.

"When we went zone (in the second half) went 2-3 to put our three big rebounders down in better rebounding position," Balcomb said. "But the best thing I think we did is we played man-to-man and everyone was responsible for somebody. And everyone did their job from there on out."

The Musketeer defense flat-out frustrated the UMass offense in the last stanza and forced it into making a lot of bad decisions. That, combined with the outstanding inside-outside balance of the Muskie attack, was simply too much for the underdog Minutewomen to handle.

"The thing about Xavier is that they're a relentless team," O'Brien said. "They just keep pushing and pushing and pushing. The credit goes to them. We played hard but they were able to take it to that next level."

■ seniors

continued from page 10

"He was almost at hallcourt," said Flint of Brence's final bomb. "What do you do? But we still had our chances."

The Minutemen were held at bay down the stretch by the Bonnie defense, an aggressive zone scheme that kept the lanes clogged and forced UMass to execute from the outside-in. Baron felt that the zone played right into the strengths of his players, while Flint grumbled about how such a defensive scheme can affect the style of officiating.

"Some referees won't call fouls when the other team plays a zone," Flint said.

Aside from the fireworks of DePina and Mack, the other seniors on the UMass squad turned in hot-and-cold performances on their big day. Center Kitwana Rhymer racked up game-highs in rebounds (nine) and blocks (two), while swingman Winston Smith registered two rebounds in only eight minutes of floor time. Smith had complained after practice Thursday about a sore knee, but Flint seemed to know nothing about such an injury.

This marked Mack's second Senior Day celebration, as he was honored last season before earning back another year of eligibility. Rhymer appears tickfeted for a similar situation should he be able to graduate this spring.

"Kit should be back. You see that guy back there, with the glasses?" Flint said in the press conference, motioning toward Academic Advisor Matt Komer. "That's his job."

By virtue of the loss, UMass will enter this week's Atlantic 10 Tournament as the No. 4 seed. That sets up a second-round rematch with St. Bonaventure and a possible semi final showdown with St. Joseph's. The Minutemen have fallen to both of those teams within the last six days.

"The last game-and-a-half, we just haven't played smart basketball," Flint said. "I just hope our guys can keep fighting."

PCOS and Exercise
If interested in participating in a study in the Exercise Science Department, and you have PCOS, please call Cathy at 549-1814.

SCHOLARSHIPS for Future Teachers!
STEM TEC
NSF
WANT TO FIND OUT ABOUT CAREERS IN K-12 TEACHING?
Monday March 5 12:20 pm 1033 LGRT
WANT A SCHOLARSHIP TO HELP WITH YOUR EDUCATIONAL EXPENSES WHILE YOU LEARN?
PICK UP AN APPLICATION FOR AN NSF-STEM TEC TEACHING SCHOLAR AWARD !
ALSO, LEARN ABOUT THE STEM TEC/FIVE COLLEGE SCIENCE AND MATH PRE-EDUCATION PROGRAM THAT CAN HELP JUMP-START YOUR CAREER!
Questions? Can't make it? Give us a call at 545-0734 or stop by 217 Hasbrouk lab light refreshments provided Applications due March 28, 2001
Freshmen and postbaccalaureate students are eligible

Take a step toward success!
The Daily Collegian is hiring for the position of:
Layout Manager
•Work 2 hours a day Sun.-Thurs. laying out the paper and organizing ads.
•Great experience for those interested in a career in Advertising or Publishing.
If interested call 545-3500 or come down to the Campus Center Basement and fill out an application.

STUDENT TRAVEL
London.....$211
Paris.....$286
Amsterdam.....$273
Tokyo.....$609
student airfares
BEDS ON A BUDGET
rail passes
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1985 Saab Turbo 162K, sunroof, leather, 5spd. Good condition. $1100 o/b/o 413-367-7592

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Seeking occasional childcare for 2 school-age children. 549-5448

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER DAY CAMP Looking for a fun summer job? Here it is! The Girl Scouts has camp openings for waterfront director, counselors, lifeguards and crafts and nature specialists in South Hadley. July 2 - August 11. $200-$285/week. Training is provided. Limited transportation available. Contact GSCWM at 800-462-9100 x11 for information. AA/EOE

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimun 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPEN-SQUARE.COM

EMPLOYMENT

The Animal Rescue League of Boston's Animal Friends Summer Camp in North Falmouth, Cape Cod has the following counselor positions open: Farm Life Counselor, Horse Care Counselor. Employment Dates: June 1st- August 18th. Limited room & board available. For more information or to schedule an interview, call Laura Robbins at 781-461-8015 ext. 25 *Visit our table at "Camp Employment Day" on March 14th.

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

SUMMER DAY CAMP Looking for a fun summer job? Here it is! The Girl Scouts has camp openings for waterfront director, counselors, lifeguards and crafts and nature specialists in South Hadley. July 2 - August 11. $200-$285/week. Training is provided. Limited transportation available. Contact GSCWM at 800-462-9100 x11 for information. AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

Counselors Wanted Co-ed Jewish overnight camp in Maine offers competitive salary plus room and board. All positions available! For more information, contact Ava or Meridith at 617-244-5124 or via email at info@kingswood.org

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. (2 hours form New York and Philadelphia), Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, WSI, waterfront activities, scuba, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, gymnastics, fishing, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20-8/17. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

EMPLOYMENT

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be at Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment - end of June through July, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132, bicycletrips.com

Needed Immediately Town of Amherst Leisure Services Department is looking for volleyball officials for it's adult volleyball league. Matches are held Sunday afternoons and are located 1/2 mile from UMass. $12-$14 per match. For more information contact Mike Thomas, Sports Director, at 413-256-4065 ex. 105 or e-mail at thomasm@town.amherst.ma.us

The UMass Football team is looking for interested students to video practices and games for the spring 2000/2001 season. Experience preferred but will train. Scholarship and work study programs available. If you are interested please contact Bill Sisler at 577-0319. Come be a part of a championship tradition.

EMPLOYMENT

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

Cruse Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruise-careers.com

FOR SALE

New WebTV Classic with keyboard for sale. Call Laroushna 546-5405

INSTRUCTION

Bathing Suit Season is Coming. Experienced trainer will get you ready. No gym membership required. Private kickboxing instruction also available. Joe 548-8979

Wanna be a Rock Star? Acoustic guitar lessons. Learn the basics fast. Call Anthony at 413-218-6562

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITY-BARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner. Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-8, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in large 3 bedroom house. On busline. Hobart St. 549-2951

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

FLY SUMMER 4 WINTER $$! Europe $298 rt (+tx) Lon, Fra, Mad, Ams, Par, & more. 4STANDBY.COM or call 800-326-3009

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! lowest price guarantee! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbeakdirect.com

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner.Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-I, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@gdlip-trips.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-00-234-7007 endlessummertours.com

Spring Break - Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun and Jamaica from $499. Air, Hotel, Transfers, Parties and More! Organize small group - earn FREE trips plus commissions! Call 1-800-GET-SUN-1

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

- 5: HSCN Bulletin Board
- 6: CBS 3 Springfield
- 7: CBS 3 Boston
- 8: ABC 40 Springfield
- 9: FOX 61 Springfield
- 10: HSCN Movie Channel
- 11: Fox 25 Hartford
- 12: UPN 20 Hartford
- 13: HSCN New Movie Channel
- 14: NBC 30 Springfield
- 15: International Channel
- 16: USA TV (Another Channel)
- 17: WB 59 New Haven
- 18: ESPN
- 19: ESPN2
- 20: UVC TV (Another Channel)
- 21: Weather Channel
- 22: Quest or Bravo
- 23: C-Span
- 24: CNN
- 25: CNN Headline News
- 26: Lifetime
- 27: USA
- 28: TNT
- 29: TBS
- 30: Sci-Fi
- 31: Discovery
- 32: Nickelodeon
- 33: Cartoon Network
- 34: Nick at Nite
- 35: TV Land
- 36: Comedy Central
- 37: BET
- 38: Univision
- 39: Bloomberg Financial Network
- 40: College TV Network
- 41: MTV
- 42: VH1
- 43: VH1
- 44: The Learning Channel

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 7, 2001

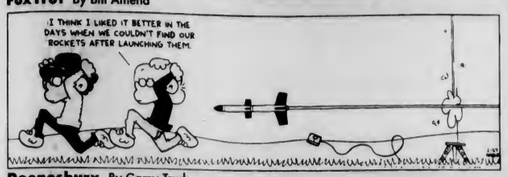
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(2) Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		German Americans (In Stereo)		Best of Cosmos (In Stereo)				Religion
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Beat Friends	Battle (N)	"Love and Treason" (2001, Suspense) Kim Delaney				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Beat Friends	Battle (N)	"Love and Treason" (2001, Suspense) Kim Delaney				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Draw Cerey	Spin City	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Frash Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Jack & Jill "The Big Bounce"		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Pretty Girls and Waffles"		West Wing (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Turnstile Justice"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	(8) 7th Heaven "Truth or Dare"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Jack & Jill "The Big Bounce"		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	9	(9) News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Pretty Girls and Waffles"		West Wing (In Stereo)		Law & Order	"Turnstile Justice"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	(11) Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	TV Guide Awards (N) (In Stereo)				News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	11	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Pretty Girls and Waffles"		West Wing (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Turnstile Justice"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	12	(57) World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Where the Earth Meets the Sky: Josh Simpson		Where the Earth Meets the Sky: Josh Simpson				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	13	(40) 25 News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Draw Cerey	Spin City	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	14	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days (In Stereo)		Stet Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Frasier	Mad Abt. You	Spin City	Spin City
WTBS	15	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		WCW Thunder				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	16	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Old Friends"		Biography: Sam Giancana		American Justice (N)		Investigative Reports		Law & Order (Part 2 of 2)
CNN	17	(23) Worldview	Moneyline Newshour (N)	Crossfire		Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	18	(24) Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	"Trapped in Paradise" (1994, Comedy) Nicolas Cage				South Park	TV Funhouse	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	19	Wild Discovery: Midway		Wild Discovery: Elephants		Pantagon		Nano's Golden House (N)		Deadline Discovery (N)		Justice Files
ESPN	20	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Big East First Round -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: Big East Tournament First Round -- Teams to be Announced.				Sportscenter
LIFE	21	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Por		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Within the Cradle Falls" (1997, Drama) Linda Gray				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	22	(5:30) "Jailbait" (2000, Drama)		Mary Gross		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Diary	Cribs	Making+Video	Fight for Your Rights	Undressed	Andy Dick
NICK	23	Pinky & Brain	Cyclogg	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	ALF (In Stereo)	ALF	ALF	ALF	ALF	ALF (In Stereo)	ALF (In Stereo)
SCIFI	24	Hercules: Legendery Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Objects at Rest"		Teries-Crypt	"Stargate" (1994, Science Fiction) Kurt Russell, Jamali Spader					Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	25	(28) Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Space -- The Final Junkyard	Star Fleet		Hubble Telescope			Space -- The Final Junkyard
TNT	26	ER "Motherhood" (In Stereo)		Pretender "Gigolo Jerod"		NBA Basketball: Sacramento Kings at Phoenix Suns. (In Stereo Live)						NBA Basketball: Raptors at Lakers
USA	27	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Imposter" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Found Money"		"Knock Off" (1998, Action) Jean-Claude Van Damme				Martin	Martin
HBO	28	(4:30)		"Renaissance Man" (1994, Comedy) Danny DeVito. (In Stereo) PG-13		Sopranos Mr. Ruggiero's Neighborhood Prostat. Livvatrez						On the Record (N)
MAX	29	(4:45)		"Cocktail" (1988, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) 'R'				"Under Pressure" (1997) Charlie Sheen. 'R'				"Galaxy Quest" (1999) Tim Allen. 'PG'	Passion Cove
SHOW	30	"Enchanted" (1999, Comedy-Drama) Sydney Penny. 'NR'						"Sleepless in Seattle" (1993) Tom Hanks. 'PG'		Soul Food (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd. (In Stereo)

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SO HOW'D THE RE-CRUITING GO?
WELL, IT'S TOO SOON TO TELL, REALLY...
I PUT TOGETHER A VERY ATTRACTIVE LEGAL DEFENSE PACKAGE, BUT IT COULD BE MATCHED AND ALSO SOME JOCKS THERE ARE ALSO SOME ROAD AND PAROLE RAILS TO KORK OUT.
OH.
I'LL NEVER UNDERSTAND FOOTBALL.
DON'T TRY.

FoxTrot By Bill Amend



Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

AND EACH STARTER HAS HIS OWN PER-SONAL MEAT LOCKER!
THEY GOT THAT AT TECH. TOO, MAN.
WELL, SURE. BUT DOES TECH HAVE A DATING SERVICE? SUTTER WITH INTERN? FACULTY TUTORS? UNDER MANAGERS? THOSE THINGS ARE ALL PART OF THE WALDEN EDGE!
AND ONE MORE... THING, JIMMY BECAUSE WALDEN UNDERSTANDS TOP ATHLETES SOMETIMES FACE SPECIAL CHALLENGES.
WE OFFER THE FINEST LEGAL PROBE IN THE LEAGUE!
I'M LIS-TENING.

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
TRYING TO LEARN HOW THEY DID ALL THAT STUFF IN "CROUCHING TIGER, HIDDEN DRAGON"
YOU KNOW, STUFF LIKE WHEN THE GIRL JUMPS AND TWIRLS 30 FEET INTO THE AIR.
BY THE WAY, WATCH WHERE YOU STEP. QUINCY THREW UP OVER THERE THIS MORNING.
YAAA! I MEAN, IT ALL SEEMS SO IMPOSSIBLE.

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Today in psychology We learned about "constancy theory..."
It basically means that an object is still there, even when you can't see it.
Except in the yellow lot.

Horoscopes

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) This is a nice relaxing day in the shade, so treat it as such. There is no need for you to plan any great war strategies at this time. Take it easy and try not to get stressed about the upcoming week. This is your time to enjoy the moment.

Aries (March 21-April 19) A selfish attitude on your part will not be tolerated today, regardless of the circumstances. Don't make it worse for yourself by pretending that you don't notice the hurt feelings of those around you. People are likely to be extra sensitive today, so be careful of trying to impose your will on someone who really just wants nothing more than an ear to talk to and a shoulder to cry on.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Take a break from your routine. You may feel like you are leading a great war horse into battle as you constantly strive for new adventures and the conquering of new lands. Make sure you take a bit of time out today to stop and let your horse drink. You deserve a bit of rest yourself.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Your sensual nature is heightened, and you will find yourself engaged in tender moments and languid peacefulness in the company of others. Soothe your soul by letting yourself slip into situations that allow you emotional freedom to do or say whatever comes to mind.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You may find that the hardest person to face is yourself. Your tendencies is to get quite introspective and you may find yourself shrinking down into a puddle of self-recrimination. You may be analyzing all the people around you who are significant in your life, yet you are failing to really address the one person whom you really need to stop and look at: yourself.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) The key for you is to minimize your daily drama as much as possible. You may not realize how much you are crippling yourself by the way you exaggerate every aspect of your life. Try not to give so much of your attention to things that really do not matter much.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept.22) Allow your eager and restless nature to express itself in ways other than through the spoken word. Show someone that you care, through your gentle touch or a big bear hug. Hold on a little bit tighter than you might normally. There is an unspoken understanding that comes when you communicate through nothing but pure silence.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Take advantage of the creative energy in the air. Be sure to keep your hands moving and your imagination flowing toward something fun and artistic. If you find yourself beginning to doubt your work, you may fall quickly down an endless spiral of creative blockage.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) This will be the most stressful day of the week for you, but if you make it through, deep satisfaction awaits. Beware of promises made by a person who wants to be more than friends. He or she may be hiding a dark secret that you must probe before committing further.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Be careful of advertising yourself as someone who is so strong and mentally competent that you are capable of handling everything. Take note that the strongest male on the trail usually ends up carrying the most weight. Your emotions are more sensitive than you may think, and certainly more sensitive than you demonstrate to others.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a terrific day for you, and you should find that your relationships - especially with men - go exceptionally well. Your tender and extremely sensitive nature is finally being recognized as the treasure chest that it is. There are many times in which this type of personality is seen as weak, yet today is one of those times in which you are given the full credit that you deserve. Make the most of it!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your sixth sense is right on target, so trust your instincts at all times. There is a wonderful partnership that you are likely to connect with, helping you to foster the very plan that you have in mind to develop at this time.

SLEEPY HOLLOW BED COMPANY
256- BEDS (2337)/ 256-BEDS(2337)
328 College Street, Amherst

FINALLY!! Amherst has a mattress & futon store conveniently located near downtown, next to The Spirit Haus on Rt. 9

GRAND OPENING & OPEN HOUSE

(FREE FOOD!!!)
SAT. MARCH 31 10-6
SUN. APRIL 1 12-5

futons-mattresses-beds-daybeds decorative pillows-lamps-storage platform beds -room dividers-rugs mirrors-plants-end/coffee tables cots-foam-pad!/poof/papasan, ETC

ACROSS
1 Winner, for short
6 Principal
10 Gets the crook
14 Less cooked
15 Actor Ray
16 — Mountains of Eurasia
17 Solo
18 Reverse, e.g.
19 Marathon unit
20 Colorful songster
22 Silly ones
23 Dry
24 Have an area in common with
26 Pep
29 Large rodents
31 Important period
32 "Block" ender
33 Fit of pique
34 Bank employee
38 Guide
40 Den baby
42 Eighteen-wheeler
43 Great house
46 Hard candy
49 Enjoyment
50 Remote
51 Cartoon bear
52 "Shame on you!"
53 Squelchers (a gogle)
57 Bo Derek film
59 "Nanny" cartoonist Bushmiller
60 Thoroughly
65 Lunar phenomenon
66 Shopping locale
67 Increase suddenly, like electric current
68 Egret's cousin
69 Head
70 Roundup target
71 Like a pin?
72 Org.
73 Noted Canadian physician

DOWN
1 Rocky ledge
2 Circle of light
3 Errant GI's status
4 Fixes
5 Likes better
6 Having the ability to attract
7 Sir — Guinness
8 Utah neighbor
9 Postal-creed word
10 1 and 2, etc.
11 Spirit in "The Tempest"
12 Model-airplane wood
13 Get some rest
21 Persia, now
22 "Pretty Woman" actor
25 Animal doc
26 Low-lying area
27 Bad time for Caesar
28 Lamb or pork
30 Do homework
35 Departed
36 Ostinches' kin
37 Hockey arena
39 Zanies
41 Streisand's birthplace
44 Fable
45 Before, in poems
47 Fairy-tale villain
48 "Guernica" painter
53 — one's ways: rigid
54 Cherokee or Seminole
55 Rajah's land
56 Thick pieces (of cheese)
58 Neighbors on
61 Serve sights
62 Pitcher Hershiser
63 Type of molding
64 Deborah of old films
66 Flightless bird

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

P	O	L	A	R		R	A	N		P	L	A	T	O
A	L	I	N	E		A	L	E		R	I	G	E	L
W	I	N	D	O	W	B	O	X		E	M	I	L	E
N	O	T		A	B	U	T		C	E	L	L	O
		M	A	X	I		Y	E	S	E	S
O	P	P	O	S	E		S	N	A	P
D	R	O	O	P	S		T	I	P	T	O	E	D
D	A	M	E		P	O	P		F	L	O	E
	M	E	D	D	L	E	R		S	A	T	I	N	Y
					I	N	K		C	H	E	E	S	E
	V	O	W	E	D		V	A	N	A	M	E
T	I	D	A	L		A	G	A	R		O	P	A
B	R	O	I	L		D	R	I	F	T	W	O	O	D
S	E	R	V	E		Z	E	N		A	Z	E	D
P	O	S	E	D		E	W	E		C	R	E	S	S

1-0-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

The Masked Dropout By Robert Hewitt

I WING OUT WITH MY HIGH-SCHOOL BUDDIES LAST NIGHT!
HOW ARE THEY?
WELL, ED GOT FAT...
SAM IS HEADED FOR JAIL...
JOHN GOT ANOTHER STD...
AND RALPH GOT MARRIED.
POOR RALPH!!
HE HAD HIS WHOLE LIFE AHEAD OF HIM.

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

RJ's GUILT RELIEF! YEAR 2000 ABSOLUTIONS FOR BLOWN RESOLUTIONS
I RESOLVED TO BECOME THE PERSON I ALWAYS KNEW I COULD BE. BUT NEVER WAS.
WHAT HAPPENED?
I ALMOST BECAME THE PERSON I ALWAYS THOUGHT I COULD BE.
AND YOU ENDED UP MISSING THE PERSON YOU ALWAYS ARE...
YEAH, WHY IS THAT?
SOMETIMES YOU HAVE TO LOOK DOWN TO LOOK UP.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

HELLO, ALICE. I'M YOUR SOUL
YOU'RE A MANAGER NOW. YOU WON'T BE NEEDING ME.
HERE'S A CLAIM TICKET IN CASE YOU GET DEMOTED OR LEARN TO PLAY SAX.

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas

I LOVE PLAYING BASEBALL
pppppppppp...
WHAT'S IT CALLED? REALLY? OH.
I MEAN, I LOVE WRITHING ON THE FLOOR IN VOMITOUS AGONY.
GREAT QUILT MOM, THANKS!
EACH SQUARE IS SOMEONE I LOVE MORE THAN YOU.

Quote of the Day

"Some guy left his dirty underwear on my windshield."

Jay, the Wings delivery guy

Amherst Weather

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 26	HIGH: 33 LOW: 16	HIGH: 28 LOW: 18

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Chicken Quesadilla

African Vegetable Stew (vegan) (B, H, W)

Vegetarian Black Bean Quesadilla (vegetarian)

DINNER
Cajun Cod (B, H, W)

Thai Seitan (vegan) (B, H, W)

Baked Teriyaki Tofu (vegan) (B)

BBQ Fish

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Bryan Smith
Photo Technician	Scott Eldridge
Copy Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Alan Basque
Production Staff	Adam White, Kara Stokes

Xavier captures the A-10 women's basketball crown by beating GW.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Wednesday, March 7, 2001 | 10

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Seasons start changing for UMass

Minutewomen bow out of A-10 Tournament

Coyner, squad can't top Xavier

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA – She stood at the top of the key contemplating her next step.

Her initial move to the middle was jam-packed with Xavier defenders who forced her to scale down the left side of the court. With four seconds left on the clock, she took two dribbles toward the baseline and threw up a one-footed floater that found the bottom of the net as the halftime buzzer sounded.

With that shot, Kathy Coyner and the Massachusetts women's basketball team burst into the locker room down 33-32 to the top-seeded Musketeers in the quarterfinal round of the 2001 Atlantic 10 Tournament.

But when the final horn sounded 20 minutes later signaling Xavier's 80-64 triumph, UMass' lone senior didn't deliver that same volatile fist-pump she did after her first half buzzer beater. This time she walked slowly off the floor of the Liacouras Center with a towel dangling in her left hand. Her time had passed.

"I've played this game forever and now it's done," Coyner said. "It's tough. But although we were 12-17, I think I did have a good year. Like [head coach Joanie O'Brien] and I talked over the summer, I didn't want to leave this year saying 'what if?' And I think I can walk away from this game and know that I did give everything that I had. So I'm happy with that. I don't have any regrets at all. I have always played the game how I believe it should be played."

The Minutewomen stayed close to senior-laden Xavier in the early stages of the second half and were within one point when freshman Paige Harris drilled a three-pointer from two feet behind the arc with 14:58 left in the contest. But the ensuing 15-5 Muskie run, punctuated by a Jennifer Barr trey, ended any hopes of an eighth-seeded UMass (12-17, 6-10 A-10) victory as No. 12 Xavier (26-2, 16-1 A-10) sprinted to victory Saturday.

"We had the momentum [going into the half]," Coyner said. "After that shot we were very excited and we really did believe that we had the chance to win. But we just didn't execute when the time came down to it."

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN
The Minutewomen's loss to Xavier marked the end of their season and a passing of the torch from senior Kathy Coyner (15) to younger players like freshman Paige Harris.

A-10 Player of the Year Jennifer Phillips led the Musketeers with 22 points on 8-of-11 shooting, grabbing eight rebounds in the process. Parr followed with 15 points on a perfect shooting from the field (3-for-3) and free-throw line (2-for-2). The senior guard converted on all three of her three-point attempts, two of which proved to be significant momentum killers.

The Musketeers' 59.1 percent (26-for-44) shooting touch besieged the Maroon and White's 36.8 percent (25-for-68) firing for the afternoon.

"I don't sign anyone usually who can't shoot it," head coach Melanie Balcomb said. "And I always give everyone the green light. They know that's part of our philosophy. I don't ever tell anyone not to shoot it. They're never pulled out for shooting it unless it's a bad shot."

Senior Tara Tuukanen chipped in 14 points and sophomore Reetta Piipari flished out 10 assists for the A-10 regular season champs in their 16th straight victory of the 2000-01 campaign.

Sophomore Jennifer Butler led UMass with 22 points on 8-of-11 shooting. Coyner scored 15 in her career finale while distributing a season-high nine helpers. Sophomore Amber Snead contributed 11 points in the Minutewomen's fifth loss in six games.

UMass' first-half performance stemmed from the hustle of freshman Cleo Foster and the Minutewoman frontcourt. Combined, they did a masterful job of keeping balls alive on the offensive glass and retrieving loose balls from the floor. This led to the Maroon and White's 12 offensive boards and was the main factor in UMass' ability to stay in the game despite shooting only 37.5 percent (12-32) in that stanza.

"What they were doing really well – what they're known for, which wasn't a surprise – was they were rebounding the ball very well," Balcomb said. "We were shooting the ball 50-something percent, they were shooting 30-something and they were right there. The difference was they were getting second and third shots. They were just killing us on the glass."

In the second half, the Musketeers switched from a 3-2 zone to either a man-to-man or 2-3 defense, which helped solve their rebounding deficiency. At game's end both teams had fin-

Turn to HOOPS, page 7

The puck stops here as hockey splits with UNH

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. – It knew what it had to do. Midway through the second period on Friday night, the public address announcer's voice told the crowd of 6,501 fans that Merrimack had defeated Boston University 3-2.

This meant that No. 7 New Hampshire had secured home ice for the first round of the Hockey East playoffs, but it meant a great deal more for the Massachusetts hockey team.

With the Warrior win the Minutemen were forced to capture at least a tie in order to keep their season alive. UMass (8-21-4, 7-14-2 HE) did better than a tie – it stole a 2-1 overtime victory and lived on for one more day. Though that glimmer of hope would fade with the team's 3-0 home defeat the following night, the victory was undoubtedly sweet for UMass.

The win was the first ever at the Whittemore Center for the Maroon and White. Its record before the win was 0-8-2, with one of the ties coming last season in the final weekend of the season to vault UMass into the final Hockey East playoff spot.

"It was a huge win for us," UMass head coach Don Cahoon said. "We were being outplayed early on, but [Mike] Johnson kept us in the game."

Johnson turned aside 28 shots en route to his second win of the season. The 28-save performance came on the heels of a UMass Division I record 60-save outing a week prior in a 3-3 tie with Boston College.

"We were playing for the win, Cahoon said. "We knew that Merrimack had won, and we needed at least one point. We were fighting for our [playoff] lives tonight."

Brad Nizwantowski netted the game winner at the 2:04 mark of overtime when he broke in alone on UNH goalie Ty Conklin and beat

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN
Seniors Markus Helanen (31) and Jeff Turner saw their UMass careers reach a twilight in the team's loss to UNH Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

Rocky road for Stony Brook

By Matthew F. Sacco
Collegian Staff

With last year's 17-4 shellacking on his conscience, head coach John Espey and his Stony Brook Seawolves arrived a day early with hopes of squeezing in one more practice and eking out an upset win over the No. 11 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team.

Unfortunately for Espey and his staff, the extra day could do nothing but minutely narrow the talent gap between his squad and the Minutemen, as UMass (2-0, 1-0 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference) cruised to a 17-8 victory.

After a gut-wrenching victory over hated Hofstra, one would think that it would be tough to find a way to stay motivated against conference doormat Stony Brook (0-1, 0-1 ECAC). But with head coach Greg Canella facing his mentor in Espey, and senior goalie Chris Campolettano going to nose-to-nose with his own brother Matt for the final time, there was certainly enough emotional motivation to fill a season, let alone a single game.

Once again the balance of the Maroon and White attack proved too much to handle for the opposing defense, as 10 different Minutemen found the back of the cage.

"I think that we have so many offensive people who can be dangerous that it's really tough for teams to key on one person," senior captain Jeremy Guski said. "We can come at teams from so many different angles."

The balance of this team was evident from the opening whistle, as five different players scored in the first quarter to give the Minutemen a 5-0 lead.

The Maroon and White faltered in the second quarter however, with Stony Brook putting up five goals and UMass answering with only two. The Minutemen had no answer for juniors Tristram Gillen and Kevin Pall, who combined for two goals and a helper in leading the Seawolf run.

The home squad was able to sustain the Stony Brook run, due in large part to senior goaltender Chris Campolettano who made 10 saves in the game. Without the senior's heroic efforts in net, the scoreboard may have revealed a Seawolf lead at halftime.

After dominating for the majority of the first 30 minutes, UMass found itself with a slim 7-5 advantage as the players entered the locker room.

"I told the guys at halftime that we are playing good defense, we are going to

Turn to LACROSSE, page 7

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN
Hats flew as senior co-captain Jeremy Guski notched three goals in UMass' 17-8 win over Stony Brook.

Hoops hit by downtown train

Bremer's threes wreck UMass' Senior Day

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Each snap of the twine was another dagger. The ball dropped through, the numbers on the scoreboard tumbled and host Massachusetts watched its regular season crumble away.

The UMass men's basketball team had chosen Saturday to commemorate its four departing seniors, but had to absorb more loss than that as visiting St. Bonaventure left town with a 66-59 victory. SBU junior guard J.R. Bremer sucked the life out of the William D. Mullins Center crowd by burying four second-half threes as the Bonnies (18-10, 9-7 Atlantic 10) slammed the coffin lid shut on a regular-season sweep of the Minutemen (13-14, 11-5 A-10).

"That's how we beat them the first time – we hit our three-point shots," said SBU coach Jim Baron, who watched his team lock up a first-round A-10 Tournament bye with the win. "[Bremer] has an uncanny ability to do that."

Bremer (20 points) and senior swingman Kevin Houston (a game-high 26) provided the bulk of the offense for the Bonnies, who connected on 8-of-19 from downtown. The Minutemen lacked paint punch despite glowing outside numbers from two of their celebrated seniors, Monty Mack (15 points) and Jonathan DePina (a career-best 16).

"We weren't strong inside," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "Every time we caught the ball, we fumbled it. Our guys have got to be able to finish."

The Bonnies led by as many as 11 points in the first half, as Houston banged home seven of his first 12 field goal attempts en route to 17 points at the break (the nearest high was six by both DePina and teammate Micah Brand). The struggling Maroon and White frontcourt forced the guards to fire up a barrage of threes (only 2-of-12 dropped), a big reason for UMass' 28-26 deficit at the break.

"We weren't penetrating from the wing and being strong with the ball," DePina said. "We should've been a little more aggressive on the outside, swinging the ball, driving and kicking it out."

The Bonnies got a scare with under a minute to go before halftime, when Houston bit on an upfake from UMass' Eric Williams and tumbled over the junior forward, landing hard on his left hip. Though he lay writhing on the hardwood for a full five minutes and needed help getting off the court, Houston would return to score nine more points in the second half.

"He's a warrior," said Baron of Houston. "He was banged up, and they were real physical on him, but he still got it done."

Mack tore back the lead for UMass with a left-corner three a mere 28 seconds into the second half, but that's when Bremer began opening fire. His first trey was launched from almost three feet behind the top of the circle at the 19:15 mark, and his fourth dropped in from another time zone to cap a 22-11 spurt that left the Bonnies up 50-40.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN
UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint shares an emotional moment with tri-captain Jonathan DePina following the team's Senior Day loss to St.Bonaventure.

Turn to SENIORS, page 7

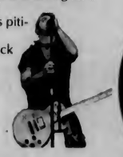
Turn to Arts & Living for a recap of Sunday's pitiful Godsmack performance.



ARTS p. 6

The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

Bruiser Flint will lead his troops into the A-10 tourney this weekend. Check it out in Sports.

SPORTS p. 12

Volume CVII Issue 94 | www.dailycollegian.com | Thursday, March 8, 2001

Our Bar Survival Guide

JOEY BAKER / COLLEGIAN
The mid-afternoon scene at Amherst Brewing Company.

What does every college town have, besides a college? Bars. Call them pubs, alehouses or watering holes; these establishments are as big a part of college life as bookstores and dining halls. Even a relatively small college town like Amherst is laden with a wide variety of bars, places that cater to every taste (and thirst) of both the student body and the local community.

With so many places to choose from, how does one know which bar will suit a particular need or mood? That very question prompted this project; a two-part feature on the prominent drinking establishments around the University of Massachusetts. This first section will focus on the major "uptown" bars of North Pleasant Street, while next week's installment will widen the scope to the various outlying spots.

One distinction does need to be made, however: these are NOT reviews. Each and every bar in town offers something unique and enjoyable, and that is what we have tried to focus on. We are in no way endorsing one establishment over any other, or trying to draw comparisons between bars based on a common criteria. We also acknowledge that not every bar in town is represented here; we have neither the manpower nor the space to do justice to every single business in town with a liquor license. We have tried to cover each of the prominent spots that students frequent.

So without further ado, here is the official Daily Collegian bar survival guide.

Amherst Brewing Company

Bars are all about beer, and nowhere is beer taken more seriously than at the Amherst Brewing Company. Since its opening in 1997, this "full-service brewpub" has offered patrons the freshest handcrafted beers and ales as well as a wide range of premium liquors and a full menu. While the food at the "ABC" gets solid reviews (try the stuffed pork loin) and the small-batch bourbon collection is unparalleled, the operative word in regards to this place is BEER.

"We've had so many people come in here and say they don't even like beer," said manager O'Brian Tomalin, who has kept watch over the taps more or less since the ABC first opened. "But their experience has been limited to cans of domestic beer. I'll offer them a Raspberry Brown or something like that, and it opens up something entirely new."

The ABC's 10-barrel (310 gallon) setup was pieced together with equipment from literally all around the brewing world. The Roller Mill was previously used to grind corn for feed on a farm in Ashfield. The Mash Tun came from upstate New York, where it was used as a brew kettle by the now-defunct Newman's Brewery. The fermenters and beer tanks were imported from England and expanded by a stainless steel fabrication company in Canada.

All of this equipment is used to brew nine signature "house beers," which the ABC serves in conjunction with a variety of seasonal selections. The most popular of the house beers is Honey Pilsner, a golden lager with hints of wildflower honey. The other house beers are North Pleasant Pale Ale, Cascade I.P.A., Massatucky Brown, Righteous Red, Puffer's Smoked Porter, ESB, Henry Jackson Stout and Raspberry Red.

"With so many different kinds of beers, some new customers don't know where to start," Tomalin said. "That's why we have the sampler. People can try four or six three-ounce samples and figure out which ones they like best."

Seasonal selections range from Boltwood Bock and Workingman's Wheat to Half-in-the-Bagpipe, a Scotch ale with a strong malt flavor and a hefty 7.2 percent alcohol by volume ("two beers in one," according to Tomalin). The brewpub has also recently begun employing cask conditioning with some of its ales, a process by which a keg is substituted for the

Turn to BAR, page 2

High-school violence continues Pennsylvania shooting wounds one.

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

In the wake of Monday's high school shooting in California, another act of violence followed yesterday when a 14-year-old girl shot a classmate in the shoulder at a parochial school in Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

The incident occurred in the cafeteria at approximately noon at Bishop Neumann Junior-Senior High, a Roman Catholic school, where witnesses say that the shooter fired a handgun at the floor and the bullet ricocheted into the victim. The shooting was the result of a long-standing argument between the two eighth grade females.

"This is a situation of a student who was upset with another student," police officer David Ritter said to the Associated Press. "This is not a random act of violence and as far as I understand there are no other targets for this violence."

The victim, 13-year-old Kimberly Marchese, is currently in stable condition at Geisinger Medical Center in Danville.

There were approximately 120 other students in the cafeteria when the girl came in, screaming, and fired two shots, 16-year-old freshman Andrew Miller explained.

"I saw her holding a gun, but I didn't really know it was a gun," he said. "She told everyone to get down. She fired towards the ceiling, then fired into the ground, which ricocheted and hit the girl in the shoulder."

The suspect was taken into police custody after only four minutes; she was either subdued by an administrator from the school or by another student who was present. Police are still unsure as to where the girl got the gun in the first place and are continuing to question her about the incident.

Authorities plan to charge the girl as an adult but need to petition the court before they are allowed to do so.

Directly after the shooting, all students were taken into the auditorium of the school and patted down in search of weapons. Following that, they were taken to another school for questioning regarding the incident.

Classes at the school have been cancelled on Thursday, but students are scheduled to return on Friday with counselors available for students to talk about the incident. The school itself is a junior/senior high school with students ranging from grades seven to 12 and with a total enrollment of 231 students. It is located in Williamsport, approximately 180 miles northwest of Philadelphia.

This shooting was the fifth incident of this type that has taken place this year.

This episode occurred only two days after a shooting in Santee, California two days ago; a ninth grader from Santana High School Charles Andrew Williams was arrested for the shooting. A 15-year-old high school freshman suspect was taken into custody after killing two students and wounding 13 after he emptied upwards of 30 rounds from a .22 caliber revolver in his school.

The hearing for the incident has been postponed until March 26 at the request of Williams's lawyers. County Superior Court Judge Herbert J. Exarhos refused to grant Williams bail due to the severe nature of his crime.

At the Santee school, some students held their own memorial service, returning to the place of the shooting holding flowers and balloons.

Authorities have asked three students who overheard Williams threaten to stage a shooting at the school, but thought that he was joking and did not report the incident, to remain away from the school when it reopens today.

"I believe it is not in the best interests of those three to be on the campus tomorrow, so we are taking steps to do intervention," said Granger Ward, superintendent of the Grossmont Unified School District. "They will not be on campus."

Stonewall Center celebrates 15 years

The Stonewall Center will celebrate its 15th anniversary, with a show that promises uproarious humor, savvy send-ups of modern family relationships and illuminating perspectives on life as a gay American, on Saturday, March 10 in the Fine Arts Center.

The much-anticipated event features performances by Harvey Fierstein and Kate Clinton.

Clinton, a humorist who uses monologues to make savvy observations about American life, has been called "the uproarious Madame President of comedy" for her bright political comedy. This year marks the twentieth that she has been performing, one facet of a diverse career: she is a writer, actress, panelist, host and English teacher. Clinton has written sketches for the "The Rosie O'Donnell Show" and pieces for various magazines, including The New Yorker. She is currently at work on a second book and sixth CD.

Fierstein is a playwright, actor and gay rights activist. The self-described "real live, out-of-the-closet queer on Broadway" has won numerous awards, including Tony awards for Best Actor and Best Play for his groundbreaking film Torch Song Trilogy, and yet another Tony for his book of the musical La Cage Aux Folles (The Birdcage).

The show will take place at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $10 for UMass students with identification, $15 for Five College students and senior citizens, and $20 to $25 for the general public. Gold Circle tickets are available for $100, which includes seating in the front rows and admittance to a VIP reception with the two performers following the event.

For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office at (413) 545-2511.

—Tanya Mannes

Hillel House to honor Purim holiday

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Staff

What do Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach, the Dave Matthews Band and the Grateful Dead all have in common? Well, in one way or another, they will all be part of the Five College Hillel and Jewish Student Union's Purim festival at Amherst College's Alumni House on Thursday, March 8.

Purim is the Jewish holiday celebrating the triumph of the Jews over Haman, a Persian king who attempted to obliterate them. It is an opportunity to let loose and have a great time, and this year's party at Amherst College will be no exception.

The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a reading of the megilah, the scroll that retells the story of Purim. This will be followed up at 7:20 p.m. by a performance of Kolot, UMass' Jewish acapella group. At 7:30 p.m., groups from UMass, Smith and Amherst Hillels will be participating in a creative megilah reading, performing skits, songs and other spirited interpretations based on each chapter of the megilah. Among those letting it all hang out will be the Jewish Student Union, First Year Students at Hillel (FYSH), UMass seniors, Kolot and various Jewish groups from Smith and Amherst Colleges.

So, where is the Dave Matthews Band in all this? Well, beginning at 9 p.m. the Moshav Band will bringing their distinctive musical talent to the party. Direct from Modi'im (a town located in the mountains between Jerusalem and Tel-Aviv) and jump-started by the late Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach, a Hasidic rabbi, the band performed with Carlebach at his concerts and received emotional and spiritual guidance from him, along with, of course, musical inspiration. The band has also been influenced by sixties style music such as Bob Dylan and the Grateful Dead, as well as more current performers like the Dave Matthews Band. In addition to their eclectic sound, which blends folk, rock and reggae with Israeli and Hebrew music, the Moshav Band has also been involved with a variety of projects such as the "Wake Up " Tour (a McGill University-based Jewish renewal effort), the Schusterman Hillel International Student Leaders Assembly and "Block Parties" in Berlin and Texas, also initiatives to increase Jewish and Israel awareness.

Two albums released by the band, The Things You Can't Afford, and Days, have received rave reviews from music critics and prominent Jewish leaders such as Richard Joel, Director of Hillel International. Their performance promises to be a spectacular addition to a great celebration of Jewish pride.

■ bar

Continued from page 1

standard conditioning tank and the ale is allowed to carbonate naturally.

"The cask ale is alive, because it hasn't been pasteurized," said Geoff Rogers of Shutesbury, who has been frequenting the brewery since its opening. "It's not too cold, and it's not too fizzy."

Live entertainment is also a fixture at the ABC. The first and third Thursdays of the month bring Karaoke, while the first and third Mondays feature performances by the 17-piece Amherst Jazz Orchestra. Jazz is also offered every Sunday night with no cover. Saturday nights require a cover in exchange for music from some of the area's better-known bands.

Sometimes the music comes from unlikely sources, too. The Juggler Meadow Morris Men, a performance group that has practiced in Amherst since 1980, uses the ABC as a place to unwind every Tuesday. The members are known to burst into drinking songs and sea shanties even as they are putting back a few pints.

"It's the only place that won't throw us out," said Morris Man Roger Cattwright. "It took a while to train them, but they treat us well."

That "royal treatment" is perhaps the biggest part of the ABC's allure, according to Tomalin. The brewery serves all of its beers and drinks in glass right up until closing, and the creative decor (gargoyles, oil paintings and a laminated brass bar surface) give the ABC an overall classy feel.

"We try to provide a true pub experience, of quality over quantity," Tomalin said. "It's not too crowded, not one of those 'wild party crowd' places. It's a place where people can just sit and talk, it's a place for everyone."

-Adam White

Atlantis

Opened in late April of last year by partners Bam Nguyen, Karl Swanson and Sarah Dorst, Atlantis is literally and stylistically the most modern bar in uptown Amherst. Conscientiously obeying an aquatic motif throughout, the bar offers an interesting alternative to the rest of Amherst's watering holes.

By day Atlantis is a restaurant of some repute, specializing in vegan and seafood, concocted by resident chef Jerome Boldman. Come 9 or 10 at night however, Atlantis transforms into a nightclub: clearing tables, turning up the music and turning down the lights. Indeed one of Atlantis's greatest strengths is its large open layout, which facilitates dancing and a real 'club-like' atmosphere. The owners/managers have clearly recognized this strength and have carved out a niche within the local scene based on it.

Bam Nguyen seemed particularly proud of the evening schedule, with Drum and Bass on Tuesdays, Soul and Funk on Wednesdays followed by Hip Hop, House and Hip-Hop again. Nguyen said, "There aren't that many places to dance in this town, we hope to provide good music that people can enjoy."

Sunday brunch sees live Jazz in the afternoon. Nguyen also seemed hyped about their newest venture: open mic and decks night on Sunday evening. He hopes to attract talented DJ's and MC's from throughout the Valley to show their skills.

Atlantis clearly believes in the power of the DJ. The bar spotlights not only local DJs overseeing events, but also spinners from Boston and New York. Indeed Karl Swanson, a New Yorker, has clearly had a strong effect on the character of the bar, which is conspicuously cosmopolitan.

The eclecticism and diversity of the various nights isn't lost on the management. On a cold snow-day evening Nguyen said, "Everybody in Amherst has different tastes, we try to cater for all these people." For those who think that Atlantis might be spreading themselves too thin Nguyen asserts that this heterogeneity of style and crowd is the venue's biggest plus.

"The bar has all these random people coming in - a real mix, which is great."

Situated behind the back on Antonio's (surely the Northstar of any Amherst navigation) Atlantis looks fairly innocuous from the outside, with a small one-door entrance below a small one-panel sign. The contrast between the external and internal appearance is marked. The venue, which used to be a Mexican restaurant, was completely gutted and redesigned by the proprietors.

The under water interior design theme is continued in to the drinks cabinet, with blue the prevailing cocktail color (no, none of the beverages contain fish!). Establishment specialties are Aspens, 007s and Blue Cosmos, along with the delicious sounding Chocolate Martini. The bar is well stocked and caters for pretty much any drinker's taste.

This categorization does not include the cheap pitcher posse however. Nguyen asserted that, "We don't do Bud Light here, it's all good beer!"

Perhaps the strongest indicator as to the type of clientele who frequent Atlantis is that the bar's most popular drink: Vodka and Redbull.

As draft decisions go, leaving off the drink that many UMass student will consider their primary source of water will appear near sacrilege. For those who doubt the credentials of Atlantis however there is this elucidating snippet of information about the owners: they used to be students at UMass, before dropping out to pursue other interests.

-Tom Frazer

Barsellotti's

Rob Dullea, one of the Barsellotti bartenders, boasts that having been established in 1933 it is "the oldest place in Amherst, except Hastings." There are many things that make a good bar: good drinks, a fun atmosphere, a place where everybody knows your name, but one thing can never be replicated or artificially produced: tradition.

Barsies, as the locals call it, makes no pretense about its primary job: inebriating its patrons. The bar is long and sturdy and the blackboard behind it is functional, showing special offers and prizes. The pool table at the rear offers gaming opportunities and acts as a de facto bar to prop oneself up against. The bar wears its age on its sleeve, with the replica of by-gone eras scattered throughout.

Barsies is situated in the heart of uptown Amherst, slap-bang in the middle of 'Club Sidewalk' (the stretch of restaurants and bars on North Pleasant Street starting at Barts and ending at Subway). Though situated next door to ludies and part of the same family of enterprises Barsies makes no pretense to gourmet grandeur. Owing however to the idiosyncrasies of Amherst licensing laws (there are no purely bar licenses) it is, in principle, it is possible to get ludies food served in Barsies.

Surely the smallest bar in Amherst, Barsies uses this to its advantage. "Barsies biggest asset is our size," Duella said. He argued that, "we are a great off-night bar." Indeed this is borne out in reality, where Barsies is perhaps the primary Uptown venue of choice on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evening. Like all good barmen Dullea had obviously spent a significant amount of time considering the particularities of his workplace. So it was no surprise that he offered this rationalization, "a few people here make it look busy, so if there are ten or fifteen people at the bar, passers-by are attracted in and the place fills up really fast."

Dullea humorously asserted that, "Small size is a huge benefit!"

Brendan Sullivan and Nick Plouffe said they were in the bar for two reasons, "to drink and to play Golden Tee," (a golf arcade game that the other six members of the crowd couldn't be cleaved away from). Both UMass juniors described themselves as regulars, which is justified by their five nights a week turnout.

Other entertainment includes a poker arcade game, and the requisite number of televisions scattered around the room.

According to Sullivan, Tuesday nights are ladies night, offering a range of incentives to the female customer. Sullivan also considers Barsies to be "the best bar to pick up girls." While these two statements might seem contradictory for some there are many who would consider this sort of attitude the very life-blood of a good bar and a fun night out.

Of all the Amherst bars Barsies is perhaps the only one with a consistently coed bar staff, not solely employing enticing and exotic barmaids to lure irrational male customers. The staff/customer dynamic seemed to be very positive, with Plouffee describing the barmen as "all good boys!" As a litmus test of any bar the affinity held by patrons for the staff is undoubtedly a powerful indicator of general ambient good will.

At an establishment that focuses on drinking the quality of the liquid refreshment is surely fundamental. Barsies offers a range of microbrews and any liqueur that you could ever realistically want. Plouffee perhaps gave the most favorable assessment of Barsies beverages saying, "The shots must be illegal – whatever you do, don't come here on your birthday!"

-Tom Frazer

Delano's

Picture this: you've just taken a long, cool sip of Newcastle and you're lining up a perfect pool shot on the eight ball. Suddenly, your friend remembers that the Red Sox are on television. Without missing a beat, you reach up and flip to the game on a big TV right next to the table. At the next crack of the bat you drain your shot and your friends, playing arcade games behind you, howl in approval.

Either you're a rich kid with a fantasy living room, or you're at Delano's.

Founded in February of 1977 by Chick Delano, this uptown hot spot may be the quintessential college bar. Not only are the customers allowed to control the television in the back room; two more TVs up front are constantly aglow with college and professional sports. Free pizza is also available every Tuesday (the bar served food up until three years ago).

Should you run out of money while hanging out at Delano's, don't despair: help is right there for you. The bar offers Keno as well as a vending machine for scratch-off lottery tickets.

So that's TV, free food and a chance to win money. What else is there? Oh yeah, music.

Music is a staple at Delano's, whether it's blasting out of the CD jukebox or pumping out of the speakers of its twice-a-week DJs. Every Thursday and Saturday night, the place is bumping with non-stop beats and a jam-packed late night crowd of almost exclusively college kids.

"No one really comes out until 10:30, but once they do it's a full house," said Scott Pascoe, who has tended bar at Delano's since 1991. "Our crowd is 99.9 percent students."

The drinks at Delano's range from the standard draft pitchers ("it's a Bud Light town," says Pascoe) to some highly original concoctions. Ask for a Tree Climber (Rumple Minze, Citron, Peachtree and cranberry juice) or an Aspen (Stoli, Captain Morgan's, Peachtree, Amaretto, OJ and cranberry juice) and you'll experience the best of Delano's creations. There are also periodical bottled beer and mixed drink specials to choose from.

Promotions are also a big part of the Delano's experience, particularly when the weather gets warmer. Last year, the bar hosted a New Balance Weekend in conjunction with Haigis Hoopla that saw give-aways of sneakers, apparel and other gifts.

But overall the college bar experience is about fun, and Pascoe says that Delano's certainly has no shortage of that.

"I've seen lots of crazy stuff go on in here," Pascoe said. "We had a kid in here last semester who was going to perform on lackass, doing some of his tricks. And that was on a Tuesday. It's a lot of fun."

– Adam White

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern

When a long-standing tradition Time Out closed its doors three years ago a piece of Amherst tradition seemed to disappear.

Uptown was without a bar amidst the scene for nearly year, but the void was filled when McMurphy's Uptown Tavern was established. Since it has become a part of the scenery of uptown-Amherst, McMurphy's has been the hangout of many different crowds.

The name McMurphy's is a combination of its two owners surnames, Mike MacLaughlin and Tom Murphy – hence McMurphy's.

McMurphy's offers an environment conducive to the average drinker or just someone looking to have a good time.

The bar offers live entertainment of both Sundays and Wednesdays. Every Sunday the styling of Ross the singer substitutes the jukebox, while the always-popular Guitar Dudes play to the mid-week crowd. Both acts attract large crowds and have loyal followers among the UMass community.

But on most nights it is not the live entertainment that is in the spotlight, it is the environment that is offered that keeps the students coming. According to Keri Karney, a bartender on Sunday and Tuesday nights, the newest edition to Uptown fancies itself as "a traditional Irish bar."

As a traditional Irish bar McMurphy's does not specialize in cocktails or offer drink specials. Although the bar does make its share of mixed drinks what is flowing most at this place is the beer. At any point in a stay at McMurphy's one will be able to glimpse around and see someone drinking a Guinness or a pitcher of Budweiser or Bud Light being handed over the counter.

The counter breaks the bar into two halves. It is suffice as to say an upstairs and a downstairs. Upon entering one is in the upstairs part. This is where the bar is and a series of six tables – downstairs are a few arcade games and a couple overflow tables. Very rarely will one find a table unoccupied and more often than not there will a slew of people hovering around trying to maneuver their way into a comfortable spot.

People often search for a comfortable spot because people are shoulder-to-shoulder on most nights. This just goes to show how popular that McMurphy's has become in only a few years of existence.

McMurphy's is the place to go if one wants to just hang out. It is especially popular on nights in which there is a UMass game, either on television or after one is over on campus.

"We're very proud of our UMass connections and roots," Karney said.

It is evident upon entering that game nights would be a popular time for McMurphy's as the walls are covered in sports memorabilia, mostly old UMass jerseys that have been framed. This creates an environment in which athletes feel comfortable and therefore most athletes frequent the bar.

McMurphy's does not serve food or have a dress code, something that most people who enjoy nightlife are not looking for. It is a place to where a beer drinker would love to go and those looking to have a good time would enjoy as well.

McMurphy's had big shoes to fill in the aftermath of the Time Out closing, but it has done a very nice job in recreating a culture in which most would appreciate.

-Bryan Smith

The Monkey Bar

A year and a half ago, a new and fresh bar emerged in the small town of Amherst, MA that challenged the club like scene of the Pub, but offered a more adult atmosphere: you had to be 21 to get in.

The Monkey Bar offers up appetizers, lunch and dinner during the mellow dramatic hours of the day and entertainment and music at night.

The Monkey Bar is made up of an arrangement of elements that make it one of Amherst's most up beat bars in town, one that many relate to as a club.

It has been recognized for many different aspects, from the drinks it serves, to the music it plays. The crowds that the Monkey Bar attracts and draws in have been related to that of a frat party, and the dress code is generally enforced by common knowledge.

The Monkey Bar is one of few bars in Amherst that does however have a cover charge of two dollars, unless the night calls for a difference.

"We hold different events every night, and it generally depends on the D.J. that we have," manager Matt Filmore said.

Many students expressed the fact that they enjoyed that the Monkey Bar was more like a club than a normal sit down bar.

The bar itself offers a wide variety of beverages, ranging from beer to mixed drinks to shots of whatever suits your fancy. Like all bars in Amherst it is open till 1 a.m., and is know for having a line to get in.

The staff and service is pleasurable, and is quick when it comes to service, even on the most crowded of nights.

To ensure safety of those who do attend the bar, it is one of the few bars in town to have bouncers at the door to ensure maximum security. They are recognizable because they are always dressed in black and mainly spend their time controlling the crowds.

Dancing and overall good times can be found at the Monkey Bar, whether it be for dinner or night life, it offers the best of both worlds.

-Kristen Shrewsbury

RYAN BENHARRIS/COLLEGIAN

This Bud's for you... on tap at McMurphy's.

RYAN BENHARRIS/COLLEGIAN

McMurphy's wears its UMass connection proudly on its sleeve.

Bitterness lingers at SGA meeting

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

What began as a relatively quiet SGA Senate meeting Wednesday night turned out to be an inner room battle with a barrage of personal attacks being fired.

To many senators surprise, the bickering started after the SGA meeting rather than during it; however, politics took a toll on senators as many left with frustration gleaming in their eyes.

The SGA Senate met last night for its second official meeting of the semester. With a 53 senator turnout, and only 41 senators needed for quorum, the meeting began with a positive aura filling the room.

Personal attacks were touched upon in the opening announcements of the meeting as Senator Aaron Saunders explained that there is no good reason to put inner room politics down the new senators throats. Saunders was flustered by a slew of flyers posted in the Campus Center which questioned his motion to postpone last week's SGA meeting at 9:20 p.m.

The opening of nomination papers for the up and coming SGA President and Student Trustee election was also made during announcements.

"Nominations opened last week for the President and Trustee elections, and we have received papers for that race," Chancellor of Elections Sam Balasiak said. "However, no one has signed out for papers to run for area governments, so talk to people and your friends and get people to get involved."

Two motions were presented tonight: one dealing with the issue of Registered Student Organizations on campus reserving meeting rooms on campus at a shorter notice. The other motion was that of a By-law flaw in correlation to that of the SGA Constitution.

Both motions were accepted as well as passed unanimously by the Senate.

The meeting was shortly adjourned, and the Senators were left to meet in their respective committees. Thus, leading to the vote for Chair of Administrative Affairs.

With a tie between former Chair of Administrative Affairs, Senator Jennifer Teixeira and Senator Saunders, Speaker Jim Eltringham was left to make the final vote. Teixeira was named Chair of Administrative Affairs with a final vote of five to four.

However, with much discrepancy over the deciding vote, Saunders expressed that he felt the decision made was a conflict of interest.

"I've never seen a more blatant conflict of interest. He [Eltringham] had options that could have used and he made a poor, poor choice," Saunders said. "I had hoped that we could all put the petty bullshit behind us, but it's present in the current Senate. Nothing has changed."

Eltringham, however, disagreed with Saunders explaining that he made the right choice because Teixeira had prior experience in that position.

"That's a tough decision and both of them have experience, but in the scheme of things, I felt that it was the best choice," Eltringham said. "I think that Aaron [Saunders] stating that it was a conflict of interest is not fair to Jen. She did an admiral job last semester, and the fact that she was successful in that job more than qualified her."

Eltringham added that he hoped everyone could still work together and get things done within the SGA.

"It's very rare that you see a challenge in the election of a chair of a committee and more so a tie. I hope that they realize the resources that their group has," Eltringham said.

Teixeira also expressed her personal opinion on the topic by explaining that as a group they have too many things to work on together on, and we should not be taking sides," Teixeira said. "How can you be against making changes in the constitution and by-laws so that they make sense?"

Both Saunders and Eltringham commented on the issue of inner room politics within the SGA still being a present factor, as shown last night.

"You'll see people stirring up the hornets nest just for the sake of it, but it's a political environment and I'd be lying if I said I wasn't apart of it," Eltringham said. "But I think whoever turns anything messy for the sake of it is sad and a hypocrite."

SHALOM MARTI-COLLEGIAN

Students sworn in at SGA meeting last night.

Lawyer to lecture on Bush's faith-based plan

By Suzanne Furst
Collegian Staff

President George W. Bush's proposed initiative to allow government funding for faith-based charitable organizations has raised controversy among Democrats and liberal Republicans alike.

This faith-based funding had raised questions about the constitutional separation of church and state. It has been an ongoing concern since the President's second week in term.

The issue has received much attention and has rise to the spotlight locally. In response, an expert on the First Amendment, Michael W. McConnell, will lecture at Smith College today.

COURTESY OF THE WORLD WIDE WEB

Michael W. McConnell.

McConnell's visit to Northampton is to lecture on "Faith and Hope in Charity: The President's 'Faith-Based' Initiative in Constitutional Perspective.'" It will focus on the faith-based initiative within the context of the United States Supreme Court's shifting jurisprudence in relation to the separation of church and state.

McConnell is the Presidential Professor of Law at the University of Utah College of Law. Some of the topics that he teaches there include religion and the First Amendment, constitutional law, family law, regulated industries and state and local government.

The Supreme Court is also no stranger to McConnell; he has argued nine out of eleven cases successfully before the Supreme Court. The formost of those two of those cases: Bowen V. Kendrick and Helms V. Mitchell, have both set important legal precedents.

McConnell has also served as a law clerk to Skelly Wright, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and the late William J. Brennan, Jr., Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

The professor has published widely on constitutional law and theory, with the Religion Clauses of the First Amendment as his main theme. Some of his articles can be found in the archives of the Wall Street Journal, New York Times and the Slate and Weekly Standard. He's written over fifty law reviews and chapter in edited volumes. Christian Perspectives on Legal Thought and Religion and the Constitution are the titles of his two books.

This free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible lecture will take place at Smith College. It begins 7:30 p.m. tonight in Sweeney Concert Hall at Sage Hall. Following the lecture, there will be a reception in the Green Room at Sage Hall.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1984. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilnitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Burke Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Puppas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

Financial Aid for SLOBS!
Win $10,000!

Are you a mess?

Knock us out with a brief description and up to four color photos of your messy apartment. You could walk away filthy rich!!

DUE THIS FRIDAY!

apartments.com™ messiest
college apartment contest

Go to www.apartments.com

NO PURCHASE OR ONLINE ENTRY NECESSARY TO ENTER OR WIN. Contest is open only to legal residents of the 50 United States and the District of Columbia, who are 18 years of age or older and currently enrolled as an undergraduate or graduate student in an accredited United States college, university, or institution of higher education as of January 31, 2001. Entries will be accepted starting at 12:01 a.m. CST February 1, 2001 and must be postmarked or submitted electronically by 11:59 p.m. CST March 5, 2001. Apartments entered in the Contest must be located in the United States or District of Columbia. One entry per apartment. Only apartments may be entered in the contest. Dorm rooms, student housing, sorority or fraternity houses, and military housing are not eligible. Entrants must reside in the apartment submitted for consideration through April 13, 2001. To enter: go to www.apartments.com, enter your email address, complete and submit the registration form, submit two (2) to four (4) color photographs of your apartment, and a paragraph or two of no more than 250 words answering the question: "Why is your apartment the messiest college apartment in the U.S.?" Or, print the registration form and send your entry via U.S. mail to: Apartments.com Messiest College Apartment Contest, 175 West Jackson Boulevard, 6th Floor, Chicago, Illinois 60604-2691. For complete official rules or a list of the grand prize winner(s), go to www.apartments.com or send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Apartments.com Messiest College Apartment Contest, 175 West Jackson Boulevard, 6th Floor, Chicago, Illinois 60604-2691.

One (1) Grand Prize of $10,000 cash will be awarded to the winning entrant(s). Total retail value of the prize is $10,000. Void in Florida, New York, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, U.S. military installations and where prohibited by law. Contest is subject to complete official rules. The sponsor of this Contest is Classified Ventures, Inc.

Are YOU Interested in a co-op or internship for summer?

Well, it's not too late!!

Come to a Field Experience Welcome Session!

Mondays	3 p.m.	103 S. College	Wednesdays	2 p.m.	1332 Lederle
	3:30	3 Bartlett Hall		3 p.m.	8 Isenberg SOM
				3:30	106 Herter Hall
Tuesdays	2 p.m.	8 Isenberg SOM
	4 p.m.	202 Paige Lab	Thursdays	3 p.m.	103 S. College
			Fridays	1:30	114 Stockbridge

WOMEN'S STUDIES INTERNSHIP PANEL

Thursday, March 15th
BartlettHall, Room 201
11:15 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

ALL MAJORS ARE WELCOME

Panelists:
*Barbara Findlen (Editor, Family Fun Magazine, Northampton, MA)
*Susan Manatt (Director, Victim/Witness Program, Northampton, MA)
*Andrea Lee (Training and Internship Director, Commonwealth Coalition and N.O.W. Organizer, Boston, MA)
*Lori Lobenstine (Director of Teen Programs, Girls Inc., Holyoke, MA)

Campus Career Network

For more information, call the Field Experience Office at 545-6265 or see our website www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Thursday, March 8, 2001
Ed/Op Editor • Rob Schulze
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Safe while learning?

School shootings threaten future

Each student in every school spends countless hours preparing for every type of catastrophe that could possibly deem down like a plague. Well, every catastrophe but one. As a student, there is nothing more terrifying than a school shooting.

Unlike a fire, flood, earthquake, electrical failure or possible bomb threat that we all remember practicing countless drills for from elementary school to high school, there are no plans for what children should or should not do during a shooting. We don't have a "stop, drop and roll" plan, or a "stand in the doorway strategy." We don't educate students in survival skills of a shooting. We just hope with all of our might that it never ever happens.

It does happen though. It happened on Monday in Santana, CA. Two people are dead. It happened again yesterday in Williamsport, PA.

The irony in the entire situation is that after doing nothing to prevent a school shooting, as a society we relish it as the greatest tragedy since the bombing of Pearl Harbor after.

Without a doubt, there will be blame placed on everyone and everything that surrounds the life of Charles Andrew Williams, the alleged fifteen-year old gunman in Santana. Years from now we will know what movies Williams watched, what video games he played, and what songs he listened to. We'll know everything about his parents, his grandparents, and the arsenal of guns and ammunition he had access to. We'll know about the ex-girlfriend he agonized over, and his best friends who probably could have predicted his heinous act. We'll know about his grades, his eating habits, his hobbies, his reading preferences, and each and every emotion he has ever felt. We would have never known these things about him, but since he allegedly decided to put bullets in the bodies of fifteen different people, ending the lives of two, Charles Andrew Williams has become as much of a household name as Dylan Klebold or Eric Harris.

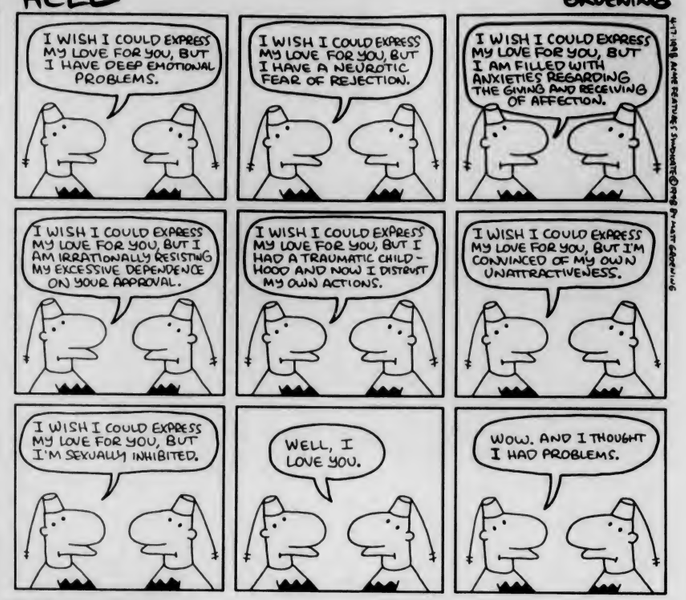
Let's stop caring so much about school shootings after they happen and work on preventing them beforehand. Students of all grades need to be educated about the disgusting reality of how awful a tragedy like this really is.

For younger students, education against aggressive violence is an absolutely necessary, especially for males. We're stuck in a culture that raises boys to think that it is okay to be aggressively violent, and that it is part of growing up. A substantial percentage of these boys grow up to be aggressive men. If we begin to educate these boys at an early age against aggression and violence, that percentage will certainly decrease.

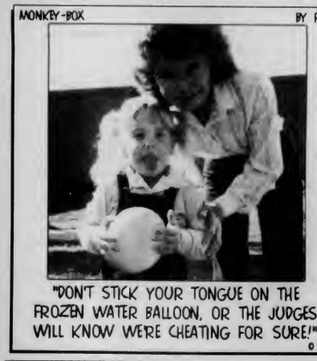
For older students in middle and high schools, it is essential to educate them specifically about school shootings. For an average teenager in suburban America, a gun is not a tool of self-defense; it is a weapon that they have probably never seen before, capable of mass destruction.

Instead of demanding that we adjust the surroundings children and teenagers grow up in, such as music, movies and media, we absolutely need structural organizations like public and private schools to shift the responsibility of prevention of a shooting off of parents and the media, and onto themselves.

There should be courses, taught in all middle and high schools teaching prevention for school shootings the same way there are courses teaching drug and alcohol prevention. There is no greater fear than the possibility of a shooting in all of America's schools. Instead of looking for a quick fix and a place to point the finger, educators should address the problem themselves long before it happens.



LIFE IN HELL
©1998 BY MATT GROENING
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I HAVE DEEP EMOTIONAL PROBLEMS.
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I HAVE A NEUROTIC FEAR OF REJECTION.
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I AM FILLED WITH ANXIETIES REGARDING THE GIVING AND RECEIVING OF AFFECTION.
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I AM IRRATIONALLY RESISTING MY EXCESSIVE DEPENDENCE ON YOUR APPROVAL.
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I HAD A TRAUMATIC CHILD-HOOD AND NOW I DISTORT MY OWN ACTIONS.
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I'M CONVINCED OF MY OWN UNATTRACTIVENESS.
I WISH I COULD EXPRESS MY LOVE FOR YOU, BUT I'M SEXUALLY INHIBITED.
WELL, I LOVE YOU.
WOW. AND I THOUGHT I HAD PROBLEMS.



MONKEY-BOX
BY PBEJ
"DON'T STICK YOUR TONGUE ON THE FROZEN WATER BALLOON, OR THE JUDGES WILL KNOW WE'RE CHEATING FOR SURE!" © 2001
www.monkey-box.net

Write for Ed/Op!

From fists to guns: Violence in our schools

SHARON STIMPFLE

"For all the sad words of tongue and pen, the saddest are these, 'It might have been.'" – John Greenleaf Whittier.

It might have been that fourteen-year-old Bryan Zuckor and seventeen-year-old Randy Gordon could have seen their graduation day at Santana High School, engaging in the festivities of flying caps and whistling cries of celebration. But instead, subjected to flying bullets and wailing screams of panic, these two boys saw nothing else on March 5th, as they were shuffling from class to class, but the smiling face of fifteen-year-old Charles Andrew Williams as he fired behind his pistol.

"It's just me," Andy Williams told the officers working in the middle-class Californian suburb, Santee, as he surrendered in the boys' restroom, dropping the .22-caliber pistol that had wounded thirteen and killed two under a trigger of vengeance. But had he acted alone? A constant victim of harassment due to a scrawny frame, this freshman skateboard "wannabe" (or so he was labeled based upon the superficial hierarchy of popularity that is exists, especially in high school), was the target of lashing words like "freak," "dork," and "nerd."

"How many times do tormented children have to be driven beyond the border of sanity by their peers before school systems will take some responsibility?"

In a society that has been toying with the notion of human cloning since the world media reported on February 23, 1997 the existence of Dolly, cloned from an adult sheep, it is not a stretch to imagine the severity of adolescent persecution a boy like Andy would have to endure for being different in a population that encourages conformity. In general, Williams did not meet the ideal image of a fifteen-year-old boy since his small stature and alternative interests alienated him from the more accepted model of the all-American boy. As a result, he was unanimously chosen to be an object of ridicule in the classroom. For in the field of science, aren't we pressing towards a day when potential parents have the power to create the "flawless" child, one that would never be faced with the challenge of combating the direst of adolescent cruelty?

In the nation's deadliest school attack since Columbine, how desensitized has our nation become to the media image of high school students dodging bullets? How many times do tormented children have to be driven beyond the border of sanity by their peers before school systems will take some responsibility for witnessing the emotional abuse that goes on in our school systems, as they do the physical? In the aftermath of such tragic events as this, we tend to address more questions than answers, finding ourselves ever the more powerless to this eruption of fury than we had thought.

The most striking aspect of this shooting incident, however, is the fact that fellow students confess that they had heard Andy's threats over the weekend, as he boasted about owning a gun, but assumed he was joking around and did not notify the authorities. Fifteen-year-old Joshua Stevens, a friend of the boy, says over the weekend Andy "was joking on and off that he was going to come to school and shoot people." How jokes like these could be widely accepted, however, proves to be the most disturbing piece of this puzzle in my mind. Twenty-nine-year-old Chris Reynolds, dating Stevens' mother, admits that he should have contacted authorities after hearing Williams talk about starting a shooting spree when he stayed over his house on Saturday night. It has become a common trait among these high-school shootouts that the gunmen have flaunted their premeditated plots of revenge just before acting upon them. One must wonder whether or not these threats are cries for help or just the work of amateur offenders; but either way, if our nation is to salvage anything valuable from these catastrophes, it should be to seriously regard any warning signs of deviance as opposed to merely passing them off as typical adolescent rebellion.

Williams will be charged as an adult with murder, assault with a deadly weapon, and gun possession. More importantly, however, another suburban community proves inadequate in its role to acknowledge emotional abuse in the classroom, and in addition is found guilty of ignoring vengeful threats. For what does it say of our society that today's adolescents have turned from fists to guns when dealing with adversity? And what does it say of we, the onlookers, who pass off threats of a school shooting as if they were merely those of a hallway fistfight?

Information from the Boston Globe was used in this article.

Sharon Stimpfle is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor:

The Chancellor's email and police

To Chancellor Scott:

I received an email from you on February 27th in which you respond – albeit in the most unresponsive of ways – to the rally and demonstration which took place on that same day and that served to call attention to and get answers for a disastrous trend and profound atrocity now occurring at UMass. I am speaking, of course, of the precipitous decline of select populations of the University community. Those responsible for organizing and leading the protest pointed out quite clearly and accurately that the decline of minority students – particularly African American and Latino (to whom they tied low income whites) – stands in direct contradiction to the mission statement of the University. The most disturbing element of your correspondence, however – I will leave the issue of diversity erosion to others – was your tone of arrogant despotism, and it is that attitude to which this letter responds.

Essentially, your message was a thinly veiled threat from a faceless dictator. You state that you will "not tolerate disruption of...people's lives, work and rights." Indeed. You then move on to a cryptic warning, stating that everyone should make himself/herself aware of the consequences for violating the University's guidelines, which govern its response to demonstrations. Thus, you hide smugly behind your manifesto of "appropriate procedures," avoid any sort of meaningful dialogue – addressing the general concept of dissent, rather than the specific circumstances which are its cause – and prepare to push the button which sets the proper automated gears in motion should any further "disruption" occur.

This is not a thoughtful response to any problem. Indeed it shows that you have taken active steps to avoid an open discussion of the specific concerns of many members of the University community. Your brief memo, then, sends a powerful message – although not necessarily one which you intended – that you are not willing to discuss openly or think creatively about (because both of these require dynamic intelligence rather than an automatic, let us say, standard, response) the specific and grievous concerns of members of the University and community – no matter how legitimate they may be – because you view such concerns and points of view to be nothing but "disruption." Your repetitive use of the word "disruption" in your message to the University begs the question: "The disruption of what?" Your answer, it seems quite clear, is the status quo.

There can be no education in the absence of dialogue, open communication, and the free exchange of ideas, which they permit. That you refuse to allow such actions to occur in a meaningful way – such that they might bring about change – stands directly in opposition to your position as the head of the University campus. Nothing could illustrate with more brilliant clarity your dedication to choke the life out of the meaningful educational experience, which might be possible if the University, and those you run it, were interested in educating rather than training its students.

David Swiderski
Greenfield

To the Editor:

In the February 23rd issue of the Collegian, Aaron Wilson was reported to have made some remarks about the way UMass police officers perform their duty with regard to search warrants and what they do with the property they seize as a result of executing a legal search warrant. I cannot allow those remarks to pass without responding to them. The UMass police, by policy and practice, are careful in their observance of the legal rights of all people they interact with. All property taken into custody of this department, by whatever route, is accounted for and legally disposed of.

UMass police officers maintain the highest personal and professional standards. If Mr. Wilson has knowledge of circumstances where he believes this is not true, I invite him to contact my office.

John W. Luippold, Jr.
Chief, UMass Police

Thursday, March 8, 2001
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Design by Mike Kulak and Sam Wilkinson

One part Jello One part Biafra All American

Jello Biafra was the band leader of the legendary punk band Dead Kennedys and, upon their dissolve in the late 80s, went on to do sporadic collaborations with other musicians and release a steady stream of spoken word albums on his own Alternative Tentacles record label. His most recent release, Become the Media, is pulled from a number of spoken word performances given in 2000, and much of the material is similar to that which he addressed during a UMass visit in October of last year. Become the Media gives Biafra's impressions on a variety of topics including the WTO and IMF, as well as the Green Party and various media issues.

The purpose of this cover page is not Biafra worship (I cover that pretty thoroughly with every DK reference I make in the Collegian), but using the ideas in Become the Media as a jump-off towards a dialogue about larger issues affecting the media, between people involved in it. I've tried to get a diverse line-up of opinions throughout the newsroom, and hopefully the end result of this cover page will be to encourage further debate and awareness about the issues that will shape our future, and the future of the media. (Michael Delano – Music Editor)

"The Green Wedge"

Jello Biafra certainly has some intriguing, even revolutionary ideas, which he describes broadly in "The Green Wedge." It's mainly the usual leftist agenda: anti-corporate, government subsidized health care for all, abolishing the war on drugs, and massive public works projects. For the most part the ideals he outlines will sound great if you are a socialist or a left-winger with blind faith in huge government, and they'll be hard to except if you are anything else.

One of Biafra's most notable positions is his support of a maximum wage, obviously meaning people would not be able to exceed a certain amount of income. This, like many of his ideas, would have a hard time ever being accepted by the mainstream in the U.S. Many other aspects of his grand plan are also highly questionable as well. For one, he tries to sell the idea that huge tax rates are a great thing since everybody always gets so much back from the government. Obviously this is not necessarily true. He says we should work to legalize all current illicit drugs, since crime will definitely go down if we do so. Of course he conveniently manages to forget the fact that legalization of drugs will dramatically drive prices down for such substances which certainly could result in more users, and hence more abusers. Last time I checked, a great deal of our nation's violent crimes were committed by people under the influence of drugs. How will more high people reduce crime, Jello?

He tops it all off with the obvious anti-corporate venom, but fails to mention the fact that "evil" corporations do actually employ millions of Americans, and that his ideas, if implemented (limiting the control businesses have over their trade policies and wage levels), could seriously threaten the jobs of millions of Americans. And of course he had to insult everyone's intelligence and claim that Republicans and Democrats are really "the same party." I guess Republicans and Democrats are exactly the same if you don't count differing stances on such minor issues as health care, abortion, education, gun laws, environmental protection, worker rights, and taxes. The people in the audience to whom Biafra was speaking seem to believe him though, as they greeted the idea that both parties are "the same" with nothing but loud whooping and cheering. Give me a break.

It certainly is possible that Biafra's ideals could be effective in some type of society, just not in a capitalist one. Biafra's sarcastic uses of the words "sell," "marketplace," and his similar use of the word "lovely" to describe the military show his utter contempt for capitalism and the American way of life.

While many of Biafra's ideas are commendable - much more so than any right-wing ideals are – they remain hard to swallow with many unanswered questions attached. (Kurt Polesky – Arts Writer)

"K.O. The W.T.O."

Like most of Jello's political tirades, this one has a main focus, the World Trade Organization in this case, but does not fail to offer other pearls of wisdom. "A joyous celebration of people power," Biafra says about resistance and protest. And this is the kind of idealism one can come to expect from the man. Layered under the crass cynicism is still a boy with the golden heart.

Biafra starts his anti-WTO speech with a history lesson on the ills of the North American Trade Agreement – "A Reagan and Bush wet dream enacted by the Clintonoids." Soon enough he gets to the General Agreement on Trades and Tariffs and the WTO. The WTO's primary purpose, according to Biafra, is to allow countries to challenge "democratically-made" laws in order to protect corporate profit. Biafra explains how the WTO has created corporate feudalism whereby people work and corporations benefit. How to remedy the situation?

Well, the Seattle protests were a start, says Biafra. They brought the WTO issue to national recognition, brought people who care about the same issues together and blocked corporations from having the above-named power to challenge laws that infringe of profit. However, his other solutions – don't give corporations your money, don't work for corporations, computer sabotage on the job and voting – seem impractical at best, naive at worst. One can't help but cheer when Biafra says "become the media," spread the word about issues, but is that really going to work?

The message certainly isn't bad. I do, however, question the means. (Adam Martignetti – News Editor)

"Hellburbia"

"I come to dissect teenage rampage superstars, not to praise them."

On "Hellburbia," Biafra takes aim at society for its inability or unwillingness to hold itself responsible for recent school shootings, and to identify the problem not as the influence of music or television or video games, but the result of a society that doesn't take the time to raise its children correctly.

Instead of spending time with their children and maintaining healthy lines of communication, Biafra says, people are opting to keep their kids "sedated" with Ritalin, Prozac, and other medications in an attempt to "normalize" them, making them easier to deal with and allowing parents to devote their time to careers and materialistic pursuits; he cites SUVs and minivans equipped with television sets as just the latest tool for modern parents to use in avoiding true parental responsibility. Little wonder, then, that when these children enter the vicious social arena of high school, lacking any sort of domestic support, some kids are pushed the mental breaking point. Biafra also spends much of this rant's time exposing the lunacy of the various ways in which society has responded to the shootings, including SWAT teams, metal detectors, and profiling programs.

And all of it, as resistant as I am to agree with a man named Jello, has the ring of truth to my ears. Attacking pop art, and not the domestic and social environments that surround the children, comes off as nothing but scapegoating. (David Troupes – Arts & Living Editor)

"Hack America"

"Be afraid, be very afraid."

So goes most of Jello Biafra's fifty-five minute rant entitled "Hack America," a piece in which he aims his sharp tongue at the evils of corporate America. For Biafra, no subject or sector is sacred, leaving topics such as the Internet and the news media open to his opinions.

Biafra's strength is his everyman quality; he speaks from a level the majority can relate to, and that instant identifiable quality draws you to his side more readily. His allegiance lies with the little man, siding with the average citizen in the fight to stop mass control. What Biafra seems to want more than anything is for each person to act and live in a way that truly suits them, without worrying about money or corporate takeover. And, often enough, his side makes a world of sense.

"Anyone ever see Tiger Woods' hair?" asks Biafra, commenting on the current state of celebrity endorsement. "I doubt it. You'd have no idea whether there's wire underneath it, connected to American Express and Pepsi...he always a hat on with the mark of the beast on his forehead. The 'Nike Swooshtika'...it's on Tiger's head, soon it will be on yours."

Biafra doesn't always hit the mark, but he seldom misses. What he arrives at in nearly an hour of dialogue is an even-split; nothing brilliant, nothing subpar, but rather the opinion of the everyman. There's something for everyone, and the task of weeding out the interesting bits is left to the patience of the listener. (Matt Despres – Assistant Ed/Op Editor)

"Philadelphia Stories"

I don't know much about this Biafra character. He seems like a left-wing well-wisher. He's angry, but he doesn't offer any real reason why.

He spouts elitist theory like crazy, the idea that there's a small group of people behind the screen with their fingers on the strings controlling the puppets. It's popular with people who don't like to think about the complexities of politics – it's easier to look at a few certain people than at a system set up to allow individual control.

On this rant, Biafra is ranting about baseball (the

Turn to Biafra page 6

Godsmack headlines disappointment

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

GODSMACK
Mullins Center
March 4

RYAN BENHARRIS / COLLEGIAN

Sully leads Boston's own Godsmack through their thoroughly lackluster set.

Soulless, disinterested arena rock made a triumphant return to the UMass campus Sunday as Godsmack, Staind, Cold, and Systematic showed just how bland and going-through-the-motions a promising bill can actually be.

Systematic and Cold both suffered through mediocre sets with crappy sound quality and a totally apathetic, half-empty arena. Cold especially disappointed, as they have two albums worth of quality material, but chose the worst of their catalog to play and were too distracted by fighting with the sound guy to let their songs shine.

Staind then set the standard for disgusting, careless, pathetic pandering without any shred of actual emotion behind the rote-performance run-through of their set. On record and the radio Staind is a great band – the lyrics are thoughtful and dark, the music is heavy, and everything really clicks. Aaron Lewis' voice is intensely powerful, capable of conveying depths of torment that many wannabe singers could only dream of.

Live, Staind is the worst band ever.

They sound exactly like their record. If you like what you hear on the radio, then you would have enjoyed closing your eyes and pretending you were sitting in your room listening to Dysfunction while you stood on the Mullins Center floor this past Sunday. I mean they sound identical – there is no improvisation on the instruments, no vocal embellishment, nothing. You don't feel like you are getting anything special by watching this band perform – you simply realize that they are doing the same thing that they do every night, with mechanical precision and a total lack of spontaneity.

And they just stand there. Aaron Lewis' voice was, like the rest of the band, identical to what you hear in the radio eleventy billion times a day – dark, haunting, and tortured. However, when tortured lyrics of boundless suffering come from the mouth of a guy who is simply standing there with a blank face, motionless body, and glazed, disinterested eyes, you realize that it is simply canned. There was not a shred of real emotion present during the entire, eternal time that Staind was onstage. It was regurgitated pasty bland arena rock at its worst. They played by rote.

RYAN BENHARRIS / COLLEGIAN

Staind frontman Aaron Lewis, faking it all the way.

The low point of the entire night, however, was when Lewis sat down by himself for the inevitable version of the acoustic megahit "Outside." This song, yet another declaration of personal suffering, became an audience singalong. Note to the general public – it's OK to sing along as a massive group to N'Sync, but pain is private. Simple, sad pandering, and when Lewis even sunk to the point of saying some of the Fred Durst part of the song to cheap applause, a part of me died.

After an insanely long and drastically unfunny intro cartoon, Godsmack took the stage with the song "Awake," the rocking first single off their new album by the same name. The sound mix was initially poor, but was corrected by the midpoint of the tune, and by the end of it the crowd was squarely in the band's hands. They had made up for three sets of poor crap by just coming out and playing their song simply and loudly. Then they fell prey to the same trap that the bands preceding them had stumbled into – letting their basic rock chops be buried beneath an avalanche of cliche arena tactics.

Godsmack certainly got famous by the radio play from their various singles, but really cemented their popularity touring on two consecutive Ozzfests. Playing on Ozzy's set in the daylight, they came out for two summers in a row and would simply rock the amphitheater nonstop. There was no backdrop, no laser beams – they cemented their place in America's hard-rock hierarchy by playing tight, hard, passionate sets all over the country opening for another band. They gained the image as a working-class band out of Boston who made their name based simply on the strength of their performances and songs.

This past Sunday it seemed that everything Godsmack did was designed to take away from their key strengths. They played in front of a massive, foam-rubber Spinal Tap set designed to look like some sort of castle or something. It played videos. It shot fire. It had a giant revolving Godsmack sun that also (surprise) shot fire. It had giant gargoyle dogs. The whole thing was apparently designed solely to distract attention from the band playing in front of it, which was, assumedly, the reason people bought tickets in the first place.

The band did sing-alongs. The band yelled at the crowd to be louder. The band covered Pantera and threw beer into the crowd. They did embellished instrumental breaks. They used a disco ball, weird graphics, and lots and lots of shooting fire – almost everything and anything that would cause an audience to lose track of the songs they were hearing.

As such, Godsmack was at their best when they just turned off the appliances and played the music. And their best was actually quite good – "Bad Religion," from their self-titled debut, was easily the highlight of the night. They turned off the fire, turned on the lights, and played a fast, furious version with lead singer Sully really throwing himself into the harsh vocals. Inevitable encore "Whatever" and new single "Greed" also highlighted the band at their best – a talented hard-rock band that can play. The rest of the set simply showed a band that was just too immature to play an arena without falling mindlessly in love with the tricks, and losing their music behind the bland clicheness which comes with them.

■ Biafra

continued from page 5

media (corporate media is bad, bad, bad) and the Philadelphia Republican convention. He's complaining about what a pack of propaganda that the Republican Party was offering, as if we're supposed to expect something else. He complains about how the media only offers us certain stories and not others, as if we're supposed to expect something else.

He's bitter about people who don't agree with him and he's performing in front of a group that agrees with Biafra. Every time he makes a simple observation or a bitter jibe — rah, rah, goes the crowd.

Biafra fancies himself a truth teller, a seer, a man of the people with a penchant for the truth, except all he's offering is basic, obvious, simple truths. His problem is the fact that he's lazy – he doesn't offer a road, only a critique. He doesn't offer advice, only complaint.

And his crowd eats it up. If someone's a raging Naderite who doesn't want to do much constructive though, Biafra's the man. This piece is perfectly exemplary of his behavior – complaint, complaint, one-liner, cheer. Repeat. It's too simple to be good. (Sam Wilkinson – Managing Editor)

The new kingpins of reality-based programs

Tube Notes
with Nicholas Pizzolato

Two of the newest reality-based television shows have come to an end. Both ABC's "The Mole" and FOX's "Temptation Island" ended last week, leaving their mark on the real TV generation. These two shows made us all realize that not only can we not trust anyone, but also FOX will run anything no matter how scandalous and absurd it seems.

"The Mole," I thought, was fantastic. These people did not just compete against each other, but one person was trying to ruin them all. The goal of the saboteur, or "mole," was to limit the amount of money the group could win. For instance in this first season out of a possible million dollar jackpot, the one person who guessed correctly the identity of the mole won a little of half that money ($510,000 to be exact). And these games were not that physically challenging. Sure, there was running around involved, but the context of the "test" (totally different from "Survivor"'s challenges) involved dodging a sniper, playing laser tag, or shooting at unarmed highly trained special forces operatives who are trying to take your flag. Any type of running under those conditions is not longer physical tests of strength but war games, and who does not like shooting each other while yelling things like "I've just been taken out," "Sniper at one o'clock," and "No fuh you didn't hurt me"?

The other games that the contestants play are all mental games with the contestants trying to figure out to win money. All the games allow for more than one person to cost the group the money so suspicion about the identity of the mole can be cast around.

Hosted and narrated by well-known ABC journalist Anderson Cooper, the show took place in Spain, making the tests even harder because none of the contestants spoke Spanish. I was sure the mole was helicopter pilot Jim, but it was the lawyer Kathryn, which should have been obvious. Not just because she is a lawyer but also because how would a small, mousy woman survive past the retired detective. The winner was Steve, an undercover cop. Now is it just me or does it seem that Steve is out of a job? How can he be an undercover cop if the entire world knows who he is?

Steve: "So man how much dope can you sell me?"

Drug Dealer 1: "Dude, I know you, you beat Kathryn in 'The Mole.' Can I get your autograph? Now, put your hands up before I mole this bullet in your head."

Drug Dealer 2: "Nice pun, man."

Drug Dealer 1: "Thanks."

I liked "The Mole" so much that I will be trying to get on "The Mole II," which will be shooting over the summer.

Now for "Temptation Island." This was possibly the most shameless attempt by FOX to get ratings, and let me tell you, I was watching.

The idea was to put four couples that want to test their relationships on an island in Belize with over a dozen tempting members of the opposite sex. These people were put there by the producers for the sole reason of tempting the couples into breaking up. For two weeks the couples dated the tempting singles and spent hours getting to know the real people. I don't care if these are your dream girls; you cannot form an emotional bond during the course of dinner, salsa dance lessons and body shots. ("Blind Date" has proven to this time and time again).

To make the show even better, it was revealed during one of the dates that one of the couples had a one-year-old baby. I thought they were supposed to run background checks on this people to maintain the integrity of the show. Oh wait, I forgot this is FOX. So what happened to this couple? Well, FOX shipped them off to another island to rekindle their romance and they decided to stay together. Which brings me to another point. Every couple stayed together. I watched and was making bets with friends on which couple would break up. Which just goes to show how desensitized the dating scene of our generation is. If I saw my girlfriend doing body shots off a guy named Adonis, and receiving a full body oil massage from a professional masseuse, I would dump her so fast. Especially if she started her confession with, "I met someone very special to me, and I will never forget him." Well great, glad to think I was in your mind during the two weeks.

However, I would expect the same thing from her. If she saw a super-model brushing a butterfly against me in an attempt to seduce me, or if I and another woman spent "time" together, I would want her to dump me, too. But obviously these people don't think that way. You know FOX will have "Temptation Island 2" just in the hopes that someone will break up then. I bet that within three weeks of the season finale of the upcoming FOX reality show "Boot Camp" (which takes place in a boot camp; it doesn't take a very vivid imagination to explore what they will do in that show) we will see another "Temptation Island."

What to Watch

This Saturday Conan O'Brien will host "Saturday Night Live" in what will hope to be a very funny episode. Also FOX has added a new show to its Sunday night power line-up. Instead of the "X-Files," FOX is airing the new Chris Carter series based on characters from the "X-Files," "The Lone Gunmen." Also on Sunday at 10:30 p.m. on MTV is "Kathy Griffin's So Called Reality"; watch it and laugh at all the reality shows out there.

Nicholas Pizzolato is a Collegian columnist.

Thai Corner
"Home Style Thai Food"
Serving Lunch From 11:30-3:00
Monday- Saturday
Take-Out Available
ไทยคอนเนอร์
• Curry Dishes
• Stir Fried
• Soups
• Salads
• Noodles
31 Boltwood Walk, Amherst MA 253-1639
located down the alley from Antonio's Pizza
Hours: Sun 5-9, Mon-Wed 11:30-9, Thurs-Sat 11:30-10

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON
Summer @ UMass Boston
- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 29, July 2, and July 16
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- On-line, web-based courses
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost
To learn more, visit www.conted.umb.edu or call 617.287.6000
UMASS BOSTON
A great university in a great city

McMurphy's
March 10th
Annual Blarney Blowout
To celebrate St. Patty's Day
Live Music 4-7
Prizes
Free Corned Beef Sandwiches

UNIVERSITY LIQUORS
liquor • beer • wine • lottery • phonecards • cigarettes
Stolichnaya Strasberi 750 ..... $16.99
Dinkel Acker 12 pack ..... $9.99 + dep.
Amstel 12 pack ..... $10.99 + dep.
Spaten Lager 6 pack ..... $5.99 + dep.
Sutter Home Chardonnay $4.99
visit our beer of the world section and the two for $9.99 international wine section!
Register for Weekly Prizes!

HAIR CUTS NOW WITH KATE $20 (Weds. & Sat.)
ERIC SCOT
79 south pleasant street
Amherst
413.256.3440
Experience the art of hair for less.

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Every Thursday!

COURTESY ASIAN DANCE & MUSIC

Middle East comes to UMass

Anatolia will perform unique blend of Turkish and Arab music on March 10 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – "Christopher Wilmarth: living inside" presents a selection of sculptures, drawings, and prints by an artist best known for a sparely sensuous style that marries formal elements with mysterious reverie; "Brenda Zlamany/ Figure Ground: Color Studies of Chuck Close, Lvander Holyfield, and John Yau" features this artist's most recent paintings series which marks a further step in her ongoing investigation of color and light as they are translated into psychological content. "Christopher Wilmarth" will be on view from February 3 through March 16 and then April 1 through May 18. "Figure Ground" will be on view from February 3 through March 16.

UMASS – "Dreaming: Prophecies, Speculations, and Good Guesses," A collection of works created to reflect a visionary gaze into the personal and social future of society. "Dreaming" will run from February 12 to March 9 in the Augusta Savage Gallery.

UMASS – "The Jesus Show." Photographer James Gehrt has traveled the U.S. and collected pictures of religious icons, from the modest to the grand. Central Gallery, March 1 through 25, with a gallery talk at 2pm and an opening reception at 3 p.m. on March 11, Central Gallery.

UMASS and HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "New England, New York, New Talent 2001." At UM, in the Hampden Gallery, and at Hampshire in the Johnson Library Center. These exhibits will work in cooperation to display new works of art by emerging artists, March 4-25 with an opening reception on March 4, from 2-5 p.m.

SMITH COLLEGE – "The Refugees." Two life sized sculptures by artist Judith Peck depicting refugees carrying a child and all their worldly possessions. Part of the Khan Institute's "Anatomy of Exile" project. Through May 28. For more information, call (413) 585-4292. Third floor, Neilson Library.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Biblical Women." Story quilts by artist Lee Porter, depicting several scenes women from the Bible. Through March 30. For more information, call (413) 585-2043. Alumnae House Gallery, 33 Elm St.

WILLIAMSTOWN – "Photography EXPOSED." Includes 45 examples of portraiture as part of the Williams College Museum of Art's 75 anniversary celebration. The exhibit will continue until September 3, 2001. The Museum is open Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

THEATER AND DANCE

UMASS – "The Crucible." This Arthur Miller classic depicts the Salem Witch Trials, and is based on actual events. Performances will be on March 1-3, and 8-10 at 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. Tickets are $7, $4 for students.

UMASS – "Aeros." This innovative group combines Olympic medal winning gymnasts and contemporary choreography. The show will take place at the Concert Hall on March 14 at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $10, $7 and $5 for students.

SMITH COLLEGE – "For Our Four Astonished Eyes" and "Meditation on Meat." The New Play Reading Series will present these works on March 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the TV studio, Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts, admission is free.

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – Almost Speechless will be performing at the Iron Horse this Friday, March 9, at 10 p.m. They play Acoustic-based rock in the same vein as the Counting Crows.

UMASS – "Anatolia in Concert, Featuring Iajouka." The musicians of Anatolia will present their unique combination of Turkish and Arab traditions. Performing with them will be Iajouka, a Middle Eastern dancer. The March 10 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

UMASS – Ensembles from UM will perform jazz, percussion and vocal music, in collaboration with Springfield Public School students, at Central High School March 9 at 7 p.m.

UMASS – The National Orchestra of Spain, featuring world-renowned classical guitarist Pepe Romero, will perform the works of nineteenth and twentieth century composers at the Concert Hall on March 8 at 7:30 pm.

UMASS – Violinist Charles Treger, cellist Matt Haimovitz and pianist Estela Olevsky, all UM faculty, will perform duos and trios, including pieces by Beethoven and Brahms on March 15 at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. Tickets are $10 for students, and will proceeds will benefit scholarships for outstanding student string players. The musicians will hold an informal pre-concert talk at 7 p.m.

AMHERST COLLEGE – "Purim Party," with a free concert by the Moshav Band, from Israel, will take place today, March 8 in the Amherst College Alumni House. The 9 p.m. concert will be preceded by readings at 6:30 and 7:30.

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "An American in Prague." Soprano Denise Walker and pianist Estrid Eklof will present this recital with music from the U.S. and the Czech Republic, with styles ranging through serial, folk, blues and post-Romantic on March 14 at 8 p.m. in the Music and Dance Building.

SMITH COLLEGE – A faculty recital by Deborah Gilwood will feature works by Janacek, Beethoven, Schulthoff and Schubert. The performance will take place on March 11 at 3 p.m. at the Sweeney Concert Hall in Sage Hall.

SMITH COLLEGE – "A Cappella Jam." The Smithereens will host this jam, featuring "Mass Transit" from NYU, "Ball in the House" from Boston and "Extension Chords" from the University of Illinois. Admission is $3, 7 p.m. in the Davis Ballroom.

READINGS/LECTURES/ACADEMIC EVENTS

UMASS – "A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy." Professor Khalil Barhoum of Stanford University will present a lecture on calligraphy, which is the primary for of visual expression in the Islamic world. March 9 at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall, free for students.

UMASS – Thomas Glave, the author of "Whose Song?" and other stories will read from his fiction. A reception and book signing will follow the reading, which will take place on March 8 at Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

SOUTH HADLEY – Andre Dubus III will sign autographs and read from his new novel, "Bluesman" at the Odyssey Bookshop on March 13 at 7 p.m. Shelby Hearon will also read.

Disoriented?
Don't know where you are going in life?
WE CAN HELP
Contact us for more information on job and scholarship opportunities
Captain Chris Lane
UMASS Air Force ROTC
(413) 545-2437 afrotc@acad.umass.edu
Information Session at Memorial Hall
March 9 8:00-10:00 am
FREE FOOD AND DRINKS!

Done your homework for LIFE 101 lately?
Purpose for Life = Loving God + Loving People
Sunday Morning Celebration - 11am in the Jones Library Conference Room
43 Amity St - downtown Amherst)
MERCYhouse It's a church! www.knowmercy.org

Sponsored by the Amherst Health Department
The only thing smokin' in Amherst is the atmosphere!
See what you eat!
See what you drink!
See the entertainment!
You Are Here UMASS
See You There
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
North Pleasant
Experience Downtown Amherst and its Smoke-Free Establishments

getinvolved!
3 in 5
Americans will be affected by an alcohol-related crash in their lifetime.
Mothers Against Drunk Driving and a coalition of UMass students invite all interested students to attend an informational meeting for the formation of the UMass chapter of MADD.
Tuesday, March 13, 2000
7:00 pm
Campus Center
Room 811-15

Minutemen get trounced in Golden performance

By Matt Despres
Collegian Staff

Rust never sleeps.

Unfortunately for the Massachusetts baseball team, it also busked a flight to Oklahoma last weekend, coinciding with the Minutemen's three game opening road stand against Oral Roberts University. The team dropped all three games on the trip, surrendering 34 runs in the series to fall to 0-3 on the early season.

Much like last year, when head coach Mike Stone and his club struggled out of the gate to a 0-9 start, there were shades of it that simply hadn't had time enough to work out the kinks. Stone made mention before the series that the biggest obstacle facing the team would be themselves, and his prediction was dead on – despite a tough Golden Eagles offense, UMass simply couldn't get all cylinders firing to get out of their own way.

"We always play the early part of our season out the road, and that's hard to deal with," said Stone prior to the Oral Roberts series. "It makes you a little bit tougher when you're always on the road, playing teams at their home ballpark.

"Some of our opponents [on the trip] may not look like good teams, but they've already played intra-squad games before they play other teams. When you haven't played, it's tough. It takes you about 10 games to get ready to play a season."

Game one was the Minutemen's strongest effort and the closest of the series, a 5-2 victory by the Golden Eagles in which senior Nick Gorneault and sophomore Jeff Altieri paced the Maroon and White with two hits each. Oral Roberts jumped out to a quick lead, holding a 4-1 advantage after the fourth inning. UMass closed the gap in the top of the second, when Gorneault tripled off of Oral Roberts pitcher Michael Rogers and proceeded to score on a wild pitch. The Golden Eagles quickly went to work, however, putting the game out of reach by torching UMass starting pitcher Nick Skirkanich for four runs on five hits. Junior Jesse Santos was brought in to relieve Skirkanich, and gave up only one more run over the next five innings. His efforts, however, went for naught, as the UMass offense, save for a ninth inning rally by Gorneault and Altieri, failed to muster any more runs.

The Minutemen also struggled on the base paths, failing to attempt a steal while Oral Roberts took nine en route to the victory.

Game two saw outstanding individual efforts from both Gorneault and Altieri again, as well as freshman second baseman Adam Stojanowski, who each collected two hits. The end result was no better than game one, however, as Oral Roberts collected nine more hits on its way to the 13-4 victory.

The Minutemen gained their first lead of the game and series, going up 2-0 after the first two innings of play. The lead was short lived, though, as the Golden Eagles pounded out five runs in the bottom of the second to secure the lead for good.

Oral Roberts catcher Josh Shackleford got the ball rolling with a three-run double, and was followed by outfielder Wilton Reynolds, who added a two-run homer later in the inning to extend the lead to three. After a scoreless third by both teams, Oral Roberts put up at least one run in each of the remaining innings to run the Minutemen off the field.

UMass finished the afternoon by notching two runs in the top of the ninth, one driven in on a sacrifice fly by freshman pinch hitter Colin Barden, and the other on an error. With the victory, Oral Roberts improved to 7-2 on the season, while UMass fell to 0-2.

The final meeting of the three-game set proved to be the proverbial nail in the coffin. The Minutemen faltered badly, allowing 14 hits in the game, with three doubles, a triple and two homeruns, ultimately losing the contest 16-1.

Stojanowski again factored into the lone UMass score, driven home in the top of the fourth on an RBI single by senior outfielder Gavin Clark.

Oral Roberts enjoyed an explosive sixth inning, picking up 10 runs to put the game out of reach. Golden Eagle catcher Brian Hickman chipped in with a pair of two-run singles, while Reynolds added a three-run homer.

Oral Roberts pitcher Trevor Leu picked up the win, allowing only one hit and one run in six innings, while striking out six batters. Brian Hourigan was served the loss for UMass, after surrendering five runs on six hits in four innings of work.

The Minutemen will look to notch their first win of the season this weekend, as they travel to Lynchburg, Va. to battle Liberty in a three-game series.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Brian Hourigan had a mixed bag this weekend with a strong outing on Friday but suffered an ugly loss on Sunday.

F@#* 'em up, F@#* 'em up, Go UMass

Spring break special Changes
[a full service salon for men and women]
Introducing Diane:
· choose any wax service and receive a second waxing service for half off when you mention this ad.
offer expires May 31, 2001
Thornes Market Place
North Hampton MA 01060 Phone:413·586·2600

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Great Beer Great Food Great Service
Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.
★
Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!
Thurs. Brother Chameleon jazz rock $2 Cover
Sat. Lucky Johnson funky r&b $4 cover
Sun. Ted Wirt Jazz Quartet No Cover
36 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst
413-253-4400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM

THE ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM SERIES PRESENTS
A Two-Day Cultural Festival at the University of Massachusetts
Illuminations from the Middle East
Anatolia in Concert
featuring Jajouka
Middle Eastern Music and Dance
March 10 at 8pm in Bowker Auditorium
Adults: $20, $15, Students and Children: $10, $7
(Reserved Seating)
A Master's Stroke: The Art of Arabic Calligraphy
An interactive lecture with Khalil Barhoum
March 9 at 4pm in Memorial Hall
$4 General Public
Free for Students and Seniors
Call the Fine Arts Center Box Office
1-413-545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS

TO PURCHASE YOUR OFFICIAL UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS CLASS RING
jostens
A Jostens representative will be on campus
TODAY!
10am - 2pm Outside the University Store.
Save up to $200.00 when purchasing on these days 3/7 • 3/8 • 3/9.
$50 DEPOSIT REQUIRED MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

LEPRECHAUNS YOUNG & OLD SHOP LIQUORS 44 TO SAVE SOME GOLD!
LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink & Drive
EVERYDAY PRICING
1/2 KEGS COORS LIGHT, MICHELOB LIGHT $44.99
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB $45.99
1/2 KEGS BUDWEISER, LIGHT & ICE $37.99
1/2 KEGS BERKSHIRE BREWING CO. SEASONAL FLAVORS $88.99
KEYSTONE LIGHT 30 PACK $11.99
HIGH LIFE, HIGH LIFE LIGHT, LIGHT ICE 30 PACK $12.99
KILLIAN'S IRISH RED 12 PACK $9.99
KILLARNEY'S IRISH RED 6 PACK $5.99
GUINNESS PUB DRAUGHT & MURPHY'S IRISH STOUT 4 PACK $4.99
HARP LAGER 12 PACK $10.99
O'DOUL'S 12 PACK $6.99
WINES OF THE MONTH
COVEY RUN $6.99
CARLO ROSSI $6.99
MARCH MAGNESS!
CK MONDAVI $11.99
CAVIT PINOT GRIGIO $9.99
TWIN VALLEY WHITE ZINFANDEL & WHITE MERLOT $4.99
RENE JUNOT WINES $5.99
FOXHORN WINES $5.49
POPOV VODKA $12.99
JAMESON'S IRISH WHISKEY $15.99
BAILEY'S IRISH CREAM $16.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFFERRED WHISKEY $11.99
MALIBU RUM $11.99
TANQUERAY GIN $24.99
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
The Holyoke store WILL REMAIN OPEN during renovation of the Stop & Shop Plaza
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/8/01 THRU WEDS. 3/14/01

COMPLETE AUTO BODY REPAIRS ALL MAKES AND MODELS
DANA AUTOMOTIVE Chevrolet Volkswagen
COLLISION REPAIR • GLASS INSTALLATION
Authorized GM/VW Body Shop
Frame & Unibody Straightening
24 HR HOTLINE 586-7250 | FREE LOANERS! | 968 Bridge Road NORTHAMPTON RS# 2427

■ A-10

continued from page 12

Personnel-wise, the Minutemen seem to match up well against the Bonnies regardless of their regular-season woes against them. Conference Player of the Week Kevin Houston, a 6-foot-4 senior swingman, is the heart and soul of the Bonnie offense.

Houston racked up 26 points on 8-of-16 shooting in SBU's win over UMass on Saturday, well over his season average of 19.5 points per game. The team also got a big lift from junior guard J.R. Bremer, who canned four second-half threes en route to 20 points on the afternoon.

UMass counters with All-Atlantic 10 first-teamer Monty Mack and Shannon Crooks, whom Flint calls "the best defensive guard in the conference." Mack finished just behind Houston in fifth place on the A-10 scoring list (19.2 ppg), while Crooks finished among the conference's top 15 in assists, steals and assist-turnover ratio.

Where the Minutemen enjoy a decided difference over SBU is in the frontcourt, where the Bonnies have little answer to A-10 Defensive Player of the Year Kitwana Rhymer. The 6-foot-10 senior shares the paint with equally formidable forward Micah Brand, with whom he also shares the A-10 Most Improved Player award.

Both Rhymer and Brand excel at shot blocking; Rhymer's 60 swats led the league while Brand's 52 ranked seventh in the conference.

SBU will benefit somewhat from the return of senior center Peter Van Paassen, who averaged 14.2 points and 6.1 rebounds per game, but missed five of the Bonnies' contests (including the last win over UMass) with a foot injury.

A win over the Bonnies would likely set up a semi-final rematch with St. Joe's, provided the Hawks triumph in their second-round game today at noon. St. Joe's trenched itself in atop the A-10 from the onset of conference play, showing little signs of weakness while getting MVP seasons from junior Marvin O'Connor (21.6 ppg, second in conference) and A-10 Rookie of the Year lanneer Nelson (6.2 assists per game, best in conference).

The accolades weren't limited to the Hawks' roster either; the nod for A-10 Coach of the Year went to St. Joe's Phil Martelli, who reached the 100-win plateau in only his sixth year at the Hawk helm.

The Minutemen seemed to be well on their way to an upset of the Hawks on Feb. 27 at Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse, having led by as many as 19 (45-26) in the first half behind 50 percent shooting from the field.

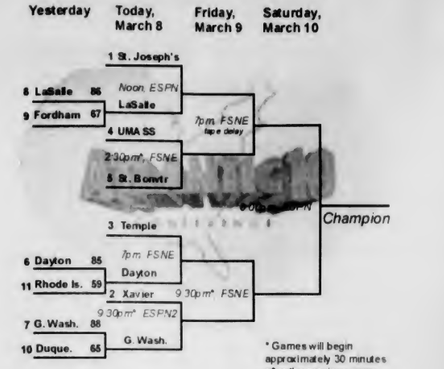
The Hawks then strung together a jaw-dropping 33-8 run over a 14-minute span in the second half to rip the lead away for good. Mack finished with a team-high 15 points, but managed only four of those in the second half.

Despite the outcome, some Minutemen saw their defeat as being somewhat positive, in that they caught a glimpse of exactly what it would take to topple the Hawks in the somewhat less-hostile environment of the A-10 Tournament.

"Their gym is small, and their crowd really gets into it," said forward Jackie Rogers, who tallied 12 points and a game-high 11 rebounds in the loss. "The way we played in the first half, I know we can beat them at [a neutral site]."

Not that the Spectrum will be exactly neutral. St. Joe's, Temple and La Salle are all situated within the City of Brotherly Love, leaving their opponents with the added factor of a raucous home crowd to deal with.

Luckily for the Minutemen, fans of St. Bonaventure must make an even farther trip down to the tournament than UMass fans.



■ bruiser

continued from page 12

14, people are going to talk about your job."

In only five years, Flint has also commanded the respect of almost every peer that has happened to get the chance to know him. Oregon's Ernie Kent, UConn's Jim Calhoun, St. Joseph's Phil Martelli, Fordham's Bob Hill, St. Bonaventure's Jim Baron, Iona's Jeff Ruland, Rhode Island's Jerry DeGregorio and others have all showed their support for Flint in press conferences after games, and have delivered some inspiring speeches in the process.

"I think all of this talk about him not being here next year is nonsense," DeGregorio said about Flint. "He is about as good of a coach as we have in the conference and he is as class an act as there is. He does an outstanding job and more importantly, he is an outstanding person."

Baron and Martelli both agreed wholeheartedly with the URI coach. "Bruiser has done a hell of a job, especially with the tough start they had," Baron said. "The last two months, they have been as good a team as any in the country."

"I think you should be embarrassed to go to UMass if it's a place where a guy like that has to fight for his job," Martelli added. "Just look at what he's done, turning around a 2-9 team like he has. You aren't going to find a better coach than him."

But it is not just his fellow coaches that Flint has had such an effect on. His players also realize that they are lucky to have him on the bench, and they have delivered some inspiring speeches as well.

"I think Bruiser is a good coach," forward Winston Smith said. "He came at the helm when coach [John Calipari] was here and the team had just gone to the Final Four, but I think that if people give him a chance, he can also take UMass to the Final Four."

Kitwana Rhymer took a different approach when asked about his coach's job security.

"Let's get over [all the rumors and talk]," the senior center stated while pointing toward Flint. "That is my coach."

Relating to his players, on the court and in the classroom, has been another mark of Flint's tenure at UMass. Nine of eleven players have graduated under the fifth-year coach, and Anthony Oates is in the process of getting his degree this semester, making it an impressive 91 percent graduation rate.

Flint's former players have also had a habit of staying connected to the program, and they have recently expressed their concern about the well being of their former mentor.

"All of my players in the last couple of weeks have called me to make sure I was alright," Flint said.

On a different note, one thing a lot of people around here don't seem to understand is the fact that UMass is not historically a basketball powerhouse. Because the Minutemen had a nice streak of tournament appearances in the 1990's, people automatically want to compare Massachusetts to places like UCLA and North Carolina. However, in 100 years of Maroon and White competition, exactly two players have moved from Amherst to NBA success, Marcus Camby and Julius Erving. That is a far cry from the aforementioned schools, which have had enough NBA players to form about five all-star teams each.

In addition, UMass has had more losing seasons than most people realize. From 1978 to 1989, the Minutemen did not even record a single winning season, and if not for one seven-year run, then the Maroon and White would have exactly one NCAA tournament appearance to its credit.

All of this does not necessarily excuse Flint, of course, but it does show that UMass does not have the resources most people think it does. Recruiting in the Atlantic 10 is not easy, and with the possible exception of Temple, every school has had its ups and downs over the last 15 years. A two or three year absence from the tourney is far from catastrophic, and more successful teams than the Minutemen have gone through similar droughts.

Also, plenty of quality programs are struggling more than UMass right now, and that does not mean that their coaches should take the entirety of the blame, either. Louisville, Rhode Island, Michigan, Colorado, Minnesota and New Mexico – just to name a few – all made quality runs through the NCAA tournament over the last few years, and are now wallowing in mediocrity.

Every NCAA team goes through its ups and downs, and as long as the Minutemen continue playing in the upper echelon of their conference, there should be no reason for Flint to worry about where he will be next season.

While he has been in Amherst, Flint has run a clean program, graduated his players, won more games than just about any other A-10 coach, commanded the respect of his peers and players and has quietly gone about his business despite all of the rumors about his job security. If that does not constitute a good coach, then what does?

"I've had a lot of fun here," Flint said. "I've enjoyed myself and I still think we can win the A-10."

Here is to hoping that Flint continues to enjoy his head coaching position next year.

Jesse Greenspun is a Collegian Columnist.

■ forwards

continued from page 12

will be a nice run for this sport here on campus," Cahoon stated.

Both Gates and Shaw carry their diligence and dedication to hockey into the locker room, where they are among the most liked players by their teammates.

Off the ice, Gates and Shaw are, not surprisingly, even more alike than they are in their brands of hockey.

"On the ice and off the ice, they compliment each other very well," Turner added. "They get along really well. We call them 'the bash brothers,' because they're so alike. They do everything together, it's kind of like they're inseparable sometimes."

The two Sport Management majors excel both in the classroom and personally when outside of the rink. Gates and Shaw were each selected to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (3.0 GPA or better) multiple times in their four years with the University.

When off the ice, the longtime friends are often found hanging around their apartment either in front of the computer or playing with their dog, Hammer.

"When we get home, they race inside the house to see who can get online first," said senior defenseman Joey Culgin, who shares Gates' and Shaw's apartment. "They spend a lot of time on the computers."

But according to Culgin, the habitual rituals of the two forwards go far beyond racing to the Internet.

"On the ride home, they eat these ice creams called 'Iggy Piggies.' It's kind of funny the way those guys are out of the rink – they're like their own little clique."

But for two such hard-working students, life outside of hockey isn't all fun and games.

"They're both energetic, outgoing guys," Turner stated. "They like to have fun, but are serious when it's time to be serious. They both act how they play hockey.

"They're doing something all the time – they want to get stuff done."

Despite all their feats on the ice, Gates and Shaw emphasize that it will be the things away from the rink that remain most prevalent in their minds.

"The thing I'll miss most will be the bus rides back home from a game and just being able to hang out," Gates said. "It's just us on the bus – players, teammates, roommates, friends."

When they walk away from UMass with diplomas in the spring, both diligent, hard-working, well-liked individuals will doubtlessly bring with them a host of memories. But don't expect them to be thinking about any goals or hits they made.

"We'll always have the hockey, but we'll always remember what happens afterward," Shaw said. "We'll always talk about UMass hockey, but we'll really remember what we did outside the rink and in the locker room."

Men's gym justifies position in ranks

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team hit the road on Sunday for a five-team meet at Springfield College.

The result – another notch in the win column.

The Minutemen surpassed Springfield College, their closest competitor, by nearly 14 points with a final score of 207.900. Vermont, M.I.T. and Southern Connecticut were all in attendance but didn't pose too much threat to the team that is currently ranked ninth in the nation. The gymnasts were confident going into the meet, and their confidence paid off.

"After the pummel horse we knew it was over," said head coach Roy Johnson.

The pommel wasn't the only rotation that UMass commanded on Sunday. Freshmen Pat McFarlin had another great day, taking first in the floor exercise. The frosh fell second on the pummel horse to Justin Hammar who beat him out by just a tenth of a point. The Minutemen swept the vault with Darren Morace taking first at 9.100, and Andy Leis and McFarlin following suit. J.J. Hershey was the leader on the parallel bars, and Leis triumphed on the horizontal bar.

"We have so much depth, so many different weapons," said Johnson.

McFarlin had another spectacular meet with a first place finish in the all-around competition. The Olympic hopeful has really stepped up and been an asset to the team since his arrival in the fall. He has made an impression on the team, earning top honors in most meets of this season. McFarlin, only a freshman, is currently ranked 11th in the nation for the individual all-around.

Leis also had a great day, coming in just behind McFarlin with a second place finish in the all-around. The veteran has had a four season run with the Minutemen. A new routine for the rings rotation set Leis up for dominance with a personal season high, but he fell just short of first behind Curtis Haines of Southern Connecticut.

Leis had trouble on both the parallel bars and floor exercise. Despite those weaknesses, he was strong on the vault coming in second behind teammate Morace. The senior also brought home second on the rings and first on the horizontal bar.

"The team did a really good job," Leis said. "We're the most well balanced team. Yesterday we really pulled together. We've learned what works best, and we've upgraded our sets."

With so many strengths coming together to make up the Minutemen team, there is competition among one another at meets to be the best – friendly competition, that is.

"Our own team is our toughest competitor. It's fun to compete against each other," Leis added.

The men will be competing in their final home meet of the season, Senior Night, on Saturday. The team will practice throughout the week but will have a rest on Friday. Coach Johnson believes that by resting the team, everyone can be up to full strength.

"We don't need to worry, we need to think about the right stuff," Johnson said. "This is about a lot of mental focus. Rest is really important. It's hard to learn without being fresh. We need to clean up tenths, stick every dismount and make sure our form is perfect. They're a great bunch of guys – really a special group who are really talented."

The Minutemen are looking forward to the postseason with the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championship in Virginia, and then the NCAA championship in April in Ohio. Not only will there be individuals competing, but Coach Johnson is looking forward to sending UMass down as a team for competition.

"We really have a shot at moving up. We're a steady team, we know not to shoot for the moon, but do what we came to do," Johnson said.

Take Stock in the UMass Boston MBA!
Invest in your future.
Increase your value
while gaining maturity
and long-term dividends.
Choose from nine areas of specialization. Apply now for fall 2001 or spring 2002.
Call to attend an MBA Information Session.
Downtown Boston
One Beacon Street, 26th floor
March 15, at 5:30pm
UMass Boston campus
McCormack Hall, 5th fl, rm 619
March 20, at 5:30pm
617.287.7
mba@umb.edu
www.mgmt.umb.edu
UMass Boston's MBA program is fully accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB)

5 College Purim Party with The Moshav Band!
Amherst College Alumni House
Thursday March 8th 9-11pm
Sponsored by Hamaqshimm, Jewish Student Union, 5 College Lecture Fund, Umass Hillel House, Amherst/Smith Hillel, Mt. Holyoke Jewish Student Group
6:30 Hebrew Megillah Reading
7:20 Kolot sings
7:30 Creative Megillah Reading
9:00 The Moshav Band
Directions: 75 Churchhill St. Take Main St. past Black Sheep. First right on Churchill. Go straight till end. White building on right.

exotic and creative beach wraps for spring break!
on sale outside bluewall cafe today and next thursday, march 15.
come check it out or visit our website at www.sarongbay.com
ALL SALES ARE FINAL!

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Available Immediately 1 Br Apt - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Take over Lease or summer sublet. Upgraded 3 bedroom. Puffton call 549-0467

Amherst Center
1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos
3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywineapts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

1993 Saturn SL2. Clean, dependable, well maintained. $2700. 549-8000

1985 Saab Turbo 162K, sunroof, leather, 5spd. Good condition. $1100 o/b/o 413-367-7592

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Seeking occasional childcare for 2 school-age children. 549-5448

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Join Our Team & Make a Difference in a Child's Life
5 great children summer camps in NY, ME, PA, and WV seek General Counselors & Group Leaders, plus Activity Specialists who can teach/coach: tennis, swimming, waterskiing, sailing, caving, mountain biking, canoeing, windsurfing, woodworking, theatre, arts, photography, video, website design, fitness, golf, gymnastics, dance, volleyball, basketball, roller-hockey, lacrosse, baseball, and soccer. Nurses and kitchen and operation staff also needed. June 16-August 16. Benefits include training, room and board, laundry, and travel stipend. Apply on-line at www.horizoncamps.com or call 1(800) 544-5448

Are you in a long-distance relationship? Feel better at www.sblake.com

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruiseacareers.com

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP CANADENSIS, Pocono Mountains, PA. (2 hours form New York and Philadelphia), Premier residential coed summer camp. We are looking for an energetic, qualified and caring staff to teach all general athletics, WSI, waterfront activities, scuba, tennis, mountain bikes, golf, motorcycles, outdoor adventure, ropes, archery, gymnastics, fishing, arts and crafts, cooking and much more! Excellent facilities and great salary! 6/20-8/17. Call (800) 832-8228 or apply online: www.canadensis.com

Work Study Students & substitute teachers. Cushman Scott Childrens Center an equal opportuntiy employer is now hiring to work with children 18months to 5years. Ellen 549-1167

SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES at a co-ed Jewish residential camp in Catoctin Mountains of PA (1hr from Washington, DC). Cabin Couselors and Activity Counselors: photography, drama, sports, tennis, lifeguards, arts & crafts, woodworking, fencing, dance, rock-etry, and more. Paid internships available. Love of children, teens, and camp life essential. Apply on line at www.capitalcamps.com or e-mail us at staff@capitalcamps.com or call (301) 468-CAMP for more information

EMPLOYMENT

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT
Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimun 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPEN-SQUARE.COM

The Animal Rescue League of Boston's Animal Friends Summer Camp in North Falmouth, Cape Cod has the following counselor positions open: Farm Life Counselor, Horse Care Counselor. Employment Dates: June 1st- August 18th. Limited room & board available. For more information or to schedule an interview, call Laura Robbins at 781-461-8015 ext. 25 *Visit our table at "Camp Employment Day" on March 14th.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER DAY CAMP
Looking for a fun summer job? Here it is! The Girl Scouts has camp openings for waterfront director, counselors, lifeguards and crafts and nature specialists in South Hadley. July 2 - August 11. $200-$285/week. Training is provided. Limited transportation available. Contact GSCWM at 800-462-9100 x11 for information. AA/EOE

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

Needed Immediately Town of Amherst Leisure Services Department is looking for volleyball officials for it's adult volleyball league. Matches are held Sunday afternoons and are located 1/2 mile from UMass. $12-$14 per match. For more information contact Mike Thomas, Sports Director, at 413-256-4065 ex. 105 or e-mail at thomasm@town.amherst.ma.us

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

The UMass Football team is looking for interested students to video practices and games for the spring 2000/2001 season. Experience preferred but will train. Scholarship and work study programs available. If you are interested please contact Bill Sisler at 577-0319. Come be a part of a championship tradition.

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

New WebTV Classsic with keyboard for sale. Call Laroushna 546-5405

DISTRUCTION

Bathing Suit Season is Coming. Experienced trainer will get you ready. No gym membership required. Private kickboxing instruction also available. Joe 548-8979

INSTRUCTION

Wanna be a Rock Star? Acoustic guitar lessons. Learn the basics fast. Call Anthony at 413-218-6562

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITYBARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Publish Your Work For $1,295 Textbooks, Novels, and More Call FirstPublish, Inc. at 888-707-7634 Or visit www.firstpublish.com

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner. Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-8, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in large 3 bedroom house. On busline. Hobart St. 549-2951

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Service Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office.

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

FLY SUMMER 4 WINTER $$! Europe $298 rt (+tx) Lon, Fra, Mad, Ams, Par, & more. 4STANDBY.COM or call 800-326-2009

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@gofliptrips.com

SPRING BREAK 2001
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-800-234-7007 endless-summertours.com

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CW6/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/40 Springfield
6 PBS/52 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/30 Hartford
9 HSCN New Movie Channel
10 NBC/38 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 NBC/22 Springfield
14 International Channel
15 UMATV (Academic Channel)
16 WB/8 New Haven
17 ESPN
18 ESPN2
19 UVC TV (Student Channel)
20 Weather Channel
21 Cable Onyx
22 C-Span
23 CNN
24 CNN Headline News
25 Lifesaver 2
26 USA
27 TBS
28 TNT
29 A&E
30 Sci-Fi
31 Discovery
32 Nogin
33 Comedy Central
34 Nick at Nite
35 TV Land
36 Comedy Central
37 BET
38 Univision
39 Bloomberg Financial Network
40 College TV Network
43 MTV
44 MTV2
45 VH1
46 The Learning Channel

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 8, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Clifford-Red	Brainiac Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Robert Mirabel -- Music From a Painted Cave (In Stereo)				Elton John: Greatest Hits Live!		One Night Only	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Survivor-Aust. Outback		CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.		Big Apple "Episode Two" (N)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor-Aust. Outback		CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.		Big Apple "Episode Two" (N)	News	Late Show
WVOB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	Primetime Thursday (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Charmed "Primrose Empath"	News		Friends	Sudden Susan
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Love's Labor Lost"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Charmed "Primrose Empath"	News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Hollywood	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Love's Labor Lost"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	World's Funniest! (In Stereo)		Truth Behind the Rumors	ER "Love's Labor Lost"		News	Frasier
WWLP	9	22	News	ABC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Love's Labor Lost"	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Great Performances "Les Miserables in Concert" (In Stereo)							Charlie Rose
WGGB	12	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	Primetime Thursday (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	11		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)			Frasier	Mad Abt. You	Spin City	Spin City
WTBS	72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Casino Royale" (1967, Adventure) Timothy Dalton. Carey Lowell.					★★ "Christine" (1983)
A&E	41		Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order	Biography: Joe Bonanno			Behind Closed Doors (N)	Investigative Reports (N)		Law & Order "Asylum"
CNN	22	24	Worldview	Moneyline Newsh	our (N)	Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live	CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	23	26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Drew's Money	★½ "B.A.P.S." (1997, Comedy) Halle Berry, Martin Landau.			Sports Night	Sports Night	Daily Show	Turn Ben
DISC	32		Wild Discovery "Tiger Territory"		Wild Discovery: Monkeys		Schizophrenia: Stolen Lives		Would You Believe It?	What Sex Am I?		Justice Files	Fear Attraction"
ESPN	33		Basketball	Sportacenter	College Basketball: ACC Tournament First Round -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: Big East Quarterfinal -- Teams TBA			Sportacenter
LIFE	42		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "Lies of the Twins" (1991, Suspense) Isabella Rossellini,			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	43		(5:30) ★½ "Together" (2000) Alan Blumenfeld			Kathy-Reality	Real World	Real World	Fight for Your Rights	Cribs (N)	Diary (N)	Undressed	Ultra Sound
NICK	53		Pinky & Brain	Catdog		Hey Arnold!	Rugrats		Spongeb	227 (In Stereo)	227 (In Stereo)	227 (In Stereo)	227 (In Stereo)
SCIFI	61		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Sleeping in Light"		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales	Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	69	28	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life		Curse of Tutankhamun	Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Lost Ark			Medical Detect	Medical Detect
TNT	63		ER (In Stereo)			Pretender "Toy Surprise"	NBA Basketball: San Antonio Spurs at Portland Trail Blazers. (In Stereo Live)			NBA		★★ "Vigilante Cop" (1991)
USA	29		Walker, Texas Ranger			JAG (In Stereo)	Nash Bridges "Dirty Tricks"		★★ "The Twilight of the Gods" (1997, Drama) Jennifer Beals.			Martin	Martin
HBO	35		(5:30) "Three Fugitives" (1989)			★★ "Jack Frost" (1998, Fantasy) Michael Keaton. "PG"			"Boycott" (2001, Drama) Jeffrey Wright. (In Stereo)			Dancing With Divas
MAX	36		(5:45) ★★★ "Arlington Road" (1999) Jeff Bridges.		Exit Wounds		★★★ "Anywhere but Here" (1999) Susan Sarandon. "PG-13"			★★★ "The Lesser Evil" (1998) Colm Feore. "R"		★★ "Automatic" "R"
SHOW	35		★½ "Teaching Mrs. Tingle" (1999) Helen Mirren. "PG-13"				★½ "The Rage: Carrie 2" (1999, Horror) Emily Bergl. "R"			★★ "Runaway Bride" (1999, Comedy) Julia Roberts. "PG"

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

MY SCARF KEEPS ME WARM.
AS DOES MY RELENTLESS CARNAL FANTASIZING.
I LOVE EATING RAW LOBULE DOUGH AND RAW MEAT. AND THAT STUFF YOU SCOOP OUT OF THE GUTTER EVERY FEW SPRINGS.

Robots and Spacemen By Jason Tocci

YOU KNOW, RAIN, IT'S HAD A CRUSH ON YOU SINCE THE FIRST TIME WE CHARTED AFTER CLASS...
I WONDER IF YOU HAVE ANY IDEA JUST HOW PRETTY YOUR EYES ARE?
I'M GLAD YOU WANTED TO SPEND TIME WITH--
WHAT ARE YOU THINKING, SCOTT?
OH, UM... HOW'S YOUR MEAL?

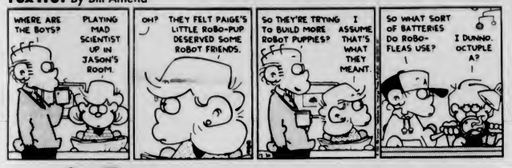
The Masked Dropout By Bob Hewitt

Masked Dropout
HOW WAS THE KEG PARTY LAST NIGHT?
LAME.
LAME?!?
YOU DIDN'T GET HOME UNTIL 4AM!
WHAT'D YOU STAY SO LONG?
I WAS LOOKIN FOR A CUP.
Masked Dropout by Bob Hewitt
maskeddropout@columbus.rr.com © 2001

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

YES, IT WAS THE WORST OF TIMES.
YAP.COM - JUST LAST WEEK, A BUSTING NEXUS OF CONTENT AND VISION...
YAP
TODAY, A HOLLOWED-OUT SHELL OF ITS FORMERLY INDISPENSIBLE SELF!
ITS 143 EMPLOYEES GONE, ALONG WITH THEIR OPTIONS, THEIR PALM PILOTS, AND THEIR AUTHORED DREAMS!
I'M ROLAND HEDLEY!
IT WAS THE BEST OF TIMES!
HOW MUCH FOR HIS PALM PILOT?
OFFER 10¢ ON THE DOLLAR!

FoxTrot By Bill Amend



WHERE ARE THE BOYS?
PLAYING MAD SCIENTIST IN JASON'S ROOM.
OH?
THEY FELT PAIGE'S LITTLE ROBO-PUP DESERVED SOME ROBOT FRIENDS.
SO THEY'RE TRYING TO BUILD MORE ROBOT PUPPIES?
I ASSUME THAT'S WHAT THEY MEANT.
SO WHAT SORT OF BATTERIES DO ROBO-FLEAS USE?
I DUNNO. OCTUPLE A?

Horoscopes

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) This is a nice relaxing day in the shade, so treat it as such. There is no need for you to plan any great war strategies at this time. Take it easy and try not to get stressed about the upcoming week. This is your time to enjoy the moment.

Aries (March 21-April 19) A selfish attitude on your part will not be tolerated today, regardless of the circumstances. Don't make it worse for yourself by pretending that you don't notice the hurt feelings of those around you. People are likely to be extra sensitive today, so be careful of trying to impose your will on someone who really just wants nothing more than an ear to talk to and a shoulder to cry on.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Take a break from your routine. You may feel like you are leading a great war horse into battle as you constantly strive for new adventures and the conquering of new lands. Make sure you take a bit of time out today to stop and let your horse drink. You deserve a bit of rest yourself.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Your sensual nature is heightened, and you will find yourself engaged in tender moments and languid peacefulness in the company of others. Soothe your soul by letting yourself slip into situations that allow you emotional freedom to do or say whatever comes to mind.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You may find that the hardest person to face is yourself. Your tendency is to get quite introspective and you may find yourself shrinking down into a puddle of self-recrimination. You may be analyzing all the people around you who are significant in your life, yet you are failing to really address the one person whom you really need to stop and look at: yourself.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) The key for you is to minimize your daily drama as much as possible. You may not realize how much you are crippling yourself by the way you exaggerate every aspect of your life. Try not to give so much of your attention to things that really do not matter much.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept.22) Allow your eager and restless nature to express itself in ways other than through the spoken word. Show someone that you care; through your gentle touch or a big bear hug. Hold on a little bit tighter than you might normally. There is an unspoken understanding that comes when you communicate through nothing but pure silence.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Take advantage of the creative energy in the air. Be sure to keep your hands moving and your imagination flowing toward something fun and artistic. If you find yourself beginning to doubt your work, you may quickly down an endless spiral of creative blockage.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) This will be the most stressful day of the week for you, but if you make it through, deep satisfaction awaits. Beware of promises made by a person who wants to be more than friends. He or she may be hiding a dark secret that you must probe before committing further.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Be careful of advertising yourself as someone who is so strong and mentally competent that you are capable of handling everything. Take note that the strongest mule on the trail usually ends up carrying the most weight. Your emotions are more sensitive than you may think, and certainly more sensitive than you demonstrate to others.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a terrific day for you, and you should find that your relationships - especially with men - go exceptionally well. Your tender and extremely sensitive nature is finally being recognized as the treasure chest that it is. There are many times in which this type of personality is seen as weak, yet today is one of those times in which you are given the full credit that you deserve. Make the most of it!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your sixth sense is right on target, so trust your instincts at all times. There is a wonderful partnership that you are likely to connect with, helping you to foster the very plan that you have in mind to develop at this time.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

YAP.COM - ONCE A PROUD, CASH-FLUSH CONTENT PROVIDER...
YAP.COM
NOW A MEMORY. JUST ONE MORE VICTIM OF THE HYPE, HUBRIS AND IRRATIONAL EXUBERANCE OF GENERATION .1 O!
WHAT WAS IT LIKE ON THE INSIDE DURING THE FINAL DAYS? FOR THE FIRST TIME, A FORMER TOP PLAYER, WREAMS OUT EXCLUSIVELY!
THE SMELL OF SMOKE IN THE COCKPIT! YOU NEVER FORGET IT.

FoxTrot By Bill Amendzzz

AWW! MY ROBO-PUP'S WAGGING ITS LITTLE TAIL LIKE CRAZY!
FLAP FLAP FLAP
IT'S SO HAPPY TO SEE ME!
FLAP FLAP FLAP
AND PEOPLE SAY YOU DON'T HAVE FEELINGS, JUST BECAUSE YOUR HEART'S ON A SILICON CHIP.
PAIGE, IT'S BEEN HUMOR DOING THAT SINCE ME, YOU DROPPED IT OK? THIS MORNING.

Robotman By Jim Meddick

LATER THAT NIGHT
ROBA!
I WANT TO KNOW MORE ABOUT THIS THING YOU CALL LOVE
POST ROADMAN
YOU WERE WARNED! TALK OF LOVE IS FORBIDDEN HERE!
UHHNN
BEEP
BUT BUT IT'S MY FAULT! I TOLD HER ABOUT LOVE! I'M THE ONE RESPONSIBLE!
AS YOU PREFER TO BE CONTINUED!
ACKKK
BEEP

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

WOW, WHAT IS THAT SMELL? BUCKY! ARE YOU BRINGING TRASH INTO MY HOUSE AGAIN?!
WHOA, WHOA, WHOA! YOUR HOUSE?! BUDDY, I HATE TO BREAK THIS TO YA, BUT I'VE "CLAIMED" THIS HOUSE IN EVERY POSSIBLE WAY!
eeew

Quote of the Day

"Being a model would be awesome. You get paid to exist."

-Chris Jones

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Corned Beef & Cabbage (B, F, W)

Eggplant Parmesan (vegan) (B, H, W)

Garden Chili (vegan)

Reuben Sandwich (H)

DINNER

Beef Tacos

Chicken Tacos

Jamaican 3-Bean Stew (vegan) (B, H, W)

Vegan Tacos (vegan)

Amherst Weather

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 39 LOW: 22	HIGH: 37 LOW: 27	HIGH: 46 LOW: 27

Solid Custom Tattoo
400 West St. Rte. 116 Amherst, MA. 259-0003
Tues-Sat 1-9
sun apt. only
A Tattoo is for life Know your artist

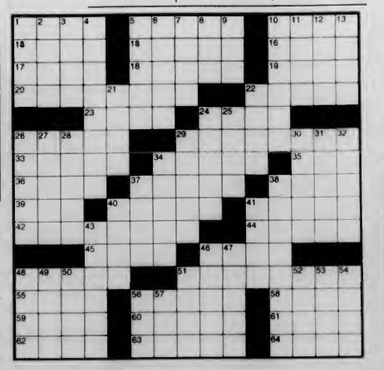
ACROSS
1 Jane Austen novel
5 Type of trapshooting
10 Yearn
14 Banister
15 Welsh dog
16 Raised as rabbits
17 Person who's easily duped
18 Gamut
19 Steak order
20 Fossil-fuel source
22 From Havana
23 Hemingway nickname
24 Kind of bar
26 — boom
29 Valuable mineral
33 Jar
34 Boat crane
35 Food fish
36 "Garfield" pooch
37 Hee-Boop, e.g.
38 Golf great Patty
39 Broadway's "— Mix"
40 Less bold
41 Clean off
42 With stars in one's eyes
44 Window parts
45 Combread
46 Sign on sale items
48 New growth
51 Garden squash
55 The A of WATS
56 Stacken off
58 "Dukes of Hazzard" spinoff
59 Lion's sound
60 Religious rule
61 Hail
62 Crooked
63 The ones here
64 Stage award

DOWN
1 Hence
2 Hawaiian isle
3 Grinder
4 Pie seasoning
5 Junk
6 Australian animal
7 Seabird
8 Quiche ingredient
9 Cravat
10 Sudden
11 Complainer
12 Zeus' wife
13 Perfect spot
21 Cab
22 Players
24 Cut off
25 Skip past
26 Rake over the coals
27 Select from the menu
28 Clamor
29 Smelling like venison, var.
30 Dolphin's home
31 Vikings
32 Trims
34 Sherlock Holmes' creator
37 Facial feature
38 Cheekiest
40 Dirty air
41 Bigger than life
43 Beehive
46 Turnpike vehicles
47 Public fuss
48 "Two Mules for Sister —"
49 Front of a ship
50 Raise
51 Writer Grey
52 Fascinated by
53 Lunch time, for many
54 Early Cosby show
56 Emulate Brad Pitt
57 "—, humbug!"

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

K	O	H	L		A	S	T	O	R		C	O	W	L
I	D	E	A		R	H	I	N	E		H	A	H	A
D	E	N	S		S	A	L	T	S	H	A	K	E	R
			A	V	E	R	T		P	U	R	S	E	D
		C	E	L	I	N	E		S	W	I	N	G
N	U	C	L	E		M	A	T		E	Y	E	N
E	R	L	E		C	R	A	N	E		D	O	V	E
I	D	A		C	A	R	E		L	O	W
G	L	I	B		S	N	I	D	E		D	U	K	E
H	E	R		P	I	E		P	R	I	M	E	D
		O	T	I	S		D	A	I	S	E	S
O	X	Y	G	E	N		L	A	U	D	S
G	R	O	U	N	D	B	A	L	L		E	D	A	M
L	A	K	E		E	Y	E		N	E	M	O
E	Y	E	S		Y	E	A	S	T		T	E	A	M

© 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's Staff

Night Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician	Shalini Marti
Copy Editor	Brian McAllister
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	John Zawislak

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Post-season begins for Minutemen

Despite criticism, Flint should stay at helm

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

The game will begin like any other: a whistle will blow, a basketball will be tossed into the air and two players will take off after it.

But the better team in today's Atlantic 10 Tournament matchup between Massachusetts and St. Bonaventure will control more than just the ball. The winner will advance to the semi-final round and move one step closer to the coveted conference crown. As neither the Minutemen (13-14, 11-5 A-10) nor the Bonnies (18-10, 9-7 A-10) has much chance of gaining an at-large NCAA Tournament bid, that A-10 championship is the only ticket that either of these teams can get to the Big Dance later this month.

For UMass, a win also breathes life into a somewhat disappointing season that has head coach James "Bruiser" Flint fielding as many questions about his job security as he is about basketball (see sidebar).

The tournament actually started yesterday afternoon at 5:30, but the Minutemen did not have to take the floor. Fourth-seeded UMass and No. 5 St. Bonaventure each earned a bye in the opening round, as did St. Joseph's, Xavier and Temple. The top-seeded Hawks will lock horns with La Salle at noon, while the No. 2 Musketeers and the No. 3 Owls will battle George Washington and Dayton, respectively, in the evening games.

"There are three parts to the season," said Flint, referring to the non-conference schedule, the A-10 portion and the postseason. "The third part is the key. We have a legitimate shot to win the A-10 Tournament."

Flint's team has pulled a sort of roundball Jekyll-and-Hyde routine this season, losing 9-of-11 in the non-conference portion of its schedule before exploding through A-10 play with an 11-5 conference mark. That leaves the Minutemen with the unenviable task of having to run the table in A-10 Tournament play in order to gain an NCAA bid along with virtual locks St. Joe's (24-5, 14-2 A-10) and Xavier (21-6, 12-4 A-10).

"Xavier and St. Joe's have good records because they did things out of conference," Flint said. "We didn't play well at the beginning of the year, but we didn't play well against good teams."

But to say that UMass' season can be split into halves of night and day is somewhat misleading; the Minutemen suffered through a few dark days down the stretch in conference play as well. The trouble really started on Feb. 17, when Temple (18-12, 12-4 A-10) came into the William D. Mullins Center and stomped UMass 84-52 in front of a national television audience.

The Minutemen recovered with two straight wins before venturing into Philadelphia for their only regular-season date with conference frontrunner St. Joe's. That night proved to be another painful lesson for UMass, which blew a 16-point halftime lead en route to a crushing 84-69 defeat.

The final blow came Saturday on Senior Day, when the Minutemen closed their regular season with a 66-59 home loss to St. Bonaventure. The Bonnies had also dealt the Maroon and White its first conference defeat, 66-65, on Jan. 13 in Olean, NY.

That could be either very good or very bad for the Minutemen, who are in search of their first conference championship since the 1995-96 campaign. Rarely does a team go 0-for-3 against any given opponent in a single season, especially a squad with a worse conference record. On the other hand, UMass has dropped four in a row and 6-of-7 to the Bonnies.

The Minutemen are 2-0 against St. Bonaventure in A-10 tournament play, having beaten the Bonnies 75-62 in 1995 and 69-56 in 1996 en route to the school's second and fifth A-10 tournament championships, respectively. But they have only reached the A-10 semi-finals once under Flint, when they defeated GW in last year's second round before losing to eventual champion Temple.

Turn to A-10, page 9

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Head coach James "Bruiser" Flint will lead his team into battle at the A-10 tournament. If the critics have their way, it will be his last time patrolling the sidelines for the Minutemen.

The rumors began last season when the Massachusetts men's basketball team struggled to a 17-16 record and a first round exit from the NIT.

Since then, it has become a genuine possibility. James "Bruiser" Flint may not be the head coach of the Minutemen next year, depending on how his team does in the Atlantic 10 tournament this week in his hometown of Philadelphia.

It seems that of late, many people have been calling for Flint's head on the top of a pole, and have entertained the thought of just about any other person jumping to the helm of the UMass ship.

And none of it really makes any sense.

"I'm proud of what I have done here," Flint said. "I've won games, I've graduated my players and whether I coach here or not next season I'm going to hold my head up high. My record speaks for itself; I've done better than most."

Flint should be proud of what he has done here. In the five years he has been in Amherst, he has totaled an 84-71 record, while consistently playing one of the toughest schedules in the country. His conference record (52-28) has been even better, and his .650 winning percentage ranks him below only Temple's John Chaney and Xavier's Skip Prosser as far as success goes in the A-10.

His teams qualified for the post-season three out of four years (with this season yet to be determined), and he continued the UMass tradition of playing anyone, anywhere. In the 2000-01 campaign, the Maroon and White totaled the 12th hardest schedule in the nation, with most of those tough games coming on the road.

In addition, he has done a fantastic job of motivating this year's squad. The Minutemen were a lowly 2-9 at one point after a demoralizing loss at the hands of Richmond, and could have easily rolled over and given up on the year. Instead of doing that, though, Massachusetts exploded out of the A-10 gates, going 11-5 in the conference to propel itself back into respectability.

If Flint is going to take the blame for the 2-9 start, which is one of the main arguments against him, than you have to also give him credit for team's 11-5 finish. And that should be reason enough for him to keep his place of employment.

"If you go 11-5 in conference play, that's pretty good," Flint said. "But when you are 13-

Turn to BRUISER, page 9

Hard work paid dividends for Gates, Shaw

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

They aren't the guys that score the goals. They aren't the guys that make the saves. They aren't the guys that can skate in and out of defenders with utter abandon.

They are simply the most unappreciated and overworked type of players – the scrappers who fight and claw their way for every puck, hit and score the occasional goal, overcoming any obstacle in their way.

But for guys like R.J. Gates and Jay Shaw, it's just a part of their day's work.

"They are both bangers and they work really hard," said UMass captain Jeff Turner. "They try to create a lot of havoc and those kind of guys are hard to come by. There aren't that many players on our team that do that as well ag they do."

Gates and Shaw both came to UMass four years ago, ready to give their all for a fledgling Massachusetts hockey program. Now, as the end of their college hockey careers approaches, both players have matured into hard-workers who are held in tremendously high regard by their teammates.

"They work their butts off on the ice, and academically too," Turner said. "They get along with all the guys, they're both good leaders and they bring a lot to the table."

Gates' journey to UMass came via the Hartford Jr. Whalers after being named the Eastern Junior Hockey League Defensive Player of the Year in 1996-97. In his first year with the team, he scored eight goals, good enough to register a tie for second on the team.

"When I came in here I was an eighteen-year-old freshman and the rest of the guys were older," Gates said. "It took a while to get used to the college life and playing with older guys and trying to interact with teammates of mine that were older."

But goal scoring was not truly a part of the Plainville, Conn. native's repertoire, and over the last few years, he has settled into his role as a hard-working defensive forward who is widely respected as one of the most dedicated players in Hockey East.

"We call him a junkyard dog in that he's a guy that gets involved in a lot of confrontational-type play," said UMass head coach Don Cahoon. "He's always willing to give up his body to make a play and he's a hard-nosed, honest player."

At times this season, however, the senior forward has found himself in and out of the lineup, bouncing from line to line, struggling to get playing time.

"It's tough when you're in and out of the lineup," Gates said. "The only thing you can really do is get back to the grindstone and work harder so you get back into the lineup.

"When you're in, you just want to be able to stay in, but you have to work just as hard to stay in the lineup."

But Gates continued his ceaseless work, learning just how hard life can be in the world of college hockey.

"I learned that it takes a lot of hard work. No matter how many points you come in with, it really doesn't matter. It's a work ethic you have to put in every day to get better."

As the season wore on, Gates seemed to pull out of his slump. After tilting out consecutive games against Northeastern and Boston University, he began to find his niche playing alongside the Turner brothers, Jeff and Tim, and he tallied four points in the season's final six games.

"I think he played with a lot of passion because he had been bounced around for a few weeks before that," Cahoon added. "He even sat out a game and I'm sure that didn't leave a good taste in his mouth."

As for Shaw, he too came to UMass with high promise. As a forward for Bishop Hendricken High School in Rhode Island, he earned All-State honors three times and All-American selections twice. Hockey was in his blood, with his cousin David Emma earning the Hobey Baker award in 1991 while attending Boston College and his brother Justin joining him on the Minutemen squad as a defenseman.

"It's been great [playing with Justin]," Shaw said. "He's had a tough career, but I think I've grown because of it. It's something I think every pair of brothers would love to do, and it's something we'll never forget for the rest of our lives."

Over his four years with the Minutemen, Shaw has developed into his role as a forechecking forward that works incessantly on every shift and is always fully dedicated to his teammates.

"I think Jay's leadership on the ice is basically that he takes care of his own business and works very hard," Cahoon said. "Off the ice, he's someone that his teammates all look to for advice, counsel, and guidance."

His lead-by-example attitude earned him the title of assistant captain this season, a role that has brought him much pride, but early in the season brought some troubles.

According to Shaw, being awarded assistant captaincy caused him to put too much pressure on himself, and, in turn, he tried to play a style of hockey that wasn't within him, forcing him to become a more offensive player and less of a defender.

Cahoon noticed the struggles and took his locker room leader aside mid-season.

"I had a meeting with coach [Cahoon]," Shaw explained. "He said, 'I just want you to play the body and play the puck more.' Since then I've been playing really well."

Like Gates, Shaw too seemed to get things going on a new line, playing alongside fellow senior Kris Wallis and sophomore Brad Nizwantowski. The move seemed to help all three players improve their game over the stretch run.

Shaw and Nizwantowski hooked up on the overtime winner in what was the biggest win of UMass' season, a 2-1 overtime victory over New Hampshire at the Whittemore Center last weekend. It was not the first time Shaw had come up big in a gut-check situation.

"We did nickname Jay 'Mr. Clutch' for his overtime goal against St. Lawrence and his game-winner against Providence back-to-back and it's kind of stuck," Turner said. "We went to a restaurant one night, and a girl asked him, 'Are you Mr. Clutch?' He's earned that nickname. It seems when he scores, it's a big goal."

This year, Shaw worked on an independent study with the athletic department to try to increase awareness of the development of the hockey program.

"[Shaw and senior netminder Markus Helanen are] trying to create more awareness of our program and letting the students know that this is just the beginning of what hopefully

Turn to FORWARDS, page 9

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Senior R.J. Gates had to deal with a great deal of adversity in his four years as a Minuteman. His career came full circle as he compiled four points in his final six games for the Maroon and White.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

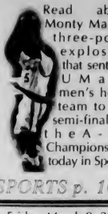
Hard work and determination paid off for Jay Shaw as he was named assistant captain for UMass in his senior season.

This Friday in arts brings a review of Mike Clark's Prescription Renewal live, as well as a look at Tortoise's latest and Trimark's Killer Bud.

ARTS p. 6

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN



Read about Monty Mack's three-point explosion that sent the UMass men's hoop team to the semi-finals of the A-10 Championship, today in Sports.

SPORTS p. 10

Volume CVII Issue 95 | www.dailycollegian.com | Friday, March 9, 2001

Magnanimous maple maker greets sticky spring with syrup

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

All over Massachusetts, pancakes and waffles are anxiously awaiting spring to come and the maple syrup to start pouring. According to University of Massachusetts Entomology professor William M. Coli, it's prime time for tree-tapping and sap assembly.

"One of the nice things about being sugarmakers is we don't need a groundhog to tell us that spring is coming," said Coli. "Earlier this month we saw squirrels chasing each other, smelled our first skunk, and saw that snow had begun melting around the base of trees. These are signs that the maple season is about to start around here."

The snow may still be blowing, but maple farmers have already started tapping trees in Deerfield and other areas of the Pioneer Valley. Massachusetts has more than 200 maple farmers who produce 40,000 to 50,000 gallons of maple syrup every year. The Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture report that the maple syrup business is valued from $1.6 up to $2 million.

Norma Coli, William's wife, is a full-time sugarmaker on their farm in Charlemont, which is in Franklin County, only about 10 miles south of the Vermont border. They have almost 2,000 trees tapped, each tree hosting one or two taps. Coli's farm alone produces between 600 and 800 gallons of syrup every year.

This year, the sugar producers of the area have teamed up with local restaurants to offer special maple dishes during the month of March. This effort, called Massachusetts Maple Month, originated as an idea to help draw attention to the state's important maple products. During the March program, the Colis will be providing syrup to restaurants in Amherst and Charlemont.

"Everything that a 'normal' person would use sugar with, we use maple syrup," said Coli. "We even use it to sweeten our coffee. The syrup doesn't make the coffee taste like maple at all, it has virtually no flavor, but works great for sweetener."

According to Coli, the best time to start tapping trees is when day temperatures are about 40 to 45 degrees and the nighttime lows are in the mid-20s. "The temperature gradient between 20 and 40 gives the best sap flow," said Coli. "It causes the sap to move from the roots to the branches. When you set a tap, you're drilling into the plumbing [of the tree] and the sap oozes out."

Though the weather has been unusually cold and the sap hasn't been working well and some predicted a shorter, less productive season, the upcoming warm-up is encouraging for area maple farmers.

But collecting sap doesn't just depend on the weather. "People think that you tap a tree and you've got syrup," said Coli. "But most of it is water that must be evaporated."

The syrup process begins with taps that are put gently into trees that are at least 12" in diameter. Once the sap is collected, it is brought into sugarhouses where it is boiled to get rid of the water and concentrate the flavors and sugars of the finished syrup.

A hydrometer or a glass refractometer is used to measure the density of the sap and the Brix degree-the amount of sugar in the sap. "Usually the sap that makes the best syrup has a Brix degree of about 2," Coli explained. "We use the rule of 88. Whatever the meter tells you the Brix degree is, you divide that into 88. Whatever you're left with is the amount of water you need to boil in order to get a gallon of syrup. For example, if the sap has a Brix degree of 2, you need to boil 44 gallons of water out to get a gallon of syrup."

Different amounts of sugar boil at different temperatures but the finished syrup boils at about seven degrees above the boiling point of water. To make maple sugar or candy, the sap must be boiled longer than for syrup.

Coli's sugarhouse was the first in the state to be certified organic and as former president of the Massachusetts Maple Producers Association, he wrote the Massachusetts Maple Certification Guidelines. They do not use any synthetic fertilizers or pesticides, nor do they use any chemical defoaming agents in their boiling process. "During boiling, we just use a drop of cream or of cheese to stop the foaming. It works great and doesn't change the flavor of the syrup at all," Coli said.

He also explained that all or most of the maple farmers he knows, all of them are organic and do not use any chemicals or synthetics.

"Of the syrup you buy in Massachusetts, the majority is organic," said Coli. "And be sure to buy only US syrup because you're helping local agriculture."

Massachusetts is one of the largest maple syrup producing states in the nation, even though Vermont maintains the reputation of being the maple syrup capital.

"Vermont has done a great job in publicizing their syrup. But the trees don't know the difference. We're only 10 miles south of Vermont," Coli said. "It's a myth that Vermont makes the best maple syrup."

He also explained that most of the pressure comes from the Canadian syrup industry. Quebec produces more syrup than the entire United States.

"The Canadians dominate. They are able to tap on public lands and are encouraged to. Maple producers there get subsidized by government grants," Coli said. "They have cheaper labor and can produce the syrup more efficiently. You can go to Costco and get half a gallon of Canadian syrup for six dollars. That means that they can probably produce it for three. We can't compete with that, we can't produce syrup for less than six dollars."

The Colis employ people throughout the entire year on a part-time basis. They would employ students but realize that it would be inconvenient for them because of class loads, however they welcome any and all volunteers. They also invite anyone who is interested in the making of maple syrup to visit their local sugarhouse. Coli said that the closest sugarhouse to Amherst is the Williams Farm off of Routes 5 and 10.

Though Coli does not know of any classes that are offered in sugarmaking, he has done research about insects that attack maple trees. He also said that the first year Stockbridge students have the opportunity to work in sugarhouses during their spring internships.

For information on the Massachusetts Maple Month and a list of participating farms and restaurants, see www.massmaple.org/march.html.

"Vermont has done a great job in publicizing their syrup. But the trees don't know the difference. We're only 10 miles south of Vermont," Coli said. "It's a myth that Vermont makes the best maple syrup."

COLLEGIAN/PICS@YAHOO.COM

TIBOR GIRCZYC-BLUM/COLLEGIAN

Bongomania!

A UMass student plays the bongos at the Every Woman's Center's open-mic celebration of International Woman's Day.

Female-owned pornographic shops the focus of Lunch Lecture installment

By Tanya Mannes
Collegian Staff

Female-owned sex shops and female-created pornography can educate, titillate and demystify female pleasure, but the progression toward a more sanitized, mainstream view of female sexuality can ultimately be problematic, argued Lynn Comella, a University of Massachusetts graduate student in Communications, in a talk entitled "Sexual Retail and Consumer Pedagogy: 'How To' Become (more) Queer."

Utilizing video clips and slides, Comella presented her preliminary research for a dissertation on women-owned and operated "pleasure stores" yesterday on the UMass campus, as part of the Stonewall Center's Lunch Lecture Series.

Because it is coded as a male activity, the activity of shopping for sexual products is the exception to a traditionally female consumer search for food, fashion and cosmetics, she said. However, female "sexual entrepreneurs" have helped to develop an unofficial strategy of empowerment: that women must leave home and go shopping in order to actively seek sexual pleasure.

Such entrepreneurs have brought an idea of quality ("No soap-on-a-rope shaped like a penis") and a new openness to an industry traditionally dominated by heterosexual males.

"Sexual variations and gender differences are not only accepted, but expected [in female-owned shops and female-designed pornography]," said Comella, who went on to say that gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender concerns are fundamental to this commercial market. The trend is toward a "queering," or complicating, of women's sexuality, by means of an emphasis on education that empowers women to make new sexual choices, she added.

A contemporary approach to selling sexual how-to videos and related products relies on sophisticated marketing practices that intertwine entertainment and product placement, in a way best associated with the Hollywood film industry.

Having received her M.A. in Gender Studies and Feminist theory from The New School for Social Research in New York, Lynn Comella teaches courses such as "Media and Culture" and "Gender and Sexual Representation in Film." She is currently a visiting lecturer at Mount Holyoke in the Film Studies Program.

In the past, she said, some female-produced sex "how-to" videos paid the price for demystifying sexuality, by becoming overly clinical. They were based on 1970s marriage manuals geared toward heterosexual couples. Comella listed as an example How to Female Ejaculate (1992), which becomes "a lesson on sexual anatomy," she said.

According to Comella, the distinction between male and female pornography is reflected in a highly coded sexual vernacular. She alluded to research that suggests male-created pornography places heavy emphasis on the female performance of pleasure, which women perceive as inauthentic. Female-created pornography, on the other hand, strives for authenticity by using different production strategies, such as selecting actors who know each other, for a more intimate and "real" performance.

It is this discourse of distinction that can become problematic, said Comella, because female-produced pornography must fight against being limited by its self-created niche. For instance, the trend toward a sanitizing and demystification of female sexuality may weaken the genre's political import, she said.

As an example of an innovative approach to pornography that combines male and female styles of direction, Comella showed a clip from the video Bend Over Boyfriend (1998). The film features steamy scenes intertwined with shots of a woman discussing an assortment of dildos in different price ranges. Bend Over Boyfriend combines savvy marketing with female-centered themes of empowerment, integrating sensual scenes in the manner of traditional pornography, she said.

The next Stonewall Center Lunch Lecture will be presented by Lisa Duggan, Associate Professor of American Studies at NYU, and is entitled "The New Homonormativity: Gay Conservatives and the Sexual Politics of Neoliberalism." The event is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. on March 29, in Campus Center 904-8. Admission is free.

Israel welcomes Sharon as new Prime Minister

By Shawna Magarik
Collegian Coorespondent

Ariel Sharon became Israel's new prime minister in February, becoming the 11th prime minister in Israel's 53-year history and the fifth in the last six years.

Sharon won February's election after Barak's last-minute attempt to negotiate a sweeping, comprehensive agreement with the Palestinians failed. Sharon claimed that Barak, a former army chief who defeated Benjamin Netanyahu in the race for prime minister in 1999, tried to compromise too much and that the Palestinians still wanted more.

"Our hand is extended in peace," said Sharon, who campaigned on the triple theme of unity, security and peace – promising he would not negotiate with the Palestinians until the violence ended.

In the weeks that followed the election, Sharon negotiated with fellow Israelis and not Palestinians as he patched together a national unity government. Introducing an eight-party coalition government, including Barak's center-left Labor Party, his own right-wing Likud movement, and the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party, to the Israeli Knesset on Wednesday, Sharon said he believed Palestinians and Israelis could wean away from the bloody path they were currently taking.

Sharon said Thursday he is willing to talk peace with his Palestinian counterpart, but only at the end of a round of violence that began after his visit to a disputed Jerusalem shrine five months ago.

The ex-general said that the meeting with Yasser Arafat requires "quiet and security." Speaking at a short ceremony marking the transfer of power from Prime Minister Ehud Barak, Sharon noted that the issues facing Israel in the coming months were not simple.

Arafat sent a letter congratulating Sharon in forming the new government, Sharon's office recently said. The letter also called for the resumption of peace talks that broke off shortly before the February 6th election.

Sharon and Arafat have a long and bitter history that goes back decades. The two men have never shaken hands, although, Sharon previously served as foreign minister and was involved in periodic face-to-face negotiations with the Palestinian leader.

Sharon called Arafat a "murderer" in a magazine interview late last year. The new Israeli leader has not recently been so open about his ill feelings to Arafat, but still publicly accuses him of failing to halt attacks by Palestinian militants in the current fighting.

The Palestinian people are outraged that Sharon, 73, has taken power. Many Palestinians see Sharon as an archenemy because of his decades of operations against them, first as a soldier and then as a politician. The people blame Sharon for the 1982 massacre of Palestinian refugees by pro-Israeli Lebanese militia during Israel's invasion of southern Lehanon.

Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat was skeptical about Sharon's peace offers, complaining that Sharon offered nothing specific. Peacemaking "needs steps, deeds on the ground, not merely lip service," he said.

Militant Palestinians have threatened to unleash a stepped-up bombing campaign to coincide with Sharon's step into power. The Islamic Hamas movement declared it would send 10 suicide bombers to greet Sharon, and claimed responsibility for a blast in the coastal city of Netanya that killed three Israelis and the bomber.

The Palestinians and Israelis are both frustrated that peace talks have stopped once again. Both sides are blaming the other for the violence.

Of the 465 people who have died in the violence, Israeli officials say that 62 were Israeli Jews, 13 were Israeli Arabs, and one was a German citizen living in the Palestinian territories. The Palestine Red Crescent Society says that 380 Palestinians have been killed.

Information from the New York Times online and CNN Com was used in this article.

do you know how to find your g-spot?

check us out for the most no-nonsense and up-to-date information on the g-spot, female ejaculation, and many other amazing girl tricks!

Good Vibrations
It's all about attitude.

1210 valencia st, san francisco
2504 san pablo ave, berkeley

1-800-buy-vibe • www.goodvibes.com

Campus Perspectives

By Katy LoConte and Ryan Benharris
Photos by Ryan Benharris and Tibora Girczyc-Blum

What are some of the causes of the recent school shootings?

"I guess I'd say that basically it's the parents' fault. The parents aren't teaching their kids right from wrong and the kids don't have direction."

Brian Long
Undeclared
Freshman

- "The teenagers know they won't get severe punishment and are not treated as adults. If [the recent suspects] are treated as adults, they will be used as an example."

Rehenia Mlisho
Biochemistry
Senior

- "The main problem is ignorance and the fact that people heard [the Santana, CA suspect] talking about it. He probably had something going on in his mind and people didn't take it seriously."

Amaechi Ozor
Theater and Economics
Junior

"It's an outcry from individual students who don't know how to express themselves any other way. They figure if they gain some attention by killing somebody, they've achieved their ultimate goal of pushing their pain off on somebody else."

Chris Rue
Political Science
Junior

- "I think it has to do with kids' accessibility to guns. Obviously the kids get the guns at home. They want to solve the problems and make them go away, and they see the gun at home."

Willie Abad
Mechanical Engineering
Senior

"It's obviously an outreach. It could be a combination of a cognitive problem, a biological problem and a lack of attention. There are weapons available, and they don't get attention at home. They feel isolated and depressed and it's probably been built up for a long time to this one action that ultimate hurts society."

Kelly Castaneda
Biology
Junior

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
37 North Pleasant St.
The Mighty Ross Tones
Every Sunday Night
No Cover
Positive ID Required

Our returning staff know what a WILD experience camp can be!
Come check us out this summer...work at CAMP!
Crossroads for Kids
Crossroads for Kids runs 3 great camps which serve AT-RISK YOUTH. These kids need people like you to care about their lives!
Opportunities are available for:
Cabin Counselors, Waterfront Staff, Program Specialists, Food Service Personnel, Nurses, Maintenance Staff, Housekeeping, and Office Managers.
We will be at U-Mass Amherst Wednesday, March 14th
If this sounds like the type of summer you'd love,
please stop by and see us!
740 Main Street, Duxbury, MA 02332
(781) 934-2202 • 1-800-[illegible]
www.crossroadsforkids.org
email: camp@crossroadsforkids.org

The Black Sheep
THE BLACK SHEEP has been serving the UMass community for over 15 years.
We are a delicatessen, all butter scratch bakery, gourmet food purveyor and full service caterer.
THE BLACK SHEEP is renowned for providing the most memorable and best tasting GRADUATION PARTIES in the Valley.
Stop by for a cup of coffee, overstuffed sandwich, or homemade dessert and see what we have to offer.
THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST. AMHERST
253-3442
OCMP, VISA/MASTERCARD ACCEPTED.

TO PURCHASE YOUR OFFICIAL UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS CLASS RING
jostens
A Jostens representative will be on campus
TODAY!
10am - 2pm Outside the University Store.
Save up to $200.00 when purchasing on these days 3/7 • 3/8 • 3/9.
$50 DEPOSIT REQUIRED MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

Napster reeling after newest court injunction

By Wes Davis
Daily Texan (U. Texas-Austin)

(U-WIRE) – After months of appeals, the music file-trading program Napster, as it has existed, could become extinct in a matter of hours. An injunction upheld March 6 requires Napster to attempt to rid itself of all copyrighted material within 72 hours of receiving requests from copyright holders.

Napster has requested that all entities wishing to have their copyrighted material banished must send in a request containing proof of their copyright.

Napster is then supposed to rid its directory of all files that have assumed the copyrighted name as quickly as possible.

After pressures resulting from major recording label law suits, ad campaigns and support from famous artists, the injunction will limit access to copyrighted material for which artists and record companies are receiving no compensation.

Noah Stone, executive director of Artists Against Piracy, said while he isn't sure whether Napster is hurting the music industry, it certainly isn't helping it.

"It's making the transition to the online marketplace impossible," he said, adding that musicians rarely receive revenues from online music services like Napster or MP3.com.

Users praise Napster because it allows them to easily download music that they can sample and listen to without having to go to a store or buy a CD.

"Most people, if they really like the CD, will go out and buy it," said Mimi Alidor, Director of Promotions and Publicity for Heart Music, an Austin-based recording studio. "The thing that people like about Napster is the sampling."

Alidor added that it is hard to determine whether Napster has a positive or negative effect on smaller artists because, while their music is being distributed for free, they are gaining valuable exposure.

However, she added that it is important that Napster not overstep copyright laws that protect artists.

"If the copyright becomes obsolete, artists will have to get day jobs," Alidor said. "If they can find a way so that you can't burn music onto a CD and still listen to it on a computer, that would be fine."

Stone said because it is unlikely that online music services would be banned, measures should be taken to assure musicians receive compensation for their work.

"People have begun to experience music in a new way, and they cannot change back," he said.

Alidor added that consumers may not like the idea of going back to paying full price after they've enjoyed Napster benefits for free.

"Once they've had it for free, they won't ever go back," she said.

John Charles, guitarist for the band Famous Underground and a computer science freshman at the University of Texas at Austin, said he likes Napster.

"I wish people would put my music on Napster," he said.

Stone expressed the need for a more regulated online marketplace in lieu of the Napster ruling.

"The wholesale piracy is unacceptable," he said. "We have to find a middle ground."

Napster may be the first in a long line of companies fighting for the right to distribute music.

COLLEGIANPICSBYHOOD.COM

Snowmobile
Oh my god! There's snow on this car!

'Meridians' journal celebrated in conference

Today is the second day of Smith College's four-day international conference marking the launch of its new and widely heralded women's studies journal "Meridians: feminism, race, transnationalism." Yesterday, International Women's day, was a fitting time to celebrate the first peer-reviewed, scholarly journal devoted to issues of women of color.

"Meridians," a joint venture of Smith and Wesleyan University, published an inaugural issue in October; the second, featuring an interview with Edwidge Danticat, poetry by Adrienne Su and a historical essay by Paula Giddings, is being released in conjunction with the conference.

The conference, in keeping with the journal's interdisciplinary character, features an eclectic array of panel discussions, readings and dramatic and musical performances.

"In each of the sessions, whether through poetry, hip-hop, drama or scholarly presentations, participants will be vigorously interrogating the identities, policies and practices associated with the terms 'feminist,' 'Third World,' and 'women of color' at the beginning of this new millennium," explained Meridians senior editor Kum-Kum Bhavnani.

The most anticipated events of the conference include:

- A presentation by activists Angela Y. Davis and Elizabeth (Betita) Martinez and legal scholar Sharon Hom about effective human rights organizing among women of color, at 8 p.m. tonight; March 9, in John M. Greene Hall.

- A performance art showcase featuring spoken-word artist Queen Godis, a 20-year-old senior at Vassar College, performing "Learning How to Breathe Right!" and Denise Uyehara, a California-based performer and writer, presenting "Hello (Sex) Kitty: Mad Asian Bitch on Wheels," an examination of love, violence and respect among men and women, at 8 p.m. tomorrow, March 10, in the Davis Center Ballroom.

All conference events are open to the public, free of charge and wheelchair accessible. Visit the Meridians Web site www.smith.edu/meridians for times and locations of additional conference events.

-Tanya Mannes

Boogie to Benefit Survival Center

By Tanya Mannes
Collegian Staff

The Northampton Survival Center presents their fourteenth Annual Benefit Boogie tomorrow, featuring the cool sounds of local band Trailer Park, from 8 to 11:30 p.m. at the Inn at Northampton. The benefit will support the Center, a private nonprofit organization that provides free food, free clothing, and referral services to people in need in Hampshire County. This event is their major fundraiser.

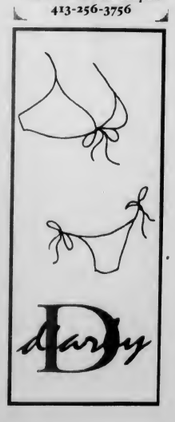
The Center's clients are low-income families, single parents, the elderly, veterans, the homeless and those who are chronically or terminally ill. Their food pantry distributes a standardized, nutritionally balanced food box that includes such staples as peanut butter, tuna, powdered milk and soup. The Hadley Food Bank Farm, local community gardens and individuals donate fresh vegetables to the pantry, which distributes more than 33,000 pounds of food monthly to some 730 families.

Free clothing, small household items, books and toys are also available to those in need.

The Survival Center is serving an ever-increasing number of people in need in Hampshire County, and this summer they plan to offer a special program for low-income school age children, which last year served 580 children from 13 communities. For children who rely upon school lunches to provide them with much of their daily sustenance, the summer vacation can prove a blow to nutritional intake. The Survival Center will supply groceries to fill this gap.

At Saturday's event, there will be a raffle with over 50 prizes. Tickets for the Annual Benefit Boogie are 15 dollars, and are available at Beyond Words book-shop in Northampton, and at the Survival Center, 265 Prospect Street, Northampton. Call (413) 586-6564 for more information.

Henna Arts & Supplies
10% off with this coupon!
413-256-3756



UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON
Summer @ UMass Boston
- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 29, July 2, and July 16
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- On-line, web-based courses
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost
UMASS BOSTON
To learn more, visit www.conted.umb.edu or call 617.287.6000
A great university in a great city

COMPASSION

Newman Lenten Service
Can Lent... be a season for Forgiveness? be a season for Healing? be a season for Compassion?
Can we see Christ outstretching his arms?
Can we let Christ heal our hurts and pains?
Monday, March 12th 7PM
Newman Center Chapel
Reconciliation Service of Music, Reconciliation Time and Confessions

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

NAPSTER CONTROVERSY:

Time to find a solution

The issue has been beaten dead by every media outlet in the country, attacked from every side, by every opinion and stance. Countless hours and lines of copy have been spent discussing and debating it, with all sides struggling to reach a common ground. Musicians have attacked its very existence, while music fans have scrambled to its defense, supporting their right to possess free music.

And yet Napster, beaten but not down, marches on.

The question is: for how much longer?

Napster began filtering out copyrighted files on Sunday night, but a federal injunction approved on Wednesday helped to stabilize those ground rules, further policing the music sharing service. The decision was, in part, a small victory for Napster, who states the responsibility of removing protected material with the record industry, who wants Napster shut down completely. A compromise for them is not an option; it's all or nothing, and they're putting their money where there mouth is.

According to the ruling, handed down by San Francisco District Court Judge Marilyn Hall Patel, music labels must approach Napster with the song's title, artist, and file with copyrighted information, to prove the label does in fact own the rights to the music. In turn, Napster then has three days to dismiss the file from their system, "thereby preventing access to the files."

In theory, the idea works. The labels can select what products of theirs they want removed, and Napster continues sharing music, albeit to a lesser extent. Both sides come away with something, and relatively happy.

As the past has showed us, however, savvy music fans are quickly finding ways around this law. Because Napster will block files only as they are spelled and presented by the labels, fans have started to rename them, often with just a character change, to skirt around the system. By doing so, songs continue to be shared freely by countless users. By creating one solution, a number of problems have been created.

Both sides have, at one time or another, had the upper hand, and that balance continues to shift on a daily basis. They continue finding ways to trump each other, through the legal system or via the press. Ultimately, though, if current trends continue to shift in favor of the music loving public, then Napster, or some form of it, will continue. How it will go on, though, and to what degree the music industry will continue to fight, has yet to be seen.

It's safe to assume that this fight will continue on for some time, as both sides continue to hammer out points in their defense. We at the Collegian support Napster, or, at the least, the ideas that Napster has brought to our attention. Somewhere the industry and public will come to some sort of accord, and the business of sharing music will move along with ease.

We can only hope that day comes soon.

Information from Salon.com was used in this editorial

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian Editorial Board.

Thanks for nothing, UMass

SETH KOENIG

Needless to say, I wasn't a happy camper. It wasn't just because I was trying to walk home against the usual 600-million mile-per-hour winds that blast through the Pioneer Valley. No, although that certainly wasn't helping anything.

Rather, I wasn't a happy camper because I had just received news that my quest to graduate this May had hit another bump in the road. Needing exactly 15 credits to don the cap and gown on May 27, my independent study proposal that accounted for credits 13, 14 and 15 was handed back to me needing serious adjustments.

The add/drop deadline had passed a few days earlier, and I had already revised the proposal once before. Another revision would tack another day or two onto the process and, of course, the longer it took me to get those three credits onto my schedule the dimmer my chances became of graduating on time.

Now, it's important to say that there's nothing wrong with taking four and a half or five years to graduate. It's becoming something of a regularity around the nation nowadays, but my family members have already made arrangements for places to stay on graduation weekend, and more importantly, the longer I waste my time at this dump the poorer my chances are of grabbing the job I want upon getting my filthy hands on a degree.

So far, this seems like a universal problem, but there's a twist. The most frustrating part about all of this is that I don't need the information garnered from this independent study to get a job.

I have a job.

I'm not lined-up to have a job, I'm not looking forward to having a job, I have one. Now. Full-time, 40-plus hours-a-week, benefits package, the whole kit and kaboodle.

I am a sports writer at The Recorder in Greenfield, Mass., and I point that out because every second I have spent in classrooms at the University of Massachusetts to this point has been completely and utterly useless to me in the workplace.

When I got here back in 1997, I was bright-eyed and bushy-tailed. Knowing that I wanted to get involved with the media, I got involved in the Communications Department to try and help me narrow down what exactly I wanted to do in the media. Once I had settled on the idea of being a sports journalist, it was clear to me that no class existed at UMass that would teach me anything pertaining to my field of choice. Still, with my experiences at the Collegian, I would set myself up for a successful career while glazing over for 15 or 16 credits a semester so that I could get out of here come 2001.

So here I am, right on schedule with a not-too-bad 3.2 cumulative grade point average, having gotten a full-time job in March of my junior year to get a jump on the competition and lined up to make a grand leap into the next level of sports writing come the peak beginning of the summer time, when many Division I college writing beats open up.

Now I've been told that because of some faults in my nomenclature on my independent study proposal, my entire life could be put on hold. I've done everything else at top speed, working well above the status quo to put myself in a position to succeed and the thing that pragmatically matters the absolute least in my success is stopping me.

It's not an impossible notion that I might be forced to sit through classes while still working 40-plus hours a week yet another semester, just because. Because I need this classroom information to become the best professional I can be? No. Because I am not half the adult I could be without these final three credits? No. Just because.

Truth be told, I could have skipped every single class I had signed up for in the course of four years, stopped in for exams and passed with C/D's, dragged my feet out of here in May and no future employers would ever give a damn – sports editors want clips, and for those enrolled in the journalism department, there is nothing here but the Collegian that can get a young sports writer those.

This University is basically useless for aspiring sports writers. Actually, if not for the Collegian, the University would be a hindrance to aspiring sports writers. Young sports journalists, like some of my fellow Collegianites Bryan Smith, Matt Despres, Michael Kobylanski and Eric Soderstrom, must seek out commercial newspapers to string games for and get professional clips to put in their portfolios. This can be a 20-hour-a-week dedication, and that comes in addition to 20 to 30-hours-a-week they might spend down in the Campus Center basement working at the Collegian to get hands-on experience in a newspaper office.

Of course, factor in that most professors and administrators are completely unsympathetic to this 40 to 50-hour-a-week commitment to the young sports writers' profession (which is, for those of you out there who still don't get it, why we're here to begin with). And so several tons of paperwork and research gets thrown onto their shoulders.

Sports journalists don't get convenient clips built into their classes like news writers, mind you. I can't stress enough how much of a complete and utter waste of time classes are, professionally speaking, for young sports writers who are only here because they need degrees for the workplace.

It's important to note here that we're only here to prepare for the workplace. Those folks who claim that they're here for some sort of amazing enlightenment are either independently wealthy or just immensely stupid. If there was no promise of future employment, we wouldn't waste our money at this place or to get these degrees.

These degrees could say "Biochemistry," they could say "English," they could say "Juggling" or they could say "Hair-combing." It doesn't make any damn difference. Bryan, Michael, Eric and Matt could hand sports editor X a portfolio with five great clips and a bachelor's in "Twister" and sports editor X will give them a job.

Those four guys could also hand sports editor X a portfolio with two mediocre clips and a 4.0 GPA in "Journalism" or "Communications" and sports editor X will proceed to laugh them out of the job interview.

Not to belabor the point, but describing the University's unfriendliness to young sports writers would incomplete without at least touching on the story of Adam White.

Now, Adam, the current editor-in-chief of the paper you're currently reading, wants to be a sports journalist like me, Bryan, Michael, Eric and Matt. He, enjoying a pre-college revelation, realized that any conventional UMass major would be useless in his pursuit of glory on the national sports page. Instead of going any of those useless routes, Adam made up his own major as part of the glorious BDIC avenue: "Sports Writing," which combines journalism classes with sports management classes.

Unfortunately, in the University's undying quest to throw hurdles at aspiring sports writers, nobody told poor Adam that BDIC actually stands for "Blatantly Damn Impossible to get into Classes."

So, what have we learned here today? I could be missing a very important boat come May because of three credits that don't do me the slightest bit of good. Thanks, UMass.

Bryan, Michael, Matt and Eric will all have to work at least twice as hard as the average student to finally get a job that's half as lucrative – but that they'll love. They'll get little in the way of breaks from professors for their commitment to their success. Thanks again, UMass.

And finally, Adam will be here for roughly 73 years because with the BDIC stigma following him around, he'll never ever be able to get into enough of the right classes to get him the hell out of here, never mind that he's already got the skills necessary to join the work force. Need I say it? Sure, why not? Thanks a third time, UMass.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian Columnist.

Bad grades

Harvey "C-minus" Mansfield is one professor who won't give you an easy A, especially not if you're black. But this semester he will give students two sets of grades, one that will be registered on their record, and another one that he thinks they truly deserve. The exercise will be a case in point to support his conviction that the admission of more minority students has shamed colleges into inflating grades.

Although the Harvard professor won't be teaching UMass classes anytime soon, his arguments pose questions that every college student in Massachusetts and beyond should think about.

As debatable as his opinions are, there is one concern that I do share with him: the degradation of the quality of my education. I don't want people to skate through classes that are easier than they should be for anyone's sake.

With all that I have to complain about this place, there is one thing that I do want: to feel pride and worthiness at attending the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Who here for some sort of amazing enlightenment are either independently wealthy or just immensely stupid. If there was no promise of future employment, we wouldn't waste our money at this place or to get these degrees.

These degrees could say "Biochemistry," they could say "English," they could say "Juggling" or they could say "Hair-combing." It doesn't make any damn difference. Bryan, Michael, Eric and Matt could hand sports editor X a portfolio with five great clips and a bachelor's in "Twister" and sports editor X will give them a job.

Those four guys could also hand sports editor X a portfolio with two mediocre clips and a 4.0 GPA in "Journalism" or "Communications" and sports editor X will proceed to laugh them out of the job interview.

Not to belabor the point, but describing the University's unfriendliness to young sports writers would incomplete without at least touching on the story of Adam White.

Now, Adam, the current editor-in-chief of the paper you're currently reading, wants to be a sports journalist like me, Bryan, Michael, Eric and Matt. He, enjoying a pre-college revelation, realized that any conventional UMass major would be useless in his pursuit of glory on the national sports page. Instead of going any of those useless routes, Adam made up his own major as part of the glorious BDIC avenue: "Sports Writing," which combines journalism classes with sports management classes.

Unfortunately, in the University's undying quest to throw hurdles at aspiring sports writers, nobody told poor Adam that BDIC actually stands for "Blatantly Damn Impossible to get into Classes."

So, what have we learned here today? I could be missing a very important boat come May because of three credits that don't do me the slightest bit of good. Thanks, UMass.

Bryan, Michael, Matt and Eric will all have to work at least twice as hard as the average student to finally get a job that's half as lucrative – but that they'll love. They'll get little in the way of breaks from professors for their commitment to their success. Thanks again, UMass.

And finally, Adam will be here for roughly 73 years because with the BDIC stigma following him around, he'll never ever be able to get into enough of the right classes to get him the hell out of here, never mind that he's already got the skills necessary to join the work force. Need I say it? Sure, why not? Thanks a third time, UMass.

NATTY YAGUDIN

unfortunately, not everybody in this country can afford to consider. While there are many white students who are disadvantaged, on a grand scale white people who want to go to college are far more likely to be economically privileged to do so.

But UMass consistently ignores that fact, in more than one way. Take the payment system, for example. If one closely examines how we pay for a semester, a troubling realization comes to mind. While during the semester we can take 12 to 21 credits (with approval) and pay the same, any classes taken during the summer or winter breaks are for an extra charge. People who are economically pressed are more likely to have to load up on classes, while probably having to work a job. Others can skate through with 12 credits a semester and a summer class. People who are economically challenged are actually punished in this kind of payment system. More often than not, they are likely to be minorities.

Compound that with the social problems that afflict minorities, who are far more likely to come from struggling single parent households. No wonder why many minority students can't make the grade to get in and make it through UMass: many of them simply don't have the economic and social privileges that would allow them to compete successfully.

The fact that UMass is freezing tuition for in-state students still won't fix the problem. Why not pay for the specific amount of credits we're taking each semester, and simply get our credit's worth? Wouldn't that be more fair for students?

The biggest step the administration and student activists can take is to not treat our education with generalities, but painstakingly search for the specific but little known issues, such as the example I suggested above, that might make things a little more fair and even-handed in ways other than academic compromise. Students struggle through UMass for a great variety of reasons that have everything to do with their economic, social and personal difficulties and nothing to do with their skin color.

Yet there is so little done to look at what they have to cope with, beyond race, academics and the standard financial aid debate. The whole point of education is that it's not general, but rather so particular: what we take from our classes is as personal as our economic struggles, social challenges and life circumstances. If only we could get extra credit for those.

Natty Yagudin is a Collegian Columnist.

Write for Ed/Op!

Instant Messenger – society's downfall

ADAM MARTIGNETTI

"Instant communication will be the downfall of society."

Anybody who knows me well enough knows that the above has been a kind of personal credo of mine for some time now. I say it as much to sound quasi-intelligent and socially aware as I do because I believe it. Recently a couple of not-so-nice incidents have persuaded me to cling more tightly to this credo than ever before.

First though, an abbreviated history lesson.

As this country began to expand into the behemoth that it is today – with the Louisiana Purchase, Manifest Destiny, etc. – we began to realize that we needed another way to communicate; that is, an alternative to saddling up Poncho on the old broken-down mule and sending him out onto the lonely frontier to deliver a message himself. So, we got the Pony Express and eventually the Post Office. (I'm sure FedEx and UPS fit into this big picture somewhere.) Now we could send messages all over the country in about a week's time, and that was pretty cool.

But what if we just couldn't wait a week to tell someone something? What if we just had to tell them now? Well, Alexander Graham and Ma' Bell came to our rescue and we got the telephone. So we spent our days wiring our country and, indeed, the world with phone lines. Little did we realize that Thoreau was unequivocally right and Maine did not have anything to say to Texas, it'll come back to that.)

Now we could contact almost anyone at almost any time and that was really cool, but we wanted more. After all, if we left our homes, what were we to do? We had to find sketchy street corners or convenience stores if we wanted to access our precious phones – now only of the pay variety. So, we got the cell phone and now we were ultra, super cool. (The pager, a portable answering machine, was the prelude to this.)

But, being the efficient, industrious capitalists that we are, we wanted more. After all, a cell phone bill can be expensive. Who wants to pay long distance or roaming charges? So, we got ourselves email, and things were great. Not only did we not have to pay for a stamp or a phone call, but the person did not even have to be there for us to talk to them. (Note the increasing lack of personal contact.) We could send a message and the person would get it whenever, and respond in due time. (The Palm Pilot just decreased this time from hours to minutes.) But even email wasn't good enough for us. So, we had to go and create the ultimate evil, to which I now turn my attention. We had to go and create Instant Messenger.

Last Thursday, as the clock was about to strike midnight, I did the absolute unthinkable. I uninstalled AOL's Instant Messenger from my computer and vowed never to use it again. EVER! When I later told my friends about this, they were absolutely shocked and responded with outraged cries of "why?" One friend even said that he would get rid of his phone and computer before he got rid of IM. "Why did I do it?," you ask.

Well it came to the point where the number of bad things associated with IM far outweighed the good. In all the time I've used it, during the countless hours of often mindless banter and chit-chat, I have saved a total of four conversations. (The fact that you can save IM conversations is also, generally, not good.) Four! All of them with girls. One with my sister, one more soul-crushing than you can ever imagine and two others. Of these four, I would say now that only one was ultimately worthwhile because it cemented a friendship, and, hopefully, a good one. If I were to guess, those four conversations represent about .001 percent of my time using IM.

That fact didn't bode well for the program, but it had never stopped me from continuing to use IM in the past. Not to drudge up my past, but last summer I had one of the more bizarre, unnerving and disheartening series of experiences with the bastard technology known only by those two damn letters. It's completely unexplainable and completely fantastic (in the worst possible sense of that word) to anyone but those involved. Again, problematic, but not IM's fatal blow.

No, last Thursday, came the final blow, the impetus for my current deep-seeded hatred of IM. Imagine, if you will, being IMed, not necessarily by Satan, but by one of Satan's friends because Satan had told her your IM name. Now, imagine it happened last Thursday night.

The pit of my stomach collapsed and I felt nauseated. Summer 2000 flashed into my mind as the same set of petty, absurd IMs flashed from place to place, seemingly harmlessly, but wreaking emotional carnage.

So, it's gone. Uninstalled. And I am over it. What I didn't realize though is that this had been a long time coming.

Last week, while on IM of course, I realized something absolutely horrific, something terrifying. I had forgotten one of my best friend's email addresses. For the life of me, I just couldn't think of it. I can remember a time, during my freshman and sophomore years, when we would exchange emails daily – sometimes two or three. Now, I couldn't remember his email address. Why? Well, because if I wanted to talk to him, I'd just hop on IM. If he wasn't on, then I could leave him a message and maybe catch him later on that night. No problem. IM fixes all...

My father has emailed me every weekday since I began attending UMass. I can think of no more than a handful of days that I opened my Inbox and did not find an email from him in there. And most of those times are easily explainable by illness or absence or meetings. I am not complaining about that frequency. On the contrary, I usually reply quite faithfully because I like talking to him. I'm just wondering that if email didn't exist, how much would we talk? How much would you call that friend at UC – Boulder? How many letters would you write him or her? Would you have a reason to write everyday?

Instant communication may not be the downfall of society, but it ain't gonna help matters. Do we really need to call a friend on our cell phone for their advice on buying a pair of shoes? I saw a woman on North Pleasant St. doing as much only last week. Do we really need to tell our friends – five times a day – that we're not up to much or that we just had our Art History class, which was boring as usual? Can't we wait until we eat dinner with them or see them in the Campus Center? Maybe, then we can relate our daily stew of kind of funny remarks over some caramels.

I can just imagine Thoreau rolling over in his grave as the following IM conversation takes place between Maine and Texas.

Maine6969: hey, tex. what's up?

Texas1star: not much. just some oil drilling and cattle ranching.

Maine6969: lol!

I don't know. I don't know much, but I know this: IM is evil!

So, if anyone wants to talk to me, don't IM me, don't call me. Write me a letter. And for my mental well-being, don't send it express.

Adam Martignetti is a Collegian staff member.

Local Talent Shines
Almost Speechless performs tonight at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton.

Worth the wait

Newest Tortoise release

By Jason Hill
Collegian Correspondent

TORTOISE Standards
Thrill Jockey

It was like being a kid again. Really. I cannot remember the last time I've been so acutely aware of waiting for a release date. I even called the record store a day early just on a long shot. I mean, I was psyched. I finally understood all those people that freeze their asses off waiting in line for the new Eminem. Luckily, Tortoise has kept the fans busy in the couple of years since their last full length, TNT. Since 1998 they have released a movie soundtrack (Reach the Rock), two Isotope 217 full lengths, an In the Fishtank EP, and several remix projects and other errata, but darn it, that wasn't enough! I had to have an LP and it had to be good! A couple of months ago there were rumblings about a new record, called Standards. "What could this mean," I thought. Was Tortoise planning on a companion album for Ken Burns' "Jazz" series? Would John McEntire be mining broken beats out of Ellington sessions? Was Tortoise really going to give us a jazz history lesson? Post-rockers everywhere were seriously worried. After all, these guys are the stinking architects of the new century's rock; they are supposed to be changing the world, not dorking around with swing classics.

Well, as it happens, Standards, as a title, seems to reflect more of a self-awareness on the part of the band than any intention to play old compositions. The only old music that this album brings to mind is old Tortoise, and even then only with some imagination. This record is an invention. It is aware of its context, and it doesn't hide its influences, but this music owes nothing to the past. Standards is a great album.

Unlike many indie rock mainstays, this band keeps their work solid. These songs are compositions by mature, inventive and patient musicians, not documents of incomplete ideas and half-baked variations on tired themes. Just as the post-rock genre had begun to grow dull and repetitive, its torch bearers have delivered a new standard. I imagine that that is what they had in mind. My only criticism of the record is the ridiculous packaging that jacks the price up to what one might pay for a double album, but chances are you'll buy the CD anyway.

For the uninitiated, Tortoise is a project wherein a group of great musicians get together and jam (or play separately), with the resulting music then twisted into oblivion by uber-producer and drum wrecker John McEntire. Jeff Parker's guitar work might sometimes be reminiscent of some antiquated idea of 'jazz,' but on the whole, Tortoise's project is the reinvention of rock. Many familiar references are present – dub, drum and bass, meandering soundtrack oddities, and the occasional resogneable but unidentifiable melody – just to remind us that we are listening to American rock and roll, but Tortoise really seems to come out of thin air. It is that 'new sound' that we're always looking for and so often disappointed in being unable to find.

For the initiated, this album is a return to a more raw, instrumental sound from the studio heavy experiments of TNT. That is not to say that this is free from McEntire's hyper-production, though. On the contrary, I am left wondering how Tortoise will ever be able to play these tunes live. But the production leaves the music sounding more spontaneous. Instead of wanting to dance, the listener wants to beat invisible drums. Yes, I had to wait, but I'm glad for it. Tortoise delivered an album that I can play air drums to, and that means a lot.

Trimark's latest release redefines bad comedy

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

KILLER BUD
directed by Karl T. Hirsch with Corin Nemec and David Faustino
courtesy of Trimark Home Video

Jokes about bodily excretions, porn, sex, bedpans and old people. And this is before the first mention of pot. Yes, welcome to the world of Killer Bud, the latest masterpiece from the thinktank of Trimark Home Video, the folks that brought you Stepdaughter, The St. Francisville Experiment, Crocodile and Spiders.

"If you like gastrointestinal problems, premature aging, cancer of the colon and pancreas, ugly facial blotching, impotence, and anal drainage, they're a good send," says Sam the retail clerk in Killer Bud, describing "feedbags," a fictional cheap alternative food sold in a pseudo 7-11. Trimark Home Video is essentially the feedbag of movies, the Schlitz one buys when they can't afford the expensive stuff. Lake Placid too Hollywood? Crocodile. Taxed intellectually by The Blair Witch Project? The St. Francisville Experiment. Now, for those unimpressed by the high-nosed Half Baked, comes Killer Bud.

On the box for the advanced copy of Killer Bud there is an oddly placed disclaimer that says "Question Authority!" Not to give anything away, but this is the closest the film comes to any type of social commentary. The characters don't question authority. There is absolutely no comment about marijuana legalization or the status of the drug war. Killer Bud makes Half Baked's miniscule references to social problems seem like Traffic in comparison.

COURTESY OF SOME GUY

Colin Nemec and David Faustino exist in the dismal Killer Bud.

So what we (the cursed) are left with is a bottom-feeding attempt to cash in on those gullible enough to pick up this video just because it has a weed reference in the title. Caveat emptor: this film is in no way reliant on the weed in its title. The guys spend the better part of the film trying to secure weed, and they have pipe dreams of owning a weed farm in Amsterdam, but for all intensive purposes, the plot could be built around anything else. It's a lame slacker blooperfest with every cliché in the book, from foul-mouthed seniors to tiny attack dogs to cheesy dance numbers. The weed is simply inserted as an eye catcher, since Corin Nemec and David Faustino aren't exactly massive draws anymore.

And that's the worst part. Everyone involved here just seems to care less. Faustino and Nemec, both faded TV stars, are expectedly robotic, with no sharp writing to grab them cheap laughs they didn't earn. The girls are even worse, as Urban Legend's Danielle Harris and The Replacements' Caroline Keenan seem too eager to please in a film that is obviously a launch pad to nowhere. When Robert Stack shows up for a paycheck, the cameo is funny enough, but only the most dedicated will ever make it that far.

If it seems like I'm being too hard on a film titled Killer Bud, obviously intended for mindless entertainment, I'm not. I love bad films, but there's a thick line between funny bad and boring bad. I took the initiative to request the screener thinking it would be enjoyable in the vein of Spiders or Crocodile. Let me be your Trimark martyr on this one and save good-natured Blockbuster roamers from 90 minutes of pain. While you're at it, send a thank-you note to Pleasant Street Video and Video to Go for not carrying this filler.

Cook Away Your Cabin Fever

Easy Recipes to Spice Up Your Snow Days

This Week's Garden Grab: Zucchini

Growing up, there had to at least be three words that sparked instant temper tantrums: nap, babysitter and vegetables. Those greens ended up anywhere but in my tummy – whether my dog's mouth, my napkin, or my sister's face, they were avoided at all costs. But now that I am on my own, and a health conscious young adult, I try to swallow as many vegetables as possible (with no help from the DC). Zucchini, however, has always been a hard one to warm up to. Maybe it's the name or maybe it's the fact that it's in the squash family...a family I would rather not associate with. But, I have found that as I grew up, so did my taste buds, and zucchini isn't the green monster I always feared. Its high vitamin A and C content have made it worthy of a try. Vitamin A is a vital nutrient, especially helping your night vision, giving you healthy skin (amen, sister!) and helping those bones grow. Vitamin C is a godsend as far as your health goes. It does wonders for your immune system and gives you energy (don't even try to say you don't need a little help in that department). If that's not enough C also helps keep your bones, teeth, skin and gums healthy. With that in mind, the little green monster can stay, as far as I'm concerned. Below are four friendly recipes, all easy to make and relatively healthy, to add to your growing garden of veggie favorites.

Cous Cous Creation

one small onion
one or two cloves of minced garlic...minced = finely chopped about 2 tablespoons olive oil one diced red pepper
one grated zucchini
a few sprigs of fresh basil
parmesan cheese
one box cous cous, prepared as directed

This recipe is super easy, super versatile. You can virtually put anything you want in with the cous cous: whatever is hiding in your fridge, whatever flavors you favor. What you are going to do with the mix of ingredients is what counts. Start, always, by sauteing the onions and garlic in the olive oil. When your onions are clear, add the red pepper, the zucchini, the basil and the parmesan cheese. Sautee for a few more minutes, then toss the mixture with your cous cous in a bowl. You can either serve the dish hot, or let it chill for an hour or so for a cooler version. Again, great to make with almost any mix of ingredients, and great for snowed in days.

Fresh and Flamenco Zucchini Spears

A little twist of lime and a handful of cilantro, and you're south of The Border! This medley of Mexican flavors, paired with crispy zucchini spears is great to accompany your favorite Mexican cuisine.

olive oil
one or two minced garlic cloves
two good sized zucchini fresh cilantro
one lime

Saute your garlic in the olive oil, but remember to watch the garlic because it burns so quickly. Chop the zucchini into spears (about 3-4") and add to the garlic oil. Saute for about 4 to 5 minutes. You want to keep the zucchini crispy, so just barely cook them. Last, add your fresh, chopped cilantro (about two tablespoons) and squeeze a little bit of lime juice over the dish for flavor.

Quick Quiche Quasserole

Shopping List:
Σ one package of crescent rolls
Σ dijon mustard
Σ two zucchini
Σ butter
Σ one small onion
Σ fresh parsley
Σ salt
Σ garlic powder
Σ black pepper
Σ basil
Σ oregano
Σ 2 eggs
Σ mozzerella cheese
Σ bread crumbs

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Roll up your sleeves, pop open the package of crescent rolls, and press them into a pie dish or casserole dish to make a crust. Then spread about two tablespoons of mustard over the crust. Start a saucepan with about six tablespoons of butter, chopped onion and seasonings. One of the secrets to good cooking is to leave as many measurements behind and "eye ball" your portions. The garlic powder is strong, so put just about a pinch in pepper and salt can be used just like they would at the table – sprinkle a little into the saucepan. Your basil, oregano and parsley is up to you. Thinly slice about four cups of zucchini and saute with the butter and seasonings. Wisk two eggs in a separate bowl, and add about two cups of cheese and a half of a cup of breadcrumbs. Then add what's in your saucepan to the egg mixture and pour into the crusted dish. Bake for 20-25 minutes and serve in wedges.

Sweet Treat: Zucchini Bread

3 eggs
1 cup vegetable oil
2 cups sugar
2 cups finely grated zucchini
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup chopped nuts (walnuts are my favorite, but you can use pecans too)
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 cups all purpose flour
3 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking soda
powdered sugar

Preheat your oven to 325 degrees and grease two 8 x 4 inch bread pans (available at the supermarket). Beat the eggs until light and frothy, then add oil and sugar and mix well. Stir in grated zucchini and vanilla. Then add flour, cinnamon, baking soda, baking powder, salt and nuts and mix with spoon or spatula. Bake for and hour/hour and ten minutes. Sprinkle powdered sugar on top and serve.

How to test cakes, breads, muffins, etc: take a kabob stick, chopstick, toothpick (something thin) and stick it into the middle of your baked good. When you remove it, if it is clean, you are done, if not, put it in for a couple minutes more and test again.

Variations: For chocolate zucchini bread, add one cup of chopped chocolate chips. For muffins, bake at 400 degrees for 20-25 minutes. For a bundt cake bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour 15 minutes. For zucchini carrot bread, grate one small zucchini and one carrot. Add a half of a cup of raisins if you wish or a half of a cup of chopped apple.

Maggie Lyons is a Collegian Columnist.

Going up.

As you begin your ascent to the top, remember, it's what you learn along the way that counts. At Ernst & Young, you can have endless learning opportunities working with leading companies in leading industries. So when you get to your destination, you'll belong there. Ride with us.

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2001

ey.com/us/careers

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

Mike Clark's Prescription filled for brilliant fusion

Charlie Parker brought his unique sound to Mike Clark's Prescription Renewal.

COURTESY OF HIGHLAND.COM

By David Siegel
Collegian Staff

MIKE CLARK'S PRESCRIPTION RENEWAL
Iron Horse Music Hall
March 1

I will go out on a limb here and say that most experimental music groups just do not have enough practice time or experience with each other to put on a very enjoyable or groundbreaking show. The fact that this band could pull it off is what makes this all-star collaboration even more impressive. This group of musicians together is the brainchild of Mike Clark, the former drummer of Herbie Hancock's Headhunters band. On this 13-day, 13-city tour that kicked off at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton last Thursday, Clark brings with him the famed Robert Walter (Robert Walter's 20th Congress, Grey Boy All-stars) on keyboards, Skerik (Les Claypool's Frog Brigade, Critters Buggin') on saxophone, Charlie Hunter on the 8-string super-guitar (three strings of bass, 5 strings like a regular guitar), and DJ Logic (Project Logic) on the turntables. Not exactly prepared for the musical feast that this relatively packed crowd was in store for, I was so pleasantly surprised and ready for the show.

Opening with "Stingers" off of Mike Clark's new album Actual Proof, the band certainly showed that despite having to read off of sheet music for most of the actual songs, they could put on a great show filled with plenty of improvisation. After ann-uncing the line-up to the mostly young, college crowd, Mike Clark announced this song as "where he comes from," and led the band into a sweet rendition of the Herbie classic "Watermelon Man." This song was taken to a whole new level with the addition of DJ Logic, running away on his wheels of steel. Next up was a mellow bluesy tune that Charlie Hunter absolutely tore up. As his hands fluttered over his super-thick fingerboard, a soothing, thumping sound of the bass string and a nice twang of the guitar string could be heard. The band continued through their phenomenal set almost effortlessly with a few Charlie Hunter songs and eventually threw down "Stop," a Miles Davis cover.

During the show, I noticed in particular Robert Walter taking a back seat to everybody on stage and simply playing what was expected of him. I had seen the 20th Congress numerous times and knew that when in his element, Walter can simply tear up the keyboards like nobody else on the scene. I was just waiting for Walter to get into his groove. Towards the end of the show you could tell right away that Robert was ready. The jam began with Hunter putting down his guitar and reaching for his tambourine. Soon after, DJ Logic jumped in and added another layer to the mix. Skerik jumped in and let his sax rip. Eventually, Robert Walter came in very quietly and let loose his fingers for a crescendo-laced jam. The show ended with a few more jazzy, bass-driven songs before ending with another Mike Clark original. Leaving the show I was utterly speechless as to how these musicians could play so comfortably with each other for only having a few practices. Keep your ears open for any news about any of these special performers coming to the area.

For one, Charlie Hunter is coming with his trio on Mar. 10th the Iron Horse. Should be another great show!

Minutewomen looking to regain national status

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

Two weekends ago in Columbus, Ga. the Massachusetts softball team was met with two challenges. First, could it finally beat a Top-10 opponent? And secondly, could it hold on to its No. 24 ranking in the country? Unfortunately, the top 10 teams in the country continued to be UMass' nemesis, and as a result the Maroon and White dropped out of this week's USA Today/NFCA Top-25.

This weekend UMass gets a chance to redeem its performance at the Lead Off Classic when it plays four games at the Speedline Tournament in Tampa, Fla.

Today the Minutewomen will face the 2000 America East Champions, Hofstra at 1 p.m.

The Pride has had a disappointing start this season. On February 25, it defeated Georgia State to improve its record to 3-11 on the year. If UMass wants to improve on its 4-6 record, it is important to put away the lesser-talented teams.

Saturday, the Maroon and White get a chance for revenge as it once again faces off with the Kansas Jayhawks.

At the Lead Off Classic, Kansas was one of the teams that Massachusetts was supposed to defeat; however, the Jayhawks upset the Minuetwomen and slipped away with a 4-1 victory. UMass was held to only three hits by Kansas pitcher Kara Pierce. It is not known yet if UMass will face Pierce again, but it is ready for the challenge.

"She was pretty good," said assistant coach Danielle Henderson after the weekend in Columbus. "We have to focus on how we can hit better against the tougher pitchers in the country."

The Maroon and White will play a day-night double header Saturday. After playing Kansas, it will face the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga Lady Mocs (13-7) in the nightcap.

The Mocs are last year's Southern Conference champions and have had a pretty impressive season in 2001. Six of their seven losses have been against Top 25 ranked opponents.

Their success can be attributed to the play of senior Jaci Welsh, who leads her UTC squad in hitting at .325 with five homers and 20 RBIs. It can also be because all of the Moc starters have an ERA under 2.00.

The starting pitching trio of senior Carrie Jeffries, sophomore Kaila Holtz and junior Jennifer Hadley will have their work cut out for them as their combined ERA is 3.34.

The Minutewomen will finish out the tournament Sunday when they face a team that replaced them in the Top 25. The Maroon and White will play the No. 24 ranked Wisconsin Badgers (7-7). The Badgers are coming off a spectacular weekend in Austin, Texas. UW pulled out important victories against then No. 11 ranked Cal State Fullerton, 2-1, and No. 22 Texas, 4-0, to advance to the final of the Texas Invitational. In that final it faced No. 1 ranked UCLA and lost 1-0. The Badgers head down to Tampa with a lot confidence.

With a win over Wisconsin, UMass can help its chances of returning to the Top 25.

The Minutewomen have lost four out of their last five games and it is essential that they have a good showing if they want to be noticed on the national scene once again.

Women's water polo set for two tri-state matches

By Alison Sciamanna
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's water polo team will hit the road this weekend for a pair of tri-state match-ups.

The Minutewomen will go up against Hartwick College in New York on Saturday, and then it's on to New Jersey to face the Tigers of Princeton University. The team heads into this weekend with a 3-2 record. Its much-anticipated match against rival Brown University was scheduled for Tuesday, March 6, but was cancelled due to Nor'easter Emily.

The Maroon and White will be testing new waters when it faces the Hawks of Hartwick in Oneonta, New York on Saturday. Hartwick made the transition from a club sport to the intercollegiate level just this year. It made its intercollegiate debut at the Princeton Invitational in February and is currently ranked 19th in the nation, just two spots behind the 17th ranked Minutewomen. They stand at 7-5 on the season after going 4-0 in competition last weekend.

"We really don't know much about them," said junior All-American goalie Dana Sinkwich.

"We do know they have a lot of talent, but they are young and have about 10 freshmen," said junior captain Megan Perry.

The Minutewomen will be using Hartwick's youth to their advantage and try to capitalize on its beginner mistakes.

The Maroon and White will also rely on its strong outside shooting. Sophomore Kelly Chassy has been consistent on offense for Massachusetts. She is the team's leading scorer with 14 goals in five games.

UMass' second game of the weekend will match the team up with Princeton. The Tigers come into the game at 8-5.

"Princeton was our big competition last year," said Sinkwich. "They've been playing well."

The Minutewomen will be prepared for a tough game. They will use picks on the outside and work on breaking the drop. They will once again use their outside shooting to their advantage.

"Princeton is definitely going to drop on us," said Perry. "It's going to be a really good game."

According to Perry, the team is still just getting to know each other better. "The communication is getting better," she said.

Once the communication comes together, so should the Minutewomen.

The team will resume action at home on March 17, with the CWPA League Tournament. It will then spend spring break in California on a three game road trip.

■ men's lacrosse

continued from page 10

"It was embarrassing last year to us as a team and a staff," Cannella said. "We thought we were manhandled and that was really the difference."

UMass will get its stake at revenge Saturday at 1 p.m. on the home turf of Richard F. Garber Field. And although it's just the third game of the 2000-01 campaign for both squads, the match is set to serve as a character gauge for both conference rosters.

The Minutemen (2-0, 1-0 ECAC) enter this weekend on a two-game winning streak while holding tight to their No. 9 ranking. Their latest victory came at home last Saturday in a 17-8 shellacking of conference foe Stony Brook. The Seawolves put together a 5-2 run in the second quarter, but UMass jumped out in the next stanza scoring seven goals in the first eight minutes and added three in the last to finish off the rout.

Navy (0-2, 0-1 ECAC) packs two-straight heartbreakers in its bags headed for Amherst. The first of the two losses came two weeks ago, when the University of Maryland-Baltimore County bounced the Midshipman in overtime, 9-8. The following week, Navy was pushed aside when the University of North Carolina found the net with just one second left on the scoreboard.

"They're snake bitten right now," Cannella said. "They lost two games, one in overtime and one in the last second, against very high quality opponents. So we know they're going to come in here ready to play. They don't want to go 0-3.

"It's going to be a real battle between two good teams," he continued. "I think whoever is tougher during the day will come out victorious."

In last year's battle, the Minuteman rifles were waterlogged by the Midshipman defense. And UMass was simply outhustled as Navy grabbed 45 ground balls to the Minutemen's 33.

This year things are different. The Maroon and White's run-and-gun philosophy has led to 34 goals in two games. To that, its year-older defense has sacrificed 23.

Senior Jeremy Guski leads the team with five goals, sophomore Kevin Leveille has four tallies and four assists and several other members of the UMass attack aren't far behind those marks. The Maroon and White attack is up-tempo and senior-laden. And its defense, led by senior Matt McFarland, is as strong as ever. It's why Cannella isn't at all surprised at his team's success.

"I'm more surprised that we didn't do better last year with the people that we had," he said. "Maybe our chemistry is better this year, maybe our senior leadership has elevated our play this year. There's a sense of urgency for those guys. It's the last year for them to accomplish their goals."

McMurphy's
March 10th
Annual Blarney Blowout
To celebrate St. Patty's Day
Live Music 4-7
Prizes
Free Corned Beef Sandwiches

UMass Campus Recreation
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY:
Softball (M/W/C)..... 3/12
Co-rec Soccer..... 3/12
Volleyball Special..... 3/13
OFFICIALS NEEDED:
Softball Clinics..... 3/26,3/28,3/29,4/1
Co-rec Soccer Clinics..... 3/27,3/28,3/29
Volleyball Special..... 3/27
Call for clinic attendance requirements, times and locations.
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693
On The Web: http/www.umass.edu/umim

Sponsored by the Amherst Health Department
The only thing smokin' in Amherst is the atmosphere!
See what you eat!
See what you drink!
See the entertainment!
You Are Here UMASS
See You There
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
North Pleasant
Experience Downtown Amherst and its Smoke-Free Establishments

HAIR CUTS NOW WITH KATE
$20
(Wrds. & Sat.)
ERIC SCOT
79 south pleasant street
Amherst
413 256 3440
Experience the art of hair for less.

Spring break special
Changes
[a full service salon for men and women]
Introducing Diane:
· choose any wax service and receive a second waxing service for half off when you mention this ad.
offer expires May 31, 2001
Thornes Market Place
North Hampton MA 01060 Phone:413·586·2600

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Available Immediately 1 Br. Apt. - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Take over Lease or summer sublet. Upgraded 3 bedroom. Puffton call 549-0467

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

1993 Saturn SL2. Clean, dependable, well maintained. $2700. 549-8000

1985 Saab Turbo 162K, sunroof, leather, 5spd. Good condition. $1100 o/b/o 413-367-7592

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Seeking occasional childcare for 2 school-age children. 549-5448

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruise-careers.com

EMPLOYMENT

Work Study Students & substitute teachers. Cushman Scott Childrens Center an equal opportuntiy employer is now hiring to work with childern 18months to 5years. Ellen 549-1167

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimun 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPENSQUARE.COM

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

EMPLOYMENT

The Animal Rescue League of Boston's Animal Friends Summer Camp in North Falmouth, Cape Cod has the following counselor positions open: Farm Life Counselor, Horse Care Counselor. Employment Dates: June 1st-August 18th. Limited room & board available. For more information or to schedule an interview, call Laura Robbins at 781-461-8015 ext. 25 *Visit our table at "Camp Employment Day" on March 14th.

FOR SALE

New WebTV Classsic with keyboard for sale. Call Laroushna 546-5405

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 19th Birthday Lauren Love Always Zac

INSTRUCTION

Wanna be a Rock Star? Acoustic guitar lessons. Learn the basics fast. Call Anthony at 413-218-6562

INSTRUCTION

Bathing Suit Season is Coming. Experienced trainer will get you ready. No gym membership required. Private kickboxing instruction also available. Joe 548-8979

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITYBARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

MISCELLANEOUS

Long distance relationships CAN WORK! Find out how at www.sblake.com

Montreal Madness Weekends $99 includes round trip motorcoach, 3days 2nights hotel, breakfast & dinner. Departs March 16-18, March 23-25, April 6-8, April 20-22. Call Global Tours 781-665-4100

PET FOR SALE

Free male house cat 1yr old, playfull, friendly. Call 256-6777

ROOM FOR RENT

Spring Break Housing Furnished room/kitchen, N. Amherst. $20 daily or $140 all week. 549-4401

1 Bedroom in large 3 bedroom house. On busline. Hobart St. 549-2951

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

Jamaica Spring Break: Cheapest, best hideaway. Negrils, 7 miles white sand beach. Charming, safe, cabins in lush tropical paradise. Single $25, Double $35. 413-549-4401

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@goflip-trips.com

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Group rates still available. 1-800-234-7007 endless-summertours.com

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

- 2 HSCN Bulletin Board
- 28 CBS 3 Hartford
- 30 CBS 4 Boston
- 5 ABC 40 Springfield
- 6 FOX 57 Springfield
- 7 HSCN Movie Channel
- 8 UPN 20 Hartford
- 9 WB 56 Hartford
- 10 NBC 22 Springfield
- 11 International Channel
- 12 ETV/ETV Academic Channel
- 13 WGBY New Haven
- 14 PBS/NE
- 15 ENEWS
- 16 LIVE TV (Student Channel)
- 20 Weather Channel
- 21 Closed Circuit
- 22 C-Span
- 23 CNN
- 24 CNN Headline News
- 25 Turner
- 26 USA
- 27 TBS
- 28 TNT
- 29 FX
- 30 A&E
- 31 Discovery
- 32 Nesn
- 33 Comedy Central
- 34 MTV
- 35 Lifetime
- 36 TV Land
- 37 Nickelodeon
- 38 Comedy Central
- 39 BET
- 40 Lifetime
- 41 Bloomberg Financial Network
- 42 College TV Network
- 43 MTV
- 44 MTV2
- 45 VH1
- 46 The Learning Channel

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 9, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Motley Fool Money-Making Life-Changing			Feng Shui: Creating Environments of Success			Hey Le, Hey La
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Fugitive "Miles to Go"		Nash Bridges "The Partner"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Fugitive "Miles to Go"		Nash Bridges "The Partner"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl (Norm (N)		Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		20/20 (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Sabrina-Witch	Popstars	Popular "Tag" (N) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "The Good Doctor"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Sabrina-Witch	Popstars	Popular "Tag" (N) (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Providence "The Good Doctor"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	NAACP Image Awards (N) (In Stereo)				News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "The Good Doctor"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	American Experience "Reagan: An American Crusade" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl (Norm (N)		Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		20/20 (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Guy Guys-Girl (Norm (N)		Partners	Mad About You	Spin City		Spin City
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	* "Star Wars" (1977) Science Fiction) Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher. (In Stereo)				Friends		* "Jaws" (1975)
A&E	15	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order	"Vengeance"	Biography "The Gambinos: First Family of Crime"				Poirot "Triangle at Rhodes"		Law & Order "The Troubles"
CNN	20	Worldview	Moneyline	Newshour (N)		Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live	CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents		Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents		 "Love Potion No. 9" (1992, Comedy) Tate Donovan.
DISC	26	Wild Discovery: Animal's World		Gsnts: Sharks		Bodybuilders (N)			Motorcycle Manis	Casino Diaries	After Midnight	Justice Files
ESPN	33	Basketball	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Big East Tournament Semifinal -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: Big East Tournament Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced.				Sportscenter
LIFE	39	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"A Match Made in Heaven" (1997, Drama) Olympia Dukakis.				Division (In Stereo)
MTV	43	Making-Video	When Bad Videos Happen	Fight for Your Rights		Cribs		Fear (In Stereo)		Spring Break	Making-Video	Andy Dick	Undressed
NICK	35	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Rugrats		Spongeb	Rocket Power	Thornberrys	Square Pegs	Square Pegs	Square Pegs
SCIFI	45	"Babylon 5: In the Beginning" (1998) Bruce Boxleitner. (In Stereo)				Black Scorpion (In Stereo)		Farscape "Die Me Dichotomy"		Adventures of Jules Verne		Black Scorpion (In Stereo)
TLC	27	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Egypt's Lost City				Police, Camera, Action!		Secrets of the Stonesage		Police, Camera, Action!
TNT	25	ER "Welcome Back, Carter"		Pretender "A Stand Up Guy"		 "As Good as It Gets" (1997, Comedy-Drama) Jack Nicholson. Helen Hunt.						"As Good as It Gets" (1997)
USA	32	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Doped Wood" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Cocaine"		 "The Corpsehead Man" (1996, Suspense) Kenneth Branagh. (In Stereo)					Farmclub.com
HBO	51	 "Crazy in Alabama" (1999) Melanie Griffith. PG-13				 "Three Kings" (1999, Comedy-Drama) George Clooney. "R"				 "Judgment Day" (1999, Action) Ice-T. "R"		Dennis Miller
MAX	53	 "Stuart Little" (1999) Geena Davis. "PG"				 "True Crime" (1999, Suspense) Clint Eastwood. (In Stereo) "R"				 "Ride Rocket" (1965, Western) Clint Eastwood. "R"
SHOW	55	 "Things Change" (1988, Comedy) Don Ameche. "PG"				 "The Talented Mr. Ripley" (1999, Suspense) Matt Damon. (In Stereo) "R"				Stargate SG-1		Stargate SG-1 "The Other Side"

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

ROLAND! NOW COME YOU'RE BACK ON THE TURF!
RESTRUC TURING...
RIGHT AFTER THE AOL-TIME WARNER MERGER WAS APPROVED, MY.COM WAS ROLLED INTO ONE. 143 PEOPLE GOT THE AX.
THERE'S A HAPPY ENDING, THOUGH. I'LL NOW HAVE BOTH A WIFE AND TV TIME SPACE - A LONG WAY FROM BEING FIRED!
WHAT ABOUT THE 143 WHO WERE?
A MOVING STORY. I'LL BE COVERING THEIR PLIGHT

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

MISS CHRISTOPHER? ABOUT THIS AFTERNOON'S TEST...
WE FORGET — WAS IT CHAPTER FOUR YOU SAID TO STUDY, OR CHAPTER FIVE?
WE'D HATE TO STUDY THE WRONG ONE.
I SAID TO STUDY CHAPTERS 12-46
I THINK I HATE STUDYING THE RIGHT ONES MORE.
CALM DOWN IT'S JUST A PAGE EVERY 30 SECONDS.

Robotman and Monty By Jim Meddick

YOU STOOD UP FOR ME EVEN THOUGH IT MEANT SUFFERING THE ALIENS WRATH?
COUGH! COUGH! HACK!
I THINK I'M BEGINNING TO LEARN THIS THING YOU CALL LOVE
OK. Great! Well I guess...um
PERHAPS YOU HAD BEST TRY NOT TO SPEAK
Right! That's probably a good idea

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THE PROMISE OF WAYCOOL LEARNED THE USER A LESS MEDIA-RICH ENVIRONMENT IN WHICH TO SURF.
AND YET THE CONTENT COMMUNITY'S TRAGIC LOSS IS THE GAIN OF THE INTERNET'S RAPACIOUS SCAVENGERS.
AND WE ALREADY DESIGNED IN WAYCOOL'S STILL-RAPID PHYSICAL ASSETS TO SOOTHE ITS DESPERATE OWNERS!
I THINK HE'S HERO TATTOO.
OFFER LESS

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Other people may be just as indecisive as you are, so looking to others for support and advice will do you little good. Pay attention to all the details today, and work on making things secure from the ground up

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may be feeling that your emotions are holding you back. You have everything else worked out in your head, you have the car packed and ready to go, yet someone or something keeps tugging at your heartstrings, making it difficult for you to start the engine

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Emotionality you may be feeling quite good, yet you may get the sense that there is something gnawing on you in a destructive way. It could be that in your efforts to create a safe nurturing space for yourself, you have limited your range of motion and sense of freedom

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Someone is likely to challenge your sensitivity, so prepare yourself for these potential blows to your state of mind

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You may notice that the energy of the people around you is not clicking well. There seems to be some sort of stop and go motion in which people are hesitant and yet anxious at the same time. Stay focused and objective and you'll get through the day

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – One of the hardest things for you in to be alone. Ironically enough, however this is probably one of the most important places for you to be. Now is a time in which you need to learn how to be content when you are completely apart from other people

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Use the self-confidence that you feel today to make a giant leap into the world. You should find that things are going well for you now, so instead of sitting back and just indulging yourself, make the most of this good energy by pushing forward into new realms

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Be careful of taking too much without giving anything in return! If you continue to hoard things and keep them selfishly for yourself, you will leave little room for other things to enter into your life

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Be careful of ignoring the very person in your life who matters the most. More than likely, there is someone who loves you a great deal and yet you continue to take this affection for granted

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Avoid letting yourself get upset by small incidents that really have no major effect in the long run. People might be not picky, and could perhaps come down a bit hard on your adventuresome nature

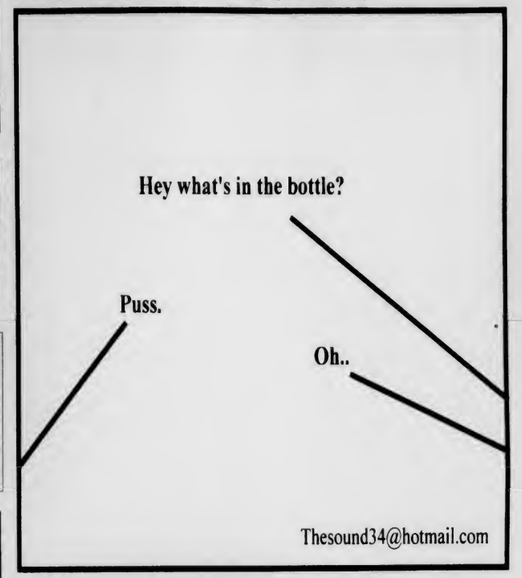
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Your emotions should be quite stable, helping you to ground your thoughts and feelings. Use this solid base as a pad from which you can launch yourself. It is important that you do not get stuck in your old ways and refuse to budge from your original steering point

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Other people may be just as indecisive as you are, so looking to others for support and advice will do you little good. Pay attention to all the details today, and work on making things secure from the ground up

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas

I BOUGHT A MOTORCYCLE TODAY, BUT I COULDN'T FIT IT DOWN MY PANTS.
DID YOU TRY DEFLATING THE TIRES?
YEAH, NO DICE.
I'M DRIVEN BY WHITE-HOT ANGER. AND MY MOM, SOMETIMES, WHEN I MISS THE BUS

The Sound of One Hand Smelling By William Brierly



Quote of the Day

"Chicken, you in dangah girl!"

–The guy from "Dinner and a Movie" during a showing of the fine film Ghost.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Italian Sausage with Peppers (B, H, W)

Curried Chick Peas (vegan)

Grilled Cheese on Wheat Bread (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

Italian Sausage Grinder (F)

DINNER

Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce

Black Eyed Peas Jambalaya (vegan)

Lemon Pepper Cod (H)

B=Berkshire; F=Franklin; H=Hampshire; W=Worcester

Amherst Weather

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 28	HIGH: 46 LOW: 22	HIGH: 47 LOW: 24

WE DELIVER DELI
Boar's Head Brand
SUGAR BONES
Claudia's Cafe
One East Pleasant St. (Amherst Carriage Shops)
549-5663
We accept OCMP

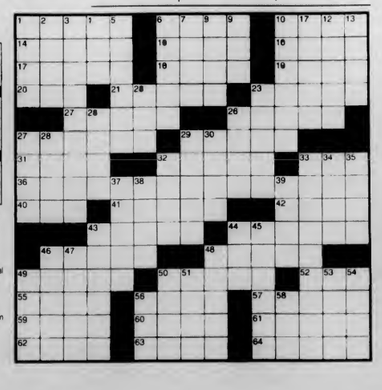
ACROSS
1 – it walks
6 Make-like
10 Ice-cream holder
14 Monastery head
15 Imitate
16 Actor Jannings
17 Cheapskate
18 Girlfriend for Yves
19 Earth inhertors?
20 Pi of a mnn
21 Ouzo flavoring
23 Sell stolen goods
24 Merger
26 Uptight
27 South Seas wear
29 Look forward to
31 Lagers
32 Potential oak
33 Kind of neckline
36 Aloof refusal to speak
40 Hog's home
41 Some reeds
42 Egress
43 Pronounces indistinctly
44 Free!
46 Jewelry fastener
48 Move quickly
49 Plunder
50 Goodbye, in Cannes
52 Bartender's supply
55 Bum-soothing leaf
56 Degree holder
57 Light parody
59 Berry spreads
60 Poker stake
61 Spew
62 Mgr.'s helper
63 Pond denizen
64 Portions of medicine

DOWN
1 Smoked meats
2 NYC theater award
3 Vaguely
4 Enemy
5 Back problem
6 Gray matter
7 Borders
8 Peace Nobelist Wiesel
9 Tiny
10 Construction material
11 Portents
12 Reunion attendee
13 Ms. Sommer
22 Egg drink
23 Boxing ruse
25 Face part
26 Fictional plantation
27 Get smart with
28 Got down
29 Country measures
30 Adversities
32 Upon
33 Pesky
34 Geraint's love
35 Ms. Kerr of old comics
37 Loud
38 Recipe qty.
39 Written reminder
43 Least prompt
44 Fighter pilot
45 Woke up
46 Soft drinks
47 Weaving machines
48 One — partial
49 — California
50 Cartoonist Peter
51 Statistics
53 Hold one's own
54 Newts
56 B-movie pests
58 In favor of

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

E	M	M	A		S	K	E	E	T		A	C	H	E
R	A	I	L		C	O	R	G	I		B	R	E	D
G	U	L	L		R	A	N	G	E		R	A	R	E
O	I	L	S	H	A	L	E		C	U	B	A	N
			P	A	P	A		S	O	A	P
S	O	N	I	C		G	E	M	S	T	O	N	E
C	R	O	C	K		D	A	V	I	T		C	O	D
O	D	I	E		C	O	M	E		E	R	G
L	E	S		S	H	Y	E	R		E	R	A	S	E
D	R	E	A	M	I	L	Y		P	A	N	E	S
			P	O	N	E		A	S	I	S
S	P	R	I	N	G		C	U	C	H	I	N	I
A	R	E	A		A	B	A	T	E		E	N	O	S
R	O	A	R		C	A	N	O	N		S	T	O	P
A	W	R	Y		T	H	E	S	E		T	O	N	Y

1-12-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's Staff

Night Editor	Rob Schutze
Photo Technician	Tiboru Girczyc-Blum
Copy Editor	Matthew Despres
Production Supervisor	Roberto Delgado
Production Staff	Elana Premack, Adi Huseinovic

Look inside for the UMass softball team's weekend preview.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Friday, March 9, 2001 | 10

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

MACK-NIFICENT

Fifth-year senior drills eight threes with season on the line

By Adam White and Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — The third time was definitely a charm.

The Massachusetts's men's basketball team reduced its two regular season losses to St. Bonaventure to a mere memory yesterday, beating the Bonnies 79-58 in the quarter-final round of the Atlantic 10 tournament at the First Union Spectrum. UMass (14-14, 12-5 A-10) led wire-to-wire behind 29 points from senior guard Monty Mack, and held SBU (18-11, 9-8 A-10) to just 36 percent shooting over the course of the win.

"We could have won by one and I'd still be happy," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "We're in the playoffs now; if you don't win, you go home."

Even though he tied his season-high for points, Mack (9-of-13 from the field, 8-of-10 for three) was not alone in dismantling the Bonnies. Micah Brand and Kitwana Rhymer were both inside forces on the offensive end, scoring 13 and 11 points respectively.

The duo also proved quite a presence on the defensive end, especially with SBU center Peter Van Paassen still sidelined with an ankle injury. Brand and Rhymer combined for 18 rebounds and two blocks, and altered several more shots as well.

"We're not one of those teams that's going to come out and score 1,000 points," Flint said. "Our thing is defense."

The Minutemen got off to an 11-1 start right off the opening tip, behind a pair of Mack trifectas and another from Shannon Crooks. The lead would hover around 10 for much of the first half, until SBU's Marques Green stuck a jumper over UMass' Jonathan DePina to close the gap to five (20-15) with 8:27 to go in the half.

But the opening action of the second half was all Mack, as the All-Atlantic 10 first teamer scored UMass' first 11 points of the frame. Bonnie J.R. Bremer (17 points) did his best to keep it close, slashing to the hoop aggressively throughout the second half.

With just under 12 minutes remaining in the game, Bremer canned a lane runner to trim the UMass lead to six, 43-37, but that was as close as SBU would get. Mack evoked memories of the team's old "Refuse to Lose" mentality by knocking down a trio of three-point bombs over the next six minutes to push the Maroon and White edge to double-digits for good.

"I just wanted to come out there and play aggressively, play with some heart and play with some energy," Mack said.

Jameel Pugh put the exclamation point on the win for UMass, slamming home an alley-oop pass from fellow freshman Willie Jenkins with less than 10 ticks remaining.

*****

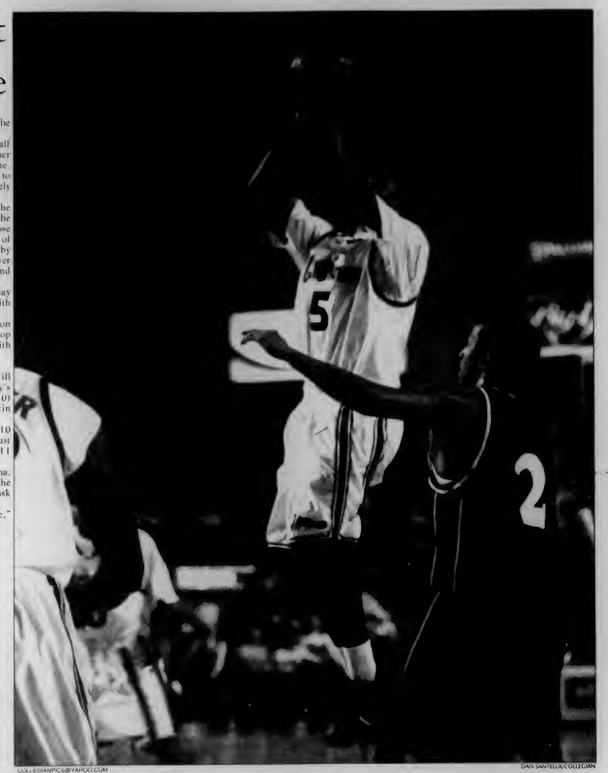
By virtue of the win, the Minutemen will now face No. 1 seed St. Joseph's in today's semi-final round. The Hawks (25-5, 15-2 A-10) pulled out a closer-than-expected 82-74 win over LaSalle in yesterday's first game.

St. Joe's was powered to victory by A-10 Freshman of the Year Jameer Nelson, who just missed a triple-double with 23 points, 11 rebounds and eight assists.

Crooks speculated that fellow guard DePina, who started his third game of the year in the win over SBU, would have the unenviable task of guarding Nelson.

"Jonathan will be up for the challenge," Crooks said. "He won't back down."

Tip-off is slated for 7 p.m.



COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack, the Atlantic 10's three-point shot leader, gave a clinic in Philidelphia yesterday afternoon on how to shoot the trifecta.

Atlantic 10 Championship Semifinals

UMass vs. ATLANTIC 10 CONFERENCE

TONIGHT
UMass vs. St. Joseph's
7 p.m. tipoff

UMass hosts unlucky Midshipmen

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

About this time last year, the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team found itself in a small New Jersey town playing a group of Midshipmen in a cloudburst with temperatures in the low 50s.

That day, Navy took advantage of its water expertise, pushing the Minutemen under on its way to a 6-5 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) victory.

"[That score] is plastered down in the locker room," UMass head coach Greg Cannella said. "It's something that's on the mind of these guys."

UMass jumped out to an early lead in the contest, but was destroyed in the second half by the Midshipman attack, which refused to give up a final stanza blunder. The most baffling statistic, however, was Navy's 41-19 out shooting of the Maroon and White on the neutral Turf Field of Rutgers University.

COLLEGIANPICS@YAHOO.COM DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team will try to send Navy to its third loss in as many games, Saturday at Garber Field.

Turn to MEN'S LACROSSE page 7

Minutewomen begin 2001 with hole in net

By Justin Pearson
Collegian Staff

Change is in the air as the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team opens its 2001 campaign on Saturday. The Minutewomen head up the Mass Pike to Cambridge to take on the Lady Crimson of Harvard.

Heading up the change is head coach Phil Barnes. Last season Barnes served as the interim head coach before being hired as the full time coach in September. In 2000 Barnes lead UMass to its first 10 win season since 1983 and the Minutewomen won the Atlantic 10 Championship for the first time ever with a dramatic 3-2 overtime victory over Temple at Totman Field.

"There's no difference in our approach or style of play, how we deal with everything from day to day [from last year to this year]," said Barnes. "It's still the same, go out play your hardest, play smart, play as a team and just give it our all."

Another big change for the Minutewomen this season is the makeup of the roster. UMass will head into action this season with 11 freshmen on its 23 woman roster. Add to this the loss of some key players from last season such as Stephanie Pavlick and Rebecca Minaker, the two top scorers for the Minutewomen last season, and you have the makings of a very young and inexperienced team.

Not helping matters in the opening weeks of the season is a shoulder injury to senior goalkeeper Jen Nardi. Last season Nardi started all but two games in net for UMass and anchored a Maroon and White defense that led the nation in goals against, allowing a mere 6.73 goals per game. Sophomore Cyndi Doyle will start in place of the injured Nardi until she has fully recovered. Last season Doyle picked up one win and posted a 6.49 goals against average in limited duty.

"Cyndi has played very well in the scrimmages that we've had so far this spring and she did a really great job in the fall," said Barnes. "She has really matured as a goalkeeper and a as player."

While the UMass defense looks to be a bit thin as the season gets underway, there are options a plenty for the attack. Leading the way is a pair of seniors, Fay Naber and Rachel Ingraffea. These two combined for 35 goals and 48 points for the Minutewomen and more of the same will be expected of them this season. Senior Denise Brey and sophomore Lydia Robinson will be looked to in order to help create the offense from midfield. Add into this mix the fact that nine of the 11 freshmen on this year's roster play in either midfield or attack and you have a slew of options to choose from.

"We're looking for someone to step up and take on that role [of a consistant goal scorer]," said Barnes. "It may not be one of those three [Naber, Ingraffea or Robinson] but the neat thing about our team is that we have a lot of options offensively."

UMass will need to find somebody to score on Saturday if the Minutewomen are to come out on top. Last season Harvard took a come from behind 7-6 victory in the season opener here in Amherst. Four of the Minutewomen's six goals came from departed seniors and those who are returning will be looking to erase the memory of giving away a three-goal lead in the final ten minutes of the game.

Harvard is coached by Carole Kleinfelder, the all-time winningest coach in women's collegiate lacrosse, and will once again be a difficult test for the young Minutewomen.

"They've been building for the past couple of years," said Barnes. "They're a very athletic and very fast team and they're well-coached so it should be some excellent competition."

The Pavement may have crumbled, but frontman Stephen Malkmus is back on the streets. Arts - that's a very nice haircut.

ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

UMass center Kit Rhymer owned the A-10 tourney... until one bad call in the finals. Get the right call in Sports.

SPORTS p. 10

Volume CVII Issue 96 | www.dailycollegian.com | Monday, March 12, 2001

Doomsday fast approaching for Napster content

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Popular online music swapping Napster may still be alive, but only barely, and only until Wednesday March 14.

That is the date, which has been set by the 9th District Court of Appeals in California for Napster to block over 135,000 copyrighted songs. The list, to be established by the Recording Industry of America (RIAA), represents about 70 percent of the material downloaded regularly by over 50 millions Napster users. It is thought that if Napster can block this copyrighted material, then it can avoid being shut down completely by court injunction.

A Feb. 13 ruling by the court did not call for a complete shutdown of the service, but warned that it was violating RIAA copyrights.

"[Napster] knowingly encourages and assists its users to infringe the record companies' copyrights," the court ruling stated. "Napster may be held liable for contributory copyright infringement only to the extent that Napster knows of specific infringing files with copyrighted musical composition or sound recordings."

Following the ruling, top Napster executives and lawyers vowed to appeal and keep their service running.

"We will find a way to keep this community going. If we work together, we will find a way," said Shawn Fanning, the former college student who founded Napster.

However, the Napster contingent has changed its tune after a follow-up ruling by the same court early last week. The service has agreed to comply with the ruling and install a filtering system to block copyrighted material.

"Napster will follow the District Court's order," said Hank Barry, chief

Turn to NAPSTER page 2

Stonewall Center comes of age

COURTESY OF THE STONEWALL CENTER

Kate Clinton performed her raucous brand of political humor.

COURTESY OF THE STONEWALL CENTER

Harvey Fierstein burlesqued his way through songs, readings and a theatrical monologue on Saturday at the Stonewall Center's 15th Anniversary Celebration.

Fifteen years of understanding

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

A place of understanding that originally sprang from incidents of hate, the Stonewall Center, located in the Southwest living area, has played an integral role in the campus community at the University of Massachusetts since 1985.

Serving as both a save haven for gay, lesbian, bi-sexual and transgendered students all over campus, as well as an educational site for the rest of the school's population, the Center was founded after a series of homophobic incidents occurred on campus. A number of student activists demanded that the campus do something to address the problem; the administration then hired Felice Yeskel to write a report and present some ideas addressing how the campus could become friendlier to the GLBT community.

After a full semester of research, Yeskel presented her report, entitled "The Consequences of Being Gay." The report found that most of the gay populations at the University not only were very closeted about their sexual orientation, but some actually felt that they were in physical jeopardy on campus. Some reported that they would not even seek the help of a faculty member or a police officer, for fear that they might be re-victimized.

Thus, the Stonewall Center was created as a place that the GLBT community could feel safe on campus, while at the same time providing a service that could educate the heterosexual community as well. Yeskel continues to work for the University, now serving as director of the center.

"I think this campus is a more accepting place for the gay, lesbian, bisexual and now transgender people. The advocacy in Stonewall systematically asked how we can go about making campus more welcoming and supportive for everybody," Yeskel said. "If someone were harassed or discriminated against, we would want them to come and talk to us so that we could send them to someone for help."

One of the services that the Center offers to students is an extensive library housed in its headquarters and offers a collection of books, videos resource materials and journals.

"Throughout the day there are always a few people who come in to check out books or return them," Yeskel said. "And there are always students who use our library for their papers. It's quite useful."

In addition, the Center has also brought a number of figures to campus to speak about important issues surrounding the community, as a way of educating students at the University. Two years ago, the Stonewall Center brought Ellen Degeneres to campus to speak about her experiences, and just last semester, Matthew Shepard's mother Judy spoke about hate crimes at the Fine Arts Center. Also sponsored by Center was last semester's gutsy production of Corpus Christi by a group in Connecticut. The production depicted Jesus Christ as a gay man.

With so much experience under its belt, the Stonewall Center often serves as a model for other campuses looking to set up similar centers. The office receives calls from different schools looking for help and advice for their own programs.

"I got call from Ithaca College," Yeskel said. "And Williams called. More and more, our gay youth refuses to be ignored. That's a great step for a college to take."

Portions of this story appeared previously in the Collegian.

Comedians showcase two faces of gay America

By Tanya Mannes
Collegian Staff

"I want to thank all of you for coming out," crowed feminist humorist Kate Clinton, the first of numerous double entendres Saturday evening at a celebratory event at the Fine Arts Center that marked the Stonewall Center's fifteenth anniversary.

Clinton and co-headliner Harvey Fierstein bemoaned conservative politics and lampooned themselves and gay stereotypes. An award-winning playwright, actor and gay rights activist, Fierstein hammed it up with costumes and props, while Clinton, a former English teacher, performed classic stand-up.

In a more serious echo of Clinton's opening line, Fierstein, a self-described "queen," expressed dismay that many homosexuals are unwilling to "come out of the closet."

"Straight-acting seeks same," he quoted from a Personals ad, shaking his head. The flamboyant Fierstein vamped up his performance with an act he said he used to do when he was "a little bitty drag queen" 30 years ago. Donning a pink sequined turban and a knee-length pearl necklace, he lipsynced to an unidentified operatic aria.

Fierstein won two Tony Awards for his work "Torch Song Trilogy," one for his starring performance and one for Best Play. He won a third Tony for his book of the musical "La Cage Aux Folles." He has appeared in over 70 stage productions and many television talk shows and situation comedies, including "The Simpsons," "Politically Incorrect" and "The View." In 2000, Plump Records released "This is Not Going to be Pretty," a performance album that displays the multiple dimensions of his talent.

His performance spanned the comedic genres, displaying a propensity for news of the weird. In his trademark gravelly voice, he read a raunchy newspaper article about a man charged with indecency in a pumpkin patch. He also poked fun at Bridgeport, Connecticut, calling it the "asshole" of the state, with another clip about a resident there who had unwittingly maimed himself with a shotgun.

Asked after the show if he "would ever eat lunch in Bridgeport again," Fierstein replied by describing a feminist cooperative restaurant there called Bloodroot. "They're anti-servitude, so there aren't any waitresses. You go up to the chef and ask very nicely for your food," he said. "Then you set your own table. That's where I'd go."

Clinton came prepared to laugh about such stereotypes of "the surly lesbian." She anticipated that people might call her "a mean dyke" for her sarcastic monologue. "I'm a quart low on estrogen and I don't have time to flirt."

She dealt out an arsenal of one-liners spoofing George W. Bush, some of which she admitted were recycled Ronald Reagan jokes. Fierstein, on the other hand, didn't bother to update a song he had written about Nancy Reagan, called "My Forgetful Man." Wearing an American flag, he revived old images of the former First Lady as political power junkie whom the world, as well as her Alzheimer's-afflicted husband, has all but forgotten.

Bringing her monologue to contemporary politics, Clinton expressed dismay with the manner in which the presidential election was decided.

"I'm still pissed about Florida. I just don't like the way it hangs there," Clinton said, referring to the controversy over whether "hanging chads" on a ballot counted as votes.

"But for the first time, George W. Bush got 100 percent of the African-American vote [in the presidential election]," she said, "from the Supreme Court, thanks to Clarence "Uncle" Thomas."

In one of her acerbic turns of wit, Clinton referred to the three top men in American politics: "Bush, Dick and Colin. It sounds like a lower G.I. tract, doesn't it?"

Clinton's first book Don't Get Me Started was published by Ballantine in 1998. She writes monthly columns for The Progressive and The Advocate, and has appeared on numerous news and talk shows, including "The Rosie O'Donnell Show," "Nightline" and "Entertainment Tonight." In 1999, she received a lifetime achievement award from the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force.

Relative merit of jewish treats pondered in mock debate

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Staff

Jews and non-Jews alike gathered at UMass Hillel for a raucous good time at the "very nearly annual" Latke/Hamentashen Debate on Sunday, March 11 at 12:30 p.m.

The debate, sponsored by Forum (a Hillel based student led group discussing Jewish idea, issues and culture) and the Jewish Faculty and Staff group, also included a number of Jewish ethnic foods.

Complete with song sessions and noisemakers, the afternoon featured four UMass faculty and staff members debating which Jewish delicacy was superior: the latke or the hamentashen.

A latke is a pancake made from potatoes and onions that is eaten in celebration of the Jewish holiday of Chanukah. A hamentashen is a triangle-shaped pastry filled with fruit that symbolizes the hat worn by Hamen, whose attempt to murder the Jews of Persia was thwarted by the Jewish heroes Esther and Mordechai.

This year's debate featured James Young, chair of the Department of Near Eastern and Judaic Studies; Larry Goldbaum, director of the Office of Jewish Affairs; Eve Weinbaum, of the Center for Labor Studies, and David Mednicoff, a professor in the Department of Legal Studies. Rabbi Saul Perlmutter of UMass Hillel moderated the event.

Young's lecture "Hamentashen, Teletubbies, and the Jewish God of History" included a well-choreographed use of all the Teletubbies, in order to explain the connection between bagels, hamentashen (those things on the heads of Teletubbies and the crucial issue of Jewish identity. As the only American member of a committee to construct a German memorial to the Holocaust, Young hopes that this will be the first in a series of lectures concerning the Teletubbies.

Also speaking on behalf of the latke was Goldbaum of the Office of Jewish Affairs, an organization geared toward forming relationships between various groups at UMass, as well as examining and confronting any outbursts of anti-Semitism on campus. Goldbaum began his talk by reminding the audience that the hamentashen represented, "pure, unequivocal evil." Highlighting the "bold stand of the potato" in rebelling against the tyranny of the hamentashen, Goldbaum's talk was appropriately entitled, "Out of the Fire and Into the Frying Pan: Kartofel/Tribele Relations in a Post-Hamanic World."

Weinbaum, of the UMass Labor Center, made her case for the hamentashen in the context of "social justice, equality and Jewish values." Quoting feminist anarchist Emma Goldman, Weinbaum prefaced her argument by reminding the audience, "Some of my best friends love latkes."

Latkes, according to Weinbaum, are responsible for the oppression of women causing those in the audience who take Women's Studies classes to take a second look at their affinity for this greasy treat. Weinbaum reminded the audience that latke making, with its hours of grating, cutting and frying, is a wage-less chore, and questioned the non-existence of an anti-latke movement at UMass. The key to equality between women and men, Weinbaum urged, is to save the "poor, defenseless, pregnant hamentashen."

Rounding out the debate was Mednicoff, who not only supplied the audience with copies of his argument (pinpointing famous sources such as Mr. Potato Head), but also promised to use "confusing big words."

Mednicoff's talk, entitled "Let that Latké Fry??? International Law, Human Rights and the Potato Pancake," noted a shocking scholarly advancement by Hebrew University researchers: that Eve's temptation came not from the serpent, but from the hamentashen!

When the time had come to decide the winner of the debate, the audience, sweating and undoubtedly overwhelmed by all this information, was deadlocked.

Which is really better, the latke or the hamentashen? Perhaps we will never know, destined instead to contemplate the mouth-watering possibilities.

National briefs

Compiled by Catherine Turner and Melissa Hammel

Michigan- An eight year-old boy delivered his mother's baby this week. Tommy Davidson, a third grader, was told to call 911 and followed the directions of the emergency operator on a cordless phone. Tommy gathered blankets and towels from around the house in order to make sure that the baby would be warm and wouldn't fall off the bed when it came out.

His mother told Tommy to call 911 after her husband left to go get an aunt to look after Tommy so that the pregnant mother could go to the hospital. Shortly after her husband left, Kimberly Davis-Jones knew that the baby was on its way. Soon thereafter she gave birth to a baby girl.

Oklahoma- The Sultan of Brunei left the University Hospital in Oklahoma City after an undisclosed medical procedure for either him or his son. The sultan has a pacemaker attached to his heart and has had a history of heart conditions. Officials say that he was visiting the hospital's Cardiac Arrhythmia Research Institute. Oklahoma TV stations reported that the sultan went in for a treatment called "radio-frequency catheter ablation" to try and correct an irregular heartbeat.

The sultan is one of the 15 wealthiest men in the world, according to Forbes magazine. The sultan checked into the hospital on Monday and left Saturday.

Nevada- Cynthia Jay-Brennan was paralyzed after being rear-ended by a drunk driver just weeks after winning the largest slot machine jackpot in history, a record $35 million. She and her husband Terry, a former Las Vegas bartender, bought a large house and now he takes care of her since she can't do anything, including feed herself. The drunk driver, Clark Morse, had 16 other drunk driving convictions before finally being charged and convicted with manslaughter after paralyzing Cynthia and killing her sister. He faces 100 years in prison.

The Brennans face months of rehabilitation and years of difficulty. Their only comfort is knowing that they will be able to live comfortably and afford care, according to CNN.com. However, they also said that they'd give up all the money if they could go back in time to prevent the accident.

New Hampshire- The weight of up to three feet of wet, heavy snow collapsed at least four roofs in Nashua on Saturday. The first roof to go was one on a Marshalls store, followed by the collapse and explosion of a roof at the Harcross Chemical Company. The other two roofs belonged to a residential home and a junior high school.

No one was hurt, but the fire department did have to clean up a chemical spill. Fire department officials reported that each of the roofs was only about 10 years old and it was unusual that they collapsed. One fireman estimated that there was at least 40 pounds per square inch of pressure on the roofs. Warmer temperatures are expected to melt the remaining snow off of the roofs in Nashua and fire officials don't expect any more collapses.

New Jersey- At a Central Intelligence Agency conference at Princeton, the CIA released secret documents from the Cold War, showing how American analysts disagreed about how close the world came to a nuclear war during the Cuban Missile Crisis in 1962 and also how they overestimated Soviet Power.

There were 859 documents released during the conference, the topic of which was the US analysis on the Soviet Union, 1947 to 1991. Included among the documents was the conclusion that the Soviets repeatedly backed terrorist groups. The documents and more analysis will be available on the web at www.foia.ucia.gov.

Search for missing Peace Corp. volunteer continues

The Peace Corp. launched a massive search Thursday for a missing volunteer from Lowell who disappeared somewhere in South Africa and has not been seen for two weeks.

STATE BRIEFS

Greenfield attempts to save historic theater

Greenfield officials are attempting to save the historic Garden Theater from falling victim to the wrecking ball. The theater, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, has fallen under fire due to back taxes and was re-opened last July as a first-run movie house.

Courts ruled in January to give the Garden back to its owners (the Western Massachusetts Theaters Inc.) but residents expressed fear that the group would let the theater go to ruin as it did with the historic Showplace Theater.

Town officials however remain optimistic that the company will sell the theater, which includes five storefronts, a restaurant and office spaces, in much the same way that they sold the Calvin Theater in Northampton.

The company has had a long history of seized or demolished theaters with the destruction of both the Palace and the Showplace theaters in Pittsfield. The Bing theater in Springfield and the Victory Theater in Holyoke have been seized back taxes and the company still owns the Rivoli Theater in Chicopee.

Botched robbery attempt leaves five arrested

Two people were assaulted and another left pistol-whipped following a foiled laundry mat robbery that involved four Boston teens and a 27-year-old man.

The attempt was prevented when police showed up to the laundry mat in the Roxbury neighborhood and caused all five suspects to run in five different directions. Officers reported that one of the suspects pulled out a semi-automatic weapon and fired it at them; police responded by firing a round at the suspect. No one was hurt.

All five will be charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and the 14-year-old boy involved will be charged with unlawful possession of a firearm.

Leaving both Canada and the West out in the proverbial "cold" this winter, Massachusetts ski resorts have been doing booming business in light of the recent weather conditions.

"People on the slopes are smiling ear to ear," Bill Stenger, president of the Jay Peak resort in Jay, Vt. said to the Boston Globe. "I just had one gentleman, 60 years old, tell me today was the finest day of skiing in his entire life."

POLITICAL BRIEFS

Butterfly ballot cost Gore the presidency, The Palm Beach Post says

The Palm Beach Post, a Florida newspaper, concluded that the butterfly ballot was the reason that Al Gore lost the race for the U.S. presidency to George W. Bush.

After a review of the numbers, the paper found that Gore had lost 6,607 votes to voters who marked multiple names on the ballot. These numbers totaled more than 10 times the winning margin of Bush for the state and would have guaranteed Gore the state's 25 electoral votes for the presidential win.

Bush tax cut passes in the House

Amid protests from the Democratic Party, the House of Representatives passed the President's proposed tax cut of $958 billion dollars in marginal reductions on Thursday night. The bill passed by a 230-198 margin with 10 conservative Democrats and one independent joining all of the Republicans in the vote.

Although Democrats did everything possible, including procedural delays in order to prevent the vote from occurring the bill will move on to the Senate for final consideration.

Activists urge Bush to sign International Treaty

Opponents of landmines from all around the world gathered at the White House on Saturday in an attempt to urge President Bush to sign an international treaty to ban landmines.

The 1997 treaty bans the use, production, stockpiling and transfer of anti-personal landmines.

"Every country thinks that it needs an exception for its military needs," Jodi Williams the head of the International Campaign to Ban Landmines told CNN. "But 139 countries have signed this treaty, including all of our NATO allies, except for Turkey and the United States. The entire Western Hemisphere, except the United States and Cuba. Certainly the sole remaining superpower can give up this weapon if all of our NATO allies can."

Information from CNN and the Boston Globe was used in these briefs.

napster

continued from page 1

executive of Napster. "Even before the court entered the order, we began making efforts to comply with what we believed to be the dictates of the Ninth Circuit's ruling."

The ruling is the latest victory for the RIAA, which has been in a legal battle with Napster since Dec. of 1999. The recording companies have objected to their music being freely passed online in digital form between Napster members without any compensation.

"We are gratified the District Court acted so promptly in issuing its injunction requiring Napster to remove infringing works from its system," said Hilary Rosen, president of the RIAA.

Late on Friday night, however, a spokeswomen for Napster, said that the company had yet to receive the list of songs to be blocked. The company also emphasized that it was determined to stay alive despite the recent slew of court rulings against it.

"You will still be able to share music that we haven't been asked to block," the company said in a statement on its website. "The Napster file-sharing service is and will continue to be up and running."

Even if Napster does receive the list today, the service's ability to block copyrighted material has been questioned. It is unclear how Napster will go about blocking copyrighted material effectively.

"We are inserting a step between the uplink and the viewing of the index that will block out specific file names," David Boies, a Napster attorney, said. "The problem is that this will adversely affect performance of the system."

In a previous effort to avoid being shut down, Napster had offered the RIAA $1 billion to settle the case against it. The proposal was rejected ahead of the California court's injunction.

Napster is also still planning to pursue a subscription-based model for its service. Earlier this year, Napster struck a deal with German media conglomerate and one-fifth of the RIAA, Bertelsmann. Bertelsmann has since dropped its lawsuit against Napster and promised to make its full catalogue available to a membership-only service. There has been no word if, or when, this service will be launched.

Information from the BBC was used in this article.

Merits of Kansas keg bill argued

By Kevin Smith
The Collegian

(U-WIRE) -The Kansas Senate Committee on Federal and State Affairs is attempting to reduce underage drinking with Senate Bill Number 328 (SB 328).

The bill states that any container of four or more gallons containing beer must have an identification number. The bill goes on to state that the buyer of the keg must fill out a registration form. This is for the purpose of investigating violations of alcohol consumption laws.

"The goal is to reduce high-risk underage drinking and to make adults responsible and accountable when they supply minors," said Sen. Jim Barnett, R-Emporia. Barnett admits it means more paperwork and time, but he thinks it's worth the trouble.

"I think you have to weigh that with what you might prevent or save," he said. "The number one killer of young people today is alcohol and car crashes related to alcohol. It's sure worth it, although it surely won't stop it."

Sen. Mark Gilstrap, D-Kansas City, is opposed to the bill because he says he does not think it will be effective.

"I think the goal is that it'll have an impact on kids drinking," said Gilstrap. "But they couldn't prove it to me. We have had several hearings on it. I think what they (underage drinkers) will do is buy a bottle or can of beer. If they want to drink, they'll do it."

The difference between the price of a keg and seven cases of beer, the equivalent of a keg, is usually about $50. Alcohol retailers don't think this will stop underage drinking, but it puts more pressure on the retailers.

"The police and state are putting it on us," said Gay Grisham, manager of Centennial Retail Liquor in Pittsburg. "That shouldn't be our job ... I don't think it would stop it (underage drinking)." Grisham said she does not sell many kegs, so if SB 328 goes into effect, she will stop selling kegs.

Sen. Kay O'Connor, R-Olathe, is also against SB 328. She says it's a good idea, but it won't be effective.

"I don't see it as addressing the problem," O'Connor said. "To me, it has unintended consequences."

O'Connor pointed out that the identification tags could be easily taken off by the purchaser, kegs could get stolen, tailgaters could unknowingly have beer tapped from their kegs and people don't mind paying fines.

"Let's say we find this guy," O'Connor said in a reference to locating someone supplying alcohol to minors through the tag system. "So he pays a fine; that's just a price of business. That's not the intent."

By business, O'Connor said she was talking about legal drinkers charging underage drinkers for the kegs.

"I don't see the legislation attacking the problem with teeth," O'Connor said. "It'll make some people feel better."

check us out at on the world wide web at: www. dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Fri-Yi Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Marnes Diversity Editor
Adam Marrigonetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

ATTENTION:
UNDERGRAD STUDENTS

Shouldn't you be thinking about declaring a major before Pre-Registration?

Need help before taking this important step?

Call Pre-Major Advising Services at 545-2191

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Vegetarian Potato Skins 8.50 4.25
Sweet Potato Fries 8.50 3.25
Shrimp Tempura 7.25 3.69
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Controversial ad spurs free speach argument in CA

By Erin Gallagher
Daily Californian (U. California-Berkeley)

(U-WIRE) BERKELEY, Calif. – Student newspapers across the country have found themselves pushed into the national spotlight after publishing an advertisement criticizing reparations for slavery.

University of California Regent Ward Connerly slammed the Daily Californian for its "retreat from the fundamental principle of free speech." On the other hand, a University of Wisconsin student newspaper refused to apologize for publishing the inflammatory ad, prompting student protests outside its office.

In a letter to Daily Cal Editor in Chief Daniel Hernandez, Connerly said he cannot, "in good conscience" speak to reporters from the paper any longer, due to an apology issued last week for the ad.

"There is nothing in the ad that offends the First Amendment so much that the Daily Cal has to cave into a bunch of racial extortionists," he said in a letter. "By the way, I happen to agree with (David) Horowitz's position on reparations, which is shared by millions of Americans."

Horowitz, a prominent conservative writer who holds a master's degree from UC Berkeley, to promote his new book, bought the ad, titled "Ten Reasons Why Reparations for Slavery is a Bad Idea - and Racist Too."

Comparing the Daily Cal's decisions regarding Horowitz's ad to the "Red Scare," Connerly also criticized the students who called the ad racist and pulled newspapers from the racks.

Not all the members of the UC Board of Regents, however, support Connerly's position.

"First of all, (Connerly) should express his opinions, but sometimes we have to get over things," said Regent Odessa Johnson. "I don't know why he would not be responding to the newspaper."

Some newspapers, such as the Daily Cal and UC Davis' California Aggie, formally apologized for the ad's content. Others, like the University of Chicago Maroon and the Badger Herald at the University of Wisconsin, said they have no intentions of issuing an apology.

The Badger Herald ran the controversial ad, and despite student criticism, refused to apologize for the ad's message.

"We're still holding to our position of not running an apology and we don't plan to," said Julie Bosman, editor in chief of the The Badger Herald.

Madison students held a "substantial" protest outside the newspaper's office the day after the ad ran, calling the paper racist and handing out fliers condemning the editors, Bosman said.

"I consider the material in the ad to be an argument that needs to be out there," Bosman said. "People have the right to hear (it) whether they agree with (the argument) or not."

Along with the vocal protest, Bosman said the newspaper has received a flood of letters. She said the staff hoped to run all the letters in Thursday's edition, along with an editorial detailing the editorial board's decision.

"At this point people have been positive (about our position)," she said. "We've had responses coming in from all over (the) country."

In response to the Horowitz ad, leaders from the Madison Student Coalition submitted an ad to the Badger Herald that called the newspaper a "racist propaganda machine," which the paper declined to run.

The campus competitor, the Daily Cardinal, did run the response, although it was not propositioned with the original Horowitz ad.

The Daily Cal received more than 500 letters to the editor in response to both the ad itself and the formal apology issued.

Connerly, however, is the first UC official to publicly denounce the editorial board's apology.

Johnson said regents may have personal reactions to events on UC campuses, but said that regents should not let personal feelings come between them and students.

"His comments are always sought after and it would be a bad occurrence for him not to talk at all," she said. "(The public) wants to hear his side of story and he has somewhat different opinions, so his views need to be expressed."

DAN GANTEAUME/COLLEGIAN

This weekend's Walk for 5H (Health, Homes, Hygiene, Human Values and Harmony) in Amherst raised money to help people around the world attain a decent standard of living.

Daily Collegian - Ain't Free Speech Great?

Unplanned Pregnancy?
CALL ALTERNATIVES
586-1600 Northampton
774-6010 Greenfield
• Information
• Options Counseling
• Support
All services free & confidential
28 Federal St., Greenfield
1 Round House Plaza, Northampton
Free Pregnancy tests

SPRING BREAK
BREAK OUT OF THE WINTER BLAAHS.
T.J.MAXX HAS EVERYTHING YOU NEED FROM SHORTS TO TEES, SWIMWEAR TO SANDALS, SUNGLASSES TO BEACH TOWELS. ALL THE MAJOR BRANDS FOR LESS THAN YOU'D EXPECT TO PAY.
T.J.maxx YOU SHOULD GO™
Styles will vary by store.
STORE NEAREST CAMPUS: In Hadley at Campus Plaza, Route 116 and Route 9

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Breaking up [Isn't] Easy to Do

Fewer people are getting married and divorce rates are soaring in America. Alarmed by the statistics, politicians in nearly half of the states have taken steps toward legislating a "new" form of marriage that hearkens back to the early part of the century. In the eyes of the laws, so-called "covenant marriage" tightens the bonds between a man and woman, making it more difficult to end a matrimonial union.

A typical covenant marriage requires that a man and woman agree not to seek a divorce unless something extreme happens, such as adultery or abandonment, physical or sexual abuse. This hard-core kind of union, reminiscent of fundamentalist Christian beliefs, is a reaction to the "no-fault divorce laws" that were enacted to lessen the financial and emotional trauma of a courtroom divorce for couples that mutually agreed to separate.

Louisiana and Arizona already permit covenant marriages, and legislation is being considered in 20 more states. In addition, several states have enacted statutes mandating such things as counseling or a waiting period before the parties can dissolve a marriage.

The movement toward making it more difficult to divorce is misguided reaction to concerns about the divorce rate. One of the most glaring problems is the issue of domestic abuse. Will stricter marriage laws induce already vulnerable women to stay in relationships that threaten their mental or physical health?

Years of campaigns have finally spawned a greater understanding of domestic abuse, and the emotional strain of leaving such a relationship. If a woman is the victim of abuse, no-fault divorce laws can prove a blessing because they do not require the woman to "prove" her husband's fault in court – a public revelation of personal trauma that some women would rather avoid at all costs, even if it means staying with an abusive partner. In addition, a no-fault divorce can be more financially feasible for couples that cannot afford a lawyer.

Because a woman is less likely to have control of the family finances than her husband, a no-fault divorce may be her only option if, as often happens in abusive relationships, he refuses her access to the family funds. If she were in a covenant marriage and the victim of domestic abuse, she would be forced to prove it in court – possibly without a lawyer – and risk losing the legal battle.

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) opposes covenant marriage because it violates the spirit of the constitutional separation of church and state.

The Collegian believes that the appropriate role of government is not to police unions between consenting adults, but instead to respect the decisions of those adults. No one goes into marriage expecting to divorce; theoretically, anyone willing to marry would agree to a covenant marriage. It is precisely for unpredictable human situations, such as domestic abuse, that a civil union must remain a contract that can be nullified.

Information from The Boston Globe was used in this article.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the editorial board.

Trigger doesn't pull itself

KEN CAMPBELL

I know that by the time you read this, you will be completely sick of hearing about Charles Williams and his (alleged) shooting spree, but please hear me out. The reason I am writing this, and by writing this is because I guarantee you that you have heard at least one person, on television, in a newspaper or in a class, say that if guns were banned, this wouldn't have happened.

Bull.

Plain and simple, people have been killing people since time immemorial. Sure, guns make it a Hell of a lot easier. I'm not going to lie to you and say that a lot of people don't die from gunshot wounds. But I'm pretty sure there was somebody on the other end pulling the trigger. The media makes me feel like I have to defend my rights as a gun owner whenever something like this happens.

Don't get me wrong; I feel bad for the wounded and the families of the dead. Being shot at in a place where you are supposed to feel safe is a complete and total kick in the psyche. These kids are going to need a lot of love and understanding through the next few years, and I hope every one of them makes it through these dark times okay.

But leave me and my friends alone. I am a gun owner. I own several firearms, all of which are legal. Per state law, they are locked away at home back east. I have a Firearms Identification Card, and have had one since I was 15 or so. I started shooting at the age of eight, and even shot competitively for a time. My point is that ever since I could hold a gun, I was taught to respect that gun. I learned safety procedures before I ever pulled a trigger.

The media makes me feel I have to defend my rights as a gun owner.

And so does every other responsible gun owner. Our state has very strict gun laws. In fact, they've banned my Civil War-era weapons a couple of times by mistake (always quickly correcting themselves) because they technically fall under the category of military arms and antiques. Anyway, in order to get a license to possess a firearm (other than black powder "antiques") you have to pass a safety course and a background check. You get fingerprinted and photographed like a criminal. It is not a pleasant experience.

And that's just for rifles and shotguns. You need to be 21 years old and possess not only an FID card but also a pistol permit to buy a handgun.

So, if you know somebody who owns a legal gun, the chances are good that this person will not be showing up with a copy of the Turner Diaries in one hand and a pistol in the other to your final exam in calculus, no matter how stressful it is. The state has deemed them responsible gun owners by granting them a license.

Things like Santee and Columbine cannot be blamed on the guns; they have to be blamed on the individuals who commit the crimes. These aren't good sweet little children who found daddy's Smith & Wesson one day (which should be locked up) and suddenly became bloodthirsty killers. These are kids who have been made killers through years of abuse at the hands of their classmates. Something happened to them that forced some kind of split with the real world. Kids like Kleibold, Harris and Williams (supposedly) aren't good people. Anybody who kills indiscriminately, who shoots innocents in the back, anyone who brings that kind of terror to a place where it doesn't belong is not a good child. They planned their crimes and executed them (again, allegedly) with precision. They aren't children. They aren't adults. They are monsters (if proven guilty in a court of law).

Bottom line: this would have happened no matter what. Williams (supposedly) and his ilk are sick people, and sick people do sick things. Don't blame me, or any other law abiding gun owner for their crimes. We didn't pull the trigger.

Ken Campbell is a Collegian staff member.

Write for Ed/Op!

The Collegian is looking for students who are interested in writing editorials and columns for the Ed/Op page. Stop by the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement and pick up an application.

Class of their own

LAURA SICILIANO

Have you ever noticed that in every class you take, there are certain people who seem to just be naturally annoying? If you talk to your friends about them, most likely your friends will say that they have someone just as annoying in their own class. I think there might be an Annoying Club R.S.O. that meets secretly in Morrill (They would have to meet there because it is the most annoying building on campus...Even the directory signs in Morrill admit that the building makes no sense! Note to administration: Numbers should not be assigned randomly, they are meant to have some sense of order). Anyway, the Annoying Club must assign different roles to each member in a class. "OK John, you be the loud one; Mary, you be the late one; Todd, you be the smelly one," (well maybe not that one, but you get my point). I think I have figured out the roles that the annoying people take, so I have come up with a brief description of each character.

The Running-Dialogue-Throughout-Class-Person – Most classes have this one. This person usually sits in the front row, but not always. They ask a lot of questions, which is fine (I also have been known to ask a ton of questions). However, often they won't ask questions, they will just talk. They will talk without raising their hand, they will laugh at all the jokes the professor makes, and they speak without permission or a point. Often this person even starts to annoy the professor, because they never shut up. Sometimes they will even crack their own jokes and then laugh at them.

The Tape Recorder Person – I think it is great if people have the time and energy to tape-record lectures and then copy the notes down later. I know that I certainly don't have the time, but I have nothing against somebody who does - unless they are annoying about it. I had a class last semester with a tape recorder person who plopped down in the front row, taped the lectures and didn't take any notes. What did this mean? It meant that this person had nothing to do with their hands, so they fidgeted the entire time. They were constantly playing with the tape player, turning it on and off whenever the professor took a second to breathe, checking the batteries...it was really distracting. One time they even dropped it and it made a big noise as it fell off the lecture table. As Mother always said, keep your hands to yourself. That means don't be playing with battery-operated equipment during class.

The Late Person- Every class has one of these people. Most of us run late from time to time, however, there are a few people in every class who are always late. It cracked me up when the late girl in my psychology class last semester showed up 15 minutes late for every lecture, but she always had a coffee from Dunkin' Donuts in her hand. Here's a hint: You won't be late if you don't stop for coffee! I have a class in Thompson this semester. There is a sign on the door that says, "If you are late for class, come in through the back." Nevertheless, despite the sign, people are constantly coming in late and walking right across the stage, sometimes in front of the professor as he lectures. Not only is it distracting to everyone in the class, but it is incredibly rude to the professor. The other day a kid showed up at 8:35 in my 8:00 class. Glad to see he could make it for the last 15 minutes of class. What is the point of even coming if you are that late? Professors usually say the important announcements at the beginning of class anyway. It was as if the kid just wanted to make an appearance in class.

The Lots of Stuff Person – We have all seen one of these. This is the person who apparently does not have a home so they need to carry all of the worldly possessions to class with them every day. I have heard a story about one girl who didn't carry a backpack – instead she pulled her books around in one of those pieces of luggage with a handle and wheels. I saw her one time and thought she was heading off on a trip. No, apparently she was just heading off to Econ 103. Most classes don't require you to bring your textbook to class, so I don't know where all of the stuff is coming from. Some of these people must travel with a change of clothes in case they get caught in a storm or something. I guess, however, that if you are taking that much stuff with you to class, you need a pull bag, because otherwise you would throw your back out.

I am sure that there are other characters that have made appearances in your classes. This is just a short list of the many possibilities. I have been known to be Classtime is Naptime Person, and have also met Classtime is Snacktime kid. If you are one of these people, I hope that you are not offended. I guess I am only noticing what you are doing because I am not paying attention in class enough. So, that must make me the distracted person in class, another character who appears many classes. The Annoying Club must have a lot of members!

Laura Siciliano is a Collegian Columnist.

LETS TAKE A PEEK INSIDE: BUDGET
WE'VE GOT SURPLUSES AS FAR AS THE EYE CAN SEE.
AND BIG INCREASES IN EDUCATION, DEFENSE, HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT.
AN OVERHAUL OF SOCIAL SECURITY AND A MASSIVE TAX CUT!
AND THERE'S A BIG DEBT IN HERE.
OH, WELL, THAT'LL WORK ITSELF OUT.
IT'S MORNING IN AMERICA!

3/1

Degree audit

MELODY ZAGANI

Why are you here? When people ask me what my major is and I tell them journalism, I always finish it off by saying, "Of course that means I'll be totally unemployable and should probably start checking on trash day for the used refrigerator box that will one day be my home." But I'm going to stop saying that because I have decided that I don't want my major to be the means to an end.

In fact, the education that we receive here at UMass is just a phase. I think that we're making an awful mistake assuming that what we do here (academically) is going to just make us a salary. We're far too caught up in thinking that everything we do in school (assignments, papers, research and books we read) is dispensable information that we process out at the end of each semester. Granted, those first few classes, the ones that you drag yourself to so that you can sit with 400 other kids that are just about as interested in Greek Classics as you, are torturous. As soon as you finish filling in the last of the bubbles that useless stuff you memorized the night before releases itself from your brain and will never bother you again. But every book you read (assuming you read) and everything you hear in class has got to become a part of your life's education.

You are not just paying for a piece of paper that you worked four years to get. If you're under the impression that this paper will help you to get a job, you're probably right. It's a job where you sit in an office for eight hours a day while some prick tells you what to do and how to do it. Is that an existence? Over winter break I interned at a publishing company in Boston. It was a nice enough company: the office was spacious, they would always give me free food and coffee and sometimes they'd even ask my opinion because I am young and "hip" and "with it" (I had them all fooled). Free caffeine and all, I hated going in there everyday. They had me fact-check stories for their magazines and they would give me little errands to do. I had my own cubicle. My own little three-walled paradise complete with computer, chair and coffee mug. Suddenly I began to laugh at Dilbert and started using phrases I didn't understand like "list management" and "pub. deadlines." On my way home, at the end of the day I was too tired to think. The office's fluorescent lights had sucked out my soul and my energy. I even developed road rage and acted rude to tollbooth collectors, which lead me to abuse the fast lane. The whole time I was being exploited, they weren't paying me, but they gave me food and a cubicle.

So I was basically a hamster, not even a cute fluffy teddy bear one, but a crazy-eyed, short-haired one with road rage and a nasty fast lane abusing habit. However, this experience leads me to re-examine the manner in which we learn. I realized that I never want a 9-5 job where I sit and become a vegetable. I never want a coffee cup or an invitation to attend a board meeting. This all sounds incredibly idealistic, I know. I've stopped going through the motions of an education. Read book, write paper, get grade, get credit, summer, take class, take test, graduate, job. There's no need for a cycle like this. Why do we get jobs? To have money. What does money get you? Money gets you stuff. I have a lot of stuff (don't get me wrong; I like to buy things), but at the end its just stuff, like Lester Burnham said. Do we have to make our life's aim a Palm Pilot and a 57-inch HDTV? We have become a society of shallow, shallow people, a whole population of puddles. Chances are that the majors we graduate with are far removed from the occupations we eventually get. My dad graduated with a degree in accounting. He is a Boilermaker. No, not the drink. (Is it always liquor to you?) He builds stuff, something like that. He gets to work outside he doesn't have to sit at a desk or have an email account or keep track of business lunch dates. I suppose that all the aforementioned is glamorous on the surface. But try not to make money the goal at every turn. Not every handout read is the means to a grade. Think of everything you do academically as an experience from which you learn and cultivate yourself as a person. So next time you do something for a professor, stop and do it for yourself instead. And stop worrying about whether you're going to get a job or not after graduation. The economy is on a downward spiral anyway and none of us will be employed. My advice is to drop a few classes so that you have to stay even longer. Unless, of course, you're in a rush to get to your cubicle.

Melody Zagani is a Collegian Columnist.

LIFE IN HELL
©2001 BY MATT GROENING
I LOVE YOU.
UNDERNEATH THE LOVE, I SENSE BITTERNESS.
UNDERNEATH THE BITTERNESS, I SENSE IRRITATION.
UNDERNEATH THE IRRITATION, I SENSE EXASPERATION.
UNDERNEATH THE EXASPERATION, I SENSE ANIMOSITY.
UNDERNEATH THE ANIMOSITY, I SENSE HOSTILITY.
UNDERNEATH THE HOSTILITY, I SENSE RAGE.
GOD, HOW I HATE YOU.
UNDERNEATH THE HATE, I SENSE LOVE.

Arts Editor •
David Toupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com

Causey is 'Psyched Out and Furious'

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

THE CAUSEY WAY
Causey vs. Everything
Alternative Tentacles

A Hellacopters song comes to mind while listening to The Causey Way called "Psyched Out and Furious." Of course, like all things related to The Causey Way, it's not quite as it seems. "Psyched Out" would be closer to 'crazy' for this band, whose mix of synth, punk and pop sounds, completed by the wobbly, high-pitched shriek of their vocalist makes for one of the most unique sounds in some time. And "furious" would be closer to 'passionate' than angry, as singer "Causey" swears softly or belts loudly with stark honesty about subjects ranging from geology to things I can't understand because they are spoken in Spanish.

The Causey Way collective is, like much of the band, shrouded in mystery, and of unknown membership. Causey St. Causey (now just Causey), apparently the singer, is joined again by female backing vocalists The Button and The Truth, as he has been on previous releases, and also now by returning member Red Causey. The humorous (or dead serious, depending on your viewpoint) religious aspect that was present on the EPs Testimony and WWCD is revisited on Causey vs. Everything, the group's second full-length release.

Should you convert to The Causey Way, which is recommended, you'll be privy to some of the most original sounds and pop savvy under the radar. The songs usually get into a groove and roll with it without much variation, but never overlong, as most tracks fall under three minutes. Every track is its own little entity, and a carefully produced and lovable one at that, but that's part of the problem in this album, the lack of continuity. Truth be told, the EPs didn't have a strong flow either, but they were so short and perfect that it was easily forgiven. At thirteen (however short) tracks, Causey vs. Everything tends to drag a little here and there, and while the highlights are easy to pick out, as a whole it's a little broken. "Geo Logical Lust," featured on the essential Alternative Tentacles sampler The Ecstasy of the Agony, is the best track, a blissful macrocosm of all that makes The Causey Way so great.

Regardless of full-length woes, The Causey Way is a group that should be watched with a keen eye by the adventurous. And for more groups bursting with this much creativity and enthusiasm, Causey himself said it best: "the time is now."

COURTESY THECAUSEYWAY.COM

The Causey Way's latest testimony Causey vs. Everything is sure to convert the heathens and please the faithful.

Rarewerks redezvous featuring Jaxx and Slim

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Rarewerks
Astralwerks

When a compilation arrives at one's door, the question must be asked: is it a cash run or a legitimate attempt at an enjoyable, cohesive whole? True, the compilation doesn't necessarily have to be cohesive; not only is achieving flow from disparate artists a Herculean task, but a scattershot collection of great songs is no less valuable. In any event, the comp has to have something, and does Rarewerks stand up to the test?

Almost. The cohesion thing is out the window, since there isn't a noticeable flow here, unless you think all electronic music sounds the same, which would label you a novice and you would be advised not to start here on your quest for electronic soundhunting. So we're left with hopefully a collection of strong songs that stand on their own, and since Astralwerks has a stellar lineup of artists who are contributing unreleased tracks and B-sides, the chances are good. Unfortunately, the word "remix" rears its ugly head for six of the disc's eleven tracks, meaning we're left with five truly original works.

Fatboy Slim's "How Can You Hear Us?" gets us off to a promising start. In fact, Slim's latest album, Halfway Between the Gutter and the Stars, could have used more of this, as I would say this track, recorded (unsurprisingly) during the You've Come a Long Way, Baby sessions, is just as good as the best material on the new record. It has a strong hook and is not afraid to use it. Other material just floats by, though. Groove Armada and Air's trademark chill sounds are recognizable, but not used to particularly memorable effect. Cassius sounds as funky as ever, but doesn't do much to justify their eight-minute remix of "Foxxy." Basement Jaxx finds room to shine, however, with a brilliantly two-faced remix of "Bingo Bango" that is both tranquilized when compared to the original and quietly aggressive. In the end, Rarewerks is for the die-hards only. A nice appetizer to hold one over until the upcoming full albums, but I'll wait for the main course. –Michael Delano

Slanted but not quite Enchanted: Pavement's Malkmus picks up the pieces with predictably quirky first solo release

By Ping Chu
Collegian Staff

STEPHEN MALKMUS
Stephen Malkmus
Matador

When Pavement broke up last year amid much controversy, droves of bespectacled indie rock devouts throughout the world grieved.

Well, not exactly.

Pavement's breakup was probably one of the most anticlimactic events in Rock 'n Roll for 2000, the last in a line of other unceremonious departures (the Smashing Pumpkins and The Cure being the others).

Terror Twilight, the band's final LP release, was solid in every way but woefully uninspired compared to earlier Pavement releases and the band was clearly showing signs of fatigue.

So it is on this note that the Stephen Malkmus self-titled album is released. Malkmus, the quirky songsmith and lyricist that fronted Pavement for over a decade, has relocated to Portland, OR, got himself a new band (jokingly dubbed "The Jicks") and is doing his own thing for the first time since Pavement's demise.

And his new album sounds like, well, a solid but uninspired Pavement album. This is not to say that the album is in any way bad, in fact it is really quite listenable, but it is superceded by the long shadow that Pavement has cast. Sure he plays around with some new ideas, and sure there are a few great songs, but there is just not enough new going on here to warrant an entire long-player worth of material.

Songs like Jenny and The Ess-Dog really show off Malkmus' ability as a lyricist, telling the story of Jenny, a 17-year old pseudo hippie girl and her 31-year old beau, the Ess-Dog, who plays in a 60's cover band, making it prime mix tape material.

Jo Jo's Jacket playfully pokes fun at the likes of Yul Brynner and his shaved head and a close listen to Troubbble reveals the ingenious implementation of a children's toy piano.

Still present are Malkmus' unique ability to change context mid-song and make it sound (almost) graceful. Its moments such as these that make this album a fun little romp through 12 tracks.

Not to mention, Malkmus' new band composed of friends John Moen, and Joanna Bolme (whose previous work can be heard on earlier Minders records). Both work very well with Malkmus in making a more perfect Pavement. The songs are cleaner are more controlled and show a certain maturity that Pavement never possessed.

But it is in many ways the high polish and production of this album is its Achilles Heal. The songs themselves sound like they could have been unreleased tracks from Terror Twilight and Brighten The Corners' sessions, both of which were terrific traipsings through Malkmus' indie folk/pop imagination, but neither of which are standout among the Pavement discography.

In many ways, Malkmus should have taken a page out of the J. Mascis story on how to make a solo album. The Malkmus album seems premature in comparison to the Mascis record, which pulls out all the stops from the heyday of Dinosaur Jr.

Much of the loyalty that Pavement manage to garner during their 10 years of existence was because of their low-fidelity ethics, slacker attitude, and fragile yet intelligent songs which teetered on the edge of train wreck genius. The lyrics are still there, but the charm seems vaguely distant, a sad reminder of the Slanted and Enchanted days.

So pick up this album if you need a Pavement fix, but if you are looking into taking your first foray into the realm of the indie rock world, earlier Pavement releases, most notably Slanted and Enchanted, are probably a better bet. The songs of this album are fun, for sure, but this latest Malkmus release does little to prove that he is much more than a one trick pony.

At least that trick is a good one.

COURTESY ARTISTDIRECT.COM

Stephen Malkmus' post-Pavement debut places him on shaky, but familiar, territory.

Curves for Sale: Style File takes on body image

Style File
WITH SHAUNA BILLINGS

I'm taking a break from all my usual "Style File shenanigans" (as someone once dubbed my sometimes unconventional reporting methods – i.e. the water bra tests) to focus on a very serious issue – weight and body image. The fashion industry has huge power over women and men to make them see models as "perfection." This leads to poor body image. According to some pamphlets I got from EDAP (Eating Disorders Awareness and Prevention, Inc.), 80 percent of healthy-weight 17-year-old girls see themselves as fat and 50 percent of girls have tried dieting by the age of eight. We live in one of the richest nations in the world, yet the citizens in this country, young and old alike, are starving themselves to get a body that is unattainable for 90 percent of the population.

I've never had an eating disorder, and I don't diet because I don't think I could go a week without a frappe and some corn chips. However, I feel the guilt of the fashion industry, because I used to be one of that 10 percent and I took advantage of the opportunities it afforded me, working as a model. When I was in high school, I had a huge growth spurt and reached my current height of six-foot-one. When I shot up such an insane distance, it took the rest of my body quite awhile to catch up. So I was a knobby-knee, skinny beanpole. Of course, these are the magic words to the waifish-sixteen-year-old obsessed modeling world. So, I started modeling in Boston – I was in runway shows and worked with a top fashion photographer.

The summer before my senior year, I went to New York City, where I forced myself to make the biggest decision of my life. That trip, I forced myself to decide whether I wanted to attend college, or whether I wanted to pursue a modeling career. I stayed in NYC for three days, and visited two colleges – NYU and Columbia, and I went on interviews at three modeling agencies – Ford, Elite and Wilhelmina. I expected to be turned away from all three, as they were three of the top four agencies in the world.

I visited Elite first, and almost got sick from nervousness. I walked into the agency dressed in a flowered sundress and leather sandals, hair curling from the intense August humidity. And all around me were 20 of the most beautiful girls I've ever seen in my life. I wanted to run away (as I'm apt to do), but I had dragged my parents on a four-hour train ride to get to NYC, and there was no backing out. A representative called each girl up to the front of the room by name, and looked them over and flipped through their photographs. Picture if you will an old western movie, with a cowboy checking out the teeth on his horse, add a lot of people dressed in Gucci and black, and you'll basically have an agency go-see. "Too tall," said the woman. "Thank you very much for coming." There's nothing like having someone stomp on your heart to improve a humid summer day in the city, huh?

Ford had even more girls, and I had to wait almost an hour before I was seen. But, I wasn't thin enough. Lose ten pounds, and come back and see us. Ummm, no. I don't think it would have been humanly possible for me to lose any weight at that point in my life. I was twenty pounds lighter than my present self, and I wouldn't ever want to be that thin again.

Completely discouraged with myself, I almost skipped my third and final interview at Wilhelmina. The girls around me were so Euro and sophisticated, I felt like a complete bumpkin in my sundress. At Wilhelmina they looked at each girl's book of photos and didn't meet with anyone face to face. One by one, names were called, books were returned, and each girl exited. I sat alone. I thought maybe they forgot about me, then a woman came out and had me walk and spin, checked my measurements, and gave me all this information and contacts. They liked me. They wanted me.

I freaked out. I pictured myself traveling through Europe doing the spring and fall shows, and then I realized what I would have to give up. I'd never see my family. I would be alone in foreign countries. I'd miss college. I'd never see my friends. And I would spend the rest of my youth having people criticize every aspect of me. Modeling isn't getting all made up, sashaying down a runway and then hitting some parties. People poke at your thighs, telling you to lose another inch or two. The makeup people and photographer will talk about how big your nose is, and how can we fix it right in front of you. You aren't a person to them. You're an object. You're a mannequin who's the right size to wear any ensemble they dredge up. It's a hard and demeaning life.

I never called back. The trip back home, I flipped back and forth between the packed flyer for Wilhelmina and the NYU brochure. I stopped modeling when I got back home. I've done a little here and there since, and sometimes I really regret that I didn't just go for it especially when I was scrubbing dishes to pay for school. But I know I would have been unhappy, because no one would have stopped in all the makeup and fittings to ask me what I thought about the latest medical advancements or the new bill that was being argued in Washington.

And while I occasionally wonder what I missed out on, what I really regret is that I was part of an industry that makes Americans feel bad about themselves. The average fashion model is 23 percent thinner than the average American woman and is 5" taller and 30 pounds lighter. That's not right. We live in a nation that dubs itself the melting pot. We have citizens of every ethnicity, height, weight, hair color and skin color. Yet almost every fashion model is tall, thin, and white. The fashion industry needs to wake up and see the beauty that is in every one. But people need to wake up and see the beauty in themselves before that is ever going to happen.

Don't let the industry win. Don't let them dictate how you should look. Take pride in your appearance, and work out for your health. But life is too short to worry about how you're going to look in your bikini. Someone who is really enjoying life and is comfortable in their skin will always look better than some pale stick thin supermodel who can't even lift up her can of caffeine free, sugar free, calorie free can of Diet Coke. Don't live your life living up to someone else's idea of beauty, be yourself and be happy because to quote the Get Cute Dolls, "What you feel is what you get." And what you are is beautiful.

Shauna Billings is a Collegian columnist.

Pitt, Roberts and Gandolfini spice up The Mexican

Stellar cast makes up for winding plot

By Ryan Bamberis
Collegian Staff

THE MEXICAN
Directed by Gore Verbinski
With Brad Pitt, Julia Roberts and James Gandolfini
Playing at Cinemark Theaters

I'm just here to regulate the funkiness," said James Gandolfini's character, Leroy, in Gore Verbinski's The Mexican. If you've ever seen Gandolfini as Tony Soprano, you'll know how incredibly funny the visual picture of him regulating the funkiness actually is.

The Mexican tells the story of Jerry Welbach (Brad Pitt), a chico California native who haphazardly stumbles his way into a life of organized crime. Julia Roberts plays Samantha, his constantly antagonizing girlfriend, who spends most of her time trying to drag him out of that nasty life.

The Mexican does a very good job avoiding the obvious cliché it could so easily become. You've got Brad Pitt, Julia Roberts and a whole bunch of gangsters. Any talent less hack of a writer would have Roberts get kidnapped by the gangsters in the first half of the film, and spend the second half making Brad Pitt run around looking for her. Writer J.H. Wyman does not do that at all (though he does spend much of the beginning of the film convincing you that he is going to). Jerry is sent on a mission to Mexico to bring back a mysterious and expensive antique pistol called "The Mexican" that everyone seems to want to get his or her hands on. While Jerry is away, Samantha is kidnapped by an overly aggressive but calmly presentable Leroy, played by James Gandolfini.

With the stage set for a boring, "gotta' save the girl" action flick, the plot takes interesting twists and turns. The most surprising twist being that there is almost no indication that Roberts and Pitt care what the other is doing. They spend almost no time together on screen for most of the film, and while Pitt tramples around Mexico fighting off criminals, Roberts travels through the Las Vegas with Gandolfini, having deeply meaningful conversations about each other's love lives. The interactions between Roberts and Gandolfini come off brilliantly. Again, an obvious cliché is avoided here, because there is no sexual tension between the kidnapper and the hostage. Especially after Gandolfini drops a bombshell on Roberts about his sexuality.

COURTESY DREAMWORKS PICTURES
Brad Pitt gets set to fight an entire group of thugs. Where else have we seen this before?

The other half of the plot is filled with an abundance of predictability. Making Brad Pitt's character a bumbling idiot is a very big mistake. Pitt was so terrific in Seven, Fight Club and Snatch as a hard-hitting tough guy. There is no reason why he should not be playing the same character in this film. His constant stupidity gets extremely annoying. However, somewhere in the middle of production, the filmmakers decided to stop making Pitt so stupid, and allow him to play the typecast character that has earned him acclaim in the past. When this happens, the film becomes much more enjoyable. Watching him stumble around makes the first half of the film exceedingly dreadful to suffer through.

The actor casting for The Mexican shifts from extremely poor to exceptionally well. If the idea was for Jerry to be an imbecile the whole time, then Brad Pitt was an awful choice for a lead actor. Of all the things Pitt has been accused of in the past, physical comedic genius is not one of them. There are other actors in the film that make it a wonder what on earth the casting director was thinking. The most notable instance is David Krumholtz's character, Beck. Whoever decided to pick Krumholtz (a white American with a heavy New York accent) to pass as a Mexican is a moron. Plain and simple.

On the other hand, some characters are luminously cast. James Gandolfini is a perfect example. He was obviously brought onto the set and told to be Tony Soprano. They didn't mess around with his acting style or tell him to do something he doesn't have the ability to pull off. He just acts like the character we expect out of him. Fans of "The Sopranos" will be more than happy with his transition back into film. He certainly steals the bulk of the spotlight. He takes a role of a kidnapper, which can be ruined so easily by an overkill of formulaic behaviors, and gives it his own personal charm. The failing comedic relief attempted by Pitt's character is saved by Gandolfini's sarcastic wit and humor. The cameo actor who it picked to play Margolis (the head boss of Pitt's mob) is also a wonderful treat and an excellent choice.

The Mexican's plot drags on quite considerably. After about the third or fourth twist, it becomes more annoying than enjoyable, and it begins to feel that its ultimate goal is to produce a cheap thrill. The plot twists are necessary, but could easily be cut in half; the film is simply way too long.

Most people will see this movie because of the enormous draw of its two lead actors. Pitt and Roberts apparently took pay cuts just to be in a film together. After a second week topping the box office, the film's cost of $40 million seems like it will be met without a problem. It does seem that fans of average romantic comedies with a heavy concentration of interaction between the two lead characters will be slightly disappointed. The film spends so much time trying to avoid a cliché that when it tries to return to that basic romantic plot at the end, viewers really don't want it anymore.

As an action film, it will certainly disappoint as well. James Gandolfini is by far the most forcefully violent actor in the film, and works as a murderous hit man, but Brad Pitt, Julia Roberts and the remaining cast of unknowns seems to lack the experience to pull of the roles of action heroes and villains. Die Hard this film is not. Gore Verbinski, whose only other accomplishment to date has been the children's film Mouse Hunt, does a mediocre job at directing. Some of the scenes are poorly shot, most notably the opening shot of traffic light, which he tries to use as a subplot throughout the film.

In a way that is difficult to explain, The Mexican is very disappointing at everything one would expect from it, but is a very good film. Despite some pretty hefty flaws, it entertains on a pretty solid basis. Very established actors who can certainly make up for whatever else is going wrong play the three main roles. Though an Oscar winner it is not, The Mexican is definitely worth a watch.

COURTESY DREAMWORKS PICTURES
James Gandolfini (kidnapper) and Julia Roberts (kidnapee) wander through a Las Vegas airport in The Mexican.

Read Arts!
Ruth and Christina do!

getinvolved!

3 in 5
Americans will be affected by an alcohol-related crash in their lifetime.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving and a coalition of UMass students invite all interested students to attend an informational meeting for the formation of the UMass chapter of MADD.

Tuesday, March 13, 2000
7:00 pm
Campus Center
Room 811-15

Our returning staff know what a WILD experience camp can be!
Come check us out this summer work at CAMP!

Crossroads for Kids

Crossroads for Kids runs 3 great camps which serve AT-RISK YOUTH. These kids need people like you to care about their lives!

Opportunities are available for:
Cabin Counselors, Waterfront Staff, Program Specialists, Food Service Personnel, Nurses, Maintenance Staff, Housekeeping, and Office Managers

We will be at UMass Amherst on Wednesday, March 14 from 9-4!!
If this sounds like the type of summer you'd like,

162 Rome Street, Danbury, MA 07532
(781) 449-4910 or (800) 347-7264
w w w . c r o s s r o a d s f o r k i d s . o r g
email: summer@crossroadsforkids.org

Disoriented?
Don't know where you are going in life?

WE CAN HELP

Contact us for more information on job and scholarship opportunities
Captain Chris Lane
UMASS Air Force ROTC
(413) 545-2437 afrotc@acad.umass.edu

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON

Summer
UMass Boston

- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 29, July 2, and July 16
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- On-line, web-based courses
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost

UMASS BOSTON
To learn more, visit www.conted.umb.edu or call 617.287.6000
A great university in a great city

■ hoops

continued from page 10

loved it."

When Crooks took a pass from Winston Smith and laid it in with 9:04 remaining, UMass took a 28-12 lead and looked primed to secure a comfortable halftime advantage. Over the next nine minutes, though, the Hawks just exploded, going on a 25-4 run to take a 37-32 lead at the break.

St. Joe's guard Marvin O'Connor was the main culprit for this run, getting a steal and taking it coast-to-coast for a dunk to close the gap to four with 8:08 left in the frame. He then went ballistic over the final minute and a half, drilling three-straight bombs from international waters, all with a hand in his face, and then capping it off with another steal and a fast break layup.

Watching St. Joseph's score at will evoked some painful memories for the Maroon and White of the last time these two teams met, in which it blew a 19-point lead to the Hawks and ended up dropping the game by 15.

This time, however, the Minutemen came out with a vengeance, and made sure that history did not repeat itself.

"We just calmed down," Mack said. "Everyone was getting excited and we just wanted to calm down and stay patient. The first time they played us they hit us with a knock out blow and we didn't get back up. This time we got hit, but got back up and delivered some blows ourselves."

"We knew we had to come out and play in the second half," Crooks added. "And that is what we did. We played two halves instead of one."

At the start of the second half, UMass wasted no time getting back on track, as a Rhymer jump hook and a Mack three tied knotted the score at 37.

The next five minutes saw the lead constantly switch between the two clubs, and neither team was able to grab more than a three-point advantage.

As the half wore on, both teams became increasingly physical, and the second frame saw the referees whistle four technical fouls. The score continued to remain tight, though, until an O'Connor three put his team up 65-61 and seemed to give St. Joseph's the momentum with 4:42 left.

An 8-0 Massachusetts run quickly erased any thoughts of St. Joe's pulling away, however, and after three consecutive Hawk free throws, the Minutemen still led by one. Mack then put his team up 71-68 with a shot over 7-foot-1 St. Joseph's center Alexandre Sazonov, and that set the scene for the most bizarre play of the game with around 30 seconds still on the clock.

DePina had just missed a layup with the shot clock winding down, and a Rhymer follow-up dunk attempt also proved no good. The ball then bounced into the hands of UMass forward Jackie Rogers, who instead of pulling it out, inexplicably threw up a wild hook shot that somehow found nothing but net. From that point on, the only thing left to be determined was the score, and the Maroon and White took the five-point victory.

"We scrapped for every loose ball and every rebound," Flint said. "We never gave up and were patient out there. We never lost our cool."

Mack was once again the main offensive threat for the Minutemen throughout the contest. The senior totaled 27 points on 10-for-16 shooting, a day after lighting up the Bonnies for 29 points on 9-for-13 shooting. Although he only totaled 12 against Temple, he still managed to average almost 23 points for the entire tournament, and was awarded a position on the All-tournament team as a result.

Rhymer was also a force against St. Joe's, totaling 15 points and hauling down 13 boards. The St. Thomas native controlled the paint throughout the tournament, and was also named to the All-tournament team.

"We didn't know if they could get a secondary scorer," St. Joe's coach Phil Martelli said. "Nine combined field goals from Rogers and Rhymer was even more important than what Mack did."

Massachusetts ends the year with a 15-15 (13-6 A-10) record, and will now wait to see if it gains a birth to the NIT.

■ A10

continued from page 10

including a 'ball zone,' a 'severance and craft zone' and a standard box-and-one. Such defensive focus is reminiscent of the old 'Jordan rules' defense that Detroit threw at Chicago in the early 90's. So who does that make Jonathan DePina, who plundered Chaney's sets for 14 points? B.J. Armstrong or John Paxson? How about Steve Kerr? Remember Craig Hodges?

Roundball Pedigrees

One Interesting phenomenon discovered while thumbing through the A-10 media guide – despite coaching over 1,800 games at various levels, Speedy Morris apparently never played college basketball. Neither did Jerry DeGregorio of Rhode Island, who is officially out of a job now. Does that mean that Flint (who led the A-10 in assists his senior season at St. Joe's) and Duquesne's Darelle Porter (whose assist totals in the '89-'90 season both led the Big East and set a Pittsburgh school record) have the most secure jobs in the conference? Their respective athletic directors would probably beg to differ...

Miscellaneous

Despite a lack of sneakers and shorts, the two UMass student reporters dominated the media game on Friday afternoon. REPRESENT... Speaking of sneakers, someone reportedly tried to steal Greer's from the Temple locker room prior to the semi-final round. Oh, what might have been... Chaney echoed Flint's sentiments about strength of schedule, saying that a strong out-of-conference record with a weaker schedule is more valuable than vice-versa when it comes to making the NCAA tournament. He blamed the "talking heads" of sports television for downplaying the level of competition in the Atlantic 10... UMass' representatives in the 'Atlantic 10 Shoot-Out' (a halftime activity that resembles the NBA's 2-ball) pulled off a stunning victory in the finals. Talk about stealing the actual team's thunder...

Adam White is a Collegian columnist.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN
Jonathan DePina finished off a great A-10 tournament by scoring 14 points in the final against Temple.

summer is just ..... around the corner !!

FUN IN THE SUN, NINE FRIEND-FILLED FANTASTIC WEEKS IN THE GREAT OUTDOORS!
Overnight camp in beautiful Upstate New York seeks staff for the Summer of 2001.
THERE'S SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE!
Great salaries, amazing place to work!
CAMP IS FOR STAFF TOO!

Surprise Lake Camp
The Best in Jewish Camping!

For information and applications call, email or visit us:
(212) 924-3131
SLCamp@aol.com
www.surpriselake.org

Special bonuses for counselors who have been to Israel or done Jewish tutoring or teaching. Call for details!

UJA-Federation of New York

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON

Summer
UMass Boston

- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 29, July 2, and July 16
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- On-line, web-based courses
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost

To learn more, visit www.conted.umb.edu or call 617.287.6000
UMASS BOSTON
A great university in a great city

'D' the key for lacrosse

MATTHEW F. SACCO

They are the masked men, the unsung heroes and the purveyors of the intangibles. They are foreigners to the score sheet who make themselves familiar to their opponents through hard-nosed, in your face lacrosse. But most of all these mystery men are experts at putting up the big "W."

These mystifying figures lurk in the shadows, away from the glimmer and glory. They are the defensive specialists, the face off men and the special teamers who dominate the intangibles and unlock the doorway to victory. Their names do not resonate in the lacrosse community and they are certainly not recognizable to the scorekeeper or the average fan, but in the eyes of their teammates and on the roster of their coaches, those strange names are circled, hi-lighted and underlined as absolutely irreplaceable.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN
The UMass defense was near perfect in its 11-8 victory over No. 19 Navy. With the win, the Minutemen improve to 2-0 in the ECAC

Massachusetts rests its role players and fundamentally sound play to an 11-8 victory over No. 19 Navy. Face-offs, clears, ground balls and extra man opportunities – UMass won them all, as it out hustled the Midshipmen to its second conference victory of the year.

"Going into this game we told ourselves we have to be tougher than Navy," head coach Greg Canella said after the win.

Toughness is exactly what the Maroon and White role players bring to the table each and every week. Day-in and day-out the unheralded players on the squad exhibit a work ethic and a dedication that branches out to the rest of the team, all the way from its scrappers to its stars.

Leading UMass' faceless faction is professional face off man Jeff Seals. The senior marked the midfield circle as his domain in the win over Navy, winning 19 of 24 draws and sparking the Maroon and White offense on countless occasions. Seals won every face off following a visiting score, bolstering the UMass counter attack to four tallies.

"It's really a momentum stopper when you can win face offs like that," Canella said of his talented draw man.

If Seals ever needed any backup, he certainly has it in hulking defenseman Tom Fallon and "Big Nasty," Matt McFarland.

Fallon and his brethren of bash pushed around a smaller Navy squad, not allowing the Midshipmen to establish offensive play in the slot. Fallon and "Big Nasty" are gifted with both strength and speed, as the Navy attackmen couldn't find their way around the twin towers and lets be serious: they weren't going through them.

"Any time you have two players, in any sport, that are bigger and stronger than your opponent and they have the other essentials – the quickness, the attitude and the skill, you can dominate," Canella said.

Fallon's Olympus-like strength comes from his steady diet of weights, weights and more weights.

"Tommy Fallon is relentless in the weight room for a lacrosse player," Canella said. "He's like a football player out here playing lacrosse with the weight he puts up and the effort he puts in."

McFarland combines a very similar work ethic with a natural gift for reading the game and a heavy appetite for poor unsuspecting attackmen.

"Matt McFarland is blessed with great talent," Canella said of his honorable mention All-American. Joining the muscle on "D," is the speed and feistiness of Gabrielli.

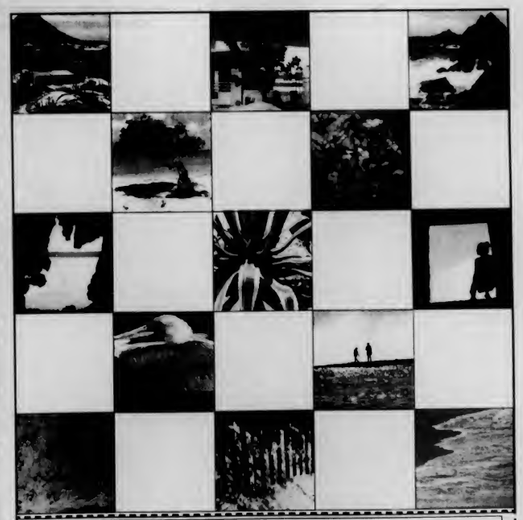
"You watch Chris Gabrielli out there, he's tough as nails, quick as anything and he has great skill," Canella said.

The senior co-captain stands at a diminutive 5-10, but he plays as if he is twice that size. The versatile defenseman regularly marks one of the opponent's most lethal scorers and doubles as an extremely effective man-down player.

Role players such as Gabrielli, Seals and company are the foundation of any successful team. They are the grinders and the workers who coaches count on to be fundamentally sound, physically tough and mentally in the game. They are the players who may not necessarily garner the most ink – they simply know what it takes to get the win.

"They don't always get the credit," Canella said of his trench dwellers. "You don't see their names on the score sheet but they are the reason why we won today."

Matthew F. Sacco is a Collegian columnist.



COLLEGIAN SPRING

Attention UMass Students!!The Collegian is holding a photo contest!! Capture the UMass spring and win!!

Submission Form:

name: _____
phone #: _____
e-mail: _____
type of photo (circle one): black & white color
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____

CONTEST

Requirements:
-Submissions due by MARCH 30th
-Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
-Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
-Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form
Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 1 or 2 bedroom. Close to campus, on bus route. $600/month. Call 253-2378

Available Immediately 1 Br. Apt. - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Take over Lease or summer sublet. Upgraded 3 bedroom. Puffton call 549-0467

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts.com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

1995 Jeep Cherokee 118k, many new parts totalling over $1500. Priced for quick sale $6900 ask for Geoff 549-9232

1993 Saturn SL2. Clean, dependable, well maintained. $2700. 549-8000

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Seeking occasional childcare for 2 school-age children. 549-5448

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

Day Care Center, Rt 63, Leverett, needs substitute teaching assistants and evening maintenance person. Work study or not $8.00 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

Counselors Wanted Co-ed Jewish overnight camp in Maine offers competitive salary plus room and board. All positions available! For more information, contact Ava or Meridith at 617-244-5124 or via email at info@kingswood.org . We will be at the Camp Fair on campus March 14th from 1-5. Look for JCC CAMP KINGSWOOD.

Work Study Students & substitute teachers. Cushman Scott Childrens Center an equal opportuntiy employer is now hiring to work with children 18months to 5years. Ellen 549-1167

EMPLOYMENT

HAVE AN AMAZING SUMMER ADVENTURE! Prestigious coed camp in beaustiful Massachusetts seeks caring, motivated college students & grads who love kids! GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries+travel+room+board. (800) 762-2820

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

EMPLOYMENT

The Animal Rescue League of Boston's Animal Friends Summer Camp in North Falmouth, Cape Cod has the following counselor positions open: Farm Life Counselor, Horse Care Counselor. Employment Dates: June 1st- August 18th. Limited room & board available. For more information or to schedule an interview, call Laura Robbins at 781-461-8015 ext. 25 "Visit our table at "Camp Employment Day" on March 14th.

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

FOR SALE

Maroon Sims Snowboard 150cm. Preston LS bindings. $250 OBO 253-6785

S2 Redline X-Bike $550. Full home gym perfect for apt $150 B/O Call Kellie 549-7889

FOR SALE

27" RCA Television with PIP, like new condition, call Rob at 549-4275 for details.

New WebTV Classsic with keyboard for sale. Call Laroushna 546-5405

INSTRUCTION

Wanna be a Rock Star? Acoustic guitar lessons. Learn the basics fast. Call Anthony at 413-218-6562

Bathing Suit Season is Coming. Experienced trainer will get you ready. No gym membership required. Private kickboxing instruction also available. Joe 548-8979

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CLASSES START SOON STUDENT DISCOUNTS 1-800-U-CAN-MIX WWW.UNIVERSITY-BARTENDING.COM SPACE IS LIMITED CALL FOR INFORMATION!!!

PET FOR SALE

Free male house cat 1yr old, playfull, friendly. Call 256-6777

ROOM FOR RENT

Spring Break Housing Furnished room/kitchen, N. Amherst. $20 daily or $140 all week. 549-4401

1 Bedroom in large 3 bedroom house. On busline. Hobart St. 549-2951

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for 2 Females for 4 bedroom Uptown apt. Great location! Lease starting Sept. Call Shelly 546-7048

To Take Over Lease Boulders Apartments Call Rob or Jackson 256-0386

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office.

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRANSPORTATION

Two need ride to Boston on March 24. Will share costs. Email ssen@english.umass.edu

TRAVEL

FLY SUMMER 4 WINTER $$! Europe $298 rt (+tx) Lon, Fra, Mad, Ams, Par, & more. 4STANDBY.COM or call 800-326-2009

Jamaica Spring Break: Cheapest, best hideaway. Negrils, 7 miles white sand beach. Charming, safe, cabins in lush tropical paradise. Single $25, Double $35. 413-549-4401

Go with Local Spring Break Company! Don't get screwed space still available. Call Flip at 800-227-1166 or email flip@goflip-trips.com

SPRING BREAK 2001 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre. Free Meals, Free Drinks and Up to $100 room credit...Call for special weeks or go to www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

7 HSCN Bulletin Board
8 CBS 3 Boston
9 ABC 40 Springfield
10 FOX 25 Spring field
12 UPN 20 Hartford
13 HSCN New Haven Cablecast
14 NBC 30 New Britain
15 Fox 61 Hartford
16 WB 18 Hartford
17 International Channel
18 USA's Network Channels
19 WB 59 New Haven
20 ESPN
21 ESPN2
22 ESPN Classic Channel
23 Weather Channel
24 Cable News
25 C-Span
26 CNN Headline News
27 C-Span2
28 USA
29 TNT
30 Lifetime
31 Sci-Fi
32 Nickelodeon
33 Nick at Nite
34 E! Entertainment Channel
35 Comedy Central
36 BET
37 Univision
38 Boxing Pay-Per-View
39 College TV Network
40 MTV2
41 VH1
42 The Learning Channel

HSCN

MONDAY EVENING	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH 43	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (In Stereo)		Making the Most of Your Money (In Stereo)					German Americans (In Stereo)
WFSB 3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King		Yes, Dear	Raymond	Best Friends	Family Law "Soul-Custody"	News	Late Show
WBZ 4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King		Yes, Dear	Raymond	Best Friends	Family Law "Soul-Custody"	News	Late Show
WCVB 5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	"Columbo: Murder With Too Many Notes" (2001)		Peter Falk			Gideon's Crossing "Flashpoint"	News	Nightline
WLVI 56		Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Tunes" (In Stereo)		Gilmore Girls "Kill Me Now"			News	Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH 7	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX 20		7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Street Smarts	Blind Date	7th Heaven "Tunes" (In Stereo)		Gilmore Girls "Kill Me Now"			News	Third Date	Change-Heart
WVIT 30		Extra (N)	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC 61	10	News	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Boston Public "Chapter Five"		Ally McBeal "Girls Night Out"			News	Friends	Frasier
WWLP 22	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY 57	22	News	NBC News	Newshour	Jeopardy!	Moesha (N)	Hughleys	Parkers (N)	Girlfriends		Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WGGB 40	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Doga With Jobs: The Heroes (In Stereo)		Kindred Spirits: Healing Your Pet Naturally			Cherise Rose (In Stereo)
WSBK 38	28	News	ABC News	Spin City	Fresser	"Columbo: Murder With Too Many Notes" (2001)		Peter Falk			Gideon's Crossing "Flashpoint"	News	Nightline
WYDN 63		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Friends	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTBS 46		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Moesha (N)	Hughleys	Parkers (N)	Girlfriends		Entertainment Tonight	Seinfeld	Mad Abt. You
A&E 49		"First Target" (2000, Suspense)				Doga With Jobs: The Heroes (In Stereo)		Kindred Spirits: Healing Your Pet Naturally			Cherise Rose (In Stereo)
CNN 42		Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Progeny"		Biography: Kurt Russell		100 Centre Street (N)			Investigative Reports	Law & Order "Second Opinion"
COM 43	23	Inside Politics	Moneyline	Newshour (N)	Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point		Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports
DISC 29	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Whose Line?	Whose Line?		Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Com.-Presents	Premium	Daily Show
ESPN 31		Snakes: The Big Squeeze		Venom (N)		Raising the Mammoth			Iceman: Stone Age		Dangers of the Ice Age	Justice Files
LIFE 52		Sportscenter		Baseball Tonight (N)		NCAA Div.I Basketball Tourn.			NCAA Women		ATP Tennis: Mens Series - Early Rounds	Sportscenter
MTV 53		Sportscenter	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait	"Lee Grant"	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)			"The Familiar Stranger" (2001, Drama)		Margaret Colin,	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
NICK 54		Direct Effect	Spring Break	Celebrity	Cribs	VJ for a Day	TRL (In Stereo)		Say What K'ke		Dene (N)	Together	Undressed
SCIFI 55		Pinky & Brain	Cardoig	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch		Girl: Strokes		Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company
TLC 48	28	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		"Babylon 5: The Gathering"		★★½ "Blade Runner" (1982, Science Fiction)			Harrison Ford, (In Stereo)			★★½ "Blade Runner" (1982)	Harrison Ford,
TNT 45		Trauma: Life in the ER		Superstorms		Junkyard Wars			Destination Future: High Tech		US Marshal: The Reel Story	Junkyard Wars
USA 47		ER "Summer Run" (In Stereo)		Pretender "Unforgotten"		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo)					★★ "Lost in Space" (1998, Science Fiction)	William Hurt,
HBO 8		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Wedding Bell Blues"		Nash Bridges "Whose Line?	Whose Line?				★★ "Desperado" (1995, Drama)	Antonio Banderas, (In Stereo)
MAX 60		★★★ "Race" (1996) Paul Rodriguez.		"PG-13"		Making of					★★★ "Army Given Sunday" (1999, Drama)	Al Pacino, Cameron Diaz, (In Stereo)
SHOW 36		(6:15) "Above the Law" (1988)		★½ "Big Daddy" (1999)		Adam Sandler.			"PG-13"		★★ "Bad Dreams" (1988)	Jennifer Rubin,
		(4:30) "CMOA"		★★½ "Wrestling With Alligators" (1998)		NR			★★ "Rancher Games" (2000, Action)		Ben Affleck,

MONDAY EVENING	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH 43	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (In Stereo)		Making the Most of Your Money (In Stereo)					German Americans (In Stereo)
WFSB 3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King		Yes, Dear	Raymond	Best Friends	Family Law "Soul-Custody"	News	Late Show
WBZ 4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King		Yes, Dear	Raymond	Best Friends	Family Law "Soul-Custody"	News	Late Show
WCVB 5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	"Columbo: Murder With Too Many Notes" (2001)		Peter Falk			Gideon's Crossing "Flashpoint"	News	Nightline
WLVI 56		Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Tunes" (In Stereo)		Gilmore Girls "Kill Me Now"			News	Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH 7	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX 20		7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Street Smarts	Blind Date	7th Heaven "Tunes" (In Stereo)		Gilmore Girls "Kill Me Now"			News	Third Date	Change-Heart
WVIT 30		Extra (N)	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC 61	10	News	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Boston Public "Chapter Five"		Ally McBeal "Girls Night Out"			News	Friends	Frasier
WWLP 22	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY 57	22	News	NBC News	Newshour	Jeopardy!	Moesha (N)	Hughleys	Parkers (N)	Girlfriends		Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WGGB 40	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Doga With Jobs: The Heroes (In Stereo)		Kindred Spirits: Healing Your Pet Naturally			Cherise Rose (In Stereo)
WSBK 38	28	News	ABC News	Spin City	Fresser	"Columbo: Murder With Too Many Notes" (2001)		Peter Falk			Gideon's Crossing "Flashpoint"	News	Nightline
WYDN 63		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Friends	"The Lost Empire" (2001, Fantasy)		Thomas Gibson, Bai Ling			Third Watch "Faith" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTBS 46		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"First Target" (2000, Suspense)		Daryl Hannah, Doug Savant			★ "Cobra" (1986, Drama)	Sylvester Stallone, Brigitte Nielsen,
A&E 49		Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Progeny"		Biography: Kurt Russell		100 Centre Street (N)			Investigative Reports	Law & Order "Second Opinion"
CNN 42	23	Inside Politics	Moneyline	Newshour (N)	Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point		Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports
COM 43	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Whose Line?	Whose Line?		Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Com.-Presents	Premium	Daily Show
DISC 29		Snakes: The Big Squeeze		Venom (N)		Raising the Mammoth			Iceman: Stone Age		Dangers of the Ice Age	Justice Files
ESPN 31		Sportscenter		Baseball Tonight (N)		NCAA Div.I Basketball Tourn.			NCAA Women		ATP Tennis: Mens Series - Early Rounds	Sportscenter
LIFE 52		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait	"Lee Grant"	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)			"The Familiar Stranger" (2001, Drama)		Margaret Colin,	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV 53		Direct Effect	Spring Break	Celebrity	Cribs	VJ for a Day	TRL (In Stereo)		Say What K'ke		Dene (N)	Together	Undressed
NICK 54		Pinky & Brain	Cardoig	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch		Girl: Strokes		Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company
SCIFI 55		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		"Babylon 5: The Gathering"		★★½ "Blade Runner" (1982, Science Fiction)			Harrison Ford, (In Stereo)			★★½ "Blade Runner" (1982)	Harrison Ford,
TLC 48	28	Trauma: Life in the ER		Superstorms		Junkyard Wars			Destination Future: High Tech		US Marshal: The Reel Story	Junkyard Wars
TNT 45		ER "Summer Run" (In Stereo)		Pretender "Unforgotten"		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo)					★★ "Lost in Space" (1998, Science Fiction)	William Hurt,
USA 47		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Wedding Bell Blues"		Nash Bridges "Whose Line?	Whose Line?				★★ "Desperado" (1995, Drama)	Antonio Banderas, (In Stereo)
HBO 8		★★★ "Race" (1996) Paul Rodriguez.		"PG-13"		Making of					★★★ "Army Given Sunday" (1999, Drama)	Al Pacino, Cameron Diaz, (In Stereo)
MAX 60		(6:15) "Above the Law" (1988)		★½ "Big Daddy" (1999)		Adam Sandler.			"PG-13"		★★ "Bad Dreams" (1988)	Jennifer Rubin,
SHOW 36		(4:30) "CMOA"		★★½ "Wrestling With Alligators" (1998)		NR			★★ "Rancher Games" (2000, Action)		Ben Affleck,

Quote of the Day

"If there's one thing I've learned in life, son, it's that learning things never taught me nothing."

Madeline Kahn

Amherst Weather

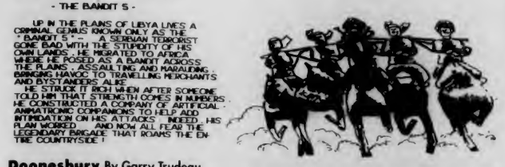
Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
High: 36 Low: 23	High: 39 Low: 31	High: 45 Low: 27

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas

HEY RODNEY THE SECOND-GRADE T-BALL JOCKEY, WHAT'S NEWS?
TODAY'S TOP T-BALL STORY? "T-BALL RE-MOVED FROM MAN'S ASS. EXPERTS BAFFLED."
KILL ME

Jack Dogg By Xavier Rhodes



- THE BANDIT'S -
UP IN THE PLAINS OF LIBYA LIVES A CRIMINAL GENIUS KNOWN ONLY AS THE "BANDIT'S" -- A SUDANIAN TERRORIST GONE BAD WITH THE STUPIDITY OF HIS OWN LIMBS. HE MIGRATED TO AFRICA WHERE HE RODE AS A BANDIT ACROSS THE PLAINS, ASSAULTING AND MAIMING, BRINGING HAVOC TO TRAVELLING MERCHANTS AND BYSTANDERS ALIKE.
HE STRUCK IT RICH WHEN AFTER SOMEONE TOLD HIM THAT STRENGTH COMES IN NUMBERS HE CONSTRUCTED A COMPANY OF ARTIFICIAL AMPUTEES. COMPANIONS TO HELP ADD INTIMIDATION ON HIS ATTACKS. ENTICED, HIS PLAN WORKED AND NOW ALL FEAR THE LEGENDARY BRIGADE THAT ROAMS THE EN-TIRE COUNTRYSIDE."

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

I SEE SOMEONE'S MOOD HAS IMPROVED.
I'VE DECIDED TO LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.
INSTEAD OF LETTING MY CLASSMATES' SUCCESSES MAKE ME FEEL INFERIOR, I'M VIEWING THEIR ACCOMPLISHMENTS AS CLUES TO WHAT I, TOO, CAN DO IF I ONLY MAKE THE EFFORT.
IF THE PEACE CORPS CALLS, I'LL BE UPSTAIRS WORKING ON MY NOVEL UNTIL MY MARINE BIOLOGY HOME-STUDY COURSE ARRIVES.
YOU MENTIONED A BRIGHT SIDE...
JASON, HOW DO I TURN ON THE COMPUTER?

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

AND EACH STARTER HAS HIS OWN PERSONAL MEAT LOCKER!
THEY GOT THAT AT TECH, TOO, MAN.
WELL, SURE. BUT DOES TECH HAVE A DATING SERVICE? SUITES WITH PATIOS? FACULTY TUTORS? RADIER MANAGERS? THESE THINGS ARE ALL PART OF THE HARLEM STORY!
AND ONE MORE THING, JIMMY — BECAUSE HARLEM UNDERSTANDS TOP ATHLETES' SOMETIME FACE SPECIAL CHALLENGES.
WE OFFER THE BEST LEGAL PROGRESS IN THE LEAGUE!
I'M LISTENING!

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

BUT, RJ, WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT PRO WRESTLING?...
ALL I NEED TO KNOW... IT'S FAKE.
RJ... IT'S STILL DANGEROUS! YOU'LL GET SMUSHED!
TUT-TUT. DAMP LAD... I HAVE MY OWN STUNT DOUBLE.
SAMMY?
I'M READY FOR MY CLOSE-UP, MR MCMAHON
NO CLOSE-UPS... THAT'S MY JOB

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

WAAAA!
WHAT'S WITH DAD?
HIS COLLEGE'S ALUMNI MAGAZINE CAME TODAY.
IT ALWAYS HAS NEWS ABOUT THE PEOPLE HE WENT TO SCHOOL WITH.
WAAAA!
HE SEEMS PRETTY SAD. DID SOMEBODY DIE?
NOT QUITE.
MY WHOLE CLASS IS DOING BETTER THAN ME! WAAAA!
THANKS FOR YOUR GENES, BY THE WAY...
THERE'S NO SHAME IN PUSHING PENGUINS, DEAR.

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

ANDY, YOU'RE A WRITER. HELP ME OUT HERE.
SHOULD I TRY TO MAKE MY FIRST NOVEL A BEST-SELLING COMMERCIAL SMASH, OR AN AWARD-WINNING DARLING OF THE CRITICS?
THEY BOTH SEEM TO HAVE THEIR PLUSSES.
WHY DON'T YOU TRY WRITING WHATEVER'S IN YOUR HEART?
AND THE PLUS TO THAT IS WHAT?
UM, YOU MIGHT WANT TO SCOOT BACK A BIT.

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)- Today you could be tired from working hard for the past week, and might feel lazy. This is all right; if you still have to put in time working during the day, take an early evening to crash if you need to.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)- Visitors who come to your home today might expect a sympathetic ear and perhaps a favor or two, and you won't feel much like giving them what they want. Nonetheless, give them a little of your time and energy. You might regret it later if you don't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)- Group activities or social events taking place today, which you may have already committed to, might not seem as appealing as they once did. Whether you attend or not is up to you, but don't feel guilty if you decide to stay home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)- Chances are great to move ahead with your love life as your energy reaches a stable maximum today. Take precise, well-pointed steps during the day. Something that has been troubling you for a long time will come to a positive end.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)- Significant changes lie ahead for you this week. This delicate period of transition will have an impact on your behavior with the people around you. Be energetic and reorganize yourself and your agenda otherwise you will be overwhelmed.

LEO (July 23- Aug. 22)- Some of your friends try to nose into your private life. You resent the intrusion and your anger is justified. The way you handle the situation will determine whether or not you lose any friends over the situation. A calm and reassuring period will enter your life next week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22)- You might be confronted with some tedious but necessary paperwork regarding money today. Deposits may have to be made, or checks written out to pay bills. Take care of this first this morning, and then spend the rest of your day off relaxing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)- A minor disagreement with someone close to you or some distant acquaintance will flare up today if you accept a few concessions. Don't be stubborn, clutching obstinately to your point won't help the situation. Take it easy on yourself today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)- Make better plans for your friendly get-together. Organize them carefully and advise your friends to bring new people along. You will make interesting acquaintances today that may transform your love life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)- Changes will be swift throughout the day. Remember, this is a period of transition for you, so don't let any changes impact your friends or family. You may want to reconsider the company you keep in order to maximize your positive energy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)- A new mental or philosophical interest will prove to be fascinating today and you will be pleased with today's unexpected insights. However, accidents and arguments are extremely likely so try to avoid situations that are destined for conflict.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)- Don't get discouraged if a work or school problem seems too difficult to deal with today. Simply keep plugging and you'll make a success of this endeavor so that you can relax and enjoy the rest of the day.

MONKEY-BOX BY PBEJ

LONG STORY SHORT: MOM WAS RIGHT.

© 2001

www.monkey-box.net

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Baked Fish with Herb Seasoning (B, W)

Ratatouille with Ricotta and Basil (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

Greek Style Tofu (vegan)

BBQ Pork Sandwich (F)

BBQ Kielbasa Grinder (H)

DINNER

Texas Tech BBQ Beef Tips

Mixed Bean Creole (vegan)

Spinach Tortilla Casserole (vegetarian)

SLEEPY HOLLOW BED COMPANY
286-BEDS (2337)/ 256-BEDS(2337)
328 College Street, Amherst
FINALLY!! Amherst has a mattress & futon store conveniently located near downtown, next to The Spirit Haus on Rt. 9
GRAND OPENING & OPEN HOUSE
(FREE FOOD!!!)
SAT. MARCH 31 10-8
SUN. APRIL 1 12-5
futons-mattresses-beds-daybeds decorative pillows-lamps-storage platforms beds-room dividers-rugs area or plants-and/coffee tables cross-foam-pad/pool/papasan, ETC

ACROSS
1 By way of
4 Old saying
9 Current mess
12 Fluffy's warning
13 Loaf
14 Vietnam neighbor
16 "Right now"
17 Lobster exporter
18 Two problem
19 Makes as a salary
21 Facial expression
23 Board game
25 Bossed
26 Striped stones
29 Group of three
31 Vice —
32 Garden tools
33 Merit
37 — not lucky
38 Looked displeased
41 Forest mama
42 Fishing gear
44 Apartment, e.g.
45 Throws off (heat)
47 Females
49 Dishes
50 Courtyard
53 Mitt
55 Naps for Pedro
57 Spectacular
61 Leftovers dish
62 Fabled creature
64 Salad-bowl wood
65 Buffalo's lake
66 Sea duck
67 Trick
68 Plus
69 Ships' poles
70 On many occasions

DOWN
1 Globetrotter's need
2 Author Dinesen
3 Phases
4 Military units
5 College administrators
6 — Baba
7 Crew
8 Use the gym
9 Apple pie option
10 Parrot
11 Puerto Rican port
12 Derby or pillbox
15 Plant
20 Bundle of grain
22 Neat-egg inits.
24 Packing away
26 Revlon rival
27 Wilder or Kelly
28 What Hamlet smelled
30 Monthly expense
32 Sharpen
34 Colliery exit
35 Learn by — memorize
36 "Untouchable" Eliot
39 Sifts through
40 Dig (into)
43 Rustled
46 Conductor
48 Not at home
49 Forces
50 Tennis pro Arthur
51 Jeweled headpiece
52 Yamish ingredient
54 Weaker, as an excuse
56 Fabric sample
58 Pierre's egg
59 Clipper ship feature
60 — out: barely make ends meet
63 Harem room

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

H	O	O	F	S	B	R	E	W	C	O	N	E
A	B	B	O	T	R	I	L	E	E	M	I	L
M	I	S	E	R	A	M	I	M	E	E	K
S	E	C	M	A	N	I	D	E	F	E	N	C	E
		U	N	I	O	N		T	E	N	S	E
S	A	R	O	N	G		A	W	A	I	T
A	L	E	S		A	C	O	R	N		V	E	E
S	I	L	E	N	T		R	E	A	T	M	E	N
S	T	Y		O	B	O	E	S		E	X	I	T
		L	I	S	P	S		A	R	M	A	D	A
C	L	A	S	P		S	C	O	O	T
B	O	O	T	Y		L	I	D	E	U	P
A	L	O	E		G	R	A	D		S	P	O	O
J	A	M	S		A	N	T	E		E	R	U	P
T
A	S	S	T		T	O	A	D		D	O	S	E

1-3-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technician	Dan Santella
Copy Editor	Melissa Hammell
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff	Margery Smelkinson, Jarrett Brimmer

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

ONE 'FOUL' SWOOP

Owls outlast Minutemen in A-10 final with help of questionable technical call

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Kitwana Rhymer's technical foul late in the second half was a big reason for UMass' 76-65 loss to arch-rival Temple in the finals of the Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship.

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA – Going into the Atlantic 10 Championship, the Massachusetts men's basketball team knew that it needed to win the whole thing if it was planning on advancing to the NCAA tournament.

After falling to the Temple Owls in the final on Saturday, 76-65, at the First Union Spectrum, the Minutemen will now have to settle for a probable NIT birth.

However, despite the fact that it fell short of its ultimate goal, UMass ended up making a nice run through the tourney by defeating St. Bonaventure 79-58 in the quarterfinal round, and then upsetting St. Joseph's 75-70 in order to advance to the final game.

Against Temple, the defining moment of the contest came with 9:47 left and the Maroon and White up by a 53-51 score. It was here when Owl guard Lynn Greer drove to the basket and was fouled by Minuteman center Kitwana Rhymer. Rhymer then slapped the floor in frustration and was called for a technical foul.

Greer promptly drilled the two free throws for two of his game-high 20 points, and on the ensuing out-of-bounds play, Quincy Wadley (20 points, eight rebounds) knocked down a long three from the right wing to give his team the three-point advantage.

"I thought the turning point [of the game] was the technical," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "They got two foul shots, Rhymer got his third [and fourth fouls] and they hit a three-pointer. I told the ref, 'the kid was mad at himself, not at you.'"

Just over a minute after the technical, Monty Mack hit four consecutive free throws to put his team back on top, 57-56, but that would be the last time the Minutemen would have the lead.

On the next possession, Wadley split the opposing defense and drove to the basket for a layup to put his team back on top for good.

The Owls would use an 8-1 run to take a 68-60 lead with just under four minutes remaining, but UMass clawed its way back once again behind a 5-0 run of its own. Massachusetts would fail to score a single point in the final 2:53, however, and Temple went 8-of-8 from the line down the stretch to secure itself the victory.

"I've got a great bunch of guys and we left it out on the floor," Flint said. "My guys are champions and I'm very proud of them."

In the first two rounds of the tournament, Mack absolutely torched the opposition, so Owl coach John Chaney developed a defense for the final game that would contain the UMass superstar. Everywhere Mack went, at least two Temple defenders went with him, and he was unable to see any open looks the entire game, scoring 12 points on 2-of-10 shooting.

"We tried everything," Chaney said. "We ran different zones and a box on him, and we also worked the ball around on offense so he would have to work on both ends of the floor."

This defense did open things up for Mack's teammates, though, and Rhymer's 15 points, Jonathan DePina's 14 and Shannon Crooks' 11 almost propelled the Minutemen to victory.

"We knew what they were going to do [on Mack] so we tried to get the ball into the paint," Flint said. "Other people had to make some plays and they did a pretty good job of that."

Early in the game, both teams tried to pound the ball inside, and Temple was more successful at it than UMass, opening up a 21-9 lead. The Owls remained up by about 10 for most of the first frame, until the Minutemen went on a 9-0 run over the last 3:15 of the half to close the deficit to one.

DePina was the main leader of the comeback, hitting a three from the top of the key to start the run and then finishing it with a drive to the basket with only three ticks on the clock. Overall, DePina garnered 12 points by the break, allowing him to lead all scorers.

Against St. Joseph's on Friday night, the Maroon and White got off to a much better start than it did against Temple. Mack swished a long-range shot from behind the arc to give his team a double-digit lead only six minutes into the contest, and on the next possession, he converted another three to make the score 17-6.

"This was the biggest battle we've had all year," Mack said. "There was a lot of pushing, shoving and competitiveness. I

Turn to HOOPS, page 7

Sneaking around behind the scenes in Philly

PHILADELPHIA – First of all, the name change was key. Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship is so much less cumbersome than the Bell Atlantic Atlantic 10 Championship, which sounds like something that Foghorn Leghorn from Loonie Tunes might come up with.

Aside from that, this year's conference championship in Philly was pretty much business as usual. The bad teams made their token first-round exit, a few teams hung around longer than expected and a few interesting subplots unfolded. Here are a few of the more intriguing ones...

Job Security

One team gave its colorfully nicknamed head coach the heave-ho after a closer-than-expected loss to top-seeded St. Joseph's in its second game. Had this been somehow predicted prior to the tourney, one would assume the fired party to be one James "Bruiser" Flint. And one would be wrong.

La Salle showed a marked lack of tact in dropping the axe on William "Speedy" Morris before the tourney even ended, leading to lots of speculation as to its reasoning. The popular theory was that Explorer Central was trying to jump into the red (as in the Red Raiders of Texas Tech)-hot Bobby Knight sweepstakes, but a source close to the program had a more interesting idea.

"They really want Bruiser," said the Explorer informant. Hmmm...

Sideline Sideshow

Speaking of Flint, he and associate coach Geoff Arnold have honed their "good cop, bad cop" routine down to an art. After just about any even somewhat-questionable call, Bruiser will come charging out of the coach's box at the officials, only to have former teammate Arnold jump onto his back in a comical effort to restrain him.

You can almost hear the words from Arnold: "I can't control him when he gets like this. Lord knows what he's capable of."

How good are these guys?

It is often said that basketball's true superstars are the ones who play their best when it counts the most, so the A-10 tourney was a nice stage on which to compare the conference's best players. Marvin O'Connor of St. Joe's put on quite an impressive display of three-point shooting overall, but is living testament to the percentages theory – even a great three-point shooter hits about 40 percent of his shots, and if that is your first option offensively on every trip down the floor, you're going to live – and die – by the chuck.

ADAM WHITE

La Salle's Rasual Butler is, in a word, amazing to watch. There isn't anything he can't do on the offensive end – he shoots the three with the best of them, he can take just about anyone off the dribble and he's tall enough at 6-foot-8 to post up his man pretty much whenever he wants to. My guess is that he would be a solid NBA draft pick right now, but if he decides to stick around for another season, look out A-10.

Forget comparisons – George Washington's SirValiant Brown was Allen Iverson against Temple in the semi-finals. The Owls knew on every trip down the floor that Brown was going to shoot the ball, and they still had no way of stopping him. It's a shame that GW coach Tom Penders kept SVB on a shorter leash this season than last, but part of the reasoning for that is that the former A-10 Rookie of the Year seems to get less and less respect from the conference's officials each time he takes the floor.

In regards to GW-Temple, officials and respect, all I'll say is this – John Chaney admitted in the post game press conference that Lynn Greer's foul away from the ball on the Colonials' next-to-last inbound play was intentional. There's nothing that can be done about it now, but Mickey Crowley and the rest of the conference's officiating brass need to acknowledge that Temple stole that game (even if Patrick Ngongba's foul on Greer was the single dumbest defensive play in the history of the sport).

Fountain of Youth runs dry

Two of the conference's prodigies picked the tournament semis to finally play like the freshmen they are. SJU's Jameer Nelson, who looked like Magic Johnson in the quarters against La Salle (23 points, 11 boards, eight assists) must have changed into his Doug Overton jersey for the Hawks-Minutemen game – the hometown kid shot 1-for-5 from the field and finished with nearly as many turnovers (four) as points (six).

Likewise for Temple's David Hawkins, who made a case for himself as A-10 Rookie of the Year as Chaney's starting swingman this season but fell to Earth somewhat against GW. The Washington, D.C. original tried to climb the Colonial front line himself on a pair of possessions, leading to two of the biggest swats of the tourney.

His Airness Returns

How much did Chaney fear UMass guard Monty Mack in the finals? The wizened coach admitted to using no less than four defensive sets specifically designed to control Mack,

Turn to A10, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Dan Paccione and the No. 9 men's lacrosse team kept their record perfect by defeating Navy 11-8 at Richard F. Garber Field on Saturday.

Balanced lax torpedoes Naval Academy

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

It can't be said that the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team's offensive attack is unbalanced. Three games have passed and already five Minutemen have had a game with three goals or more.

Juniors Marc Morley and Dan Paccione, the latest names added to that list, each netted hat tricks on Saturday to lead No. 9 UMass to an 11-8 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) victory over No. 19 Navy. The Minutemen (3-0, 2-0 ECAC) grabbed the early advantage just 28 seconds into game on a bounce shot from the left side by senior Rich Kunkel and never gave up that lead, holding off a fourth quarter Midshipman run to seal the victory. The win was UMass' first-ever over Navy (0-3, 0-2 ECAC), bringing the all-time series mark to 1-2.

"Going into this game, we told our guys we had to be tougher than Navy," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "It was more of an attitude than anything."

The Midshipman upended the Maroon and White 6-3 in the last year's meeting on Rutgers University's TurfField. In that game, Navy dominated UMass in shots (41-19) and groundballs (45-33) en route to its third victory of the 2000 campaign.

"We only scored three goals on them last year," Cannella said. "They outshot us and they out ground-balled us. We really challenged our guys to get that back today."

The Minutemen won both statistical categories on Saturday. They outshot Navy 37-30 and finished with an enormous 43-14 groundball advantage. Another important factor, however, was UMass' 19-of-24 faceoff domination, which can be credited to the expertise of senior Jeff Seals.

"Jeff has done a great job all year," Cannell said."And obviously in a game like today when a team tries to creep back on you, it's really a momentum stopper when you can win face-offs like that."

The loss, Navy's third straight, comes at a very inopportune time for the program. Two weeks ago, the Midshipman faltered 9-8 in overtime to the University of Maryland Baltimore County and a week later, they were jolted by the University of North Carolina with a goal in the final second.

"We're not used to losing games here," Navy head coach Richie

Meade said. "I don't know if we've ever lost three games in a row to start a season. Our backs are definitely up against the wall."

"They're young, they have a couple guys who are nicked up, they're 0-3 and they play one of the toughest schedules in the country," Cannella said. "I feel for those guys because we were in that situation the last two years. When you play a tough schedule and you lose the first couple, or you lose a big game – it just deflates you."

Navy had a tough time getting things going, and found itself down 2-0 when Paccione scored his first of three while falling down right in front of the goal.

"I was working off the ball as much as I could and they were finding me," Paccione said. "Navy is quick to double team and our guys were realizing that. They passed to next guy and found me cutting back door."

Midshipman Ben Bailey faked out senior Alex Racioppi, spun and fired the ball top shelf into the net at 7:47in the second quarter to cut UMass' lead to 2-1, but junior Don Little's side shot under the arm of Navy's Jon Hidgon at 7:03 brought the Minuteman lead back to two.

The Midshipmen answered Little's tally with one of their own but didn't reply to any of UMass' following three conversions (Paccione, John Madigan, Kevin Leveille) and the Maroon and White waltzed into the locker room with a 6-2 lead.

"I thought we were ready to play," Meade said. "We were just too tentative in the beginning of the game. I thought we played like we were giving them too much respect."

UMass began the second half exactly as it did the first, finding the net almost immediately after the beginning face-off. Fourteen seconds in, Little found Morley in open space and the senior found the net for his first of three goals on the day for the 7-2 advantage.

Both squads added two more goals in the third frame, upping the score to 9-4. As it did in its two previous games, Navy forged a comeback in the final stanza thanks to four extra man opportunities. The Midshipmen converted on two of those chances and added two more in that frame, but the UMass defense proved too tough in the end. The Amherst wall made up of Tom Fallen and Matt McFarland stopped the Navy attack for the better part of the afternoon.

Senior goalie Chris Campolettano made 13 saves in the win, moving him past Gerald Moreau on the UMass all-time saves list. He now sits in eighth place with 343 total saves.

Turn to ARTS p. 6

Turn to the Arts for your daily dose of depressing UK music as we take a look at the latest from Arab Strap.

The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

Bruiser Flint reamined a class act, even as he resigned as head basketball coach yesterday.

SPORTS p. 10

Volume CVII Issue 97 | www.dailycollegian.com | Tuesday, March 13, 2001

Flint resigns as head basketball coach

RYAN BENHARRIS / COLLEGIAN

James "Bruiser" Flint steps away from the microphone after his last radio show on WHMP. Flint resigned as the University of Massachusetts head basketball coach yesterday.

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Less than 48 hours after coaching his last game of the season, James "Bruiser" Flint resigned from his position as head basketball coach for the University of Massachusetts.

A statement from the University's media relations department announced Flint's decision yesterday afternoon, after the coach met with Chancellor David K. Scott and Athletic Director Bob Marcum in the chancellor's office.

"We sat down, and they just wanted to pretty much go in a different direction," Flint said. "I said I'd resign the position. They wanted to get somebody else in there, and that was it."

Flint followed the announcement with a final appearance on his weekly radio show, in which he expressed optimism toward both his 12 years at UMass and his future.

"I'm not going out of here bitter; I think I'm going out of here better," Flint said. "I'll be able to go down my road and do my thing. I'll land on my feet."

The Minutemen compiled a 15-15 overall record in this, Flint's fifth season as head coach. After a 2-9 non-conference start over the first six weeks, the team won 11 of 16 conference games to finish the regular season in fourth place in the A-10. The Atlantic 10 tournament saw UMass upset top-seeded St. Joseph's en route to the championship game, where the team fell 76-65 to defending champion Temple.

Flint leaves behind an 86-72 overall record as head coach of the Minutemen, including a 52-28 mark within the A-10. Three of his five teams saw postseason action, twice in the NCAA tournament (in 1997 and '98) and three times in the National Invitational Tournament (NIT). His win total ranks third in school history, behind his predecessor John Calipari (195 wins) and UMass Hall of Famer Jack Leaman (217).

Flint acknowledged that he was under additional pressure having taken the reins immediately following Calipari's 1996 Final Four season.

"It's always tough when you follow a guy who takes you to the Final Four," Flint said earlier this season. "I'm not crazy; I knew that when I took the job ... Hey, they've had basketball here for 90 years, and how many times have they made it to the Final Four? Once."

Last night after his show, Flint defended his winning percentage by emphasizing both the academic and personal development of his players. He estimated that this year's graduation would give him a 13 out of 14 success rate in terms of helping his athletes earn their degrees.

"Good programs sustain, good teams come and go," said Flint. "Once you get a good sense of that, your program will be at the kind of level you want it to be at."

Reports that Flint's term as coach was ending began surfacing Sunday night, after this year's NIT field was announced without UMass' inclusion. CBSsportsline.com quoted a source close to the team as saying that the coach would either resign or be dismissed yesterday, and that possible candidates for the job included Providence's Tim Welsh and former Indiana coach Bob Knight. Subsequent reports also named Flint as a lead candidate for the head-coaching job at La Salle, but the Philadelphia native insisted that such speculation is premature.

"Hey, I just got fired today; let me get my feet on the ground first," Flint said, adding that he does foresee himself pursuing a comparable position at a later juncture. "I don't know where, but I think I'm going to have my opportunities. As long as I can get a head coaching job, I think that's the most important thing."

Prior to his appointment as the University's 17th head basketball coach on June 8, 1996, Flint spent seven years as an assistant to Calipari. He recalled on his show last night how he and fellow assistant Bill Bayno used to share beds on recruiting trips back near the beginning of his time at UMass.

"I'm the last of the guys," Flint said, referring to the Calipari-era staff. Bayno also went on to assume a head coaching position, though his contract at Nevada-Las Vegas was terminated earlier this year.

Flint also enjoyed a standout career playing college basketball, as a four-year letterwinner for fellow A-10 program St. Joseph's. He led the conference in assists per game (6.1) during his senior year, and was inducted into the SJU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1998.

He followed his playing career with two seasons as an assistant coach and assistant athletic director at Coppin State College in Maryland.

Flint is the nineteenth Division I head coach to either resign or be terminated this season, and the third in the Atlantic 10. Rhode Island coach Jerry DeGregorio announced in January that this would be his last season at URI, while La Salle's William "Speedy" Morris was dismissed Friday after his eighth consecutive losing season.

Both Flint and Morris had one year left on their contracts at the time that they relinquished their positions.

"One day they're patting you on your back, the next day they're kicking you in your butt. That's sports nowadays in the 21st century," Flint said.

Five-College Hillel celebrates Purim holiday in festive style

By Joanie Gorlovsky
Collegian Staff

Sounds of laughter and groggers (noisemakers) emanated from the Amherst Alumni house last Thursday night, March 8, as the Five-College Purim Party took place there. The Party was put on by the Hillels of the Five-College System in honor of Purim, an annual Jewish holiday.

The Festival of Purim is celebrated every spring to commemorate the Jews' victory and survival thousands of years ago in Persia. Haman, the advisor to King Ahashverosh of Persia, was an evil man who disliked the Jews and convinced the King to issue an edict to kill them all. However, the King's new wife, Esther, was actually a Jew. Esther pleaded with the King to save her people, and so he sided with her, and stopped Haman's evil plan. The Jewish people were allowed to fight against those who wanted to kill them, and they won many victories and were saved from certain death. Therefore, Purim is a very festive celebration during which Jews are supposed to be merry and commemorate Esther's heroism and the Jews' victory over their enemies in Persia.

The evening started off at 6:30 p.m. with a traditional reading of the Megillah, which is the Book of Esther that tells the story of Purim. Several people from the Five Colleges read the Megillah in the traditional Hebrew. Some of the people at the party were dressed up in various costumes, such as a joker from UMass and a flower from Smith, because it is a Purim tradition to dress up in costumes for the celebration.

After the traditional Megillah, there was a performance by Kolot, UMass's Jewish acapella singing group. They performed several songs, including a rendition of Madonna's "Like A Prayer" to which many audience members sang along, and a Jewish version of the song "Faith." Kolot met with a warm reception from the audience, and they really got the crowd in an excited Purim mood. The audience members also had a chance to sing some traditional Jewish Purim songs, which were led by Rabbi Saul Perlmutter and Sarah Rafal of the UMass Hillel House staff.

More entertainment, in the form of a creative Megillah reading, followed Kolot's performance. Many of the Five-College Jewish groups took one of the ten chapters of the Megillah each and performed it in a creative way through a skit, song or poem, for the audience. There were two beauty pageants, one staged by the Birthright Israel alumni and the other by the UMass Jewish Student Union board, to represent the beauty contest that King Ahashverosh staged to find the beautiful Queen Esther. There was also a "Top Ten Reasons why Haman should not have gotten out of bed today" list that was read by seniors from UMass and Smith.

The Jewish Living and Learning Community that lives upstairs at the UMass Hillel House staged a wonderful audience-participation skit to show Esther begging for the Jews' lives to the King. The Jewish Residential Area Programmers (J Rappers) from UMass sang a song about Purim that they composed to the tune of "I Want It That Way," by the Backstreet Boys, and there were several other outstanding poems and skits presented during the creative Megillah time.

After a small break for refreshments, including hamentashen, traditional triangular Purim pastries, and hummus with pita, the highlight of the evening was a performance by the Moshav Band. The Moshav Band is a well-known modern Jewish musical group. The band is made up of young Israeli-born musicians with American roots. The musicians grew up in the Moshav Me'or Modiim in Israel, which was founded by the late Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach. Rabbi Carlebach had a huge influence on the band and their musical style. The band was also influenced by music of its hippie, 60's parents, such as the Grateful Dead and Neil Young, and by other contemporary musicians, such as the Dave Matthews Band and Phish. Because of the great diversity of their influences, the music played by the Moshav Band is also very varied. They performed in both English and Hebrew, and the songs they played varied from traditional Jewish songs to very modern alternative-sounding rock. Some of the songs the band played were covers of bands like the Grateful Dead, while others were their own original works.

Most of the audience got up to dance with the Moshav Band as they were playing their music. Along with Five-College students and members of the Chabad House, there were also people who had driven from other locations to come see the Moshav Band. The band was obviously having fun at the Purim Party and enjoyed playing to a crowd of college students. They were dressed up as women while they were performing, in the Purim spirit. The band members even took a break during their performance and came off-stage to mingle with the dancing crowd.

Einstein play a comic delight

Albert Einstein is undeniably one of the greatest geniuses of our time. How far would a person go to be as smart as he? Would a person who was willing to eat Einstein's brain be as intelligent as the man himself?

That is the question asked in the hilarious one-act play, "The Man Who Ate Einstein's Brain," which was performed at the Hillel House these past Sunday and Monday nights. The play, written by Louis Phillips, is about the brain laboratory of Dr. Moran (Daniel Dworkin), where Einstein's brain is at rest in a large jar under lock and key. Unfortunately, the laboratory's elderly janitor, Mr. Goldberg (Adam Schepp), mistakes the brain for a "large and soggy matzoh ball" and eats it in his chicken soup for lunch. After his meal, Goldberg unexplainably begins to act like Einstein – playing the violin, smoking a pipe and writing down complicated mathematical equations. Now, it's up to Dr. Moran and his attractive young colleague, Dr. Steiner (Victoria Stankiewicz), to figure out how to explain the disappearance of Einstein's brain and the strange behavior of Goldberg to the scientific community.

The play was directed by Leah Weiss, a sophomore Theater and Judaic Studies major. Last semester, Weiss and Hillel's Program Director, Deborah Braunstein, began Hillel's drama program, which includes improv nights and other activities, as well as play performances. The first Hillel production Weiss directed was last semester's cabaret-style performance of two plays by David Ives – "Sure Thing" and "The Philadelphia."

– Jeanie Gorlovsky

Ukrainian profs visit Herter

Two Ukrainian professors and administrators are on a delegation to Amherst, and will give an intriguing glimpse into contemporary Ukrainian student life tonight, at 7 p.m. in Herter 114 at the University of Massachusetts. After the talk, they will answer questions about their Universities and ask questions about life in the Valley. Food and refreshments will be served. All are welcome to attend.

The professors are from some of the most prestigious universities in Ukraine. They will talk about the issues that concern college students in the former USSR.

Professor Andriy Svitlyuk (Yulianovich) is Rector (Chancellor) of the academic programs at the Odessa State Academy for Building and Construction. He is interested in seeing how the U.S. edducational system works, how the students learn in and outside the classroom and how students adapt to the market conditions after graduation. He studies educational systems in Europe and Japan, and is an experienced lecturer.

Mykhaylo Zveryakov (Ivanovich) is Rector of the Odessa State Economic Institute, one of the four best institutions of its kind in the country. It specializes in training bankers and other specialists in nine economic specialties. There are 8,000 students and 40 Professors in the Institute. Zveryakov has broad international experience, particularly in Europe. Like Svitlyuk, he studies the U.S. educational system, especially from the point of view of new technologies and the quality of education.

University of Massachusetts Professor Lazlo Tikos, Dean of the Colleges of

Turn to PROFS, page 2

LAINA ERDE/COLLEGIAN

First signs of spring

Two southwest residents playing frisbee behind Moore, yesterday afternoon.

International Briefs

Latin America

Mexico-After marching for two weeks, the Zapatista rebels finally reached Mexico City and over 100,000 people protested in the city square. The leader of the movement, a man who calls himself Subcommander Marcos, stood up in front of the masses and proclaimed that the Zapatistas demand democracy, justice and equality for the indigenous people of the country.

There are roughly 10 million indigenous peoples in Mexico and the rebels claim that they are being mistreated by the government. Marcos has gained a huge leftist following that has drawn worldwide attention to this vast disenfranchised, uneducated and extremely poor section of the population.

The Zapatistas originated in the state of Chiapas in the southern part of Mexico. They are asking to engage in peace talks with the Mexican government and the adoption of an indigenous bill of rights.

President Vicente Fox has embraced Marcos and his followers, inviting them into the political arena and has stated that he will put indigenous rights at the top of his political agenda. Supporters of Marcos have asserted that the new president's attitude is a sign of the new democracy in Mexico.

Colombia-Rebels from the Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC, met with members of an international mediation team on Thursday to talk about their role in monitoring future peace talks between the rebels and the government. Envoys from 25 states met with FARC members and their leader, Manuel Marulanda, to discuss international participation in peace efforts.

Though he was skeptical of direct intervention, Mr. Marulanda has shown signs that he is willing to put an end to the 37 year-old conflict between the rural rebels and the government. Marulanda met with Colombian president Andres Pastrana last month to decide on which foreign envoys would be present in during peace negotiations.

Among the topics of Thursday's meeting was the role of aid from the United States and other countries. The US has given Colombia $1.1 billion dollars in aid and military support. The group also discussed the destruction of coca plantations and other aspects of the drug war.

No date has been set for the peace talks but political analysts are encouraged by the acceptance of foreign mediators in the peace process.

Africa

Uganda-At the end of the day Monday, the polls in Uganda closed, signaling the end of a very high profile and important presidential election. Officials reported a very high turnout and no major problems. The results are not expected until Wednesday.

The two men fighting for the title of president are former guerrilla President Yoweri Museveni, and his rival Kizza Besigye. Museveni was in power for 15 years during which the economy grew at least six percent every year and centered much of his attention to the AIDS epidemic.

Though vote-rigging is denied, people in southwestern Uganda, the home area of Mr. Besigye, have claimed that voting officials struck their names from the voting roster and stuffing ballot boxes.

The atmosphere was full of anticipation as voters stood around to hear the results in local towns that were counting votes by hand. Besides Besigye and Museveni, there were five other people running for the presidency. Mr. Museveni needs at least 50 percent to win.

Museveni and Besigye are actually old friends, as Mr. Besigye served as Museveni's doctor for five years during the bush-war. However, he has called Museveni's administration corrupt. Museveni has stated that he needs another five years to complete his program of modernization for the country.

Liberia-The United Nations Security Council voted to ban all diamond exports in Liberia until the government stops supporting rebel factions that are terrorizing neighboring Sierra Leone.

President Charles Taylor has denied that his government continues to support the rebels. However, the UN resolution, backed by Britain and the United States, is designed to address Liberia's relationship with the Revolutionary United Front, or RUF, in Sierra Leone, that has supposedly been using Liberia as a front to sell diamonds for weapons, according to an investigation panel.

Liberia has been asked to ground planes and stop aid to RUF. Members of the Economic Community of West African States, or Ecowas, will be called in to monitor and enforce the resolution. There has already been an arms embargo on the country since 1992 for its own civil war.

The Sierra Leone war has been marked by exceptional violence and butchery, fraught with human rights violations and savagery. There is no word whether or not the United Nations will take any action against Sierra Leone.

Asia-Pacific

Afghanistan-A month ago, Mullah Mohammad Omar, the supreme leader of the Islamic fundamentalist group the Taliban, issued an edict to destroy all statues and icons in the country. On Sunday, United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan was in New Delhi to meet with Taliban officials, but did not stop the destruction of the Buddhas of Bamiyan, a set of 1,500 year-old relics carved from the side of a cliff in Afghanistan.

During the weekend many statues were destroyed, including two statues that were over 100 feet high. Opposition to the destruction has been heard from around the world as well as close by. The Pakistani government has even called for the Taliban to be more tolerant. The decision to destroy hundreds of Buddhist relics has not put Afghanistan in good standing with the United Nations either. Annan was reported to be very pessimistic about the move.

Along with the religious oppression in the country, Afghanistan is wrought with starvation after years of drought. Relief efforts are slow and waning, especially since the Taliban government refused to extradite Osama Bin Laden, the suspected terrorist.

The United Nations have not looked kindly to the destruction of Buddhist statues, and according to reports, neither do the citizens. According to the New York Times, few Muslims support the decision.

Malaysia-The government-run press has begun an inexorable attack on the online newspaper of the country, Malaysiakini. The newspaper is regarded as the most honest and credible media voice in the country. The newspaper was started in 1999 after the government declared that they would not censor any internet media.

The attack has been called a clampdown and a measure to control the political climate of the country by Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed. However, all of the government-spun press has only increased the interest in the online periodical. Hits on the site have doubled to 200,000 per day.

The pressure has been brewing against the Prime Minister since 1998 when he arrested Anwar Ibrahim, his former deputy. He has also been accused of corruption and human rights abuses. Malaysiakini was a response to the growing persecution of opponents and censorship of traditional media. Last week 14 politicians were arrested for opposing the government.

All of the regular newspapers in Malaysia are run by the government. Malaysiakini writers have been called 'a bunch of traitors' by the government, according to the Christian Science Monitor. Some Malaysiakini supporters see the site as the central voice against freedom and intolerance.

Middle East-

Iran-Iranian President Mohammed Khatami met with Russian President Vladimir Putin to discuss nuclear energy. They also discussed arms deals and Mr. Putin agreed to supply Tehran with weapons. However, the Russians only agreed to supply the country with defensive weapons, as not to break international arms agreements.

The United States fears that the Russian-Iranian partnership in arms and nuclear energy could eventually spark the creation of nuclear weapons in Iran. Iran claims that the nuclear plant would only be used for energy purposes and would be maintained by international civilian monitors.

Turkey-The Turkish stock market plummeted after investors fled yesterday. The index plunged after the Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit announced that he would have a new plan within days to counteract the sagging economy.

The economy has been in shambles since the government said goodbye to currency exchange rate controls in February. Price hikes and layoffs have become common.

The state minister said that it would meet with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund on differing plans of attack to boost the Turkish economy. Economists believe that the key to strengthening the economy is restructuring the banking system.

Privatization is another idea being looked at for the country, as well as selling off parts of the telecommunications industries. Citizens and investors are hoping for a speedy recovery.

Compiled by Catherine Turner.

MARK HOLLOWAY/COLLEGIAN

Sorry we don't take Canadian...

The grad lounge has recently decided no longer accept Canadian money

■ profs

continued from page 1

Humanities and Fine Arts, will translate the talk into English.

This event is sponsored by the fledgling UMass Russian Club, which is seeking funding and Registered Student Organization (RSO) status from the Student Government Association (SGA). For more information about the lecture or the club, contact Anna at (413)546-5271 or faktorovich@netscape.net.

– Tanya Mannes

There will be a meeting for all night and copy editors Wednesday at 6:30 p.m.

MARK HOLLOWAY/COLLEGIAN

Okay, go ahead...drop it.....

A student studies outside the Snack Shop in the Student Union yesterday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

Bartenders Have More Spirit!
www.bostonbartender.com
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

Unplanned Pregnancy?
Call Someone Who Can Help.
413-584-0441
A FULL CIRCLE adoptions
• If you have an unplanned pregnancy, we're here to listen and help
• Free neutral options counseling 24 hours a day
• You can choose to parent or to select from loving adoptive families
• Allowable living expenses
• Ten years Adoption Experience
39 Main Street, Northampton, MA 01060 adoption@fullcircleadoptions.com

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route)

The Black Sheep
THE BLACK SHEEP has been serving the UMass community for over 15 years.
We are a delicatessen, all butter scratch bakery, gourmet food purveyor and full service caterer.
THE BLACK SHEEP is renowned for providing the most memorable and best tasting GRADUATION PARTIES in the Valley.
Stop by for a cup of coffee, overstuffed sandwich, or homemade dessert and see what we have to offer.
THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST. AMHERST
253-3442
OCMP, VISA/MASTERCARD ACCEPTED.

What is TOAST!?
TOAST! is an improvisational theater group featuring the audio/visual aspects of:
Theater
Music
Video
Art Display
TOAST! performances are FREE and occur on the last Tuesday of every month in the Student Union Ballroom at 8:00 SHARP!
Bring your friends, your funny bone, and your imagination on March 27th to this FREE EVENT!
Student Valley Productions
The Creators of-- Mission:IMPROVable & Casual Sketch
This month's TOAST! performance is entitled: "What Once Was Lost..."
This project made possible in part by: The Umass Arts Council and The SACEF

IU frosh dies after freakish keg accident

By Cory Schouten
Indiana Daily Student

(U-WIRE) - The Indiana University freshman who died last month of blunt force trauma to the head struck his head on a metal door casing a few minutes after performing a keg stand at Theta Chi fraternity, police said. When Seth Korona fell backward and struck his head, people around him thought he had passed out from drinking, according to an IU police press release.

According to police, Monroe County Prosecutor Carl Salzmann has decided not to file charges in the case, saying there was no "criminal nexus." Salzmann could not be reached for further comment Friday.

Korona, 19, died Feb. 4 of bleeding in the brain caused by the head trauma, Monroe County Coroner David Toumey said. Korona attended a Jan. 27-28 party at the Theta Chi, was hospitalized Jan. 29 and remained in a coma until his death.

When Korona fell, people around him thought he had just passed out from drinking and didn't think they needed to call an ambulance, IUPD Lt. Jerry Minger said.

Toumey said that if doctors had known immediately that Korona had sustained a blow to the head, they might have been able to do more to treat him.

According to the police report:

At 7 p.m. Jan. 27, Korona and several friends ate dinner at a local restaurant. Afterward, they walked to a friend's apartment and drank several beers.

At 11:30 p.m. Jan. 27, Korona attended a rush party at Theta Chi in the company of friends and fraternity members.

At 3 a.m. Jan. 28, Korona left his friends and went upstairs to the second floor where kegs of beer were located and available to everyone at the party. Within a few minutes of performing a "keg stand," Korona fell backward and his head struck the side of a metal door casing, rendering him unconscious for a short time.

People thought he had passed out from drinking. When he regained consciousness, several Theta Chi members assisted Korona to a nearby room to lie down. Korona asked to be left alone to rest while house members stayed with him to make sure his condition did not worsen.

Police said people interviewed described a "keg stand" as a person doing a handstand over a keg of beer while drinking from the spout or tap.

Between 9:50 and 10:50 a.m. Jan. 28, members of Theta Chi transported Korona back to his dorm room in Foster Quad and made phone calls throughout the day to check on his condition.

At 7:30 p.m. Jan. 29, a telephone call was placed to the IU Police Department requesting an ambulance to transport Korona to the Bloomington Hospital. IUPD officers and EMTs arrived to find Korona in a semi-conscious state, unable to speak coherently. Friends at the scene told police that Seth had only been complaining of a headache. Seth was transported and admitted to Bloomington Hospital.

At 7:30 p.m. Feb. 4, Korona was removed from life support.

During the afternoon of Feb. 5, an autopsy was performed at Toumey gave IUPD the preliminary information that there was evidence of blunt force trauma to the head, and an investigation was initiated.

RYAN BENHARRIS/COLLEGIAN

Saying Goodbye

James "Bruiser" Flint shares a moment with Jack Leaman, the winningest coach in UMass men's basketball history, following the final installment of Flint's weekly radio show.

BU student pleads not guilty to murder count

By Dave D'Onofrio
The Daily Free Press (Boston U.)

(U-WIRE) A Boston University medical student was arraigned on murder and weapons charges Wednesday, with prosecutors alleging he is responsible for a March 2 shooting in Jamaica Plain that left one man dead and another comatose.

Prosecutors claim Daniel Mason, 35, drove to the Jamaica Plain apartment of 28-year-old Gene Yazgur and shot him and his roommate, Michael Lenz, 25, while they slept, though the defendant maintains his innocence and pleaded not guilty last week in Roxbury District Court.

Suffolk County Assistant District Attorney Josh Wall alleged Mason, clad in a black knit hat, entered the apartment at around 5:30 a.m. on Friday morning toting a 9 mm shotgun he had owned since 1992. His first victim, according to the prosecutor, was Lenz, who he killed by shooting him in the temple.

Mason then allegedly entered Yazgur's bedroom and shot him in the chin. When Yazgur woke and attempted to escape, Mason fired at his chest, knocking him to the floor, Wall said. Mason, who was reportedly trained as an assassin in the Israeli military, allegedly then shot Yazgur in each leg, breaking both his femurs. Before fleeing the apartment, Mason also fired on Yazgur's dog Sampson, Wall said.

A past incident may have motivated the attack. Mason was placed on probation after he was convicted of assault stemming from a September 1997 traffic incident occurring after Yazgur reportedly parked his moving truck in a spot where it blocked Mason's car. When Mason asked Yazgur, then an employee of a moving company, to move the truck, he was reportedly told to wait five minutes.

Instead, Mason reportedly punched Yazgur in the face with an object he drew from his pants pocket, slashing Yazgur's face.

Following a lawsuit, a judge last August ordered Mason to pay Yazgur more than $118,000 over a 20-year span. That day, according to The Boston Globe, Mason made a promise to Yazgur in the courtroom before he left. "You'll never see a penny," Mason vowed.

On March 1, the day before Lenz and Yazgur were shot, a sheriff's office ordered Mason to make his first payment of the settlement.

Mason is being held without bail. Police were alerted to the history between the two men by Yazgur's lawyer, and Mason was arrested Monday at Boston Medical Center as he worked with patients.

Yazgur remains in a coma at the same hospital. Police, however, did not release the location of the hospital at which Yazgur was being treated until after a suspect was apprehended, knowing of Mason's military background and fearing for Yazgur's safety.

Born in Worcester, Mason is a U.S.-born Israeli citizen who trained in a special commando unit of the Israeli military before leaving Israel and going to Dartmouth College to study history in 1988. His legal troubles began there; while at Dartmouth, he was arrested following a dispute over weights at a gym, but was never convicted and instead ordered to undergo psychological testing.

He graduated from Dartmouth in 1993, the same year he was arrested for breaking into a girlfriend's house and threatening to murder her. A year later, he enrolled in the Boston University School of Medicine.

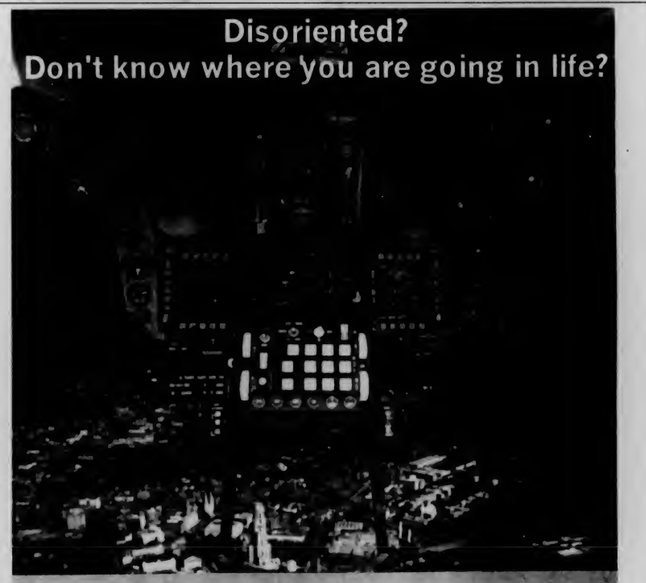
Mason was scheduled to graduate in May. He was to begin work in a pediatrics rotation tomorrow at North Shore Children's Hospital.

Yazgur, who lived in Brookline after moving from the Soviet Union, is currently employed as a computer engineer. He and Lenz, who was a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, were reportedly up talking and drinking cocktails into the early morning the night before they were shot.

God wants you to Write for News!

GREAT Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass
2 A great place to get contact lenses
3 FREE sample start-up contact lens solutions
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases
5 Contact Lenses mail ordered directly to your home or office
6 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames
Special Offer: $25 off any second pair of complete prescription eyeglasses within three months of a first complete pair of prescription eyeglasses (excluding insurance provided eyeglasses) at the UHS for the same patient
UHS Eye Care Services
For Appointments or questions, call 577-5244
"I invite you to use the Eye Care Services"
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services

getinvolved!
3 in 5
Americans will be affected by an alcohol-related crash in their lifetime.
Mothers Against Drunk Driving and a coalition of UMass students invite all interested students to attend an informational meeting for the formation of the UMass chapter of MADD.
Tuesday, March 13, 2000
7:00 pm
Campus Center
Room 811-15

Disoriented?
Don't know where you are going in life?


WE CAN HELP
Contact us for more information on job and scholarship opportunities
Captain Chris Lane
UMASS Air Force ROTC
(413) 545-2437 afrotc@acad.umass.edu

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Bruiser's dismissal: other sports do exist

Bruiser Flint is no longer the head coach of the Massachusetts men's basketball team. This resignation ends months of speculation, media attention, and fan ire. The team can now get a fresh start.

So what?

The fact that the hoops team garnered so much attention because it was so bad is an insult to the rest of the sports teams on this campus who do so very well, yet receive little or no support or attention from the student body.

Bruiser Flint is gone because his team was terrible. The fact that the student body cares more about basketball when it is bad than it does about lacrosse when it's ranked No. 9 (which, by the way, it is) does not speak well to our school spirit or athletic appreciation.

Our field hockey team this past season was phenomenal. It not only made it to the Final 8, but it hosted, here on this campus, the Atlantic-10 Tournament. Where were you?

The attendance at the tournament was pathetic. A nationally attended event with the best teams in the conference and a UMass team that was doing well on campus was virtually ignored. And yet the basketball team losing is big news.

The UMass softball team regularly flirts with, enters and exits, the top 25. But Bruiser Flint quit – and that's big news.

Minuteman lacrosse is ranked No. 9. Of all the schools in the United States of America, we have the one which is better than all but eight of the teams in existence, and has the potential to climb even higher. Garber Field, on its best day, cannot even hold the crowd which saw the hoops team get squashed by Temple at the Mullins Center.

Women's water polo is, in the words of one fan consulted for this editorial, "absolutely nasty." Can you name a position played in this sport?

Women's crew. Men and women's gym. Track. Tennis. Skiing. Can you name the same amount of players on these teams that you can on the basketball team that consistently fails to make the postseason?

The time has come for the students of this campus to reevaluate their priorities and broaden their horizons. UMass was made famous athletically by the basketball and, recently, the football programs, but they are not the be all and end all of University athletics.

In crying or rejoicing in Bruiser's demise, perhaps you should realize that there are other sporting options right here at home. Go to Garber and watch lacrosse, head to the Boyden for water polo and make a mental note to check out field hockey next season.

It's time for us all to wise up to the athletic superiority all around us, and stop paying so much attention to a mediocre basketball team.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Snow-Mart

Snow. The very word strikes fear in the heart of grocery store customers everywhere. With last week's much-hyped blizzard striking fear in the hearts of consumers, all hell broke loose in the fine South Hadley grocery store establishment that I work in. You know all those articles that said grocery stores everywhere were empty? They were no joke. Let me guide you through my weekend.

Bright and early Saturday morning, I get up for work. Not at 8:00 a.m., or even 7:00. My sorry butt is out of bed at 5:15 a.m. (and people wonder why I don't stay on campus Friday night), and I'm at work from six to three. That's before the butt crack of dawn, as we say back in the hometown of Chicopee. Before sunrise. I'm on the road and prepping greens.

Never in my life, and in my almost three years in the store, have I seen such chaos as before last week's storm. The funny thing is the way that the storm snuck up on all of us – everyone I work with in the produce department expected it to be busy because the store was running a "Buy One, Get Two Free" sale, but nobody really knew about the storm coming, and the onslaught of people that goes with it.

It has been long joked in grocery stores that the weather guys and the grocery store front office brass are in cahoots. Everyone knows that when the weather report says snow or ice, the world goes to the grocery store, and then fills their car with gas. It's just the way things work. But this storm was ridiculous; it brought new meaning to the words panic-stricken and stocking up. Does a 75 year-old really need 15 pounds of potatoes for Monday and Tuesday between him and his wife Phyllis? Does a mother of two really need nine bags of salad? Nine bags!?? Who's she feeding, the killer Easter Bunny?

The people came pouring in, shopping carts, pillowcases and dump trucks in tow to snag as much food as possible. Although the store opens at seven, usually it's kind of quiet until after nine. Not this day, kemosabe. The place was buzzing at 7:30 a.m., and we couldn't keep the food coming out fast enough. One customer after another commented that, gee, it was really busy today. Then they invariably would say that they never shop on Saturday but they want to beat the storm. Figure it out, geniuses. Maybe y'all just had the same idea. Rumors floated around that we were getting two, and then later in the day, at least three feet of snow. "Three feet!" I cried out skeptically. Customers filled their baskets like it was a shopping spree on Billy Bulger, and the manager in charge of the store told me that they were predicting the end of the world.

By 11 a.m. on Saturday, things were insane. I couldn't get to the cases to fill them, so people shopped out of the boxes that I was rolling out on carts. Amused, I rolled out 1,300 pounds worth of bagged potatoes on a pallet and loaded up the display. They disappeared in a half hour! Gone! That's hardcore shoppin', folks.

DAN LAMOTHE

Customers grew weary as supplies started to get low in the afternoon. "What do you mean I can only buy fifteen pounds of salad mix?" an eighty-year old customer asked me. "I need to feed my dog Fifi until it stops snowing on Tuesday!" I'm guessing Fifi isn't a poodle, but whatever. The limit on the sale applies to pets too, so I stuck with my guns on that one, let me tell ya.

Sunday I worked nine to five. Things were even more interesting than on Saturday, because the warehouse didn't have any food left to send us. "Dan, we didn't get half of what we ordered," the full-timer in charge mumbled to me as I walked in the door swaggering.

"So what dude, we're short on the scallions again?" I ask.

"Nooo, we're short on everything. The potatoes are short, the onions are short, the salad is short. We're screwed," he tells me.

"Oh." Personally, I don't really care as far as the sales go. I'm just a part-timer. I do my job and go home. But when a store orders 120 cases of something on sale and gets 10, there's usually trouble. I have to deal with the irate customers with pillowcases and shopping carts and dump trucks and dogs named Fifi, so I don't enjoy explaining why we don't have what they want. It's a part of the job though, so I'll deal.

Sunday plods on just like Saturday, with the exception that we're running out of ammunition and the people are still pouring in. What's a brother to do? Nope, sorry, don't have it. It's about all I can say. Meanwhile, we're getting wiped out store wide on everything from cucumbers to yogurt. Slowly but surely, the entire store is going to pot. On my way back from the other end of the store looking for a pallet jack, four customers stop me. Nope, sorry sir, no tartar sauce. Nope, sorry ma'am, no paper towels or toilet paper left on sale. Taking a walk through the store was nearly impossible.

By 3:00 p.m., I was making rain checks for onions, potatoes, baby carrots, oranges and scallions – all of which were on sale. Things got still worse: by five, there was not a single loaf of white bread to be had in the store and all of our bananas were gone. You don't run out of bread and bananas in a grocery store! It just doesn't happen! About the only thing that pisses people off more than that is when we run out of milk. I checked out at five, as a load came in and the limited amount of stuff on the truck went straight to the sales floor. It's a good thing nobody went shopping on Monday, because the stores were bare anyway!

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

A campus divided

MATTHEW DESPRES

I'd like to preface this article by stating a few things about myself.

I grew up in a predominantly white, middle-class town, 10 minutes north of Boston. I've always had food on my table, a roof over my head and, most importantly, a strong education. Fortunately, I've never had to struggle for anything, and wouldn't be so foolish to think that any time in my life I've had to go without. I haven't, and here, I won't pretend I have. That said: you know where I'm coming from.

The United States census bureau recently released its findings for the year 2000, reporting a marked national growth in outside cultures. One Associated Press story ran the following lead with its story on the new statistics: "A portrait of an increasingly diverse America emerged Thursday from the first official release of Census 2000 data as hundreds of thousands of people took advantage of the opportunity to identify themselves as members of more than one race."

A diverse nation certainly sounds like something to applaud, but, as always, numbers can be misleading. That hundreds of thousands of people are taking the opportunity to properly identify themselves is an appropriate step in the right direction, but this census, and the results that it produced, raise a new question entirely: When will these people take advantage of their ability to identify and exist with members of more than one race? Diversity is not simply housing multiple nationalities and cultures in a given area. It's not even close.

I raise the question because the picture painted by the census is once again coming to the forefront here at the University of Massachusetts. This campus has been inundated with ALANA (African, Latino, Asian, Native American) issues, and accusations are flying from all possible sides. The ALANA students are angry because minority admissions have gone down, and funding for certain ALANA activities and groups have been decreased or cut. A large part of that, according to them, is due to the University dismissing affirmative action a few years back, a decision that, to some, helped to further divide an already fractured campus. Perhaps the absence of affirmative action has, in fact, affected the ALANA numbers. However, what does raising percentages for the sake of meeting quotas accomplish? If student enrollment drops a bit for the sake of taking in those students with a genuine interest and desire to truly integrate the student community, then I'm all for that. To simply select students based on color, though, and raise enrollment, only to have this campus look like a patchwork quilt with each section a different group, is a waste of everyone's time.

As I mentioned before, diversity is not hand-picking students and placing them all together in the confines of a campus. Diversity comes into play when those students interact, whether that is academically, socially or in any one of the other ways that a college environment provides. As adults, we should be the ones taking active steps to grasp and meet what is around us, not whining and moaning and placing the blame on the University. We need to diversify our immediate community: UMass could accept an equal number of all races, and if they don't mix and communicate when here, then not a damn thing has been accomplished. Look around, because that's what's happening here, right now, all around you.

In theory, I do understand why a grouping such as ALANA comes off as an attractive concept. They are a group of students that has taken a passionate stand to include more minorities in this school, to diversify and level the playing field. Again, in theory, It's an idea with a passion behind it that can't be faulted. However, if ALANA students (or any other group of a similar nature) are serious about gaining ground toward an equal campus community, then isn't their very name of a hypocritical nature? While they include the most prevalent minorities, any group of this type is exclusionary by nature. It's not all encompassing: someone, somewhere, is being left out. By giving themselves the name they have, the goal of equality they are so intent on reaching has been stopped dead in its tracks.

For a moment, take everything you may know about the issue and toss it out the window. Pretend you pick up a paper in the morning, and on the front page see a headline proclaiming the formation of a group, by white students, that is intent on seeing more poor, white students accepted and enrolled at UMass. They harbor no hatred, no ill will toward any group, but rather a genuine interest in seeing these students get a fair shake. It's ALANA, in reverse, and I can guarantee you that there would be Hell to pay, and that each and every one of those students would be marked as racist and intent on muffling a campus in dire need of diversity. They would respond that it is an attempt to diversify, that the poor deserve to learn as much as the wealthy, or middle-class, and that this is their way of saying that.

Which, for me, is where the real focus should be. I'm sure there is no shortage of white children out there, struggling to make ends meet and being passed over when it comes to a shot at higher education. I feel bad for them, but no worse simply because I share their skin color. I feel bad, equally, for anyone in that situation.

This hypothetical situation is no different from what's going on now, here at our University. The purpose of integration and diversity, I believe, is to take the focus off of race, and groups like ALANA, and missions like affirmative action stand in direct opposition to that, putting the spotlight back on, in some cases harsher than before. They succeed in reinforcing the idea of segregation that we are trying to eliminate. Where that will get is something I'll never understand.

I do feel bad for those minority students that have trouble in school, and find difficulty in gaining admittance to college. I don't limit myself to that, though. I sympathize for every student – black, white or blue – that struggles to further his/her education. An answer lies somewhere; that answer, however, is not affirmative action as we see it today, or groups like ALANA. If universities are as dedicated to raising minority enrollment as they say they are, then the process of placing those students should begin long before they reach college age. Reach out to the low-income families that need help the most. Don't reach out to their color.

Colleges and universities need to begin making concerted efforts to get into less-privileged communities – not white, black or Asian communities, but communities where children, regardless of color, need an extra boost that others can't afford. What these schools do once there is up to them, and remains unique to each situation. They can offer classes, activities, or programs. They can offer what is perhaps the most valuable commodity, time, which is something that most of these children get little of from parents or teachers. And don't tell me they can't afford it; with the amount of money that gets poured into athletic programs, and into the pockets of professors that half-ass their way through a class, there is certainly something there that will get the ball rolling. It's simply a matter of wanting to.

Problems like these do not begin in college. They begin years earlier, in communities all over this country, where they remain ignored. The problems appear to begin now because those small children grow up and gain a voice, which at this time knows only frustration and struggle. We need to get to that voice early, and help it, no matter what it looks like, to accomplish anything. There's a lot of hot air being tossed around on this campus lately, and all the real problems are being overlooked because we're too interested in digging at one another. Let's get off of our pedestals for a moment and discuss things civilly; without that exchange, we'll continue to push ourselves further apart, and that's no road to continue down.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist.

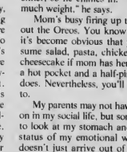
Write for Ed/Op!

What if this is as good as it gets?



RYAN BENHARRIS

My parents think I'm anorexic. I'm not anorexic; I'm actually quite healthy. I didn't even realize I was old enough to have that conversation with my parents yet. You know the conversation I'm talking about? It's the one where you walk in the house after being away for a month and your mom looks at you with disgust and says, "You're not eating. Why not?" Angry and a little surprised, you defensively answer, "I eat, I eat all the time." She doesn't buy it. Your dad knows she doesn't buy it. He doesn't buy it either, so he chimes in. "You need to stop losing so much weight," he says.

Mom's busy firing up the stove, and dad's busting out the Oreos. You know you don't want to eat, but it's become obvious that you're about ready to consume salad, pasta, chicken, broccoli and a piece of cheesecake if mom has her say. It'll be cookies, chips, a hot pocket and a half-pint of Ben and Jerry's if dad does. Nevertheless, you'll be eating. You don't want to.

My parents may not have a clue about what's going on in my social life, but somehow they have the ability to look at my stomach and make a statement on the status of my emotional well-being. Their statement doesn't just arrive out of the blue though. I have a very long history of being over sensitive about my weight. For years I was overweight. I was the fat kid. The basketball team didn't want me. Abercrombie and Fitch wasn't returning my my inquires of a modeling job, and the ladies didn't like me.

About two years ago I started jogging daily. I lost a lot of weight. I'm still extremely conscious about my size, and am not happy with my figure. I, however, am in much better shape. In case you're wondering, it didn't change much. The basketball team doesn't want me, and A&F laughed at me. At least one thing has changed. I'm now a chick magnet (or a compulsive liar).

The weight thing has become a big part of my life. This past Saturday night, I figured out why. I had a bunch of opportunities to go out on Saturday. I decided not to though. I decided that I'd rather sit home, watch TV and not worry about anything at all. As Good as it Gets was on TNT. I've seen it before, many times actually, but never like this. There was something much more obvious about the film that I had missed each and every other time I watched it. I am the spitting image of Jack Nicholson's character, Melvin Udall.

On the surface, this isn't a bad thing. Melvin's a good-looking guy. Somewhere inside him is a sweet and caring man. He gets the girl. It's a happy story. Unfortunately, overshadowing of all of that mushy happiness, Melvin has a part of him that simply develops the essence of the character. He has an astute attention to detail, while obsessing about the perfection of his surroundings.

Melvin doesn't step on cracks. He doesn't touch anything in a public place without gloves. He's mean to everyone, and appears to only care about himself. But as the film progresses, we watch him change: or so we think.

Melvin is obsessively insane. He is a perfectionist and everything must be in a specifically ideal order. When Helen Hunt's character jokes that there is no way to pack her suitcase to go on a trip with Melvin, the director cuts to Melvin neatly packing everything he owns into a finely made suitcase.

I think the most explicate example of Melvin's compulsivity is how he labels his CDs. "To use for an icebreaker" he has on one. "To pep things up," is written on another. When he's really in trouble, he breaks out the CD branded, "for emergency use only." The details that almost any other human being would automatically assume are the minor things in life, Melvin cherishes and uses as part of his goal of perfection. I can relate to that on so many different levels.

Melvin is also an extreme pessimist, as am I. Some of the things he says, I have thought every day of my life for the past twenty-one years. "It's the worst sidewalk in New York, and look where they put it," he says about the walkway he must use to get to work. The cracks and holes are nothing more than distinct obstacles deliberately preventing him from getting where he needs to be.

Melvin is obnoxious. People applaud when he leaves a room. The woman he truly loves says, "I'm not going to sleep with you. Not ever! Ever," and "Try not to ruin everything by being you!"

At the beginning of the movie, Melvin finds companionship in a dog he so desperately wants to hate. When the dog is taken away from him, he cries. He cries, and says to himself, "Over a dog; over an ugly dog!" I can't begin to think of all the times I've cried over a dog; an ugly dog. Now, bear in mind that both "crying and "ugly dog" are relative terms. I don't usually physically cry about anything, and certainly not over dogs, but for every time I've hated a woman for shooting me down or loathed the world for making me fail a test, it's just been simple crying over a dog: an ugly dog.

The one scene in the film that encompassed my full admission of acceptance into the Melvin Udall world was the classic restaurant scene that the film has become famous for. The, "you make me want to be a better man line," is what everyone remembers, but was the kiss afterwards that really hit me. After Helen Hunt, Melvin's obvious reason for living, pressed her lips to his, he was completely lost.

Despite all of his preparations and compulsiveness, when something really mattered, Melvin was completely unexpecting. He got cold feet, jitterbugs and butterflies in the stomach. There are some things that you just cannot practice. Melvin's situation proves that affection is the epitome of those things. Those butterflies are the worst feeling in the entire world.

With everything else aside, it's what Melvin says to another character that really illustrates my life in a nutshell. "What makes it so hard is not that you have it so bad," he says. "But that you're so pissed that others have it so good."

It's so true. In my overwhelming desire to achieve perfection, I constantly have to fight the utter bitterness I have for anyone who has it better than I do. I'm almost as jealous when someone tells me they found a job after graduation, as I am when I watch an insanely happy couple kiss each other. It doesn't matter how hard I strive to perfect myself, if you have things better than me, there's nothing I can do about that.

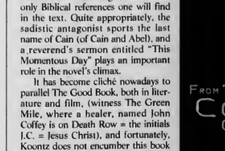
When the film ends, Melvin tells Helen Hunt that she is the greatest person alive, and knowing this makes him feel good about himself. After all of the desperation and obsessing, this is the only thing in the entire film that Melvin talks about that makes him feel good. This has forever been my ultimate life goal; to make someone else realize how perfect they actually are.

Though Melvin may be a sad person, As Good as it Gets is a comedy. It has a happy ending. Though Melvin is not perfect, he has the ability to adapt himself into his all-encompassing vision of perfection. In doing so, he learns that he can't employ, moments of apprehension or excitement are not very common, a severe change from one of modern fiction's most unbeaten suspense authors.

Where Koontz could really have made a killing in From the Corner of His Eye is with the dimension-jumping juvenile. The reader can see Koontz struggling throughout the book to further the development of this facet, but it's not until the final fifty pages that it really expands. So close to the end of the book, the reader becomes disinterested that anything extraordinary will be explained about it, and lo and behold, nothing really does. One doesn't expect to become an expert on quantum mechanics, but Koontz offers no real explanation for the boy's ability, only a bizarre and concise attempt at giving closure.

Instead of From the Corner of His Eye, it would have been more apt to call it Off the Top of His Head, since there is no true flow or coherence it. It fails to pick up any sort of momentum, and drags on too long. Throughout the story, enigmatic details and plot points are included, but end up being left behind and abandoned.

Where Koontz excels is with the cold-blooded Cain, the most developed, and – dare I say it? – likeable character. At first the reader assumes that Koontz wants Cain's naivety to be charming and comical. As the pages turn, though, and it draws nearer to the final showdown, there is some part of the reader who wants Cain to actually commit the dastardly deeds he so desires. Koontz's novels have always been a triumph of good over evil, and to find the author creating a villain who the reader wants to win is unusual, to say the least. Koontz becomes so lost in developing the protagonists that he gets sidetracked and sticks with the only thing that might be memorable about this book, the quirky killer.



Koontz's new thriller novel

In recent years, Koontz has most definitely been trying to get away from the horror genre where he found fame, and move on toward more mature and less gaudy material (1999's False Memory and 1994's Sole Survivor). This strategy is in very much the same vein as fellow macabre cohort Stephen King, who started the trend with his novels The Green Mile and Hearts In Atlantis. As prolific a writer as he is, Koontz's most engaging works and largest fan following are because of the plethora of books he's penned about bloodthirsty monsters or ghostly visitors.

His attempts at less ghoulish, supernatural fare are indeed fascinating, and wanting to try new areas of fiction is extremely admirable. But unlike Stephen King, and similar to author John Saul, Koontz's best work is when dealing with the things that go bump in the night. From the Corner of His Eye lacks this Koontzian trademark, as well as doesn't offer any evidence that Koontz may have newfound success in the field of drama.

On the back of the hardcover edition we see Koontz in profile, leering out of the corner of his eye at the reader, one side of his face illuminated whilst the other is giving a small smirk in the dark. While the author's bright side looks promising as it emerges from the black, we can't help but be drawn to his sly sneer in the dark, reminding us of when the name Dean Koontz was synonymous with fear. From the Corner of His Eye might make us believe in a higher power's influence over us, but there's nothing haunting about it.

Arab Strap: Hanging by a thin Red Thread

By Ping
Collegian Staff

ARAB STRAP
The Red Thread
Matador Records

Having never died before, I am not at liberty to comment on the experience. But if I had, I imagine it would sound something like this.

Vocalist Aidan Moffat and guitarist Malcolm Middleton are Arab Strap, the less than dynamic (and certainly not cheerful) duo from Scotland. With the release of their most recent album The Red Thread, their subject matter and overall tone of deprecation and loathing hasn't really shifted, but it certainly seems to have come more into focus. The maturity of experience and mistakes makes this the most accomplished Arab Strap album to date.

Moffat and Middleton find themselves using a formula well known to those familiar with their work. A progressive tonal droning with melodic sprinklings is the best way to describe it, really. Accompanying this sonic moaning is Moffat's voice, which is less singing than a combination of distressed/mumbled crooning and spoken word distopia. This unique sound has always been the forte of Arab Strap, but whereas Elephant Shoe found them cleaning up their act, and Philophobia often feeling a little thin at times, on The Red Thread, they pull out all the stops.

Drum loops creep eerily, pianos and strings integrate seamlessly and the occasional sample and post-production tweaks make for a fuller, more engaging sound. Songs like "Love Detective," which features a piano line reminiscent of a Peanuts (ala Charlie Brown) cartoon, and "Haunt Me" show off the ability of these two to create layered and textured tones without losing their beautiful simplicity. But ultimately the songs hinge on Middleton's listless strumming and Moffat's intrepid lyrics as demonstrated by "Amor Verenis," which kicks off this album with the enthusiasm that only a grown man sobbing could convey.

And speaking of Moffat's lyrics, if it weren't for his all-obscuring Scottish burr, we might realize how filthy and salacious a mind he actually has. Rather than reproduce some of the more inappropriate lines, let's simply state that the likes of Li'll Kim would probably blush repeating his words. Well, probably not, the difference being that Ms. Kim is all sex and no sorrow and Moffat uses the song as a vehicle to remove himself from the sorrows of sex and relationships.

Moffat writes with the brutal honesty equivalent to a severe flogging, and this is most apparent as the album closes out and he leaves an inebriated message to a former lover which frankly states, "I wish I was dead, and that's fuckin' serious."

The album is just about the saddest thing audible, but to a certain degree; but as much of an accomplishment this is, it is also the album's greatest fault. To maintain the feel, the pace of the album is almost completely stagnant, and while it sets the mood, it can be somewhat overwhelming and even monotonous. Not to mention that Moffat has an almost perplexing number of stories about the same subject (sex and depression) with slight variants. There are few songwriters who tell the story of despair better, and listening to the album from beginning to end is great on occasion, but proves too be too much on the whole.

When you get down to it, though, the album will probably prove to be one of the best released this year with their elegantly unique sound being a highlight. Creepy and full of candor, it is an hour-long journey into what it means to live an embittered life, the Scottish way. But be forewarned, The Red Thread is not for the faint of heart or those who cry easily.

COURTESY OF MATADOR

Arab Strap, purveyors of Scottish gloom.

Koontz abandons horror to plod through bad drama

Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

FROM THE CORNER OF HIS EYE
Dean Koontz
Bantam Books

Since I began writing for the Collegian in early September of 2000, I have seen few (if any) reviews of novels or short stories. This is an understandable predicament, especially on a college campus, since students are weighted down with so many class readings that there is practically no time left for leisurely literacy. T quench the appetite of any bookworms out there, herein is a review of one of my favorite scribe's latest novels, Dean Koontz's From the Corner of His Eye.

From the Corner of His Eye refers to the eye of God, about whom the books says, "with so much on His shoulders, He can't always watch us directly...with His fullest attention every minute, but He's always at least watching from the corner of His eye." Mention of the Man Upstairs and the names of two central characters, Bartholomew and Angel, are not the only Biblical references one will find in the text. Quite appropriately, the sadistic antagonist sports the last name of Cain (of Cain and Abel), and a reverend's sermon entitled "This Momentous Day" plays an important role in the novel's climax.

It has become cliché nowadays to parallel The Good Book, both in literature and film, (witness The Green Mile, where a healer, named John Coffey is on Death Row = the initials J.C. = Jesus Christ), and fortunately, Koontz does not encumber this book as such. He tries to center it on a boy who can travel between dimensions and alternate universes in a "Quantum Leap" meets Back to the Future sort of way. Certainly, this has been done before, but in Koontz's hands you never know what to expect.

That is, unless you're reading From the Corner of His Eye. In the very first paragraph, on the very first page, the events to come are all laid out for the reader, later spoiling any sense of intrigue or unpredictability. The reader is left merely to watch the inevitable events unfold, leaving little to the imagination. When reading the initial few sentences, though, Koontz's clever prose captivates the attention, resulting in a thirst for more. Yet as the book progresses and one gets caught up in the riveting suspense of the moment, hopes are dashed when the brief synopsis at the story's start again disappointingly dawns on the reader. Because of this storytelling device Koontz chooses to make other people perfect, he can just hope to achieve his own happiness through self-improvement and from that tremendous feeling you can get by making someone else content.

And this, my dear friends, is why I decided that I am so much like Melvin Udall. Through a series of difficult life tests he learned that he could lose as much weight as his body can possibly tolerate, but he'll never be able to make his parents stop assuming he's anorexic.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

Crucible in good hands with Theatre partment

By Julie Burrell
Collegian Staff

THE CRUCIBLE
directed by Tim Mahoney with Lindsay Grace Robitaille, Lindsay Grace Robitaille, Brad Ekstrand
March 1-3, Rand Theater

The Crucible is, famously, a response to Senator Joseph McCarthy's accusations of Communism within the Hollywood community. But, a contemporary perspective does not have the added benefit of resonating in the heightened paranoia of Cold War mentality. For the past two weekends, the UMass Theater Department was faced with the problem of finding a transcendent element that can stand independent of its original context.

Still, it is a play based on historical events. In 1692, in Salem, Massachusetts 19 men and women were hanged, and another man pressed to death, on the grounds that they practiced witchcraft. The court that was formed to deal with accusations of witchcraft allowed spectral evidence from local girls believed to be affected by the accused.

Arthur Miller's script is a fictionalization of these events. After some children fall ill, witchcraft is mentioned as being a possible cause. Abigail Williams, the town Reverend's niece, and other girls have been caught dancing and chanting in the woods the previous night. As a way to escape punishment, the girls blame Tituba, a slave. Tituba, in turn, blames others for the same crime. The accusations escalate quickly from there.

Abigail, the obvious leader of the afflicted girls, uses the trials to her own advantage. She and her former employer, John Proctor, have had an affair. The girl sees her power as a way to either win John back, or destroy him. Soon, while the town's most respected citizens are jailed for their imagined crimes, John finds his wife and then himself accused. The whole town has been drawn into the hysteria, and only some can see the injustice in the trials and sentences.

Outside of the hyper-paranoid feelings of the 1950s, the audience can no longer take for granted that the girls were lying. Were they just reacting to inexplicable phenomena around them, or were they consciously manipulating the town?

Certainly, the idea that the girls may not have been lying is an intriguing one. But here, the direction is unclear. Director Tim Mahoney seems to be sitting on the fence about what his final decision is. What results is an ambiguous reading of the script. If the girls were indeed not lying, then the courtroom scenes should have been more hysterical. After all, the girls were responsible for putting people to death. Lindsay Grace Robitaille presents a proud and manipulative Abigail, perfectly suited to the character. She is alternately seductive and desperate in her campaign to win John back and, finally, destroy him. Emily Ruddock as Elizabeth Proctor, John's wife, is impressive as the antithesis of Abigail. She is appropriately cold, and increasingly tender as her marriage is put to the test, and her life threatened.

Brad Ekstrand as John Proctor was sufficiently angry at the injustices being perpetrated. But, he was all anger and no compassion, resulting in a static character seemingly capable of nothing but hatred.

His relationships with the two women are mainly based in their past, which requires establishing a connection. Scenes between John and Abigail, however, were almost completely devoid of passion, despite Robitaille's considerable efforts. And John's scenes with Elizabeth were without love. Ekstrand failed to produce any convincing emotion, save anger.

The ensemble does a fine job with the town's descent into chaotic delirium. A subtle but clear tension underlies their scenes, making obvious the social class distinctions that played into the fear and paranoia.

Technically, set designer Steve Hayes and costume designer Kathleen Iannyn Thaw left nothing to be desired. Working within the Puritanical constraints, they managed to present a historically accurate and aesthetically beautiful visual. Their shrewd reading of the characters gave subtle clues about the characters' social standing and a glimpse into the characters themselves. For instance, the proud Reverend Parris' rich dress looked altogether frivolous next to the more somber and fittingly religious dress of Reverend Hale.

All of the right elements were there. On the whole, though, Mahoney seemed unclear on where he wanted to take his Crucible. The production was hesitant, trying to cover too much ground, and never finally deciding on a clear position. Nevertheless, it proved the independence of the show. The Theater Department has successfully found the basic, human element.

Latest pop act delivers same-old

By Kurt Polesky
Collegian Staff

DREAM
It Was All A Dream
Bad Boy Records

"If aliens came down from outer space and turned on MTV they'd think there was some connection between cosmetic looks and ability to sing in females." – Justin Lewis, former Communication professor at Umass.

The trend of great looks equaling great sales and not necessarily great music continues with the new girl group Dream. The four girls – Dianna, Holly, Melissa, and Ashely – were put together by a Los Angelos talent agency who had green in their eyes before being snatched up by Puff Daddy as his entry into the pop music world.

As expected, with Puffy as the head chef, the result is more of a hip-hop flavored dish "Mr. Telephone," an apparent cover of the 1980s New Edition song. The result is not an album highlight. The Puffy trademark background talking ("yea, yea, Bad Boy. We ain't never gonna stop") is present in small doses, as is background record scratching in tracks like "In My Dream." Still, the album's stronger points come in many of the non-Puffy moments. With money no object, Puffy was able to recruit a solid crop of hitmaking writers and producers, who's job it was to give Dream the necessary Top 40 sound.

Fitting with their target audience, the majority of It Was All A Dream is white suburbia R&B. It's by no means threatening and is usually upbeat. No serious topics are dealt with except the obligatory cheating boyfriend. The production is sharp, and is centered on hooks that are begging to be catchy and repeatable. Although within the same genre, Dream avoids the tantalizing sexual innedundo of Britney and Christina, and seems content with more of a PG sound.

Still, they are not overly bubbly. Their sound has more in common with TLC – most notably in the tracks "Pain" and "Angel Inside" – than the Spice Girls. Even so, Dream doesn't quite have the urban diction necessary to totally take the R&B route. Their sound works in tracks like the chart sizzler "I Love You Not" and "This is Me." Infectious, danceable and upbeat with a touch of edginess, "I Love You Not" stands out as the album's best track.

While the rest of the album may be a dream for teenage girls, it likely will be a nightmare for casual listeners. Even those who like "He Loves You Not" probably won't find much else of substance from Dream's debut. One striking aspect of Dream is that their voices are nearly indistinguishable from one another. Can you say Milli Vanilli? But then again, cookie cutter like pop stars are part of the genre's appeal. The album has some moments that are better than others; "I Don't Like Anyone" and "This is Me" (the album's next single which will feature a Lil Kim "Crush On You" like color coordinated video) come to mind as being slightly better than the rest of the pack. Sure, musically they are weak, but that isn't really an issue with this genre. What matters most is that they meet the criteria of being catchy and repeatable. Too much of the album, however, feels like filler material, and there is a noticeable drag near the end. As the album plays itself out there is noth-

Turn to DREAM, page 06

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Poetry, and glass, in motion

Michael Moschen will perform an evening of awe-inspiring visual poetics and physical science on Friday, March 30, in the Fine Arts Center. For ticket information, call 545-2511.

Rave subculture thriving

techno music, dancing and elitism

By R. Colin Fly
Sidelines (Middle Tennessee State U.)

(U-WIRE) MURFREESBORO, Tenn. – They are the generation whose parents were teenagers during the late 1960s and early 1970s. Their parents fought in Vietnam – or marched against it. Their parents lived in a time of freedom – freedom of thought, free love and drugs. Their parents had something to fight for, a rally cry.

In 2001, they have nothing to fight for. The teenagers and twenty-somethings are involved in a culture that seeks to accept everyone, in a time in our culture where elitism runs rampant.
Enter the rave culture.

To an outsider, the best way to describe a rave is a party open to the public that can last all night featuring disc jockeys who spin techno music accompanied by light and laser shows. Club drugs – in particular ecstasy – are commonplace at the parties.

In an investigation in the cities of Nashville, Atlanta and Washington, D.C., as well as interviews with people who traveled throughout the eastern seaboard attending raves, several points become clear.

* The rave culture has become increasingly mainstream, and children as young as 13 are beginning to enter the scene.

* The rave culture is also dividing into two distinct groups: the people who go for the music and the people who go for the drugs.

* Ecstasy distribution and use throughout the United States has reached an all-time high. All of the ravers interviewed echoed that in the Southeast ecstasy is the hottest drug on the market.

* Government officials in various capacities from various local police to U.S. Customs confirmed ecstasy is entering the drug market at an alarming rate.

* Metro Nashville's Police Department effectively attacked and shut down the growing rave scene with a series of highly publicized raids, leading one person to say that "the rave culture in Nashville is practically dead." However, ecstasy use has continued to grow in the region, spreading into local nightclubs.

* While Nashville remains nearly void of rave parties, Atlanta has a burgeoning rave scene that continues to increase substantially, with drug use rising and police prevention maintained to certain areas of the city.

* Organizations like DanceSafe, which tests drugs and gives them back to users, are thriving in large cities in the West and Northeast, but would fail if proposed in Nashville, according to both ravers and government officials.

Raves have been around for more than 10 years. In 1992, alt.rave, a newsgroup was created to talk about the culture.
According to the alt.rave newsgroup, the concept of raves dates back hundreds of years, comparing the parties to American Indian religious ceremonies and Shamans in Eskimo society.

"The whole concept of raves is peace. Anyone who doesn't fit in, or questions their sexuality, can go there and fit in," Lynn Rosa of Nashville said. "Kids don't go to skating rinks anymore."

Rosa, 23, began raving in early 1998 before getting out of the culture November 1999. During one seven-month period, Rosa attended a rave three out of every four weekends.

"I would travel all the time to Memphis, Atlanta, Jackson, St. Louis and Louisville," she said. "You are surrounded by so many people with good vibes, it's such a wonderful experience."

An acronym in rave culture is PLUR, standing for peace, love, unity and respect. It's supposed to be the creed for the parties and in a great majority of cases, there is no violence associated with raves.

Ravers, who are generally between the ages of 15 and 23, are also highly mobile people and almost all travel across the country. Some children actively participate in the rave culture. While they cannot get their hands on ecstasy, many participate in an activity called "ro-bowing," which involves drinking large quantities of Robitussin to get a cheap high.

However, ravers don't always fit the norm.

Fox Sircy is married and 27 years old. He entered the scene at 21, a time when a majority of people are leaving. In six years, he's traveled to New York City, Philadelphia, central Illinois and nearly everywhere in between to catch parties.

"You meet so many people," Sircy said. "And you make so many friends that tell you where everyone is going next."

Many message boards that talk about ravers commonly have posts from people asking for rides to the next city to make the next party. Fliers are commonly passed out for parties in different cities on different weeks. One flier obtained in Atlanta had listings for parties in Houston, New Orleans, Austin, Texas, Oklahoma City, Charlotte, N.C., Jacksonville, Fla., Birmingham, Ala., Memphis, Little Rock, Ark., St. Louis, Charleston, S.C. and Miami.

Where the parties are held also attract attention.

"The venues were so interesting," Rosa said. "In Memphis, it was an abandoned skating rink. In Louisville, it was a livestock center."

Shannon Petrick, a 23-year-old from Atlanta, spins as a DJ and writes for lunarmagazine.com.

"When I went to my first party, it was much more 'underground' than it is now. It's so commercialized," Petrick said. "Parties were in warehouses that no one knew about. Now, they're advertised everywhere and anyone can come."

As for the generation gap, Jason Wilkerson of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agrees there could be a connection.

"Parents from that time frame may have done drugs themselves and they may be more sympathetic to drug use," he said. "But they don't see the increased violence or the other side of drugs."

And as raves have become more mainstream, so have the drugs – and the other side – that accompanies them.

Ride the Internet with Jon Katz's book, 'Geeks'

By Sam Kean
Minnesota Daily (U. Minnesota)

(U-WIRE) MINNEAPOLIS – With a technology culture playing an increasing role in daily life, more and more geeks may find themselves where they never thought they could be: on the inside, with the rest of the world trying to look over their shoulder. But it hasn't always been that way.

Jon Katz's Geeks: How Two Lost Boys Rode the Internet out of Idaho documents the shift of geek culture into the mainstream and examines how geeks suddenly in the spotlight adjust to their role as the new elite of a world driven by technology.

Geeks is the story of recent high school graduates Jesse Dailey and Eric Twiliger and their geek pilgrimage to high-tech jobs in urban America with the help of Katz.

Some geeks claim Katz exploited Jesse and Eric's lives for his own gain. But Katz prefers to look at the thousands of teenagers who have e-mailed him, saying they use Geeks to explain and justify their own lives.

Katz sprinkles his book with some of these emails, providing those in the mainstream a peek at geek culture: the movement of independent youngsters – Katz calls them "viscerally libertarian" – who have an almost mystical trust in technology and the Internet.

But the distance between geeks and the mainstream remains. Some of the more illuminating parts of the book concern Katz's inability to comprehend geeks. He is as sympathetic as anyone to the pain of being an ostracized geek – a few chapters deal directly with the Columbine shootings and the subsequent harassment of geeks worldwide – but Katz never quite reconciles his baby-boomer mentality with geek culture.

Jesse and Eric's lives don't change with the move. They arrive in Chicago with few friends and no money and still spend nights and weekends with the shades drawn, surfing the Internet and hovering around their computers.

They admit they will always be geeks, a term technology-adept teenagers around the word have adopted to band together and lessen the sting of social stigma.

But the book is undeniably Jesse's. In him, Katz finds a fiercely independent thinker who, at one point, butts head with the president of the University of Chicago. On the other hand, Eric seems to disappear as he slips into depression, an all-too-common fate for many geeks.

Later, Jesse and Eric slowly expand their world and struggle to adapt. They also try to get into college and earn degrees that will lead to more fulfilling work.

Stylistically, Katz often breaks the barrier between objective journalist and caring friend, and he freely admits it. Besides telling their story, Katz offers Jesse and Eric money and advice and even inadvertently prompts the move to Chicago by mentioning one day the two could make a ton of money anywhere in the country.

Jesse and Eric, ultra-sophisticated in the world of technology had no idea their skills were in such demand. The two decided to check out the job market in the same way they order pizza and later shopped for an apartment – all online, trusting the Internet will not let them down. Excited and scared, they soon rush off for Chicago.

Through every setback, you're cheering for them to make it, remembering the odd mix of power and vulnerability that comes when leaving your small world for the first time.

dream

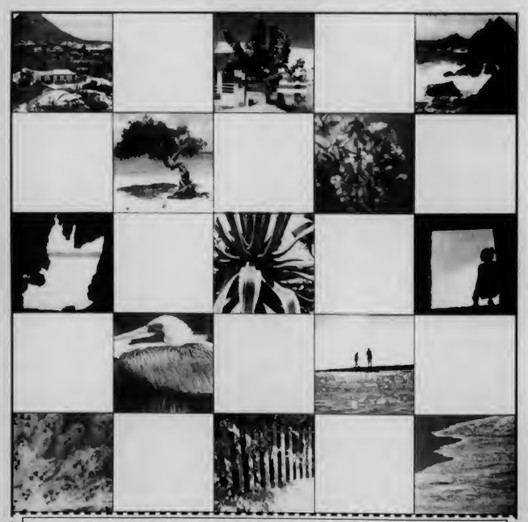
continued from page 5

ing offensively bad, but there is nothing noticeably good either.

As much as I'd love to cap off this review with some lame music critic line like "Dream's debut album is as hot as they are," I'll resist the temptation.

There is undoubtedly something very contrived about this group. Obviously they are an excuse to make a lot of money, not to make a lot of great music. This is apparent right off the bat when the album's cover just happens to feature one of the girls is wearing "Sean Johns," Puffy's line of clothing. Maybe the music world didn't need another pop group low on substance, but we've got one. Yes, it's predictable. Yes, it's formulaic. And yes, the album is just good enough for fans of the genre to enjoy it. As for the rest of the world, probably not.

Write for Arts



COLLEGIAN SPRING BREAK PHOTO CONTEST

Attention UMass Students!!The Collegian is holding a photo contest!!
Capture your Spring Break and WIN!!
Submission Form:
name: _____
phone #: _____
e-mail: _____
type of photo (circle one): black & white color
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____
Requirements:
-Submissions due by MARCH 30th
-Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
-Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
-Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form
Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

PCOS and Exercise

Sponsored by the Amherst Health Department
The only thing smokin' in Amherst is the atmosphere!
* See what you eat!
* See what you drink!
* See the entertainment!
You Are Here UMASS — See You There — DOWNTOWN AMHERST
North Pleasant
Experience Downtown Amherst and its Smoke-Free Establishments

Softball splits in Tampa; pitching woes continue

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

One of the most common traits of a young team in any sport is inconsistency.

The Massachusetts softball team knows this all too well. This past weekend the Minutewomen split six games at the Speedline Invitational in Tampa, Fla. to bring their record to 7-9.

"We need to work on everything," head coach Elaine Sortino said. "We are a young team and we are continually getting better."

Thursday, UMass faced off against the Hofstra Pride (4-14) and came away with an easy 5-0 victory over last year's America East champions. Junior right-hander Jen Hadley pitched a three-hit shutout on way to her first win of this young season.

The Maroon and White was unable to carry the momentum into the second game however, as it got shutout by the Florida Atlantic Owls (20-8), 6-0 Thursday late afternoon. FAU junior right-hander Nicole Myers held UMass to three hits for the game. Massachusetts senior right-hander Carrie Jeffries had a rough outing – allowing all six Owl runs, two unearned, in four and one-third innings.

"We definitely need to become more dominant on the pitching mound," Sortino said.

While UMass has just gotten its season underway, the Owls are in the heart of their season – playing 28 games to date. Thursday's game was a clear example of the difference between a squad that has established its identity and a team that has yet to find its niche.

"It's the early part of the season and we are trying to find ourselves," Sortino said.

On day two of the Speedline, UMass was involved in two of the closest games of the tournamem.

In the first game, revenge was sweet as UMass squeaked out a 3-2 victory over the Kansas Jayhawks (9-12) – a team it lost to 4-1, two weeks ago at the LeadOff Classic in Columbus, Ga.

UMass scored the first three runs of the game and sophomore right-hander Kaila Holtz was able to withstand Kansas' hitting attack for the rest of the game – allowing only two runs, both unearned – in seven innings.

"She definitely rose to the occasion," said Sortino of Holtz.

In the second game of the double-header, Massachusetts was on the losing end of a nail-biter against the Tennessee-Chattanooga Lady Mocs (15-13), falling short 1-0.

Despite another impressive performance on the mound from Hadley, UMass was unable to capitalize on the excellent pitching. Only three Minutewomen were able to reach base throughout the game. The contest was determined by a fourth inning solo home run from the Lady Mocs' sophomore first-baseman Angela Brewer.

"The UTC game was a major heartbreaker," Sortino said.

Saturday, UMass got a chance to duel with a team that replaced it in last week's USA Today/NFCA Top-25 poll, the Wisconsin Badgers (14-9).

The Maroon and White showed to the NCAA softball world that it can contend with the top teams in the nation, by shutting out the 24th-ranked Badgers, 3-0.

"The win against Wisconsin was very important," Sortino said. "It really helped us."

Holtz won her second straight game of the tournament by allowing only four hits and striking out three in a complete-game shutout. The win against Wisconsin upped Holtz's personal record to 4-1 – the best on the team.

"We as a pitching staff, have focused on being more aggressive on the mound," Holtz said. "We need to throw hard in the strike zone."

Coach Sortino has been impressed with her young flame-thrower.

"She's kind of firey and aggressive," she said. "She is not afraid to throw hard around the batters."

According to Sortino the win over Wisconsin was a benchmark for UMass' young season; however, the Minutewomen left Tampa on a sour note, falling victim to the 11-10 Utah Utes, 10-0.

The pitching combination of Jeffries and Hadley succumbed to Utah's junior third-baseman Lyndsey Trevis, who hit three home runs to drive in seven of the ten runs scored by Utah.

After the weekend in Tampa, team members know that they have to find a way fix their inconsistent play.

"We don't doubt if we can hit the ball," Holtz said. "We know if we swing hard and put the ball in play, the hitting average will improve and the runs will come."

"Our pitching and hitting needs to improve but our defense has been sound," Sortino said. "The Hofstra, Kansas and Wisconsin wins can be attributed to our sound defense," Sortino added.

Four days from defeat, lax is back

JARET BARK/COLLEGIAN

After a tough loss to Harvard on Saturday, senior captain Fay Naber and the UMass women's lacrosse team travel to State College, Pa. for a match today with the Nittany Lions.

By Justin Pearson
Collegian Staff

There is no rest for the weary as the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team heads back into action this afternoon to take on the No. 15 Penn St. Nittany Lions at Holuba Hall. Just four days ago the Minutewomen lost their season opener, a closely contested 9-8 defeat at Harvard.

In order for the Maroon and White to even its record it will need to knock off a traditionally good Penn St. team. With a record of 0-2 the Nittany Lions might seem like they are ripe for the picking, but bear in mind that both losses came against other top 20 teams, Cornell (No.13) and James Madison (No.5).

"They are always one of the best teams in the nation," said UMass coach Phil Barnes. "It should be a good challenge for us."

The key to victory for the Minutewomen will be their team defense. Sophomore Cyndi Doyle will once again start in net in place of the injured Jen Nardi. Last Saturday against Harvard, Doyle made 10 saves but was victimized by three goals off free positional shots. UMass will need to cut down on the number of fouls it gives away, especially in scoring areas.

This will not be an easy task for the Minutewomen as the Nittany Lions are averaging 10 goals a game this season and UMass only carries three pure defenders on the team, a sophomore and two freshmen.

If Penn St. is allowed to put up big numbers in the offensive end, the UMass attackers will need to respond. Sophomore Lydia Robinson notched her first career hat trick on Saturday while senior Fay Naber added a pair of goals. Three freshmen, Miriam Godfrey, Hope Zelinger and Angela McMahon all scored in their UMass debuts to round out the scoring against Harvard.

But UMass will need to shoot the ball more if it wants to pick up the victory. Against the Crimson, the Minutewomen were only able to muster 11 shots on net scoring eight times. However, this afternoon they will be facing junior goalie Megan Ames. Ames, a three-year starter for the Nittany Lions, stopped 20 of 34 shots on Saturday against James Madison. In order to beat Ames – Robinson, Naber and the rest of the Minutewomen will need to put more than just 11 shots on net.

This afternoon's game will be a definite character builder for the young Minutewomen and a good performance against a national power should give the Minutewomen a tremendous emotional and psychological boost following Saturday's difficult defeat.

"It's going to be a roller coaster ride for us this year," said Barnes. "We're a very young team, we lost nine seniors, eight starters, from last year, but we're very competitive. I think that there is a lot of potential for us this year."

There would be no better time for the Minutewomen to show some of that potential than this afternoon by knocking off Penn St. and picking up their first win of the year.

Minutewomen too much for inexperienced Hawks

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's water polo team improved its record to 4-2 on the season this weekend, with a win over No. 19 Hartwick College. Eight saves by All-American Dana Sinkwich lifted the Minutewomen over Hartwick by a score of 6-3 on Saturday, before they dropped a game to Princeton on Sunday (8-5).

The win over the Hawks did not come without difficulty. "Hartwick is an aggressive team," head coach Donna Heinel said. "This is their first year of varsity play and they have a large rooting section in support of them."

Heinel also alluded to the fact that the pool at Hartwick moves from a very shallow three feet to a deeper end.

"The hometown crowd and not being used to playing in shallow water could've been the makings of an upset," Heinel said.

Heinel credited the win to a total team effort. "They all came out pretty focused, and very much playing together as a team," she said.

If playing as a team means that individuals must step up and lead, the guidance certainly came from sophomore Mattie Newell. To the delight of her coach, Newell scored two of the team's six goals.

"Mattie seems to step up when we need her to step up," Heinel said.
She pointed out that the offense is not hung up on one person.

"[Newell's] goals, along with the other four came from the perimeter, which is good for us. If an avenue that gets us goals is shut down due to a defense that the other team produces, we need to develop an ability to get around that," said Heinel.

Heinel felt that this ability was created quite well, and the offense really stepped up because of it.

"A lot of teams center on our hole players, both Newell and, Kelly Chasse are good scorers," she said. "We have a tendency to face a lot of drop situations where it's hard for us to thread a ball into our hold sets. Because of [Newell and Chasse]'s presence and mobility, they create a lot on the outside."

Heinel said the team was overly anxious to play, because its last game was canceled due to inclimate weather. She said the team had waited way too long to play a game.

Before Saturday's game, the team had not played a match since Feb. 24 – a match it won against Queens at the New England Invitational. "It was snowing hard on the way to Hartwick," she said. "But we would not turn around. We wanted to play."

The team will play the game that was rescheduled from Feb. 24 against Brown this Thursday night in Providence, RI.

wallis

continued from page 10

"If any of the younger guys ask a question, we'll be happy to give them guidance," Wallis added. "How we're going to leave our mark is how we handle ourselves as student-athletes and how we get along in a team atmosphere. Then hopefully the other guys will keep this rolling."

Unfortunately, Wallis and the rest of his departing teammates won't be able to garner the fruits of their labor when the time comes that success is synonymous with UMass hockey. Nevertheless, those players who reap the benefits will need to thank Wallis and the rest of their predecessors for laying a solid foundation.

Looking back and moving forward

For now, Wallis will conclude his studies and graduate with a degree in Sport Management. Yet he clearly enjoyed his time in Amherst and will take many lessons – both about hockey and life – into life after UMass.

However, that same young boy who had dreams and aspirations of playing hockey at the highest level isn't ruling out a career in the professional ranks.

"I'd like to see what options I have for hockey," Wallis said. "If that option comes, I wouldn't turn it down. I've played this game for 19 years now, and I can't just give it up. I owe it to myself, to my family and to the people that supported me to give the next level a shot. We'll see what happens after the season. If nothing happens, then it's time to hit the real world."

NHL GM's shuffling their cards

With the National Hockey League regular season holding its position as the most insignificant 82 games in professional sports, some kind of event has to be focused on to sustain some remnants of excitement – enter the NHL trading deadline.

March is the time of year for the league's general manager fraternity to earn their paychecks by wheeling and dealing their squad into Stanley Cup contention.

Although the NHL's GM's are constantly in the hunt for that last piece of the puzzle that could get the franchise on that big silver tea cup, every team's front office performs a routine screening to avoid the dreaded Bobby Clarke disease.

Clarke, who annually treats his players like Pokemon cards, is notorious for making deals, firing coaches and allowing words to cross his lips that disrupt team chemistry.

Every team should have a picture of Clarke in its front office, not to use as a dart board but as a reminder of the do's and don'ts of the trade deadline.

With that in mind certain teams were already on the move while others are waiting in the wings of a blockbuster deal.

Stanley Cup favorite Colorado deepened its already bottomless well of talent by adding former Bowling Green star Rob Blake and 2000 Hobey Baker finalist Steve Reinprecht in a deal with the Kings. The Avalanche lost fan favorite Adam Deadmarsh in the deal but Ville Nieminen fits snuggly in the gritty forward's vacated shoes.

The San Jose Sharks took the biggest risk in terms of chemistry when it traded one-third of its top line in Jeff Friesen for the proven goal scorer Teemu Selanne. The Finnish Flash had been on the trading block for most of the season but the trade still raised eyebrows, as Friesen joined Owen Nolan and Vincent Damphousse to form one of the most lethal scoring lines in the league. The Sharks also lost goaltender Steve Shields in the deal, a move that will only hurt San Jose if talented rookie netminder Evgeny Nabokov cools off in April.

As the season progresses, look for more high profile names to be on the move. The trade rumors swirling around star forwards Jeremy Roenick and Keith Tkachuk could cause a sandstorm in the desert.

Of course it would be negligent to ignore Clarke's bosom buddy, Eric Lindros. Clarke has repeatedly accused his former Captain of being too soft for the NHL, this in the wake of his repeated career and life threatening concussions. Lindros has his name on the wish list of almost every playoff contender. Although his health remains an issue, who wouldn't want to have the soft handed, big train in its lineup for the marathon that is the NHL playoffs.

Matthew F. Sacco is a Collegian Columnist.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Kris Wallace saw many pucks drop in the face-off circle during his time at UMass.

Kris Wallis' career stats

	G	A	P
1997-98	7	9	16
1998-99	5	9	14
1999-00	6	8	14
2000-01	7	8	15
Total	25	34	59

weWill
...protect the free world together.
At Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll play a key role in the development of advanced technologies to protect our country and other members of the free world. Technology like our Paveway Tomahawk and Patriot missiles which are designed to provide the best defense available against all types of threats. Or our preminent radars that help pilots perform precision strike missions and gather intelligence. Leading-edge missiles and radar systems are just two examples of how we make the world a safer place. And Raytheon's long legacy of diverse projects ensure that you'll always be involved in something new, important and cutting edge.
The following opportunities are available in El Segundo:
RF Engineers
Antenna Subsystem Engineers
MMIC Design Engineers
Microwave Test Engineers
Systems Engineers
To apply, please e-mail your resume to: staffworth@west.raytheon.com or mail to: JA-Staffing, Raytheon, 2000 E. El Segundo Blvd., MS E01C111, El Segundo, CA 90245.
To view all available opportunities with Raytheon Company, visit www.rayjobs.com. Raytheon is an equal opportunity employer and welcomes a wide diversity of qualified applicants. U.S. citizenship may be required
At Raytheon, we will accomplish our goals.
Will you?
www.rayjobs.com
Raytheon

STUDENT TRAVEL
London.....$211
Paris.....$286
Amsterdam.....$273
Tokyo.....$609
student airfares
bus passes to all destinations
BEDS ON A BUDGET adventure travel hostel cards rail passes
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 1 or 2 bedroom. Close to campus, on bus route. $600/month. Call 253-2378

Available Immediately 1 Br. Apt. - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Take over Lease or summer sublet. Upgraded 3 bedroom. Puffton call 549-0467

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts.com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1995 Jeep Cherokee 118k, many new parts totalling over $1500. Priced for quick sale $6900 ask for Geoff 549-9232

1993 Saturn SL2. Clean, dependable, well maintained. $2700. 549-8000

1987 Mazda Red, extremely reliable, tidy, new clutch, new exhaust. $850 obo. 253-1933

CHILDCARE

Seeking occasional childcare for 2 school-age children. 549-5448

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART - TIME
Research Interviewers
Evening and weekend shifts are available 20hrs/wk minimum. PVTA accessible. Excellent reading and speaking skills required. Some computer experience helpful. $7.50 to start with regular merit raises. For more information contact: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 paul_bebo@abtassoc.com Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

French Speaking Candidate needed for part-time work. Must be available mornings. Contact Diane at 549-1169 or e-mail diane@remi.com

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be at Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment - end of June through July, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132, bicycletrips.com

Day Care Center, Rt 63, Leverett, needs substitute teaching assistants and evening maintenance person. Work study or not $8.00 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674

Work Study Students & substitute teachers. Cushman Scott Childrens Center an equal opportuntiy employer is now hiring to work with childern 18months to 5years. Ellen 549-1167

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips.413-584-4746

EMPLOYMENT

The Animal Rescue League of Boston's Animal Friends Summer Camp in North Falmouth, Cape Cod has the following counselor positions open: Farm Life Counselor, Horse Care Counselor. Employment Dates: June 1st- August 18th. Limited room & board available. For more information or to schedule an interview, call Laura Robbins at 781-461-8015 ext. 25 *Visit our table at "Camp Employment Day" on March 14th.

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

FOR SALE

Maroon Sims Snowboard 150cm. Preston LS bindings. $250 OBO 253-6785

S2 Redline X-Bike $550. Full home gym perfect for apt $150 B/O Call Kellie 549-7889

27" RCA Television with PIP, like new condition, call Rob at 549-4275 for details.

INSTRUCTION

Wanna be a Rock Star? Acoustic guitar lessons. Learn the basics fast. Call Anthony at 413-218-6562

Bathing Suit Season is Coming. Experienced trainer will get you ready. No gym membership required. Private kickboxing instruction also available. Joe 548-8979

MISCELLANEOUS

Publish Your Work For $1,295 Textbooks, Novels, and More Call FirstPublish, Inc. at 888-707-7634 Or visit www.firstpublish.com

PET FOR SALE

Free male house cat 1yr old, playfull, friendly. Call 256-6777

ROOM FOR RENT

Spring Break Housing Furnished room/kitchen, N. Amherst. $20 daily or $140 all week. 549-4401

1 Bedroom in large 3 bedroom house. On busline. Hobart St. 549-2951

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for 2 Females for 4 bedroom Uptown apt. Great location! Lease starting Sept. Call Shelly 546-7048

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRANSPORTATION

Two need ride to Boston on March 24. Will share costs. Email ssen@english.umass.edu

TRAVEL

Jamaica Spring Break: Cheapest, best hideaway. Negrils, 7 miles white sand beach. Charming, safe, cabins in lush tropical paradise. Single $25, Double $35. 413-549-4401

Need to Advertise?

You Found the Place!

It is Easy!

Just Call 545-3500 or Come Down to The Daily Collegian Located in The Campus Center Basement!

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

8 - HSCN Bulletin Board
9 - Cable Preview
10 - CNN & Boston
11 - ABC/99 Springfield
12 - PBS/57 Springfield
13 - HSCN Music Channel
14 - UPN/38 Hartford
15 - PBS/24 Hartford
16 - NBC/40 New Britain
17 - Fox/61 Hartford
18 - PBS/24 Hartford
19 - NBC/40 Springfield
20 - International Channel
21 - CBS&FOX/Cablevision Channel
22 - WB/30 New Haven
23 - Silent
24 - ESPN2
25 - UPN/38 Hartford (Student Originals)
26 - Weather Channel
27 - Country Gavel
28 - C-Span
29 - CNN
30 - CNN Headline News
31 - Lifestyles
32 - USA
33 - TBS
34 - TNT
35 - E!
36 - Sci-Fi
37 - Discovery
38 - Noggin
39 - Cartoon Network
40 - Nick at Nite
41 - TV Land
42 - Comedy Central
43 - MTV
44 - Univision
45 - Hispanic Financial Network
46 - College TV Network
47 - BET
48 - MTV2
49 - VH1
50 - The Learning Channel

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 13, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Donny Osmond: This Is the Moment (In Stereo)		Irish Tenors Ellis Island (In Stereo)				Scully-World
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Valor" (N) (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Valor" (N) (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Geena Davis	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "Darla" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden-Susen
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fighting Fitz	DAG (N)	Fresier	Three Sisters	Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	7th Heaven "Red Tape"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "Darla" (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Fighting Fitz	DAG (N)	Fresier	Three Sisters	Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Fraser	Seinfeld	Friends	"70s Show	Titus (N)	Dark Angel "Female Trouble"		News		Friends	Fraser
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fighting Fitz	DAG (N)	Fresier	Three Sisters	Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Dean Martin: That's Amore! (In Stereo)		Visions of Italy: Northern Style				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Spin City	Fraser	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	Geena Davis	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fraser	a'k'a "Hot Boy" (1999, Drama) Snoop Dogg. (In Stereo)				Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld	Mad Abt. You
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: Sacramento Kings at Orlando Magic. (Live)					Inside NBA		a'k'a "Mars Attacks!" (1996)
A&E	23	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Star Struck"		Biography: Shelley Winters		City Confidential		Investigative Reports		Law & Order
CNN	10	Inside Politics	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	30	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	a'k'a "Revenge of the Nerds II: Nerds in Paradise" (1987, Comedy)				Battlebots	Battlebots	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	31	Wild Discovery: Creatures		Wild Discovery: Devil's Play		Sabretooth		New Detectives				FBI Files "Shattered Shield"	Justice Files
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		College Basketball: NIT First Round — Teams to Be Announced.				ATP Tennis: Tennis Masters Series – Early Rounds. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	32	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		a'k'a "Homo Jean and Marilyn" (1996, Biography) Ashley Judd, Mira Sorvino.				Golden Girls
MTV	33	Direct Effect	Kathy-Reality	Cribs	Diary	mtvICON "Janet Jackson" (N) (In Stereo)			Real World	Real World	Andy Dick (N)	Undressed	Cribs
NICK	42	Pinky & Brain	Cindog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Diff. Strokes	Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	All In Family
SCIFI	35	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		"Babylon 5" The Gathering"		a'k'a "Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981, Adventure) Harrison Ford, (In Stereo)				a'k'a "Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981)
TLC	29	Trauma: Life In the ER		Storm Rescue		Trauma: Life in the ER		Labor & Delivery (N)				Operation "Knee Replacement"	Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	45	ER (In Stereo)		Pretender "Bulletproof"		a'k'a "When a Man Loves a Woman" (1994, Drama) Andy Garcia, Meg Ryan.				a'k'a "Don Juan DeMarco" (1995,		Johnny Depp
USA	34	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "To Russia, With Love"		Nash Bridges "Downtime"		a'k'a "Out of Sight" (1998, Drama) George Clooney, Jennifer Lopez. (In Stereo)				Martin
HBO	28	(5:45) "Dying to Be Perfect"		a'k'a "House Posse" (1992, Comedy) Bette Midler. 'PG'		a'k'a "I Dreamed of Africa" (2000, Adventure) Kim Basinger. 'PG-13'				Soprance "Fortunata Son"
MAX	37	a'k'a "American Beauty" (1999) Kevin Spacey. (In Stereo) 'R'				a'k' "Girl 6" (1996, Drama) Theresa Randle. (In Stereo) 'R'				a'k'a "The Haunting" (1999, Horror) Liam Neeson. 'PG-13'
SHOW	36	"Enchanted" (1999, Comedy-Drama) Sydney Penny. 'NR'				a'k' "Stepmom" (1998, Drama) Julia Roberts. 'PG-13'				Resurrection Blvd. (In Stereo)		Queer as Folk

Quote of the Day

"It's your heart. You should take it with you."

–Dr. Larch, The Cider House Rules

Amherst Weather

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 37 LOW: 32	HIGH: 45 LOW: 31	HIGH: 50 LOW: 36

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

AND SINCE YOU MARRIED ME THE FIRST TIME, I WAS LIKED YOU MIGHT WANT ANOTHER CHANCE!
WELL, I'M HOW, ORSO...I...BUT I'M NOT SURE I CAN GET AWAY.
YOU DON'T HAVE TO. SCOTT--WE'RE REBOOTING IT. FROM A HOTEL-AL CHAPEL!
OUR FRIENDS WILL MESSAGE US THEIR REACTIONS. WE'LL PLAY A FEW MP3S, AND THEN ZEKE AND I WILL INPUT OUR VOWS.
UH...SO WHAT DO I DO?
YOU BLESS US AND PUT "RE TURN"!

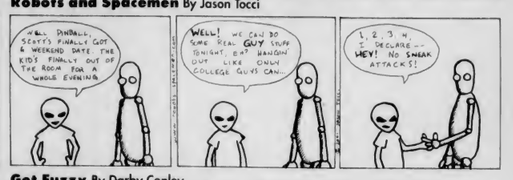
Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Hey, I can buy beer with you now... I got myself a fake ID!
This will never work.
Why not?
Well, for starters, it says that you're only 20 years old.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WE NEED TO REDUCE STAFF BY TWENTY.
HERE'S A LIST OF THE PEOPLE YOU'VE A-L-M-O-S-T WORKED TO DEATH.
I HAVE ANOTHER PROJECT FOR YOU ...UH...TED.
AACK!

Robots and Spacemen By Jason Tocci



WELL, DINBALL, SCOTT'S FINALLY GOT A WEEKEND DATE. THE KID'S FINALLY OUT OF THE ROOM FOR A WHOLE EVENING.
WELL! WE CAN DO SOME REAL GUY STUFF TONIGHT, BUT WHOOH OUT LIKE ONLY COLLEGE GUYS CAN.
1, 2, 3 ... I DECLARE... HEY! NO SWEAR ATTACKS!

Robotman By Jim Meddick

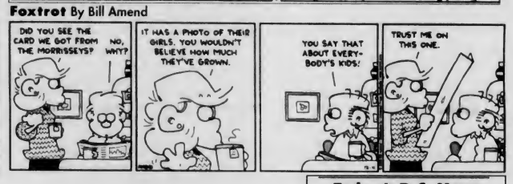
CAPTAIN KIRK HAS NEVER LOST A FIGHT! WHAT CHANCE DOES ROBOTMAN HAVE?
HE'S DEFINITELY IN TROUBLE
BUT THERE IS ONE THING LOOK HERE AT KIRK'S HEAD. NOTICE ANYTHING UNUSUAL?
HIS HAIR. IT'S UNNATURALLY BROWN, THICK AND CURLY
SO WILLIAM SHATNER HAS AN UNUSUALLY HEALTHY HEAD OF HAIR FOR A MAN HIS AGE. WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES THAT MAKE?
I'M NOT SURE. BUT IT MAY MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD!
NEXT WEEK: CONCLUSION!!!

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

HIYA, BUCKY! HOW'S IT EEN. WHAT IS THAT?
MY RABBIT'S FOOT. IT'S FOR GOOD LUCK. WHEE. THAT AND THREATENING RABBITS, OBVIOUSLY.
GWAAK. THAT MUST BE WHAT IRON IS TALKING ABOUT WHEN HE SAYS "BUCKY AND ALL HIS FAUX PAWS."
ACTUALLY, THERE'S JUST THE ONE.

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



DID YOU SEE THE CARD WE GOT FROM THE MORRISSEYS?
NO. WHY?
IT HAS A PHOTO OF THEIR GIRLS. YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE HOW MUCH THEY'VE GROWN.
YOU SAY THAT ABOUT EVERYBODY'S KIDS.
TRUST ME ON THIS ONE.

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Anxiety over your workload either at home or on the job will keep you from enjoying a hidden opportunity today – unless you lighten up!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Don't get carried away with yourself today. A little subtlety, style and grace go a long way toward impressing others.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Physical and mental activities have much to offer you today, and you will want to combine the two for the best results.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Someone close to you is likely to be quite edgy and irritable today – and it will be up to you to see that he or she stays in control.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You must be willing to take a personal interest in someone else's affairs today if you are going to help at all. You mustn't remain impartial!
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You must remain on top of things as they develop today. If it's more authority you're after, you must be willing ot prove that you can handle it.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Don't misuse your own popularity today. Give others the time of day – and the benefit of the doubt. A friend comes to you with advice.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It may be up to you today to do those things that you thought were someone else's responsibility. You can do it all much better!
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – This is a good day for solving financial problems as best you can. Remember, you can bend the rules – but you mustn't break them.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – What is asked of you today may not be fair, but if you can rise to the occasion and so what is required, then you'll be ahead of the game.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – What seems a mistake at first may prove to be highly beneficial to you in the long run. It may take time, but you'll eventually be rewarded.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – An old-fashioned approach to a new and unexpected dilemma is likely to pay off with surprising speed. This may, indeed, be the way to go!

MONKEY-BOX BY PBJ

"HEY... MY BLINDFOLD... I'VE LOST MY BLINDFOLD!"

© 2001 www.monkey-box.net

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Meatball Grinder

Spanikopita (vegetarian) (B, F, W)

Tomato, Macaroni, and Lentils (vegan) (B, W)

Manicotti (vegetarian) (H)

DINNER

Fried Chicken

Seitan Bourguignon (vegan)

Cheese Calzones (vegetarian)

SLEEPY HOLLOW BED COMPANY
280-BEDS (2337) / 256-BEDS(2337)
328 College Street, Amherst

FINALLY!! Amherst has a mattress & futon store conveniently located near downtown, next to The Spirit Haus on Rt. 9

GRAND OPENING & OPEN HOUSE

(FREE FOOD!!!)
SAT. MARCH 31 10-6
SUN. APRIL 1 12-5

futons-mattresses-beds-daybeds decorative pillows-lamps-storage platform beds-room dividers-rugs interior plants-end/coffee tables cots-foam-pad/-pool/papasan, ETC

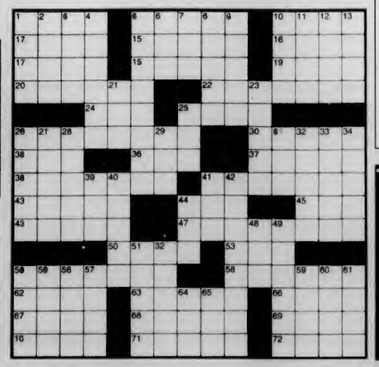
ACROSS
1 Revolving object
5 Writer's cramp, e.g.
10 Humorists
14 Montreal pro
15 "Hi!"
16 Name in essays
17 Garment part
18 Planet's path
19 Some ATM bills
20 Snell
22 Elegant desserts
24 Naught or aught
25 Swiss capital
26 Words of praise
30 Find fault unnecessarily
35 That's neighbor
36 He's no gentleman
37 Sturdy vine
38 Flax oil
41 Outstanding
43 Keyboard instrument
44 Was a witness
45 Be over
46 Teak and pine
47 Apes
50 Banjo cousins
53 — Diego
54 High-school age
58 Ran, as a clock
62 Theater award
63 Battery terminal
66 Hawaiian port
67 Mathematician Descartes
68 Piano fixer
69 Night birds
70 Warner and Fortenberry, to Taylor
71 Locations
72 Stand up

DOWN
1 Actor Arnaz
2 Yoked ones
3 Colorful fish
4 Cheese for grating
5 Jogger's fastener
6 Each
7 Church vestment
8 Viscous mud
9 Engine
10 Hoses down
11 Swine sights
12 Pitchfork part
13 Be impudent
21 Abner's adjective
23 Family member
25 Flower plot
26 Permit
27 Nile city
28 African river
29 Mom's man
31 Have a cold
32 Type of parking
33 Nonsensical
34 Hog fats
39 Down in the dumps
40 Happen because of
41 Spade or Snead
42 Cyclones
44 Bro.'s sib
48 Skater Babilonia
49 Moor
51 "Ode on a Grecian Urn" poet
52 Boredom
54 Pebble Beach shout
55 Alpine goal
56 Delicate
57 Casual pullovers
59 Type of fruit or bird
60 Additions
61 Doctor's spoonful
64 Ottawa prov.
65 "Gidget" actress

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

L	I	M	B		B	A	S	E		U	R	S	A
A	S	I	A		E	X	T	R	A		G	A	I	N
T	E	L	L		C	L	A	S	S		L	I	N	T
H	E	E	L		K	E	G		I	N	K	S
		E	R	O	S		T	R	U	E
P	I	S	T	O	N		C	R	I	M	S	O	N	S
A	N	I	S	E		B	R	E	D		T	H	A	N
C	F	L		P	R	O	N	E		A	P	O
E	E	L	S		L	O	O	T		B	A	R	E	R
D	R	Y	C	L	E	A	N		F	O	R	E	S	T
		H	E	A	D		N	E	W	S
A	S	C	O	T		T	O	W		E	D	N	A
C	O	O	L		E	L	A	T	E		N	E	O	N
E	L	L	A		D	A	L	E	S		A	M	E	N
D	E	E	R		M	E	L	T		L	I	S	A

1-1-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam Martigneth
Photo Technician	Mark Holloway, Laina Erde
Copy Editor	David Troupes
Production Supervisor	Jess Grant
Production Staff	John Dicker, Riki Alcid

Six games of UMass softball unfold inside... step up to the plate.

Tuesday, March 13, 2001 | 10

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

The completion of a hockey chapter

Wallis concludes his career at UMass

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The bond between a young boy and the game of hockey started nearly two decades ago. Since that time, Kris Wallis has become intertwined with the game that he has played with such passion from the first time he laced up the skates.

Now, 19 years later, the senior assistant captain for the Minutemen recently capped off his amateur career with his final season in Maroon and White. The journey from the rural setting of Aggasiz, British Columbia to that of Amherst has been a rewarding one, yet it is a trek that seemed to have passed by far too quickly.

"I can remember my first week on this campus, meeting all the seniors and juniors, and then my fellow freshman class," Wallis said. "Now it's four years later, and we've all developed into good friends at the rink and away from the rink. We've developed a family atmosphere and we do everything together. "From day one, it's been a family atmosphere. It's been great. I've made friendships that I'm going to have the rest of my life. Not everyone has the opportunity like we get. More or less, you walk around with 20 or 25 brothers. It's a lot of fun, how else can you put it?"

A beacon of consistency

In his four years with the Minutemen, Wallis has been arguably the most consistent player on the roster. Although he was not necessarily as flashy on the offensive end as some of his higher-profile teammates, few worked harder on all aspects of the game than No. 10.

"He's been a steady player from day one," said UMass senior captain Jeff Turner of Wallis. "He knows what he's capable of and doesn't try to do too much. Night in and night out, you know what you are going to get from him."

Throughout the course of his career, Wallis saw time in a variety of different roles. But whether he was quarterbacking the power play, killing off penalties or finishing a check in the corner, his love of the game was always evident.

Yet the thing that makes teammates and coaches hold players such as Wallis in high regards is his attitude – team first, individual second.

"I think that my teammates count on me to work hard," he said. "One thing that I've learned is that if you go out and give it your best effort, and you execute the way coach wants you to do it, then the points will come. And if at the end of the night, we have a win, and I don't score any points, that's fine with me."

Added Turner: "He knows the game well and takes that approach to the ice. He's got a lot of intelligent things to say and doesn't really think more of himself than he should. He's grown a lot since he's been here."

However, Wallis remained a steady offensive force for the Minutemen every time he stepped onto the ice. He scored at least 14 points in each of his four seasons at UMass and rounded out his career with 59 points on 25 goals and 34 assists.

"He's been very consistent," said senior assistant captain Jay Shaw about Wallis. "He rarely has a bad game."

Adjusting to a changing environment

After playing for Joe Mallen for his first three years, Wallis and the rest of his classmates had to make an adjustment on the ice for their senior season. In place of the neutral-zone trapping philosophy of Mallen was the more wide-open, multiple-look system of new coach Don Cahoon.

Wallis struggled in the early going, but regained his scoring touch following a two-point night against Vermont on Nov. 25. And, once Cahoon decided to stick with the line of Wallis, Shaw and Brad Nizwantowski, there was marked improvement in the offensive production of all three players.

"Kris really understood what we were looking for him as a coaching staff, more than any other player," Cahoon said. "He knew the demands and the structure of the operation. He was able to quickly analyze what he needed to do to succeed.

"Right from the beginning, he played within himself," added the UMass coach. "He felt that if he could stay within the framework of the system, that he could be a contributor."

Although Wallis is clearly not one to promote his own individual honors, a personal highlight for Wallis took place around the halfway mark of the season. Prior to the Jan. 2 game with Brown, Cahoon named Wallis and Samuli Jalkanen as additional assistant captains.

"I was floored by it because it was such a surprise to me," Wallis said. "The two other captains are Jeff [Turner] and Jay [Shaw], and they're probably my two best friends and my roommates. I was shocked that they didn't let it leak out."

"When Coach made the announcement, I was shocked and I was honored. But I told coach that I wasn't going to do anything differently. He told me that 'you deserved it because you've worked hard.' Anytime you have a letter, and definitely at this level – it's just a great honor for me."

Said Cahoon: "He knew what we wanted him to do, and that's why I put on 'A' on his shirt. I let him know that I appreciated what he was doing for us. He's the type of kid that any employer would love to have, because he will figure out whatever you ask him to do."

Needless to say, Wallis' transition to Cahoon's style of play proved to be mutually beneficial to both parties. The senior saw time also saw time on special teams and served as one of the top face-off men on the club. Wallis finished the season with seven goals and eight assists for 15 points.

"The coaches understand what I bring to the table, and this year, they've put me in some situations that I haven't been in in the past," Wallis said. "The coaches have shown that they have confidence in me, and that helps me feel confident."

Added Shaw: "He fits into the system well and has adapted to Coach Cahoon's system nicely."

The agony of defeat

If there is one thing that Wallis would like to change, it would surely be the team's success – or lack of – in the past four years. UMass could only muster a record of 37-87-14 during his career, and failed to make the Hockey East playoffs in two out of four seasons.

Although the frustration that accumulated with each loss provided a bitter pill to swallow, Wallis feels that the performances of the early classes at UMass will only help aid the maturation and increased success of the program.

"The program is still relatively young," he said. "After every year, we are another year older and more experienced. As a senior class, we have a lot of losses, and there's a lot of frustration built into that. We all came from winning programs, and we're not used to that."

Turn to WALLIS, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Kris Wallace ended his career with the Massachusetts hockey team, scoring at least 14 points in each of his four seasons.

Flint a class act right to the end

ADAM WHITE

James "Bruiser" Flint said from day one of this season that he is proud of his accomplishments at the University of Massachusetts. Yesterday, he proved it.

Ever the class act, Flint kept his head high even as he was forced to resign from his position as head coach of the men's basketball team. The 33-year old father retained an air of optimism as he reflected on the joys of guiding the Minutemen and the promise of coaching again somewhere else.

"I've had a fantastic time here," Flint said. "It's been an enjoyable ride. I hope my ride's not over."

Using the final installment of his weekly Bruiser Flint Show at Amherst's Monkey Bar as his official sendoff, Flint thanked a number of his associates and supporters for the memories he accrued while at the Maroon and White helm. He extended special gratitude toward former coaching great Jack Leaman for mentoring him "from day one." He also expressed appreciation for the backing he has gotten from his fellow coaches at UMass during the tense days before his resignation.

"I don't know if resignation is the word I would use," said one of those co-workers, women's coach Joanie O'Brien. "It's tough; it's part of the business and you deal with it. It's just hard when bad things happen to good people and that's exactly what he is. He's a good person."

Flint's character aside, it is his record both overall and in the post-season that inevitably cost him his job at UMass. The Minutemen are a combined 46-47 over the last three seasons, and missed the postseason this year for the second time during that span.

While he has never tried to make excuses for his team's recent misfortunes, Flint has pointed to a few contributing factors as being at least partially responsible. The first is homecourt disparity: the Minutemen played 55 of their 93 games since the 1997-98 season away from the William D. Mullins Center. Both Flint and Temple coach John Calipari commented during this year's Atlantic 10 tournament about how playing a road-riddled out-of-conference slate is no longer conducive to success for A-10 teams.

Flint indicated that his meeting with school officials yesterday including substantial discussion of that very topic.

"That's been a big thing for me in my last few years," Flint said. "What are you going to do with your out-of-conference schedule? The next guy who comes in, I'm sure that's going to be a big thing. The job becomes different if you can change that."

Another factor that Flint contends hurt his image as coach at UMass was expectation. He cited rival Connecticut's two-year transformation from national champion to National Invitational Tournament (NIT) invitee as evidence that UMass fans may be somewhat unrealistic in their definition of success for the team.

"You don't hear [UConn] saying that their program is in shambles," Flint said. He then addressed critics' claims that he has failed to import and develop adequate talent among his roster. "In the A-10, you're not going to get a McDonald's All American every year."

But even as he was swallowing the most bitter pill of his 12-year UMass career, Flint couldn't help but flash his trademark grin last night. He focused on the best of his past and his future, and may not have been too far off when he mentioned another possible career path that one of his revered predecessors now travels.

"Coach Leaman went to the radio; maybe I'll do that," laughed Flint.

Go ahead, coach. There's always room in the media for an extra touch of class.

Adam White is a Collegian columnist.

THE BRUISER-BALL HIGHLIGHT REEL

James "Bruiser" Flint

As a head coach at UMass

- Five years, 86-72 career record (52-28 in Atlantic 10)
- 2 NCAA Tournament appearances (1997-98); 1 NIT appearance (2000)
- NABC District I Co-Coach of the Year (1998)
- Fastest coach in UMass history to reach 30 wins (49 games)
- Fastest coach in UMass history to reach 40 wins (63 games)
- Second-fastest coach in UMass history to reach 50 wins (87 games)
- Winningest first-year coach in UMass history (19 wins)

As an assistant coach at UMass

- NCAA Final Four (1996)
- Five NCAA Tournament appearances (1992-96)
- Two NIT appearances (1990-91)
- Five A-10 regular season titles (1992-96)
- Five A-10 tournament titles (1992-96)

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

One of the most popular coaches in UMass history will be patrolling the sidelines elsewhere next season.

Late Crimson comeback all too familiar for women's lax squad

By Justin Pearson
Collegian Staff

CAMBRIDGE – On cold and windy day this past weekend at Harvard's Jordan Field, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team opened its 2001 campaign.

The Minutewomen were looking to erase the memory of last year's season opener in which they squandered a three-goal lead in the last ten minutes of the game and fell 7-6 to the Crimson. But Saturday, it was deja vu all over again as Harvard scored a pair of goals in the final four minutes to take a 9-8 victory.

With just 3:20 left on the clock Harvard's Lizzy Frisbie fired a shot into the corner of the net past UMass goalie Cyndi Doyle for the eventual game-winner. The goal was assisted on by senior Alli Harper, who had tied the score for the Crimson just 34 seconds earlier off a free position shot. It was Harper's third goal of the game and she finished with five points.

The Minutewomen struggled all day with free positions and it cost them dearly in the end. Harvard converted on three of its five free positions on the day, a fact that did not escape the attention of UMass coach Phil Barnes.

"We played solid team defense but we need to not give away as many fouls," Barnes said. "We need to not give away those fouls, especially in the critical scoring areas. We're a young team so we need to focus on not fouling as much and that should take away from it."

The afternoon could not have started any better for UMass as sophomore Lydia Robinson took a pass from senior co-captain Fay Naber and fired a shot past Harvard goalie Nora Guyer to give the Minutewomen a 1-0 lead just 10 seconds into the contest. Five minutes later the Minutewomen doubled their lead when freshman Miriam Godfrey scored her first-ever collegiate goal off a feed from Kara DePaula and beat Guyer from right out front.

This would be the only time all day that either team would have a two-goal lead. But it would take the Crimson until the 11:31 mark of the second half to finally forge ahead. With the score tied 5-5, Harper scored her second on the afternoon off a great pass from Lauren Corkerly to put Harvard ahead. UMass fought back, however, and evened the score again five minutes later on a goal from freshman Hope Zelinger, her first-ever collegiate goal.

The tie would only last 70 seconds as Harvard struck back to take the lead on a goal by Jen Brooks. The Maroon and White refused to throw in the towel, though, and scored twice in the next two minutes to take the lead for what would be the final time. First Robinson beat her defender and fired a shot past Guyer to complete her first career hat trick just 28 seconds after Brooks had given Harvard the lead. Then, just 1:25 later, another freshman, Angela McMahon, scored to make the score 8-7 in favor of the Minutewomen.

Despite scoring eight times the Minutewomen were unable to mount a strong attack against Harvard's sophomore netminder. Guyer faced only 10 shots, making just two saves while her counterpart for UMass, Cyndi Doyle, was called upon to make 10 saves.

"I thought she [Cyndi] was real solid in net," Barnes said. "She made the saves that she needed to make. At the other end we had some real good looks at the goal I just think we need to take a few more shots at the cage."

Besides Robinson the only Minutewoman to score multiple goals was Naber. The senior, who finished last season with 16 goals and 26 points, scored her first of the season late in the first half off a feed from fellow senior DePaula. She added another just three minutes into the second half when she took a pass from Robinson on a free position shot and beat Guyer.

UMass went into halftime holding a 4-3 lead but in the end Harvard's experience paid off and it was able to pick up the victory.

"It was a good effort we just need to continue to work hard and keep improving," Barnes said.

Boston has Outkast-fever.
Turn to Arts for the review.

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN

The Minutewomen dropped to 0-2 on the young season as they fell to Penn St. 11-4 in State College.

ARTS p. 6

SPORTS p. 10

Volume CVII Issue 98 | www.dailycollegian.com | Wednesday, March 14, 2001

Scott unveils 10-year plan in front of sparse audience

By Jennifer Eastwood
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott laid out his 10-year Investment Plan before a sparse audience yesterday just after 8:30am in the Campus Center Auditorium while members from the Student Coalition Against Racist and Classist Education (SCARCE) silently lined the wall in protest of low numbers amongst students of color and low income at the University of Massachusetts.

In a recent news release, SCARCE wrote, "This meeting [was] held purposely at 8:30 in the morning in the hopes that students [would] not attend," Twenty-two representatives from SCARCE came to the demonstration.

In his welcoming speech, Scott commented that the future Investment plan he would explain over the course of the next hour and a half had been submitted to and rejected by the President of UMass, William Bulger.

"That's good," he said. "Now, you have a chance to reshape it," adding that the new chancellor would be able to look at this plan and build from it.

Covering a wide range of topics, Scott addressed recent concerns on student/instructor ratios, diversity amongst students and faculty, intercollegiate athletics, and the distribution of university funds.

He explained that the ratio of total students to total instructors has remained roughly constant for 10 years at 15/1 because the number of non-tenure system faculty and professional staff has increased at a similar rate of decrease among the numbers of full-time faculty.

"The ratio had remain the same, but the mix has changed, but I believe the ratio will decrease," he noted. "If we do it [plan a decrease in full-time faculty] by design and not by default, it will work."

About half an hour into Scott's address, the SCARCE members, dressed in black clothing to show "solidarity with those who have disappeared or cannot come to UMass," began to make their way to the front of the auditorium.

With black taped covering their mouths, the members carried the "gravestones" of those who had to leave the university as a result of their race or class.

For about ten minutes, the line faced the audience as Scott continued to speak on the elevated stage just behind them before propping their signs against the front of the stage and making their way out of the room.

Soon after, Scott acknowledged that there is a definite under representation of African American students at UMass, also noting that now that he was talking about their [SCARCE] issue, they had left. Some SCARCE members who had retreated to sit among the rest of the

Turn to SCARCE, page 3

Inner tension lingers as SGA Senate questions appointment

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

Last week's conflict of interest over the appointed Administrative Affairs [A.A.] chair position in the Student Government Association Senate has left many questioning what will come of tonight's Senate meeting.

Speaker Jim Eltringham's decision to appoint Jennifer Teixeira to the A.A. chair raised several issues over the final vote.

Last week Senator Aaron Saunders expressed concern and disgust over the fact that the vote was broken by Eltringham, and felt that he had extended his vote improperly.

However, Eltringham declared that this was untrue, and that he broke the tie based on experience, not on personal biases.

SGA members have also expressed their views on the situation by explaining that they feel it is time to get over backroom politics.

"I think it's definitely time to work on issues with students," said Student Trustee Seth Avakian. "Not this inner room squabbling."

However, others felt that the issue between Eltringham and Saunders might be a continuing issue in tonight's Senate meeting.

"I think that last week's meeting went well, but I think that there is going to be some talk about last week's conflict of interest," Associate Speaker Michel McCarthy said. "I know that Aaron Saunders wrote a motion regarding the rules and ethics, and I think that will be an issue."

Saunders submitted a motion of abstract charges against Eltringham explaining that ethical standards were violated; however, in order to be considered, it must be submitted to a Rules and Ethics committee, which would then approve it.

"In order to go through the Senate a Rules and Ethics committee would have to be appointed by Jim [Eltringham] and I," McCarthy said. "It would be made up of individuals from the Administrative Affairs committee, who would make the final decision whether or not to approve it or not."

Another issue on the SGA's agenda will be the upcoming President and Trustee elections. With nomination papers due Thursday, March 15, by 5 p.m., possible candidates will be scrambling to receive their final signatures to put them on the ballot.

The upcoming elections will be looking at two referendum questions. One will focus on the ALANA [African American, Latino, Asian, Native American] Caucus seats in the SGA. The ALANA referendum question, which was removed from this past Senate elections ballot, will be placed on the President and Trustee election ballot. It will call for a reduction of the seats in the SGA Senate.

MassPIRG [Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group] is also looking to have an approved referendum question on the ballot. This would be a question regarding MassPIRG's existence at the University of Massachusetts campus and if students would like to continue funding them through a waivable, seven-dollar fee.

Tonight's meeting will take place in the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Business as usual for UMPD

Separate incidents create upheaval

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

A hate crime incident and the appearance of homophobic graffiti were handled by the University of Massachusetts police department this week.

On Monday, the vandalizing of a truck in Lot 49 was reported. According to Jim Lyons, spokesman for the UMPD, racial graffiti was scratched on the hood and trunk of the vehicle.

"There were extensive key scratches down the passenger and driver's side doors, and there were also obscenities scratched into the side and the doors," Lyons said. "Because of the nature of the obscenities, the graffiti was anti-hispanic and the car owner was Hispanic, this is also being considered a civil rights violation or a hate crime."

Homophobic graffiti was found in the lobby of Cance Dormitory on Saturday. There are currently no suspects and the case remains under investigation.

An individual approached a police officer in Totman Gymnasium to report an assault and battery incident.

"The officer was approached by someone who was very upset and bleeding from the mouth," Lyons said. "He asked to be taken to Health Services."

The person explained that someone with whom he was playing basketball punched him in the mouth. After interviews with the individual that allegedly punched the other individual it turned out that there were other factors involved and that counter-assault and battery charges would be filed.

Twenty-one-year-old Michael Abdinoor of Dracut, Mass. was arrested after a police officer spotted him driving a Jeep Ranger with four passengers in the front and four passengers in the back of the vehicle.

The officer stated that it seemed as if Abdinoor was unable to drive the vehicle because of the high volume of people in the car. It was then found out that he was operating a motor vehicle with a license that was suspended due to failure to pay an outstanding fine. He was arrested for driving with a suspended license and the unsafe operation of a motor vehicle.

Early Saturday morning, an officer spotted a vehicle operated by 25-year-old Gary Ricker of Belchertown speeding down Fearing Street.

"The officer found that the vehicle refused to stop," Lyons said. "The vehicle then went on to strike another vehicle on Lincoln Street."

The driver was arrested for driving while intoxicated, having an open container of alcohol in his car, speeding, failure to stop for a police officer and for leaving the scene of property damage.

A woman in Cashin Dormitory reported that someone had briefly looked into the shower that she was using on Monday afternoon. She screamed drawing the attention of her suitemates and scaring off the individual. The woman was showering in her co-ed suite, and the outer doors of the suite were not locked. There are no suspects in the incident.

A student reported to a police officer that he had observed a group of individuals attempting to break into a vehicle at 7:50 p.m. on Saturday. The student explained that the individuals ducked underneath the vehicle when they realized that they had been seen. Police checked the vehicle and found that the side mirror had been broken off.

Police Log

Accident
March 6
There was an accident in lot 15 that caused property damage.
There was an accident on Clark Hill Road that caused property damage.
March 7
There was an accident on Sylvan Drive that caused property damage.
There was an accident that caused property damage on Massachusetts Ave.
March 8
There was a two-vehicle accident on Massachusetts Ave. no one was injured.
There was a two-vehicle accident at the entrance to Lot 71 no one was injured.
There was a two-vehicle accident on Commonwealth Ave. and no one was injured.
There was an accident that caused property damage in Lot 43.
March 9
There was a two-vehicle accident in Lot 40. No one was injured.
There was a two-vehicle accident on University Drive. No one was injured.
March 11
There was a minor accident that occurred between a bus and a car in lot 71.
March 12
A vehicle struck another vehicle and then left the scene outside of Thatcher Dormitory.

Annoying Behavior
March 7
There was a report of annoying behavior in James Dormitory when an individual was throwing snowballs at a building.
March 10
There was a 911 hang-up call in Coolidge Dormitory.
March 12
There was a report of skateboarders outside of the Fine Arts Center.

Breaking and Entering
March 7
There was an incident of breaking and entering in Lot 13.
March 8
There was a wallet stolen from a dormitory room in John Quincy Adams Dormitory.
There was a vehicle broken into and a stereo stolen in Lot 13.
There was an incident of breaking and entering in Lot 22.

Vandalism
March 8
There was damage done to a vehicle in Lot 11.
March 9
There was damage done to a state vehicle in Lot 50.
There was graffiti reported in the men's bathroom in Bartlett Hall.
There was a window found smashed in the cluster office of McNamara Dormitory.
March 10
There was a window found smashed in Worcester Dining Hall.
There was damage done to a vehicle on Fearing Street.
There was a vending machine ripped from the wall and thrown outside. Money and contents were missing.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Get on the bus, Gus!

After stopping service for a few days during last week's NorEaster, UMass Transit is back to its regular scheduled routes.

Zinn to lecture on meditative practice

By Jaret Barr
Collegian Staff

Author and scientist Jon Kabat-Zinn will speak tonight at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The talk, entitled "Wherever You Go, There You Are: Living Life As If It Really Mattered," will explore how the ancient and simple meditative practice of mindfulness may be critically relevant to peoples lives and institutions in this high stress digital age. The event is free and open to the public.

Kabat-Zinn is the author of two best-selling books on meditation practice in everyday life: Full Catastrophe Living: Using the Wisdom of Your Body and Mind To Face Stress, Pain, and Illness and Wherever You Go There You Are: Mindfulness Meditation in Every Day Life. He is also the founder of the Center for Mindfulness in Medicine, Health Care and Society at the University of Massachusetts Medical School.

Using poetry, stories, and guided meditation, Kabat-Zinn will attempt to describe how mindfulness has brought "a profoundly rich contemplative and meditative dimension to a surprising variety of settings," from medical schools and health care facilities to law offices, schools, the inner city and prisons. Kabat-Zinn has also presented his theories to municipal workers, corporate CEOs, NBA championship teams and Olympic athletes. The talk will attempt to demonstrate the various ways in which mindfulness can nourish and transform people's lives as they practice being more in touch with who they really are from moment to moment and what is really important to them.

Kabat-Zinn's talk is the first in a series of talks and workshops supported by a grant from the Nathan Cummings Foundation to Five Colleges, Inc. The talks will take place between March of 2001 and January of 2002. The grant enables the Five College campus communities to undertake in-depth consideration of how contemplative study and practice in the academy can benefit learning, teaching and the work environment. Sponsors of the series include UMass and Five Colleges, Inc., the Center for Contemplative Mind in Society and the New Ways of Knowing and Contemplation Five College Faculty Dialogue Group.

There will be time for questions and dialogue with the audience.

For more information, contact Phyllis Robinson or Diane Dana at phyllis@chancellor.umass.edu.

Cultural Events Calendar

ACTIVISM

BOSTON – The Jewish Community Relations Council of Greater Boston is sponsoring Jewish Community Advocacy Day on Wednesday, March 21 from 8:45 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. at the Statehouse. Contact Amy Dain at (617) 457-8669 for more information.

CONTESTS

DEERFIELD – "Bright Spots." Create and submit 30 or 60 second video shorts promoting nonviolence and peacemaking. $2,000 in prizes will be awarded to groups and individuals in several categories. For more information and entry forms, see www.crocker.com/~traprock or call the Traprock Peace Center at (413) 773-7427.

SOCIAL EVENTS

AMHERST – "An Evening of Songs and Stories," Rabbi David Zeller, a pioneer in transpersonal psychology and Jewish spirituality and an internationally known teacher, counselor, singer and writer, will lead this event from 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday, March 26, at the Jewish Community of Amherst, 742 Main Street. Tickets are on a sliding scale, from $10 to $20. For more information, call 259-1740.

FILM/VIDEO SCREENINGS

UMASS – A multicultural film festival, "Border Crossing: Cinema and Video at Century's Turn," will be held on dates from Feb. 16 to May 10. The series highlights the fluidity and permanence of artistic, technical, geographic, cultural, political and personal borders and includes film and vide screenings and panel presentations. On April 5 at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 251 will be "Hamburger and Dolma: Cross Cultural Identities," presented by the director Caroline Babayan. Five Armenian women's stories are interwoven to shape a collective narrative about the intergenerational transmission of trauma, the complexity of identity and the abiding power of family and friendship. For more information, call Film Studies at 545-3659.

RELIGIOUS

AMHERST – Shabbat services are held on Fridays at 6 p.m. followed by Shabbat dinner at 7:15 p.m. in Hillel House.

LECTURE/DISCUSSION

UMASS – The Everywoman's Center and the People's Market present Dr. Stella Volpe's lecture entitled "How to Save Your Own Life," on simple ways to prevent osteoporosis. Wednesday, March 14 at 12:30-1:30 p.m. in the Duke's Room (near Earthfoods), UMass Student Union. For more information contact the Everywoman's Center at 545-0883.

AMHERST – The Jewish Community of Amherst presents "Judaism and Controversial Subjects: The Death Penalty," at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community of Amherst.

AMHERST – Jean Troustine, a teacher of theatre in a women's prison, will be sharing her insights and reading from her book Shakespeare behind Bars: The Power of Drama in a Women's Prison on Thursday, March 15 at 7 p.m. at Food for Thought Books. For more information, contact Joan Barberich at 253-5432.

UMASS – Lisa Duggan, Associate Professor of American Studies at NYU, will speak on "The New Homonormativity: Gay Conservatives and the Sexual Politics of Neoliberalism," Thursday, March 29 at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 904-908. For more information, call 545-4824.

SMITH COLLEGE – "The Future of Feminist Scholarship? A Glimpse at the Third World. Work in Progress." This lecture will be given by Kumi-Kumi Bhavnani, Senior Editor of Meridians and Visiting Professor of Women's Studies at Smith College, on Monday, April 16 at 4:15 p.m. in Seelye 207. Free.

SOUTH HADLEY – Glyne Griffith, Assistant Professor of Carribean and cultural studies and the Harlem Renaissance at Bucknell University, will lecture on "Reading in the Dark: Race, Literature and the Discourse of Blackness." Thursday, March 15 at 4:30 p.m., Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College.

SMITH COLLEGE – Abigail Stewart of the University of Michigan will speak on "Identity and Consciousness in Women's Political Activism." 4:30 p.m.

CONFERENCE

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "From Abortion Rights to Social Justice: Building the Movement for Reproductive Freedom," an annual conference for student and community activists, will be held from March 30 to April 1. Free housing, babysitting, sign language interpreters, and meals are available by advance registration. The conference is free, but registration in advance needed. For more information, call 559-5416.

THEATER/DANCE/SPOKEN WORD

UMASS – Slam poet Regie Cabico will perform at the March Queer Café, on Thursday, March 15 from 7-9 p.m. in the Graduate Student Lounge, in the Campus Center.

UMASS & SMITH COLLEGE – New WORLD Theater's Future Aesthetics Project presents the intersections between theater and spoken word, performance poetry, hip-hop and youth culture. The final performance, featuring Caridad de la Luz, will be held at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery at UMass on April 5. Free admission to all events.

UMASS – "Stop Kiss" traces the experiences of Callie and Sarah, two young women who are dealing with all the usual young adult issues as well as falling in love with each other. The show explores the theme of honesty, and the hostility of a homophobic society to such honesty. The show will take place at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater on April 5 through 7, and April 10 through 13. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

UMASS – "Nuyorican Stories" will be performed with side-splitting humor by the members of Culture Clash, who blend poetry, dance, music and visual arts. The show will be performed at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on Thursday, April 19. For tickets, which range from $5 to $10, call the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

UMASS – "I Remember Mapa," a comical one-man show starring Alec Mapa, will be performed one night only at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on May 10. Based on his true-life experiences, the piece chronicles Mapa's colorful adventures through rise, fall and rebirth as a gay Filipino American actor in the entertainment industry. For tickets, which range from $5 to $10, call the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – The Magic Triangle Jazz Concert Series presents Sam Rivers, tenor and soprano saxophone, flute, piano and voice. Benzanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Call 545-2876 for more information.

UMASS – "AEROS" features gold medal-winning gymnasts from the Romanian Gymnastics Federation, directed by Daniel Ezralow, David Parsons and Moses Pendleton in collaboration with "Stomp" creators Luke Cresswell and Steve McNicholas. This unusual performance troupe will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Hall on Wednesday, March 14.

This calendar, which previews local events of interest to under-represented groups on campus and in the community, runs on Wednesdays. Submit notices of events to Taiva Mantines, Diversity Editor. Standard entry forms are available in the Collegian office.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanyn Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hummel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Esther Danzig Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

Spring break special
Changes
[a full service salon for men and women]
Introducing Diane:
· choose any wax service and receive a second waxing service for half off when you mention this ad.
offer expires May 31, 2001
Thornes Market Place
North Hampton MA 01060 Phone: 413-586-2600

SOMA
collectic combination of rock, jazz, & funk
Tonight!
Live at the Pub
18+ welcome
fun food. spirits. THE PUB amherst
21+ to drink

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
Materials Engineer I
Raytheon Materials Engineering is looking to fill an entry-level position within the Composites Section. The ideal candidate would have a B.S. in Chemical, Materials, or Mechanical Engineering.
Materials Engineering supports Raytheon products with technical expertise in ceramics, optical materials, PWB and hybrid substrates, plastic parts, composites, paints and coatings, adhesives and thin films. The Composite Section of Materials Engineering works with composite part design, prototyping, and process development.
Raytheon offers competitive salaries and comprehensive benefits including a performance sharing plan; a 9/80 work schedule which includes every other Friday off; educational assistance; medical, dental, life, disability; credit union; 401(k) with company match. Raytheon is an Equal Opportunity Employer and welcomes a wide diversity of qualified applicants.
For more information, and to submit resumes, please contact the Campus Career Network. Resumes will be accepted no later than March 28, 2001. Interviews will be conducted on April 4, 2001.
Raytheon

LIVE MUSIC
McMURPHY'S Welcomes
The Guitar Dudes
Every Wednesday
NO COVER!
Positive ID Required

racial equality environmental justice welfare reform
reproductive justice freedom from violence HIV/AIDS globalization gay/lesbian/bisexual/transgender rights economic equality healthcare and childcare
support for immigrants sexual health education
You are cordially invited to attend our fifteenth annual conference at Hampshire college:
FROM ABORTION RIGHTS TO SOCIAL JUSTICE: BUILDING THE MOVEMENT FOR REPRODUCTIVE FREEDOM
March 30- April 1, 2001
Hampshire College
Amherst, Massachusetts
The conference is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. Childcare and sign language interpretation provided with advanced registration. Registration forms available on our website at http://www.hamp.hampshire.edu/~rpa3/ or if you would like a registration form via snail mail, please call us at (413) 559-5416.

Atlantis
Behind Antonio's Pizza in Amherst
NO COVER $2 COVER AFTER 11 PM
TUES: Drum & Bass with Kid Viscious
WED: B-Ski's Bins "The best in disco & funk."
FREE Nachos 10-11 pm
THURS: Straight Hip-Hop, No Chaser
FRI: with DJs Double OC and XsO Growroom Records presents: "House on the Rocks"
SAT: with DJs Bon Bons & Salty Hip-Hop, R&B and Reggae with DJ Trendz
"Ladies Night" - Ladies get in FREE
SUN: Drunk Monks open turntable night

■ scarce

continued from page 1

audience to listen to Scott's speech reassured him that they were still present.

"[We must] maintain the commitment to reflecting diversity of four-year college-bound graduation seniors from high schools in Massachusetts," read Scott from his laptop conputer.

He presented statistics that in 1999, 18.4 percent of all Massachusetts high school students were of African, Latino, Asian, and Native American (ALANA) ethnicity, yet only 13.4 percent of Massachusetts high school students who had taken college prep were ALANA.

Concluding that UMass Amherst was well within those statistics since 16.7 percent of the entering class of 2000 was ALANA students, Scott acknowledged that the university uses an affirmative action policy to an extent as far as is legally permitted by the state.

"We also exceed [the state's high school statistics] in percentages of Hispanic, Asian, and Native American students," he stated. "But we're lacking in percentages of African Americans."

After expressing his doubts in SATs scores as good indicators for college students, he explained about a systemic outreach program with K-12 that would ensure that high school graduation rates would become more representative of the potential amongst all students.

"Take advantage of retirements of faculty and staff over 10 years to build a new level of diversity into all parts of the university," read a statement from his plan, showing that he did not want to limit diversity issues to students alone.

Moving on to intercollegiate athletics, Scott said he wanted to develop an athletics review committee to determine the appropriate range of sports and levels of competition at UMass.

"A move to Division I-A football could bring the University to a new level of competition, athletically and academically," he said, adding that a risky 10-year business plan to reduce financial backing has been developed.

However, he cautioned that such a move should only be undertaken in the context of the special investment by the Commonwealth to create the Integrative University of the 21st century.

"To do it without such a move is madness," he remarked. "Failure to move in this direction could mean the elimination of an array sports or the elimination of I-AA football.

Following his speech, Scott added that the largest emphasis is put on the basketball and football teams. But, rather than the elimination 12 other sports, it would make more sense to eliminate football "but I don't want it to happen," he said.

Scott also presented three possible scenarios for distribution of the university funds. Scenario I described a situation in which state appropriation growth equaled 4.5 percent, while in Scenarios II and III, state appropriation growth equaled 3.5 percent.

In scenarios I and II, the Distance Learning program was given 8.6 million dollars, financial aid 8.3 million, athletics 1.6 million whereas salaries were given 102.0 million under scenario I and 82.0 million under scenario II. Scenario III was left open for a later discussion. Scott also reminded the audience that scenarios are not reality.

"This is not the only solution. It's only a discussion, but we can't fail to have the discussion at all," he told the audience. "No one has to change. Everyone has to have the discussion."

He also mentioned that he would be in favor of unfreezing university student tuition prices and raising them and also mentioned the fate of certain offices on the campus community.

According to Scott, the Everywoman's Center, the Residential Education Assistant Program, the Office of Equal Opportunity, and the Diversity Jewish Awareness and Anti-Semitism program, among many others, are the programs to be cut first.

"These are actually the last things you should take out," he stated proposing that it would be better to combine them rather than delete them altogether.

As 10:30 a.m. approached, Scott concluded his Strategic Intent for the future of UMass by expressing his wishes for his successor, remarking, "The next chancellor needs to be much more external-oriented than I was."

Upon asking for any questions or comments, Scott was greeted by sophomore Johnette Ellis, an Afro-American major, who approached the floor microphone and asked him to revisit his previous comment on UMass "doing away with" the idea of a land grant institution in order to approach the concept of an integrative university.

Scott responded, "I wanted to free the thinking to get people to talk about the connection between a land grant and research institution."

Claiming to believe in everything a land grant university would represent, he regrettably said that ideas within land grant and research institutions are pitted against each other. The concept of a land grant was made in 1862 with a Morrill Act, and Scott said he believes in moving on to incorporate newer ideas as well as the old.

Jessica Fink, graduating senior and a BDIC major, said to Scott, "I want to know why, without any fancy talk, there no students of color on this campus. Why do we have different statistics than you?"

Recalling a recent study he had read, Scott said that most people do not notice a certain group until that group exceeds 30 percent, and thus walking around on the campus may make one feel like there are less students of color here than there actually are.

"How far and how fast should we go to eliminate white students to make room for students of color?" he began to question when a man from the audience asked why the University could not just increase the number of students on campus and bring in more students of color without taking in less white. Scott did not approve of this idea.

Before he had to leave for another meeting, Scott was addressed on one last point.

"By raising tuition prices," Fink said. "We're never going to bring in more lower class white students and people of color [to this campus]." However, he was unable to get into a long discussion on the topic due to his other engagement. Finally, he was invited to attend a SCARCE meeting by one of their members.

While some SCARCE students felt hope when Scott remarked, "Students aren't always right, but they have an idea worth looking at," during his presentation, many of them felt unsatisfied with only receiving about fifteen minutes to speak with him.

STILL TIME TO ENTER:
Softball (M/W/C) - A.S.A.P.
Co-rec Soccer - A.S.A.P.
Volleyball Special (C) - A.S.A.P.
OFFICIALS NEEDED:
Softball Clinics - March 26, 28, 29, 30, Apr 1
Co-ree Soccer Clinics - March 27, 28, 29 30
Volleyball Special - March 27
Call for clinic attendance requirements, times and locations.
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693
On The Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim

you know that little voice inside that says "I can't"? this summer, [crush it].
Bring your "can-do" attitude to Camp Challenge. Where you'll get paid to learn how to become a leader and acquire skills that'll help you meet the challenges you'll face in your career. Apply today at the Army ROTC department, with no obligation. Before that voice tells you to take a vacation.
ARMY ROTC Unlike any other college course you can take.

What is TOAST!?
TOAST! is an improvisational theater group featuring the audio/visual aspects of:
Theater
Music
Video
Art Display
TOAST! performances are FREE and occur on the last Tuesday of every month in the Student Union Ballroom at 8:00 SHARP!
Bring your friends, your funny bone, and your imagination on March 27th to this FREE EVENT!
Student Valley Productions
The Creators of-- Mission:IMPROVable & Casual Sketch
This month's TOAST! performance is entitled: "What Once Was Lost..."
This project made possible in part by: The Umass Arts Council and The SACEF

UMASS
CAMPUS SUMMER JOB
FULL-TIME
VISITORS CENTER
The Robsham Visitors Center has a full-time summer job opportunity for an undergraduate student.
Title: Student Greeter and Information Specialist.
Hourly rate: $8 minimum (approx. $3500).
Period: June 4 - August 31
Hours: 9:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. (weekdays)
Minimum qualifications include active status, completed at least two consecutive semesters, knowledgeable about campus programs, services, and building locations.
For further information, call 545-3480 or e-mail helgerson@admin.umass.edu
Resume and interview required.

RETIREMENT INSURANCE MUTUAL FUNDS TRUST SERVICES TUITION FINANCING
Tax-deferred solutions from TIAA-CREF can help you reach your retirement goals faster.
Call us for a free tax-savings calculator
When you're investing for retirement, the adage "never put off until tomorrow what you can do today" doesn't apply to taxes.
That's because investments that aren't eroded by taxes can add up to significantly more money—or you—money you can use to supplement your pension and Social Security.
Let our consultants show you all the advantages of tax deferral, or call us for a free tax-savings calculator.
Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs), IRAs and other tax-saving solutions—along with TIAA-CREF's low expenses and solid history of performance—can help you invest tax smart today so that you can reach your retirement goals faster in the years to come.
*Note: Under federal tax law, withdrawals prior to age 59½ may be subject to restrictions, and to a 10% additional tax.
TAX DEFERRAL MAKES A DIFFERENCE
$102,068
Tax-deferred savings, after taxes*
$67,514
After-tax savings
$100 per month for 30 years
In this hypothetical example, setting aside $100 a month in a tax-deferred investment with an 8% return in a 28% tax bracket shows better growth after 30 years than the same net amount put into a savings account. Total returns and principal value of investments will fluctuate, and yield may vary. The chart above is presented for illustrative purposes only and does not reflect actual performance, or predict future results, of any TIAA-CREF account, or reflect expenses.
TIAA-CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™
1.800.842.2776
www.tiaa-cref.org
For more complete information on our securities products, call 1 800 842 2733, ext. 5509, for prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest. • TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc., distribute securities products. • Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association (TIAA), New York, NY, and TIAA-CREF Life Insurance Co., New York, NY, issue insurance and annuities. • TIAA-CREF Trust Company, FSB provides trust services. • Investment products are not FDIC-insured, may lose value and are not bank guaranteed. © 2001 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association - College Retirement Equities Fund, New York, NY 01/04

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A SHOW OF SUPPORT
One Umass to another

The University of Massachusetts made the news yesterday. No, not our beloved Amherst campus, but one of our sister schools, UMass-Dartmouth.

The Dartmouth administration announced plans that would, depending on who you believe, displace at least 100 upperclassmen from the residence halls at the minimum and perhaps result in all seniors and juniors being kicked out of on-campus housing.

The student body, particularly (as would be expected) the upperclassmen, responded with spontaneous protests against the measure. After midnight the unrest began, as the students flooded from the dormitories to make their presence known.

Seniors threatened to boycott classes, lampposts were torn out, and food was thrown. While the excesses (destruction of property) and the foolishness (throwing food?) are regrettable, we feel that the Dartmouth students were exactly right in their acting against this measure.

Can you imagine if the Chancellor suddenly announced that all UMass Amherst upperclassmen would now be required to move off campus? To make way for freshman and sophomores who, evidently, are more important than the people who have already committed years and thousands of dollars to the University, seniors and juniors would now have no spaces available to them in Southwest, Central, Northeast, Orchard Hill and, yes, even Sylvan?

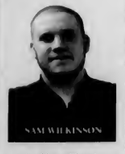
The unfairness of this stinks. Can a measure of this sort be seen as anything less than discrimination? It can be age discrimination, as the older are forced out and disregarded. It can be intelligence discrimination, as Dartmouth has recently raised its admissions standards and is trying to cater to the higher-achieving younger classes. Whatever you label it, it is wrong is so many ways.

The UMasses must have solidarity in this situation. We must support the students at Dartmouth in their struggle against these unfair and discriminatory rules. It is only right.

It is also in our pure self-interest. Do we want our administrators getting ideas that students will tolerate rules such as these? We have had our own housing crunches in recent years, and there has yet to be a solution arrived at where everyone was accommodated without struggle. Getting rid of seniors is a way to make room... but an unacceptable one.

The Collegian supports the UMass-Dartmouth students as they fight to keep these unfair housing restrictions from being put into effect. Their success is greater peace of mind for all University of Massachusetts students, regardless of campus, that none of us will be cast from our dorms simply for being too old.

Modern greed and SUVs



SAM WILKINSON

I was driving to Springfield yesterday morning.

It was 5:00 in the morning; I had friends who had to catch an awfully early train.

There was an inch of ice on the road.

I passed a sport utility vehicle.

Now, I think it's important to realize that I drive an old Subaru and I'm from south of here. There's no reason why I should have passed anyone, nevermind a Massachusetts-plated beautiful blue SUV. But I did. I motored right by the damn thing. In the ice.

If someone's going to drop $40,000 on a gas guzzling road danger, at least drive like it – that SUV should have been monster-trucking it along the highway at 110 miles per hour, squishing cars that got in the way. Instead, it was crawling along the highway at a paltry 50 miles per hour, or roughly six gallons per hour.

I fear I'll never understand the desire to own an SUV. I prefer used Japanese cars that get good gas mileage, have enough leg room in the back for friends of mine who are taller than me and that are mechanics' dreams when it comes to repair. Perhaps I'm not cool enough to understand the need for other vehicles: I'm guessing it's a status thing, but I don't really care either way.

Such excess is a funny thing. Everyone seems really interested in getting more, more, and more. I can't say I'm innocent. I'd love to get more money than I do now. I'd love to have more electronics than I do now. I'd love to get lots more of lots of things than I do now. But it seems like there's a point where we realize that we'd love to have more, we'd take it if we got it, but we're happy with what we've got.

It's a funny thing, too – I watched a surreal argument the other day on the best news channel in America, Fox News. A former Black Panther whose name I forget was arguing with David Horowitz about paying reparations for slavery. The Black Panther's argument was "pay" because he was "owed."

I don't agree with that. I never enslaved anyone. I don't owe anybody a damned thing financially, except for the insurance policy on my car. But the fact is that I wasn't even listening to the Black Panther really because I was too aghast at what Horowitz had said previously.

Who is David Horowitz? Why, he's only the best speaker to ever come to UMass two and half weeks from now on behalf of our benevolent Republican Club. He's also an archconservative who used to be liberal. It's like being a traitor, only it turns my stomach more.

He was on the television arguing that blacks should realize just how good they have it in America now. Then, like a young boy getting touched properly for the first time, he trotted his most important statistic: blacks in American earn fifty times what their counterparts earn in Africa. Then he'd sort of paused, like this was his truly clinching argument.

My brain stopped working temporarily.

I thought I'd misheard him – I checked his (www.cspc.org) website and found the following quote: "American blacks on average enjoy per capita incomes in the range of twenty to fifty times that of blacks living in any of the African nations from which they were kidnapped."

'Gasp,' says me.

Maybe I'm tooting my own horn here, but I've taken a few classes about that continent and I don't ever really remember hearing a statistic involving blacks there earning a great deal of money. I remember things like, the average wage is equivalent to three hundred dollars a year or something close to that.

Horowitz's argument was that blacks should be happy because, on average, they're making fifty times that – that's right, $15,000! With a family of four in tow, that's below the poverty line. Woo hoo, go blacks.

Are far as Horowitz is concerned, blacks have gotten enough. Hell, slavery probably wasn't all that bad, considering that blacks are doing just fine and dandy for themselves today. "They," in some sort of pluralistic sense, should quit their bitching.

Let's face it, the greed is like foot and mouth disease in Europe – anything can get it and it's pretty damned hard to get rid of. That argument those two individuals we're having? It was simple greed. The Black Panther wanted money; it's the most immediate way to right a wrong in this world. Horowitz wanted to keep his hands on his money; it's the simple rich man's argument. He shouldn't have to pay other people. It's the conservative nature of being cheap.

What's the solution to our crazy capitalistic collection of colonies (alliteration gets you places, kids)? Is there an answer to the reparations argument? Is there an answer for why people buy insanely expensive cars when they could get good cheap ones?

Argh, frustration, confusion and questions, they reign supreme. If solutions weren't tough to find, we'd have answers for everything, but we don't. Part of growing up is realizing that sometimes, there are no answers.

Reparations shouldn't be paid, but slavery shouldn't be forgotten, nor should its effect in society ignored. My Subaru is always going to be better than that SUV, but I'll never get chicks the way the New Jersey guys do.

Blacks are going to have to continue their uphill struggle in this country. I'll just get to wherever I'm going faster, cheaper, and less cool. And when I get there, I still won't have any idea how to change that.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

I am not Lewinsky

EMILY VACANTI

Monica Lewinsky. Pretty much everyone in the country has heard of her. Unfortunately, she is famous for something that some people would be less than proud of being known for. I am not going to say it because almost everyone knows what it is. If you do not, then crawl out of your hole.

Lewinsky, in her achievements, has done something that I find difficult to believe anyone can do as well as she did. She took an admired position, not being on the knees, but rather being an intern, and brought shame to it. She did indeed bring even more shame to performing certain acts, but this column is not about that, so we will not go there.

The reason that I find this difficult is that she had the opportunity of her life, and she decided to take it somewhere where it should not have been taken. She disgraced the wonderful world of internships. I feel this was because I am an intern. I intern at the Western Massachusetts Office of the Governor.

Accepting this internship has exposed me to opportunities that will change the rest of my life. I have job interviews from different state agencies in another part of the country, mainly because of my internship. I was told by more than one employer that the only reason that I was offered an interview is because I am currently an intern of the state. If I had not taken this opportunity, then I would have a completely different future in mind.

As much as I thank God that I chose this internship, and therefore may get a really good job, there are certain drawbacks to this internship. Now the experience that I am getting is amazing beyond belief.

I am getting a first-hand view at real-life politics, which is so much better than observing the SGA, as well as learning how to deal with real problems.

Constituents call looking for answers, phone numbers, addresses; nearly everything under the sun. I even get calls from people about federal issues, issues that I cannot answer because I intern for the state. I have learned of the many perks that I can get if I want to work for the state. I have also learned of some of the downsides of working for the state (though I have not come across many). I know about the tight budget that we have to work with. Many of you scoff at the mention of a tight budget, but I assure you we do. For instance, when my supervisor ordered a coat rack she was told that she could get one with only three hooks (mainly because there are three full-time employees). She explained to them that she has what are now sometimes referred to as 'Lewinsky wannabes,' better know as interns, so she would need six hooks. The short story is that she eventually got her way. My experience of seeing things like the budget in the making makes my experience unforgettable.

Now for the biggest part – I am requesting that people stop associating me with Lewinsky. Besides, Lewinsky being my occasional nickname, the nickname that people use when they truly want to piss me off, I am asked at least once a week, some weeks almost every day, if I take part in the certain activity that she is so well known for. At first it was a cute little joke. Before I even applied to different internships my friends all warned me that many people would probably associate me with her. I took that into serious consideration before I even applied.

What I ended up realizing is that the future job benefits, if I took advantage of them, would eventually far outweigh the price that I would have to pay by being associated with her. But now I am getting to the point where I just do not want to put up with the teasing anymore. Like I said before, the first couple of times anyone called me Lewinsky, it was cute and I laughed. The first couple of times anyone asked me if I did perform, I took that as a joke, but not quite as lightly. Then one of my friends, who will remain anonymous, asked me if I would tell him if I ever decided to follow in Lewinsky's footsteps. That pissed me off. That is what got to me in the end.

The fact that being an intern is so strongly associated with that certain act really bothers me. The added fact that this friend of mine does not have enough confidence in me so that he has to ask me to tell him if it would ever happen (to all of those nosy, inquiring minds, it would not) bothers me even more. And the fact that I will have to live with the stigma of being associated with Lewinsky at one point in my life nearly beats the point of having accepted an internship and then performing the necessary non-sexual duties. In fact, the benefits just barely cover the negative associations. I do not want to deal with this for the rest of my life, and the best place to stop the associations seems to be where they started. So please stop associating me with Lewinsky, and that includes using that as my nickname.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

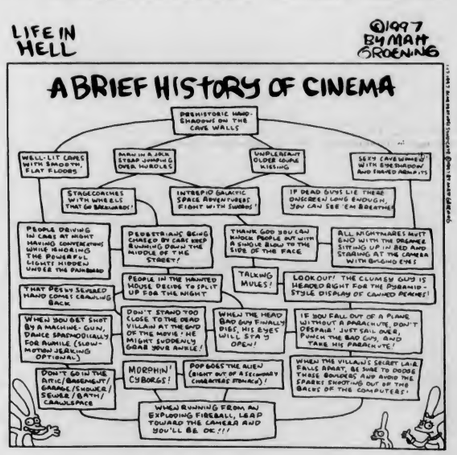
LIFE IN HELL



©1997 BY MATT GROENING
A BRIEF HISTORY OF CINEMA
PREHISTORIC MAN SHADOWS ON THE CAVE WALLS
WELL-LIT CAVES WITH SMOOTH, FLAT FLOORS
BANG IN A DARK, DUSTY, CRUMBLING OPERA HOUSE
UNPLEASANT OLDER LOUNGE SMELLING
SEEN CAREWORN BY EXHIBITIONS AND TIMES' ABUSE
STAGECOACHES WITH WHEELS THAT GO BROKEN!
INTREPID GALACTIC SPACE REPORTERS! FIGHT WITH SWORDS!
IF DEAD GUYS LIE THERE QUIETLY LONG ENOUGH, YOU CAN SEE 'EM BREATHE!
PEOPLE DRIVING IN CARS AT NIGHT HAVING CONVERSATIONS WHILE HUGGING THE POWERFUL LIGHTS HIDDEN UNDER THE PAVEMENT
PEDESTRIANS BEING CHASED BY CARS DOWN RUNNING DOWN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREET!
THANK GOD YOU CAN KNOCK PEOPLE OUT WITH A SINGLE BLOW TO THE SIDE OF THE FACE
ALL NIGHTMARES MUST BEGIN WITH SOMEONE SITTING UP IN BED AND STARTING AT THE CAMERA WITH BUGGED EYES
THAT PESKY SEGMENT HAND COMES CRAWLING BACK
PEOPLE IN THE HAUNTED HOUSE DECIDE TO SPLIT UP FOR THE NIGHT!
TALKING MULES!
LOOK OUT! THE CLUMSY GUY IS HEADED RIGHT FOR THE PUDENDO-STYLE DISPLAY OF CURVED METAL!
WHEN YOU GET SHOT BY A MACHINE GUN, DANCE SPASMODICALLY FOR AWHILE (SLOW-MOTION JERKING OPTIONAL)
DON'T STAND TOO CLOSE TO THE DEAD VILLAIN AT THE END OF THE MOVIE: HE MIGHT LOOK LIKE HE'D GRAB YOU AWHILE!
WHEN THE HERO BAD GUY FINALLY DIES, HIS EYES WILL STAY OPEN!
IF YOU FALL OUT OF A PLANE WITHOUT A PARACHUTE, DON'T DESPAIR! JUST FALL OVER, PUNCH THE BAD GUY, AND TAKE HIS PARACHUTE!
DON'T GO IN THE ATTIC/BASEMENT/GARAGE/SHOWER/SEWER/BATH/CRAWLSPACE
MORPHIN' CYBORGS!
POP GOES THE ALIEN (RIGHT OUT OF A FREUDIANLY CHOKEBERRY PHASE)!
WHEN THE VILLAIN'S SECRET LAIR BLOWS UP, BE SURE TO DODGE THOSE BOOMERS AND AVOID THE SPARKS SHOOTING OUT OF THE BACKS OF THE COMPUTERS!
WHEN RUNNING FROM AN EXPLODING FIREBALL, LEAP TOWARD THE CAMERA AND YOU'LL BE OK!!!

Choosing Poverty?

A few weekends ago, my roommate and I went to a party in her friend's room. The boys on that floor are known to be a little conservative, but they're friendly. We were laughing, singing silly drinking songs, and having a good time until one of the guys shouted, "Fine, I'll get my own beer. I don't take handouts like a lazy welfare mom."

None of them knew that I had been on food stamps when I was younger. None of them knew that growing up in Chicopee, my best friends had all been on welfare with mothers who, like mine, were anything but lazy, working ten hour plus shifts to support families. All of them firmly believed that people choose to be on welfare, to be homeless to be hungry, to suck hard-working folks like themselves dry.

People don't choose to be on welfare, to live in unsafe housing, to visit soup kitchens or go hungry. The myth of the always-pregnant, drug using Puerto Rican welfare queen and the crazy, can-collecting homeless old man couldn't be farther from reality. This weekend I went with a group of MassPIRG volunteers to a soup kitchen. To my surprise, the bulk of the business wasn't crazy old men, but young children and families. I work in Holyoke with young mothers receiving welfare and working for their Graduate Equivalency Degree (GED). These women are some of the most eager-to-learn, enthusiastic and talented young people I've ever met. They appreciate and write poetry, learn about and work on environmental and social issues, and are mothers besides. None of them choose poverty – they're kept there.

People don't live comfortably on welfare – the total of all the benefits is below the poverty line, but the alternative is worse. The kind of jobs that are available – minimum wage, part time, seasonal, and temporary work – doesn't provide benefits like childcare of healthcare. When my mom worked as a manager at Burger King, my sister and I used to stay at the restaurant after school because we couldn't afford a babysitter. For parents without manager privileges, hours don't bend to a little conservative, but they're friendly. We put her out of work for three months. If we'd had better health insurance, we could have prevented it. When families are living front paycheck to paycheck and don't have health insurance, sickness can easily mean unemployment and homelessness. Families receiving welfare also receive state health insurance, but lose that health insurance once they obtain a job. In short, they have to choose between the health of their family and employment.

LAURA KYSER

Right now, because I'm in college, I'm covered under my parents insurance. But two years from now, if I don't get a benefits-paying job right away, I'll be without insurance. If I get sick, I'll end up with unmanageable hospital bills and, if I get sick enough, I'll be out of work and out of a home. Health care should be a right, not a privilege, and we can only solve poverty by providing universal health care.

Massachusetts frequently leads the nation in progressive social change and we're leading the way with healthcare. Right now there is a bill in the state legislature that would increase the number of people who have access to state healthcare. An Act Expanding Access to Healthcare, Reducing Youth Smoking and Improving Public Health in the Commonwealth, S.1703, and a bill that would lower the price of prescription drugs, H.2886, through the group buying power of our state so that money does not rule over health. There is also a bill that would establish universal single payer healthcare in Massachusetts, S.531. I have had the opportunity to work with students on universal healthcare through MassPIRG, and I urge everyone to call or write Senator Stan Rosenberg and Representative Ellen Story or your own state congress person and tell them why universal health care is so important.

Laura Kyser is a UMass student.

Confessions of a liberal

It's common wisdom that Liberals have greater compassion for the poor and downtrodden than their conservative counterparts. They champion public policy initiatives to give the less fortunate access to a better education, quality health care, and a whole host of other social services to prevent them from sliding through the cracks of our society.

Liberals want to create true equality in this country, where everyone – regardless of race, class, gender, or creed – has the same opportunities at the starting line in the marathon of life. Liberals speak for the common man. Meanwhile, conservatives – we're so often told - care more about limiting the size of government and preserving individual economic freedom, especially for the wealthy, than helping the needy.

ROBERT LACEY

I don't doubt that this is true; I'm a Liberal myself. But I'm here to tell you a dirty little secret about what goes on in the liberal's mind when he expends enormous amounts of energy doing good deeds. Indeed, behind the Liberal's charitable intentions is a darker sentiment. I've been in denial about this for many years, but I've had enough of all this repression. I have to out myself – and I'm taking all my fellow Liberals with me! You may want to sit down before I tell you this. The Liberal - are you sitting down? - has great contempt for the common man and the less fortunate in our country.

I just heard a collective outcry of outrage and incredulity – "What!?" I know I'm in big trouble for dropping a bomb like this. (Thankfully, I'm not a faculty member striving for tenure.) I know, it sounds crazy, especially coming from a self-declared Liberal.

How can Liberals have contempt for the very people they try so hard to help? As I've already conceded, liberals do have greater compassion for the less fortunate, and they support policies that give people an equal chance to succeed in life. But it doesn't follow that their greater compassion means they actually like and respect the common working (and unemployed) stiffs they represent.

It really doesn't. I challenge all you outraged Liberals to take an honest look at yourselves and ask – "Do I actually like the people who make up the lower classes? Would I want to hang out with them? Invite them to come along to the latest art exhibit at the MFA? To the latest Rohmer film playing in Northampton? To the local micro-brewery for a few pints of their house porter and a discussion about the performativity of gender as depicted in Boys Don't Cry? To my next book club meeting where we'll indulge in a little wine and cheese while discussing the multicultural marvels of Zadie Smith's debut novel White Teeth?" Don't kid yourselves.

We generally assume that our sympathies lie with people we like. But this isn't always the case. We often feel bad for those we consider inferior, people to whom our hearts cry out, but whose presence at our Saturday evening cocktail party would only elicit embarrassment.

Remember, the common man drinks Coors and doesn't know or care that his purchase not only reflects his poor tastes but also supports an abominably right-wing (did I hear fascist?) family.

Also remember, this Joe Six-Pack is a NASCAR enthusiast, drives through sleet and snow to attend the Monster Truck show performing 100 miles away, watches the WWF with no sense of irony, proudly sports a mullet hair-do, and fails to understand that the likes of Archie Bunker and Al Bundy are actually parodies of working-class ignorance, not paragons of working-class common sense. Does this sound horribly elitist – and classist? Of course it does. Elitism is at the heart of Liberalism.

Did I just hear another collective cry of outrage? Maybe it's just my imagination. If you still don't believe me, let's take a closer look at Liberal public policy to see if we can find signs of elitism. We've already established that Liberals favor compassionate social policy. No argument there. But left-wing intellectuals reveal their contemptuous paternalism in the very design of their policy initiatives. For example, Liberals were the architects, and continue to be the ardent supporters of, federal nutrition programs like food stamps and school lunch.

Instead of leaving the unfortunate to their own devices with a wad of cash, Liberals give them food stamps to make sure they buy food for their children and don't squander their money on scratch tickets or booze. Believing the poor and downtrodden are too stupid to make intelligent decisions independently, Liberals engineer social programs that control the behavior of its recipients. We don't trust these people to spend their money wisely. And we shouldn't, because these people will make poor decisions - more often than not. The needy are a product of their socialization – (pick your poison), unfortunate economic circumstances, inadequate education, excessively dysfunctional family life – and are not always in the position to make the kind of informed decisions we would make.

We Liberals understand this and have compassion for people in unfortunate circumstances, but we surely don't have respect for them as equals. Instead, we pity them for not being knowledgeable and enlightened like we are. With our policies we show our contempt by treating the unfortunate like children – not our own children, mind you, but rather faceless orphans, wards of the state.

When I suggested to a friend of mine, George Thomas, a regular contributor to The Collegian, that he respond to my article in print, he said – "What do I have to add? You do a wonderful job of putting the knife to your own kind – the Liberal. You don't need my assistance." Perhaps. But I believe it's a healthy exercise to put our own values to the test, to skewer them until we see the ugly and unappetizing insides. Blindly adhering to our ideas without reflection is not only irresponsible but also dangerous.

Twentieth century history teaches us that when sanctimonious do-gooders reduce their wards to abstractions and carry out their social engineering projects without reflection, they become totalitarian monsters. Stalin and Mao are two of the more notorious examples.

Despite our having enjoyed one of the longest economic booms in world history, inequality has continued to grow in the United States. The gap between the privileged and the unfortunate is widening, and it becomes more difficult for these two groups to find common ground in the middle-class ethos. Their worlds have become increasingly alien to one another. The middle-class is disappearing. Mix this troubling trend with the right historical circumstances to give the Left a significant political presence (however unlikely), add a self-righteous Liberal elite that refuses to acknowledge its dark side, and we have concocted a formula for the rise of an American Pol Pot.

Maybe George Lucas has something to teach us here. Luke Skywalker had to come to terms with his origins – his father's turn to the dark side - and the darkness and fear within himself before he could defeat the Empire. His father, Anakin, had similarly noble intentions in his youth but was drawn to the dark side because he failed to acknowledge and thereby tame the evil in his own heart.

Despite his capacity for following in the footsteps of Darth Vader, allow me briefly to defend the Liberal. His compassion may in part stem from his contempt for the underclass and the common man, but at least he's not guilty of a greater crime -indifference.

Our conservative friends, for all their talk of preserving individual liberty, in the end just don't give a crap about the suffering of the unfortunate. At least the Liberal does. But to keep himself grounded, the Liberal must only remember to temper his do-goodism with an occasional dose of self-awareness.

That's, I hope, where I come in – to be the Yoda to you Luke Skywalkers out there.

Robert J. Lacey is a UMass graduate student.

LIFE IN HELL

Dream on

"I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

-MLK

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He is quite possibly one of the best public speakers of the 20th Century. When Dr. King first uttered this famous line in front of the Lincoln Memorial in 1963, America was in the middle of the Civil Rights Movement. African-Americans and other minority groups were fighting for racial equality. Their struggles of almost 40 years ago have not gone unnoticed today. There are no more segregated school and other public buildings. There are no more lynchings. Minorities can be found in high-ranking positions on the business and political circuits. There is still a way to go in terms of racial equality but one cannot argue that progress has been made. However, here at the University of Massachusetts, Dr. King's dream is quickly becoming a nightmare thanks to ALANA.

GARETT MOLAN

As is well know in throughout the campus community, UMass refined their admissions policies in 1996 to "de-emphasize" race. In other words, you cannot be granted admission to the University just because you are are black. Rather, race is taken into consideration with other factors such as high school transcripts and standardized test scores. So in essence, UMass is not judging people on the color of their skin, but on their academic ability. Now, ALANA has seen this policy change as the ultimate act of racism, while I (and hopefully the majority of students) have seen this change a good. Racial quotas are bad for the University as a whole.UMass wants to admit the best possible candidates. What good comes from a student who may not be successful here but because he was black or she was hispanic, admission was granted?

"But," ALANA will say, "as of this fall and since Sept. 1997, African American freshmen enrollment had declined 45 percent and Latino enrollment by 41 percent." While these numbers may seem drastic, it is possible for numbers to be deceiving and therefore skew people's perceptions of what is actually happening. But if ALANA wants numbers, here are the most convincing numbers that show that the new admission policy is working. According to UMass spokeswoman Katherine A. Scanlon, since the policy change, the percentage of students who drop-out after their freshman year has decreased from 19 to 16 percent. What this means is that the students coming in are more prepared for college. In addition, the overall enrollment of the University has declined this past year so it is inevitable that every minority group will be affected by that.

Besides the numbers, using race solely as admission criteria is illegal. It seems as though ALANA has overlooked that one little important fact. Of course, ALANA has never been associated with following the law. (When was the last time they took over a building, blocking hallways and exits, creating a major fire hazard? Oh yeah, Monday.) Then they wonder why the administration ignores them. Well, if I had a group of 100 people and we ditched class in the middle of the day to shut down the main administration building on campus for almost two hours, I bet I would be given the cold shoulder too. Listen ALANA, you want more minority students to be admitted here, but if they are just going to skip class and take over buildings like you, what is the point of letting them in? Why not admit someone who is trying to take advantage of the educational opportunity they have been granted?

Now the comical side of the situation. ALANA thinks that they are going to solve this admission "problem" by going to President Buiger, as if he is responsible. News flash, President Bulger does not really care who goes here. He is too busy in Boston schmoozing with the Board of Trustees, fighting with the state legislature, and hiding his brother from the FBI, to be worried with who gets in and who does not.

As much as we students may not like it, we are not even a blip on his radar screen. Admission standards are set in-house. The person to talk to then I would assume would be Chancellor Scott or someone else in Whitmore, not in Boston. Going to Bulger on this would be like complaining to Governor Cellucci about a crosswalk that was not properly painted in the center of Amherst.

This issue is not one that can be solved with a quick-fix. It is also one that is not going to go away quickly. The best way to resolve this stand-off between ALANA and the administration is for everyone to sit down and discuss matters in a civil and organized fashion.

Screaming through a microphone in a Whitmore hallway is not going to do the trick.

Like Dr. King, I have a dream too. I have a dream that everyone on this campus can get along.I have a dream that one day, I can walk by the Student Union without seeing fellow students wasting away their educational opportunities. I have a dream that instead of pointing fingers, ALANA and other groups can work with the administration to make UMass better for all students black or white, male or female, heterosexual or homosexual. I have a dream...

Garrett Molan is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor
Administration, Godsmack fans, Republican Club: self-defense

To the editor:

Two years ago the University changes its Admissions procedures. After this change, we anticipated an initial drop in the percentage of ALANA students, but we also expected that percentage to rebound. Indeed that has been the case. The percentage of ALANA students is now 16.8% for academic year 100-2001. More importantly, we have accepted the largest number of ALANA students in our history for the incoming class in Fall 2001. If a substantial number of these students accept our offer to attend, the number and percentage of ALANA students on campus will rise. Persuading those accepted students to choose UMass is the task facing us.

We are encouraged that ALANA students now comprise 16.8 percent of the student body. This is about three percent higher than the percentage of college-bound ALANA students in Massachusetts high schools. We attribute this three percent difference to the many people at the University who have worked hard to convince accepted students to attend.

But we need to do even more.

We recently reorganized Enrollment Services and added an "outreach" position precisely to help us in reaching out and encouraging qualified, accepted students to attend the University. Faculty, students and staff who want to help in the effort for this fall's class should contact my office and I will make sure I pass their names on to the appropriate sources. We can make a difference.

F. Javier Cevallos
Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs

To the editor:

After reading your "pathetic" and "disgusting" article in March 8 Collegian I felt compelled to respond to it. Having gone to the concert I must say it was one of the best I've ever been to. Not only did I love it, but everyone I went with and everyone I have spoken to about it thought it was awesome. It seems that you're not a big fan of Godsmack and Staind and that is the main reason for your biased article. You should have sent someone else to cover the concert, because you obviously did not belong there.

Staind being one of the worst live bands ever? I really don't think so. And their version of "Outside" sent chills up my back it was so good. It was definitely one of the highlights of the evening, certainly not the low point.

Godsmack was simply amazing. I sat with someone who hardly knew them and the entire time she could not sit still or take her eyes off them. Sully and the rest of the band were at their best through every song. At least you were decent enough to mention the "actually quite good" songs like "Bad Religion," yet you failed to include "Voodoo" or "Spiral."

Overall, the concert was one of my best nights since being here. Next time you chose to cover a concert, I think you should pay a little more attention to how everyone there perceived it and a little less attention to your apparently poor taste in music.

Lauren Petersen
Northeast

To the editor:

In the 1962 landmark decision of Baker v. Carr, the United States Supreme Court interpreted the 14th Amendment to require that elections be conducted under the principle of "one man, one vote."

The UMass Student Government is a subdivision of the Commonwealth and thus is bound by this principle of "one man, one vote." The law (and fairness) mandate that every student get to vote ONCE for ONE senator and that no student gets to vote twice.

Reserving a portion of the seats in the Senate to be handed out as political patronage is wrong because it defeats the principle of students empowered to elect a Senate that represents them. It creates a situation where some candidates don't have to campaign because they know they will be appointed if they are defeated the first time around.

This is why many of us oppose these patronage seats, and we trust that the student body will agree with us on what is nothing more than a question of basic fairness. One must also never forget that ALANA candidates have won campus-wide elections without assistance – Jeff Howe is the first non-ALANA SGA President since the current Constitution was written in affiliated with the ALANA caucus.

But one reading Rene Gonzales's ad homonym attack on our club printed in the Friday, March 5 editorial pages of the Collegian would have one ignore the truth of Integration and segregate a university that managed to successfully avoid this evil the last time around. We in the Republican Club reject any notion that all students at this campus are racist and we feel that Rene and the other SCARCE stooges even suggesting this is the case does more to set back race relations than to advance them.

The UMass Republican Club invites disagreements, we usually don't even agree amongst ourselves. Most of the ALANA students on this campus (as opposed to the self-anointed ALANA "leaders") know that we always treat people as human beings. Rene Gonzales does not share these liberal values; he treats conservatives, republicans, and any white person who disagrees with his racist diatribes as a non-human.

He was one of the leaders of the racial hate mob that tried to knock down the doors of our office last May. This was a hate crime that required the assistance of every police officer on campus at the time. As the police led us out of the building in a "Columbine High" style evacuation of victims, we were met with death threats. Thugs associated with Mr. Gonzales and the racial hate mob literally chased us home and one of our members was told that he should expect to be "knifed in the shower" of his dormitory.

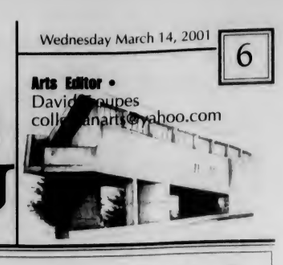
Rene Gonzales seeks to encourage more of this, simply because we think differently than him. We don't ask people to agree with us, we don't even ask that they like us. All we ask is that they comply with the Criminal Code of the Commonwealth – that the University treat us with the same dignity and respect that it affords to everyone else and that people who disagree with us realize that we still respect them and we would never do the types of things to them that have been done to us simply for having a different viewpoint. Is this too much to ask?

Patrick DeCourcy,
President, UMass Republican Club
Chris Carlozzi,
Vice President, UMass Republican Club
Ed Cutting
Graduate Student

Oscar Nominee Kenneth Lonergan's newest play, "Lobby Hero," opens this week.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING

Arts Editor • David Goupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com



Boston hands in the air for Outkast

COURTESY OUTKAST.COM

To the delight of Boston crowds, the members of Outkast performed at the Orpheum on Sunday.

By Catherine Turner and Mike Delano
Collegian Staff

BOSTON – In a word, krunk. In another word, Spottiottidopalicious. No matter how you describe it, Sunday night's Outkast show at the Orpheum was as high-energy as their single "Bombs over Baghdad."

The stage was hidden by the same black and white American flag that serves as the backdrop for their latest album, Stankonia. However, as soon as the lights went down, the flag was pulled back, revealing an underground lair with three back-up singers, two electric guitarists, four dancers, one DJ and two ATLiens: Andre 3000 and Big Boi (a.k.a. Daddy Fat Sax).

Though the recent Rolling Stone review of the Outkast tour claimed that the band stayed away from reliving older cuts, the Orpheum show proved to be a showcase for the evolution of the band and its progressive albums.

After opening the show with the first track off Stankonia, "Gasoline Dreams," Dre and Big Boi took the crowd back all the way to their debut album Southernplayalisticadillacmusic. "Hootie Hoo," "Ain't No Thang" and slizzard "Player's Ball" blended into one another as the crowd sang along with the hooks.

Andre 3000, dressed in a blue sequin body suit and white wig, and Big Boi, brandishing an Atlanta jersey and sunglasses, kept the crowd alive by calling out, "just throw your hands in the a-yer and wave 'em like you just don't cay-er," and then hearing the crowd call back "and if you like fish and grits and all that pimp shit, everybody let me hear yah say oh yea-yer," during their visit to the ATLiens album. What looked like a million pairs of hands swayed back and forth as the hook creamed. "Wheelz of Steel" and "Elevators" also made the crowd roar after the duo played the title track off their sophomore record.

As the beats bumped on, Outkast ventured into more recent territory with the cuts, "Da Art of Storytellin'," "Skew It on the Bar-B," and then later "Rosa Parks" from the 1998 release, Aquemini.

For over two hours the Georgia natives kept the crowd amped-up and krunk, calling out and feeding off the energy from the screaming fans. Dre and Big Boi didn't stop to take a breath from the beginning of the show all the way to the end when they brought the theater to Stankonia with "Spaghetti Junction," "So Fresh So Clean," "We Luv Deez Hoez," "Humble Mumble," "Red Velvet," and, of course, the hits "Ms. Jackson" and "B.O.B."

For a few cuts, Outkast let their prodigies Slimm Calhoun and Backbone take the stage. The song "Gangsta Shi't" was even more enhanced when C-Bone from the Goodie Mob came out to share a rhyme with 'kast. In between bustin' out the fly hits, Outkast drew out a bevy of host rappers and even showcased some of their new stuff that will be on their upcoming conglomeration album with the Dungeon Family.

Although the show kept on thumpin' there was no stopping the excitement of the crowd or the supreme performance of the stars. Outkast played just about every song that anyone would want to hear. Andre 3000 swayed his hips in his signature dance styles, and flashed his million-dollar smile while Big Boi directed the mirage of guests in the art of hip-hop. The two dope boyz in a Cadillac seemed comfortable on stage and happy to play as long as the crowd was willing to dance. And dance they did.

The Outkast boyz were the pinnacle of gangsta pimps, and showed class and timing in their amazing performance. Helped along by DJ Swift and Lil' Willy, one of their back-up singers, the duo kept the entire venue on its feet and played one of the best, hyped-up, and southernplayalistic shows straight from Stankonia.

Arriving late to catch only the last three songs of Ludacris' set, our tardiness garnered us the Atlanta rapper at his peak, during his final three and most well-known songs. "Ho" had the crowd excited for what was likely the first Ludacris song they recognized, and the Orpheum was more than receptive to the tongue-in-cheek chickenhead anthem. The same went for "What's Your Fantasy," the peppy sex romp that brought the rapper to national acclaim.

The highlight of Ludacris' set, undoubtedly, came at the end, surprising no one whom had already figured out what the revealing of a "Throw Dem Bows" T-shirt signified. The beat, following the de-shirting of Ludacris' fellow rapper (and subsequent female shrieking), of "Southern Hospitality" kicked in and floored everyone with the towering Neptunes' production. It was during the creative, distinct wordplay of this Dirty South classic when Ludacris truly seemed in the league of his otherworldly tourmates.

Senior slinger Guitar Jr. stings the Iron Horse

By Chris Flouton-Barnes
Collegian Correspondent

Luther "Guitar Jr." Johnson delivered two solid sets of West Side soul and Chicago blues Saturday night in Northampton.

Touring behind a hot new release, "Talkin' About Soul" (2001, Telarc), Johnson and his band, The Magic Rockers, laid down over two hours of deep blues at the Iron Horse, a club Johnson first played in 1981. The Magic Rockers took the stage first, kicking things off with a boogie-woogie intro from keyboardist Travis "Babyface" Colby. Rhythm man Big Jack Ward jumped in with sweet seventh chords on his semi-hollow six-string, and the party was underway. Ward then led the band through a reggae-tinged number highlighted by a stellar cadenza from saxophonist Lynwood "Cookie" Cook, who added imaginative percussive effects to his crystal clear tone.

The band immediately launched into an up-tempo piece as Guitar Jr. strode forth from the bar, through the crowd, and onto the stage. The Grammy and Handy award winner, adorned in gold jewelry, strutted to the mic in a crisp red suit and matching Fender Strat. Johnson took charge at once, successfully engaging the audience in a sing-along chorus. Considering that the staid clientele often appear far more concerned with the entrees than with the entertainer, this was no small feat.

Johnson ripped through a strong first set, varying tempos as he stuck mainly to a stinging West Side guitar attack. "If you don't like the blues, you got a hole in your soul," Johnson announced, challenging anyone to argue otherwise. There were no takers.

Saxman Cook, sporting a puffed-sleeve purple satin shirt and shades, deserved overtime pay, adding great depth and color to every song with his dead-on solos and phrasing. The high-water mark of the first set was a transcendent cover of B.B. King's "It's My Own Fault", as Johnson unleashed one of his finest solos of the night.

After an intermission that had many patrons seeking outside relief from the Iron Horse's plumbing conditions, the second set got underway with a propulsive bassline from Wes James.

The Magic Rockers sounded best on driving shuffles and marches, their solid rhythmic stylings ably complementing Johnson's slashing staccato leads. The second set was marred by a few confused endings and faltering intros, but Guitar Jr. rebounded with a creative take on Muddy Waters' classic "Long Distance Call". This served as a reminder of Johnson's extensive four decade-plus career, for it was Guitar Jr. holding down Muddy's rhythm axe chair from 1972-1979.

Johnson brought the club to a rapt standstill with an unaccompanied arrangement of gospel standard "When I Lay My Burden Down", recalling advice from his mother that "You don't have to go to church to serve the Lord!" After this, Johnson halfheartedly tried to leave the stage, but was yanked right back by the crowd's standing ovation. They weren't disappointed, as Guitar Jr. played his wild card, mixing it up with the floor-stompin' honky tonk of "I'm A Texas Cowboy." The riled crowd called him back again, and Johnson capped off the night with a scorching Chicago shuffle led by feather-capped drummer Lenny Payne's infallible ride cymbal.

The 66-year old, Mississippi-born Johnson has carved out a respected niche on the New England scene in the last twenty years, and it seems that this latest release and line-up has Guitar Jr. poised for a breakthrough. Compared with recent performances in Boston and Montreal, Johnson definitely was at his sharpest Saturday in NoHo. However, the occasional lack of cohesion between Johnson and his band was an inexcusable blemish on what was otherwise a solid show, and an illustrative question as to why Guitar Jr. and The Magic Rockers haven't enjoyed greater success.

COURTESY ATTILA & CO

The Aeros troupe to perform their unique combination of acrobatics and dance tonight in the Concert Hall.

If the bathroom blues have got you down, here are some cheap and easy solutions

THIS WEEK'S DO IT UP: BADASS BATHROOMS

It may be the smallest room in your house, but it is by far the best. All of your most cherished time is spent in your bathroom (no details needed), so why not put a little bling bling into your shower and sink? Below are a few tips and transformations to get you singin' every morning. Use your own creative taste to apply these hints to the room that needs them most.

Shower Power: If your shower curtain resembles a beach ball or your grandma's bingo outfit – take this tip. Replace it with a classy piece of fabric, or a vintage tapestry. All you need to do with your cool new threads is hem the edges (sewing machine not necessary – sit down to your favorite prime time show with a needle and thread and get stitchin') and pick up some clip rings – little clips with rings attached, perfect for a homemade curtain. Try Wal-Mart, Target, K-Mart or Bed Bath & Beyond. Make sure you pick up a clear plastic curtain to attach behind the fabric one, as fabric is not waterproof.

Mirror Mirror, on the Wall: Wanna feel like royalty when you pop the question "Who's the fairest of them all?" We get it. Here's the first step to a life like Snow White's. Go to a local antique shop, retail store, garage sale or vintage boutique and pick up a wooden frame, which are coolest when they are ornamental (carved) and are abundant in thrift shops. Make sure you measure the dimensions of your mirror before you go, so you get one that fits. (You wouldn't leave for the airport without your ticket would you?) Then take the frame into your backyard on a piece of newspaper and spray paint it gold – to give it that touch of nobility. Prop it up onto the wall with an appropriate hanging device and the next thing you know, seven small men will be knockin' on your door.

Border Beats: If your landlord thought it would be cool to make your walls look like a daisy barfed on them, I beg you to evict the Fanny Farmer borders. Even if your walls are just a bit too bare, and you want to pour a shot of style onto them, take this tip. Start saving and collecting cool postcards – there are tons of clubs, restaurants and bars that stash them by their bathrooms for publicity. These freebees can be turned into your own homemade wallpaper border. Whether you choose to trim your ceiling boards, your floorboards, or the middle of your walls is up to you. Post a caravan of postcards around your entire room – but choose to use only vertical or only horizontal to keep the margins straight.

Brought to you by the Letter B: More Cheap Tricks for Your Bathroom

Replace your bath mat with a cut piece of Astroturf for a funky feeling foot mat (attainable at most hardware stores, and if not they will steer you in the right direction.)

To save floor space for the sake of organization, mount a shelf on the wall for your life-saving products – which you can make if you are handy, or purchase at the thrift store.

Use a tin juice can (opened with a can opener) to keep tooth brushes in – shop around in an international food store or aisle for a good lookin' one

Try to keep fresh flowers in your bathroom to welcome good smells.

If fresh flowers are too demanding, and you are on a floral fix, pick up some fake ones at a craft store, snip off the heads and hot glue them all over the top slate of your terlet (when you move out just pluck them off – hot glue will not bond with porcelain).

Unless you want the guys and gals next door to see you doin' your dirty work, try to cover your window. A curtain can be easily made and hung – my favorite style are the cafe curtains; support the local diner if you are clueless as to what I mean..

Sunday is Always Clean-Up Day: How to Get Your Bathroom Mr. Clean Clean...ahem,..boys!

Rule number one: whoever puked last night gets stuck with cleaning the bathroom, right? Well, buddy, here's how to get the job done and still have time for fun. For your house, establish a bucket with all of the products you will need to use. (Soft Scrub, Comet, Toilet Bowl Cleaner, Mildew Remover, Drain Cleaner, All-Purpose Liquid Soap, sponge, rags, toilet brush, rubber gloves, mop.) Now for how to clean what with what:

Clean all porcelain (outside of toilet, sink, shower) with the soft scrub on a sponge.

Mop the floors with a cup full of liquid soap per bucket of water (this sounds extravagant, but only takes a minute and

Turn to BAG, page 7

Threshold electrifies bluegrass

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

THREE DAY THRESHOLD
Home Cookin
Independent Record

Imagine blending the tame sounds of Bill Monroe's bluegrass hits with the unadulterated raw talent of Green Day's punk. The results would be quite capricious.

Boston based Three Day Threshold have done exactly this. Their debut album Home Cookin contains an odd combination of sounds that some may find quite fascinating.

"We are electrified bluegrass," said banjo player and vocalist Kier Byrnes. "There are a lot of similar features that you find in punk and bluegrass. There's also that 1-2 beat that really drives the song along like a country tune as well."

The band started a few short years ago while messing around with different types of music. After experimenting with ska and punk, they realized that some country songs did not prove to be too bad. They found the stories that country tends to tell as "colorful."

Home Cookin has some very strong points. The sound of a banjo mixed with a rock overtone is something that is exceedingly unusual. Three Day Threshold does an excellent job utilizing that instrument as if it were a rock standard.

Since Byrnes is a fan of the stories that country music has to tell, he and his band make sure to include stories in the songs. On, "Pink," we learn the story of a truck-driving clown in a curiously odd way. The song encompasses all sorts of instruments and a harmonies merging of drums and electric guitars. The jamming on the song extends out in between very short and memorable lyrics.

The lyrics on the rest of the album are quite good. They are extremely creative and seem to come from a group with quite a firm grasp on songwriting.

The only flaw that seems really evident with Home Cookin, is the fact that you either need to be a fan of the music, or really in the mood to hear it. Someone who does not appreciate country music will loathe the album. It is not for a straight rock fan.

That being said, as long as a rock fan with very eclectic tastes is in the mood for something a bit out of the ordinary, this album is something that is certainly worth a try. It seems like something that would obviously translate into a very good live show.

The band's live show has actually picked them up a few awards in the Boston area. They were the winner of the "Best Live Band of 2000" from the Maxie Awards, which are sponsored by "The Noise," one of Boston's premier magazines for local music.

They have also been featured in other New England magazines as a local highlight, and are continuing to make an impact. The band has opened for such success stories as Susan Tedeschi and Quiet Riot.

"Our ultimate goal," said Kier. "Is to win the WBCN Battle of the Bands." The Battle of the Bands is a contest held each year by WBCN (104.1 FM) in Boston, where the winner is given the opportunity to open the radio station's River Rave at Foxboro Stadium. If the band wins that honor this year, they will have bragging rights to say they have been on the same bill as the Black Crowes, Marilyn Manson, Green Day and Sevendust.

Write for Collegian Arts!

Henna Arts & Supplies
10% off with this coupon!
413-256-3756

Aerosmith's latest release doesn't live up to standards

By Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

Aerosmith
Just Push Play

There have been a number of revolutionizing rock n' roll bands to come from my hometown of Boston, but Aerosmith is one of the most long-lived ones yet. To put it in perspective, Beantown's bad boys were selling out stadiums prior to the band Boston or New Kids On the Block and even my conception. All these years later, Aerosmith is still a staple in the music industry, evidenced by their induction into The Rock N' Roll Hall of Fame this Spring. Coinciding with that highly monumental event is the release of their latest album Just Push Play.

We last heard from Aerosmith on the soundtrack to the 1998 summer blockbuster Armageddon, where they crooned the catchy "Don't Wanna Miss A Thing." This mega-hit was just what the band needed after the catastrophic reviews for Nine Lives, highly criticized as the album that officially sold out the band to the likes of their mainstream pop-rock contemporaries. Reeling from the harsh feedback, they released the double-CD live album, A Little South of Sanity, which began to quell fears for Aerosmith enthusiasts, offering an indication that the band was going to get back in the saddle again.

Unfortunately, Just Push Play bears a prominent likeness to the redundant and formulaic template taken by Nine Lives. In fact, the new CD feels more a sequel to the last, rather than a different project. However, where Nine Lives succeeded and Just Push Play stops dead is due to the former having a handful of songs that, even if they were too poppy for true fans, were long memorable afterwards (the blues-rock feel of "Pink" and the spicy "Taste of India"). Apart from "Jaded," the new CD's first single, there is a scarcity of songs on Just Push Play that are radio-worthy.

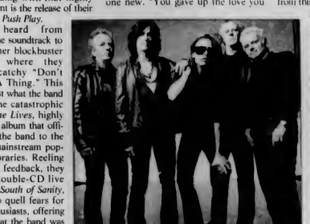
Just Push Play has a very bitter edge to it that runs continuously through the entire album. This is certainly to the album's credit; it's not that a fluid story is stitched together, per se, but there is a continuous flow that brings the CD full circle. Each song can stand on its own, however feebly, but as a whole, the album magnifies the essential subject. Just Push Play centers on the theme of getting jilted, screwed-over, and all the other disappointments that bands get a kick out of singing about.

The album's first cut, "Beyond Beautiful," sounds just like "Walk on Water," a new song that was added to the band's most successful CD yet, the greatest-hits Big Ones. But instead of the energetic use of guitars and drums to propel "Beyond Beautiful," more attention is paid to Steven Tyler's vocals and lyrics. Here, Tyler's mouth stretches to new widths as he hollers at the top of his vocal range about how much a kick in the head it is after an individual ends a relationship and sees their ex with someone new. "You gave up the love you got/Now that is that/She loves me now/She love you not/And that's the way it's at." Tyler is no romantic going with likable lines instead of outstanding lyrics.



COURTESY AEROSMITH.COM

Aerosmith just released their lastest album.

The title song follows next, and it too has some flavor to it, but after a while goes sour. The most appealing thing about the song is the limp Bizkit-like rock-rap intro that kicks the song off. This could have given way to a modern-day "Walk This Way," but the syncopated stylings are abandoned for the heavy instrumentation that soon enters. In retrospect, this seems reasonable, for as the song goes on, there's hardly any body and verse to the song. Rather, the simplistic hook is repeated over and over. To spice it up, they throw in the "s" word here and there, just to make sure you're listening as the song drags on. Indeed we are, but it is due to the expletive recurring as much as it does that this song will not make the radio airwaves. If it had been more censored, perhaps a bleep or two would appease the FCC, but its appearance time and again may result in little popularity, or an edited version (which is never equal to the original).

Following the next song, "Jaded," previously mentioned as the most exceptional number on the disc, is the power-ballad "Fly Away from Here." Momentary flashbacks to "Hole In My Soul" will come to mind, but disregard them, for as it progresses one will find it is truly a marvelous song. The lyrics and melody blend together nicely, making it the second of two consecutive keepers from this CD. Much to the listener's chagrin, the song ends too abruptly, something that a song like this should not do. Maybe a slow fade to silence, or a vamp to another song, (although I would've liked a big drum crash, myself), but instead it's a sudden cease-fire of all instruments. Nonetheless, "Fly Away from Here" might be the album's only follow-up single, since it gets stuck in your head, and keeps you humming.

A song that's called "Trip Hoppin'," especially from Aerosmith, sounds like it'd be a bouncy, bluesy outing like their previous hit, "Pink." Even though it has a vivacity to it, the title is absolutely nonsensical and the music far too superfluous to stand out among the rest.

And so it goes for the rest of the album, with the songs "Under My Skin," "Drop Dead Gorgeous" and "Sunshine." The closer, "Avant Garden," is the third and final opus that's worthy of listening to. Again, the title has no meaning, but much like "Fly Away from Here," it is a tuneful ditty that might be a goody. A power ballad is a common, but suitable way, to end a CD, and makes one again consider it as a whole piece. As such, Just Push Play has only a few moments where the Aerosmith we all love comes through, but overall, is too mild and stock to be a job well done.

While I will be an Aerosmith fan until the day I die, Just Push Play is definitely not their strongest work. As much as I wanted to adore this album, I couldn't find in it the band I first loved. More often than not, with Just Push Play I wanted to just push stop.

weWill
...protect the free world together.

At Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll play a key role in the development of advanced technologies to protect our country and other members of the free world. Technology like our Paveway, Tomahawk and Patriot missiles which are designed to provide the best defense available against all types of threats. Or our premiere radars that help pilots perform precision strike missions and gather intelligence. Leading edge missiles and radar systems are just two examples of how we make the world a safer place. And Raytheon's long legacy of diverse projects ensure that you'll always be involved in something new, important and cutting edge.

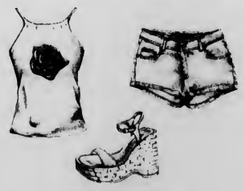
The following opportunities are available in El Segundo:

RF Engineers
Antenna Subsystem Engineers
MMIC Design Engineers
Microwave Test Engineers
Systems Engineers

To apply, please e-mail your resume to rjfaldesmith@west.raytheon.com or mail to J.A.-Staffing, Raytheon, 2000 E. El Segundo Blvd., M/S E01C111, El Segundo, CA 90245.
To view all available opportunities with Raytheon Company, visit www.rayjobs.com. Raytheon is an equal opportunity employer and welcomes a wide diversity of qualified applicants. U.S. citizenship may be required.

At Raytheon, we will accomplish our goals.
Will you?
www.rayjobs.com
Raytheon

Spring Break...
Are you ready?



We're there.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst www.zanna.com

■ bag

continued from page 6

makes a world of difference – you'd be surprised how much hair and muck are on your bathroom floors).

Pour some toilet bowl cleaner or Comet into the toilet and scrub with the toilet brush – try to get the ring-around-the-bowl out – it's wretched, and inevitable without a good clean.

If your drain doesn't drain properly it could cause major shower woes (you don't want to be standing in an inch of water while you shower) so follow the directions on the back of the cleaner and make sure it's clean as a whistle – then purchase a hair-catcher to prevent it from clogging again.

Your shower should be as mildew free as possible – an easy spritz of mildew remover (Tilex for example) and a wipe down will do your shower some good.

Clean your mirrors and windows too, since mildew and muck can build up on these as well – glass cleaner and a paper towel will do just fine.

If you are anal like I am dust all of your shelves, too, but always spray the product on the rag, not the surface.

 Start saving these columns to put in your style file – that way when you get the urge to do something creative, or to fix up your pad, you have ideas waiting for you. If you have any questions, comments, ideas or suggestions – email me at Maggo810@AOL.com (I welcome your thoughts!)

Maggie Lyons is a Collegian columnist.

■ Bruiser

continued from page 10

or former Indiana coach Bobby Knight).

These are two of the highest-profile men in all of basketball. Is UMass really ready for men like these? Absolutely not.

Although Pitino is a proven winner at the collegiate level, he is not known for having the best of relationships with his players – the same is true for Knight. Both have had their fair share of on the court problems that have been well documented.

Pitino was part of the reason in which Boston Celtics forward Antoine Walker left Kentucky. And who can forget the antics of the lovable Knight? This is the same guy that slapped his son in practice, has thrown chairs across the floor at IU's Assembly Hall and choked a player during a practice. Both would be a perfect fit in liberal Amherst – I think not?

UMass lost one of the true "good guys" when it forced Flint to resign. Perhaps women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien said it best – "It's part of the business and you deal with it. It's just hard when bad things happen to good people – that's exactly what he is, a good person."

The two coaches have both had to endure harsh times in their tenurers, but the two always waged on and never did any disrespect to the University. Through thick and thin the two helped each other.

"We spent more time sitting in those chair we have in front of our desk's, just talking – the good days and the bad days," O'Brien said. "[The women's coaching staff] understood what was happening.

"When [the men's team] struggled playing I understood, when [the women's team] struggled playing [Flint] understood. You're always there for each other."

It is just too bad that UMass could not be there for Bruiser.

"One week [the fans] were talking about me being fired," Flint said. "We go on a little run and they were talking 'yeah Bruiser lets go.'

"One day they're patting you on the back – the next day they're kicking you in the butt."

The foot was raised since the end of last season just waiting to kick. Bruiser knew that nothing short of an NCAA tournament berth would save his job. And his team almost did it. The Minutemen came within minutes of defeating arch rival Temple in the tournament final, eventually falling 76-65 in his final game at the helm.

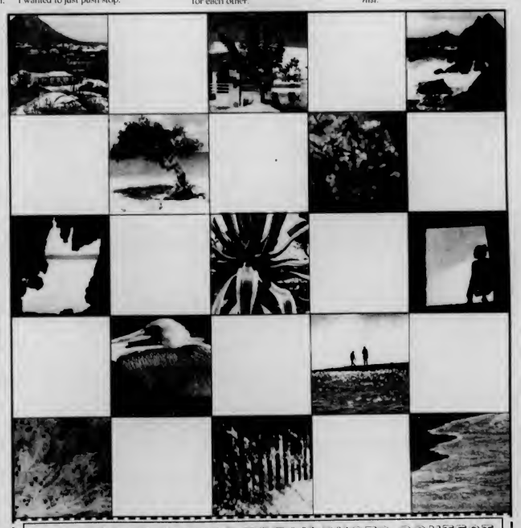
So now that the proverbial butt has been kicked the former coach has to seek other opportunities. For someone with a resume like his it should not be difficult to find a program that fits.

"I think I'm going to have my opportunities. I don't know where, but I'm going to have my opportunities," Flint said.

Flint has been rumored as the replacement for William "Speedy" Morris at LaSalle. Morris was fired after the Explorers' loss to St. Joseph's in the A-10 tournament. This would seem to be the perfect fit for Flint, as he would return to his native Philadelphia as well as remain within the conference. He has also been mentioned as a candidate for the Northeastern job that is currently held by Rudy Keeling. Keeling is expected to removed from the position.

As for UMass: poor job with handling this one. You just made the age-old adage of "nice guys finish last" come true.

Bryan Smith is a Collegian columnist.



COLLEGIAN SPRING BREAK PHOTO CONTEST

Attention UMass Students!!The Collegian is holding a photo contest!!
Capture your Spring Break and WIN!!
Submission Form:
name: _____
phone #: _____
e-mail: _____
type of photo (circle one): black & whitecolor
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____

Requirements:
-Submissions due by MARCH 30th
-Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
-Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
-Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form
Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting June 1st. 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Apartment Available to take over June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-9462

Summer Sublet with Fall Option 1 or 2 bedroom. Close to campus, on bus route. $600/month. Call 253-2378

Available Immediately 1 Br. Apt. - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Take over Lease or summer sublet. Upgraded 3 bedroom. Puffton call 549-0467

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

95 Volvo 850 Turbo B1K, Auto, leather, 6 disc Alpine changer. $14,500 or B/O. 413-527-2871

1995 Jeep Cherokee 118k, many new parts totalling over $1500. Priced for quick sale $6900 ask for Geoff 549-9232

1993 Saturn SL2. Clean, dependable, well maintained. $2700. 549-8000

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted 24 UMass Underclassmen to take part in 45 minute survey. Also coordinator position. For details call 1-800-573-3309

CAMPUS SUMMER JOB Full-time opportunity, Visitors Center, June-August. Competitive hourly rate. Call 5-3480 for information.

EMPLOYMENT

HAVE AN AMAZING SUMMER ADVENTURE! Prestigious coed camp in beautiful Massachusetts seeks caring, motivated college students & grads who love kids! GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries+travel+room+board. (800) 762-2820

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

CSS=Excellent Employment Opportunities CSS is a professional service that works with some of the most prestigious companies in the valley. We offer FT, PT, and T-H opportunities in the following areas: Administrative Suppport, Data Entry Operator, Entry Level Management, Front Office Support, Customer Service Representative. CSS proudly offers holiday/vacation pay, medical insurance and direct deposit. Call today for immediate consideration, or visit our web site at: www.cssit.com Coperate Staffing Solutions 126 Northampton Street, Suite G Easthampton, MA 01027 (413) 529-7100

EMPLOYMENT

Looking for a job in Amherst this summer? Full and part time jobs are available with Summer Conference Housing! Come and get an application and job description at the Conference Services Office, Room 918 Campus Center.

Live in Babysitter needed for two girls this summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Salary, room, and board. Please call 508-349-6392 {no calls 3/25-4/1}

FLEXIBLE PART - TIME
Research Interviewers Evening and weekend shifts are available 20hrs/wk minimum. PVTA accessible. Excellent reading and speaking skills required. Some computer experience helpful. $7.50 to start with regular merit raises. For more information contact: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 paul_bebo@abtassoc.com Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

French Speaking Candidate needed for part-time work. Must be available mornings. Contact Diane at 549-1169 or e-mail diane@remi.com

EMPLOYMENT

Day Care Center, Rt 63, Leverett, needs substitute teaching assistants and evening maintenance person. Work study or not $8.00 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

Work Study Students & substitute teachers. Cushman Scott Childrens Center an equal opportuntiy employer is now hiring to work with children 18months to 5years. Ellen 549-1167

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

2 Summer Jobs on Nantucket Island, MA. Office Assistant, Mothers & Household Helper. B. Auction Gallery Assistant, Furniture Porter, Display, Deliveries. Salary plus housing. Drivers license required. 508-228-3942 or send resume, P.O. Box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

Maroon Sims Snowboard 150cm. Preston LS bindings. $250 OBO 253-6785

S2 Redline X-Bike $550. Full home gym perfect for apt $150 B/O Call Kellie 549-7889

27" RCA Television with PIP, like new condition, call Rob at 549-4275 for details.

LOST AND FOUND

Car Keys, House Keys Found outside of Boyden Gym. Found AM 3/13. 617-290-5942

GREEK ANNOUNCEMENT

IT'S NOT TOO LATE! The sisters of Alpha Chi Omega invite all women to their "Spring Break Cookie Crunch" rush event. Tonight 7-8pm at 38 Nutting Ave. Questions? Call Kristin 549-8023

PET FOR SALE

Free male house cat 1yr old, playfull, friendly. Call 256-6777

ROOM FOR RENT

Spring Break Housing Furnished room/kitchen, N. Amherst. $20 daily or $140 all week. 549-4401

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for 2 Females for 4 bedroom Uptown apt. Great location! Lease starting Sept. Call Shelly 546-7048

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 Bedroom & Study in 4 bedroom apt. $375/month. Call Julie 413-364-1430

TRAVEL

FLY SUMMER 4 WINTER $$! Europe $298 rt (+tx) Lon, Fra, Mad, Ams, Par, & more. 4STANDBY.COM or call 800-326-2009

Jamaica Spring Break: Cheapest, best hideaway. Negrils, 7 miles white sand beach. Charming, safe, cabins in lush tropical paradise. Single $25, Double $35. 413-549-4401

NEED TO ADVERTISE?

IT'S EASY!

DON'T HESITATE.... CALL TODAY!!

545-3500

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

WE ADVERTISE TO THOUSANDS!

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

7 • HSCN Bulletin Board
8 • CBS 3 Boston
9 • ABC/40 Springfield
10 • PBS 57 Springfield
11 • HSCN Movie Channel
12 • UPN 20 Hartford
13 • HSCN Pay Movie Channel
14 • NBC 30 New Britain
15 • Fox 61 Hartford
16 • PBS 24 Hartford
17 • NBC/40 Springfield
18 • International Channel
19 • UMASS (Academic Channel)
20 • WB 59 New Haven
21 • ESPN
22 • UNE
23 • UMASS (Student Channel)
24 • Weather Channel
25 • Discovery Channel
26 • C-Span
27 • C-Span2
28 • CNN Headline News
29 • Lifetime
30 • USA
31 • TBS
32 • TNT
33 • A&E
34 • Nick
35 • Disney
36 • Bravo
37 • Cartoon Network
38 • Nick at Nite
39 • TV Land
40 • Comedy Central
41 • BET
42 • Daytime
43 • Showtime Multiplex
44 • Cinemax
45 • HBO
46 • Cinemax
47 • HBO
48 • The Learning Channel

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 14, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Jazz (In Stereo) {Part 1 of 10}				Jazz (In Stereo) {Part 2 of 10}
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	March Magic	Hollywood Sq.	Survivor-Aust. Outback		Big Apple "Episode Three"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor-Aust. Outback		Big Apple "Episode Three"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Drew Carey	Spin City	Drew Carey	The Job (N)	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends		Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Jack & Jill (N) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Better Days" (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Bronx Cheer"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	7th Heaven "Homecoming"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Jack & Jill (N) (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Better Days" (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Bronx Cheer"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	70s Show	Grounded-Life	Simpsons	Simpsons	News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Better Days" (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Bronx Cheer"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nembers Choice						Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Spin City	Frasier	Drew Carey	Spin City	Drew Carey	The Job (N)	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "Flesh and Blood" (In Stereo)				Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld	Mad Abt. You
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Friends	Fresh Prince	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		WCW Thunder				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	69	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Pride"		Biography: Ted Kennedy		American Justice		Investigative Reports (N)		Law & Order "American Dream"
CNN	29	Inside Politics	Moneyline Newshour			Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live	CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	★★½ "Up in Smoke" (1978, Comedy) Thomas Chong,				South Park	TV Funhouse	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	71	Wild Discovery "Cobras"		Living With Dinosaurs (N)		Riddle of the Desert Mummies		Secrets of the Great Wall		Deadline Discovery (N)		Justice Files "Bad Girls"
ESPN	51	Sportscenter		Baseball Tonight (N)		NHL Hockey: New York Rangers at Buffalo Sabres. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	67	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Joan Rivers"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Payback" (1997, Drama) Mary Tyler Moore, Edward Asner				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Direct Effect	Senseless	Celebrity	Spring Break	TRL (In Stereo)		Testimony: 20 Years at Rock on MTV (In Stereo)				Undressed	Andy Dick
NICK	68	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Diff. Strokes	Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	70	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		★★★ "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" (1984, Adventure) Harrison Ford.						"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" (1984,
TLC	74	Trauma: Life in the ER		Hurricane Force		Monster Trucks		Secret World-Carriers		Destination Future: High Tech		Monster Trucks
TNT	55	ER "Whit Life?" (In Stereo)		Pretender "Silence" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: Minnesota Timberwolves at San Antonio Spurs. (In Stereo Live)				NBA		★½ "Cover-Up" (1991)
USA	59	Walker, Texas Ranger "Rookie"		JAG "Cyrpto Eyes" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Spin Deep"		★★ "Drop Wolf McQuade" (1983, Adventure) Chuck Norris				Martin	Martin
HBO	45	(5:00) "Little Giants" (1994, PG)		"Boycott" (2001, Drama) Jeffrey Wright. (In Stereo)		Sex and City		Arliss		Sopranos "Fortunate Son"		On the Record (N)
MAX	46	(4:45)		★★ "Deception" (1993) Andie MacDowell. PG-13		★½ "Deep Blue Sea" (1999) Thomas Jane. R		Exit Wounds		★ "Held Up" (2000, Comedy) Jamie Foxx. PG-13		Passion Cove
SHOW	65	★★★ "Defending Your Life" (1991, Comedy) Albert Brooks. PG				★★★½ "The Talented Mr. Ripley" (1999, Suspense) Matt Damon. (In Stereo) R				Soul Food		Resurrection Blvd. (In Stereo)

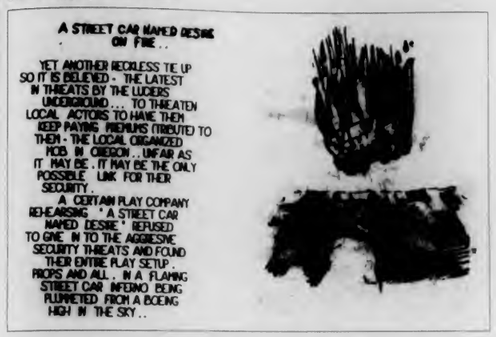
Quote of the Day

"To me, boxing is like ballet, except there's no music, no choreography, and the dancers hit each other."
–Jack Handy

Amherst Weather

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 38 LOW: 27	HIGH: 48 LOW: 30	HIGH: 39 LOW: 30

Jackdogg By Xavier Rhodes

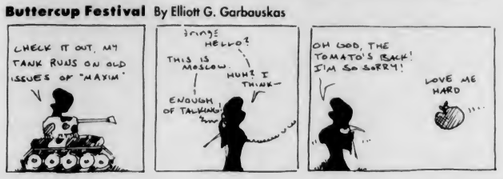


A STREET CAR NAMED DESIRE ON FIRE..
YET ANOTHER RECKLESS TIE UP SO IT IS BELIEVED - THE LATEST IN THREATS BY THE LUDERS UNDERGROUND... TO THREATEN LOCAL ACTORS TO MAKE THEM KEEP PAYING PREMIUMS TRIBUTED TO THEM - THE LOCAL ORGANIZED MOB IN OBERON..UNFAIR AS IT MAY BE. IT MAY BE THE ONLY POSSIBLE LINK FOR THEIR SECURITY.
A CERTAIN PLAY COMPANY REHEARSING "A STREET CAR NAMED DESIRE" REFUSED TO GIVE IN TO THE AGGRESSIVE SECURITY THREATS AND FOUND THEIR ENTIRE PLAY SETUP, PROPS AND ALL.. IN A FLAMING STREET CAR INFERNO BEING PLUMMETED FROM A BOEING HIGH IN THE SKY..

Frosh By Megan Orosz

Sex Etiquette Tip of the Week:
"Your neighbors do not want to share in your experience."

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas



CHECK IT OUT, MY TANK RUNS ON OLD ISSUES OF "MAXIM" HELLO?
THIS IS MARLOW
HUH? I THINK I
ENOUGH OF TALKING!
OH GOD, THE TOMATO'S BACK! I'M SO SORRY!
LOVE ME HARD

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SO WHO ARE WE ACTUALLY ASKING TO THE AWESOMES
MORKEY, THAT'S THE POINT OF THIS FEAR-YEAR! THE ONLY FOR CAPTIONS ARE ALLEGATION!
UH...YOUR MOTHER?
YEAH. I DON'T INVITE HER TO MY FIRST ALLEGATIONS. SO I DON'T GIVE HER
YOU REALIZE, OF COURSE, THAT YOUR MOTHER DESPISES ME THAT WOULD PUT YOU
IT DOESN'T YOU?
NO. I DON'T THINK IT'LL BE OBVIOUS AT ALL.

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Who says you have to suffer in order to take care of yourself – physically or emotionally? Today, you can have it all the easy way!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You'll attract a number of followers today as a result of your enthusiasm and commitment. Take care that you don't let them down, however.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You'll receive a favor from someone who has been looking out for you – even though you may not know him or her at all. Show your thanks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – A discovery can be made before nightfall which will increase your chances for success in an endeavor that some might consider a lost cause.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Focus on doing things for yourself today that will do you good in the future. There is more to life than temporary satisfaction, after all!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – It may involve quite a risk today to help someone who has been critical of you in the past. Still, you'll realize that you have no choice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It's time to think of the past once more, as a way of answering two or three key questions you have about your future. Don't forget today!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The reaction of another to your habitual behavior today may take you by surprise. It may be time for someone to share a secret or two.

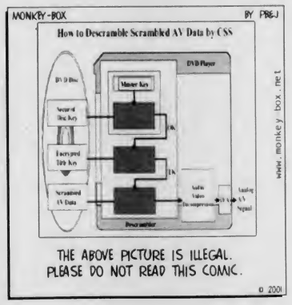
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You'd better do what you are told and follow even unspoken instructions to the letter – at least during the first part of the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You will have to choose whether to remain true to your personal style today or to adjust to the desires of someone in authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Do you really know what you're up to today, and are you really able to control those instincts that are leading you down such a risky path?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It's important – even essential – for you to share your feelings with the one person who is most closely linked to you in every way.

MONKEY-BOX BY PBJ



THE ABOVE PICTURE IS ILLEGAL. PLEASE DO NOT READ THIS COMIC.

© 2001

www.monkey-box.net

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Meatball Grinder

Spanikopita (vegetarian) (B, F, W)

Tomato, Macaroni & Lentils (vegan) (B, W)

Manicotti (vegetarian) (H)

DINNER

Fried Chicken

Seitan Bourguignon (vegan)

Cheese Calzones (vegetarian)

SLEEPY HOLLOW BED COMPANY
253-BEDS (2337)/ 256-BEDS(2337)
326 College Street, Amherst
FINALLY!! Amherst has a mattress & futon store conveniently located near downtown, next to The Spirit Haus on Rt. 9
GRAND OPENING & OPEN HOUSE
(FREE FOOD!!!)
SAT. MARCH 31 10-6
SUN. APRIL 1 12-5
futons–mattresses–beds–daybeds
décor/mirrors–pillows–lamps–storage platform beds–room dividers–rugs interior plants–end/coffee tables
cots–foam–puffy/pouf/papasan, ETC

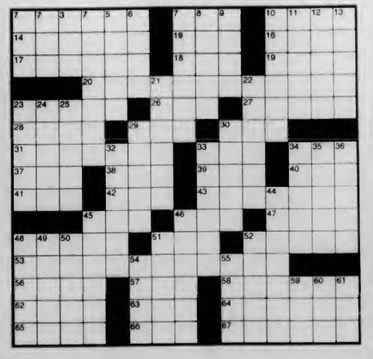
ACROSS
1 Governs
7 Chet slang
10 Stuns
14 Dry gully
15 Important time
16 "Major Barbara" playwright
17 Oysters' treasures
18 Baronet's title
19 Rose or Sawyer
20 Not easily irritated
23 Pine product
26 Sushi-bar choice
27 Movie part
28 Loretta's co-star
29 TV add-on
30 Mobster's piece
31 Street performer
33 Director Brooks
34 45 or 78
37 Oklahoma town
38 Wood chopper
39 Money bank
40 "Yes, Claire"
41 "— a Rebel"
42 Alphabet ender
43 Hot dog topping
45 Type of vase
46 Rat's kin
47 On the briny
48 Reel
51 "Leaving — Jet Plane"
52 Starts the kitty
53 Bidding place
56 Naughty kid
57 Zodiac sign
58 Some drapes
62 Perry's creator
63 Pump abbr
64 Solitary one
65 No-hitter Nolan
66 Elev.
67 Take for granted

DOWN
1 Ice-T's music
2 Before, to a poet
3 "Silver" author Levin
4 Stuffing oneself with food
5 Drip-dry material
6 Fair
7 Medieval clown
8 Historian Durant
9 Friendly
10 Appearance
11 In which place?
12 Gobbled up
13 Stockholm native
21 Command
22 Sacred songs
23 Indian prince
24 Avoid capture
25 Long stories.
29 In a snit
30 Outfit
32 Lapis —
33 Whale e.g.
34 Dinner entree
35 Blender setting
36 He had a golden touch
44 Oil carriers
45 — down the hatches: fastens
46 Open
48 Cavalry sword
49 "Move it!"
50 Florida city
51 Actress Tatum
52 Post-workout problems
54 Gymnast Korbut
55 Workers' protection agcy.
59 Ostrich's kin
60 Edge
61 Fr. holy woman

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

D	O	O	R		S	P	A	S	M	W	I	T	S
E	X	P	O		H	E	L	L	O	E	L	I	A
S	E	A	M	O	R	B	I	T	E	N	S
I	N	H	A	L	E		M	O	U	S	S	E	S
		N	I	L		B	E	R	N
A	C	C	O	L	A	D	E		G	A	V	I	L
L	A	Q		C	A	D		A	L	I	A	N	A
L	I	N	S	E	E	D		S	T	E	L	L	A	R
O	R	G	A	N		S	A	W	E	N	D
W	O	O	D	S		M	I	T	A	T	E	S
			U	K	E	S		S	A	N
F	I	F	T	E	E	N		T	I	C	K	E	D
O	B	I	E		A	N	O	D	E		H	I	L	O
R	E	N	E		T	U	N	E	R		O	W	L	S
E	X	E	S		S	I	T	E	S		R	I	S	E

1-301 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's Staff

Night Editor — Bryan "Vegas baby Vegas" Smith
Photo Technician — Scott "Nowhere" Eldridge
Copy Editor — Rob "home sweet home" Schulze
Production Supervisor — Alan "Disney World ya" Bosque
Production Staff — Augusto "Iconic Amherst" Londoura; Kara "Swingin' London" Stokes

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Wednesday, March 14, 2001 | 10

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

UMass loses a good one with "Bruiser's" exit

The University of Massachusetts did not only lose its head men's basketball coach Monday – it lost a quality individual.

James "Bruiser" Flint was one of the most likeable sideline patrollers in college basketball. Flint spent 12 years at UMass, seven as an assistant to John Calipari and five as the main man for the Minutemen, and has developed great relationships in his time in Amherst.

"When you're here for 12 years you build a lot of friendships – true friendships," Flint said. "I'll always come back."

He will be back because the man is class personified.

But will he be welcomed? One would hope so. If his final public appearance is any indication then he will.

At his final radio show Flint spoke of the good times that he has had, never once mentioning the bad.

"I just remember the guys," Flint said. "The Will Herndons, the Jimmy McCoys, even the guys like Mike Williams. They were funny – they had their funny ways.

"The guys that I coached when I was the head coach, Monty [Mack], Kit [Rhymer], Charlton Clarke and Lari Ketner. You will never forget those guys."

Whether fans and critics of UMass basketball want to believe it or not, the bad did not only happen when he was in charge. Scandals happened when John Calipari was here – things were not as picture perfect as they are made out to be.

When Calipari was not making friends with the student body, he was having Final Four banners removed from the William D. Mullins Center. So the Final Four that UMass reached in 1996 actually did not happen – at least according to the NCAA – and in actuality that is all that counts.

So the fantasy world in which Massachusetts fans live was not as wonderful as legend has made them out to be. Nobody questioned Cal's character when he abruptly left for a job with the NBA's New Jersey Nets. Do not be fooled – Cal knew that there were problems in paradise.

Granted, Bruiser did not have his own clothing store downtown (Coach Cal's Corner) or five consecutive NCAA tournament appearances, but what the man did have was character.

At times his character was put into question because he was a players' coach, but there are not very many critics of Duke's Mike Krzyzewski. After all, he is a players' coach too. But he is a coach that wins and unfortunately for Flint he was a victim of a program's prior successes.

But success is all too often measured by what is done on the court – in this case that is what happened. Bruiser's success extends from the home to the classroom.

"I told [the players] in the home when I recruit them, 'when you're with me, you're with me for life,'" Flint said. "No matter where I am, no matter what I'm doing, I'm going to be there for my guys."

The 33-year old Flint has also has a graduation rate that is unparalleled. In May the coach will have seen 13 of 14 players eligible for graduation depart with degrees. Where does that show up on the stat sheet?

Obviously that does not bring the kind of recognition that this university wants.

Apparently the amount of wins does not even matter. Is a career record 86-72 not enough? Fourteen games over .500 will usually be enough to bring praise to a coach, but not at UMass.

The 1990s brought national identification to a program that had been mired in mediocrity for most of its existence. Then, all of a sudden, a No. 1 ranking is obtained and everyone expects that the Maroon and White be a title contender year-in and year-out.

Come on people, you know this is a ridiculous. A decade of good teams does not allow the bar for success to be set so high that touches the ceiling of the sky. Twenty wins every year is not where this team is or ever was headed. Does anyone know the number of 20-win season that the Minutemen had before the 1990s?

Five – the exact number of years that the University gave Bruiser a chance to succeed. In this case his chance at success was opaque at best. He had to follow in the footsteps of a "legend" – a legend that abandoned ship when the seas became rough.

Flint came here in the midst of a crisis. His departure puts the University in a bit of a crisis as well. For most of the season, fans, or the lack thereof, were screaming for UMass alum Rick Pitino.

Turn to BRUISER page 7

Penn State proves too much for Minutewomen

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

After falling to Harvard in the season opener 9-8, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team knew that it would have to play much better if it were going to upset No. 15 Penn State.

The Nittany Lions had already lost twice this year, at the hands of No. 7 James Madison and No. 13 Cornell, and were looking to exact revenge on the Minutewomen. Against JMU, Penn State fell behind early and was unable to catch up, so when UMass traveled to Pennsylvania for a 3:30 p.m. matchup yesterday afternoon, it made sure to try and jump on the competition.

And that is exactly what it did.

From midway through the first half to midway through the second half, the Nittany Lions scored seven consecutive goals in order to build an 8-1 advantage, and from that point on, only needed cruise control to pick up the 11-4 victory.

With the loss, the Minutewomen fell to 0-2, with both games coming out of the Atlantic 10 conference, while Penn State improved to 1-2.

"I think we finally put it altogether this game," Nittany Lion coach Suzanne Weinberg said after picking up her first ever collegiate win against Massachusetts. "We accomplished all of our goals and we won."

Penn State opened up the scoring five minutes into the contest when Colleen O'Hara drilled a shot by UMass netminder Cyndi Doyle to put her team up 1-0. Doyle played admirably on the day in place of injured goalie Jen Nardi, making 10 saves and keeping the Nittany Lion attack somewhat at bay.

Senior Rachel Ingraffea was able to knot it up soon after with her first tally of the young season, but that would be the last score the Minutewomen would get for quite some time.

Penn State used two free position goals by Molly Ford to take the 3-1 lead, and then closed out the half on a normal goal by Kristen Wood.

Things would not get any easier for UMass at the start of the second frame, as the Nittany Lions rallied for four goals in four minutes to put the game safely out of reach.

Alison Decheco, Katie Jeschke and Sara Young (three goals on the afternoon), were responsible for the tallies, and made the score 8-1 with just over 20 minutes to play.

Ingraffea snuck one into the opposition's cage to end the 7-0 run a few minutes later, but her goal was quickly answered by Kate Affonsa, who pushed the lead back to seven.

Young and B.J. Lucey pushed the lead up to nine with two more scores around the 15-minute mark, but senior co-captain Fay Naber and freshman Nicole Chominski were able to put two separate shots into the back of the Penn State cage to make the score slightly more respectable.

Chominski's goal was the first of her collegiate career.

Statistically, the Nittany Lions outplayed the Minutewomen just as much as they did on the scoreboard. Penn State out-shot UMass 21-10 and garnered a 10-4 advantage in free position shots. The Maroon and White did win the draw control battle 9-8, but it would be far from enough to pull out the win.

Head coach Phil Barnes and the rest of the UMass lacrosse team next plays on Sunday, March 18, when it will travel to Durham, N.H. for a 1 p.m. non-conference game with UNH.

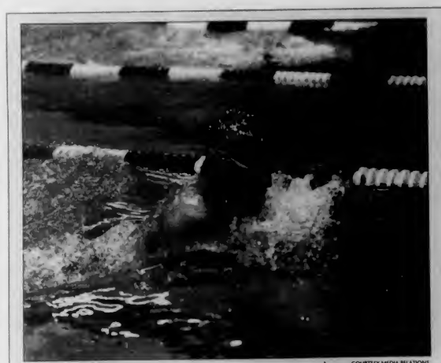
So far this year, UNH is winless in one attempt, falling at the hands of in-state rival Dartmouth on March 4, 13-4. In that game, the Wildcats got out to the early 1-0 lead, but were subjugated to 5-1 run in the first half and a 6-0 run in the second frame that put the game out of reach.

After the New Hampshire contest, the Minutewomen will head north to Syracuse and Burlington, Vt., in order to play two separate games with the Orangewomen and Catamounts. The Maroon and White finally gets the home portion of its schedule underway on March 31 when Hofstra comes to town, but will still end up playing eight of its first nine games away from the friendly confines of Richard F. Garber field.

Despite the fact that she failed to score against Penn State, sophomore Lydia Robinson still leads the team with three goals and an assist.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kelli Kurtz and the women's lacrosse team dropped a hard-fought decision at No. 15 Penn State, 11-4.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Billy Brown became the first swimmer in UMass history to qualify for the NCAAs. The championships will be held at Texas A&M on March 22-24.

Brown qualifies for NCAAs

For somebody who considered not even swimming in the 2000-2001 season, Billy Brown had a pretty good campaign. Brown, one of four seniors on the Massachusetts squad, will become the first UMass swimmer ever to represent the school at the NCAA Championships.

Brown was named the Most Outstanding Performer at the Atlantic 10 Championships back on Feb. 19 in Buffalo N.Y. He set an A-10 and school record in the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:58.66 to take the event. That time was good enough for 19th in the country and earned him a ticket to the NCAA Championships at Texas A&M to be held on March 22-24.

"It was shocking, very shocking," Brown said of qualifying. "I've been so close before that to finally make it was just shocking."

It was a nerve-racking month for the UMass swimmer who had to wait for the results of the SEC, Big 12 and Pac 10 Championships, traditionally the three national power conferences, to see if he had actually achieved his dream of qualifying. The top 18 swimmers in each event automatically qualify with more added based on the speed of the event.

Following the A-10's Brown sat fourth nationally, but just a week later, after the SEC Championships, he was pushed back to 17th. However his time was able to hold up for another week as he was passed by just two swimmers pushing him back to his current spot. In the end the 200 breast was the fifth fastest event out of 16 and Brown received his invitation.

"That was the most nerve-racking thing I have experienced in my entire life," said Brown of the wait.

Simply swimming this year was a major accomplishment for the Fullerton, Calif. native. Just prior to the 2000 Olympic trials Brown blew out his shoulder and was forced to contemplate taking a year off. Luckily for the Minutemen however, Brown decided to fight through the pain and take a shot at reaching the one goal that had eluded him his four years in Amherst.

"It was my goal for four years to qualify for the NCAA's, and to be the first from UMass to do it is a huge honor," said Brown. "I was not expecting to swim this fast, it was a great feeling to qualify."

Brown will also swim in the 100 breast in College Station as he pits himself against the best swimmers from around the country.

"To see the name UMass up there alongside big schools like Texas, Auburn and Stanford is a huge honor," Brown said. "Those schools are in the top five every year and it's an honor to swim against them.."

- Justin Pearson

Women's soccer headed in right direction after tournament win

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Even though the 2000 fall season ended a little over four months ago, the bitter ending to that campaign still seems to be fresh in the mind of the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

Now, as the Minutewomen work diligently in the midst of their spring season, all signs are indicating a quest for excellence. Of course, UMass took a positive step last weekend when it won its own UMass/All Sport Arena Invitational in Northampton.

However, what made the win even more gratifying was that it came on the heels of a tough-luck inaugural indoor outing. The Minutewomen dominated their opponents at the Soccer City Women's Premier Invitational on Feb. 17, yet only mustered a 1-3-2 record and lost in the final to the Springfield Sirens.

"Three or four weeks ago, when we played at Soccer City, we felt that we played well there," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "We felt that we dominated six games in a row, but we couldn't finish. We couldn't get it into the goal.

"For all of combination play and possession that we had, we were saved on time and time again. We scored four goals in six games, and that's not going to do it. But we faced some brilliant goalkeepers and some lucky ones too."

Fortunately for the Minutewomen, a handful of tactical changes ensured that they would not have another repeat performance on the offensive end this time around.

"I think that a key part in that was getting Martha Conover into a deeper role so that no one could get in front of her," Rudy said. "Keeping her deeper – one, kept us organized, and two, gave us a little more time to play defense. We attacked later and finished much better against some pretty good goaltending."

UMass won four out of five games in the All Sport event, closing out the day with a 4-1 win over Stony Brook in the final. Brooke Bartlett had three goals in the game, while Kathleen Machamer added the game-winner. The victory also avenged a loss to the Sea Wolves earlier in round robin play.

"I knew that in that last group game against Stony Brook, mentally the kids weren't as pumped as in the others," Rudy said. "We had parents, boyfriends and groupies there, and we weren't as focused in our last warm-up. Although we outplayed them, we ran into a hot goalkeeper and they played us well. They got three quality cracks at goal and put two in. It was a very simple matter of focus – or a lack of it."

"Even though we fell behind 1-0 in the first minute of the championship game, we just hammered them. Brooke changed her game a bit for us in terms of her method of play. We were able to get the ball to her three times in good position, and she netted three goals."

Rudy noted a total team effort as the primary reason why his team was able to earn the championship. He also feels that the strength and conditioning of the team has improved immensely in the off-season.

"The contribution to the total team effort helped immensely because they formed the glue that held the team together," he said. "Kat Machamer, Katelyn Jones and Michelle Luttati had the type of performance that helps teams win. Your goal scorers are going to score goals, but you need people who are going to get the ball to them and shut down the other team's attack.

"I want to thank Anthony Catterton and Bob Otrando for helping the team out. I can see obvious, obvious signs of progress with this team, I felt that we were fitter, faster and stronger, and we're not the biggest team in the world."

Individually, Sarah Cook, Kelly Nigh and Erin Lilly were honored as All-Tournament team selections.

"It was a coming out party for Erin Lilly," Rudy said. "She played very well. Her and Sarah Cook made the All-Tournament team along with Kelly Nigh. She let up one goal the whole tournament, and that was quite good."

The Minutewomen will now begin preparation for the outdoor portion of their spring season. As of now, UMass has two games lined up for the remainder of the campaign. They are scheduled to play at Syracuse on Friday, April 13 at 7 p.m. The Minutewomen will then take on Rutgers in New Jersey on Saturday, April 21 at 6 p.m.

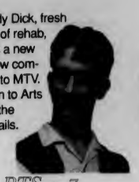
COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Brooke Bartlett netted three goals in the Minutewomen's triumph in their indoor tournament last weekend.

The Massachusetts Daily

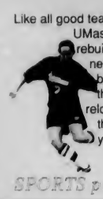
COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 99 | www.dailycollegian.com | Thursday, March 15 2001



Andy Dick, fresh out of rehab, has a new show coming to MTV. Turn to Arts for the details.

ARTS p. 7



Like all good teams, UMass isn't rebuilding next year because they've reloaded this year.

SPORTS p. 14

SGA passes seven motions

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

Ethics, announcements, motions and overall cheers were just a few items tackled at last night's Student Government Association's Senate meeting.

The meeting began as expected with officer reports given by both Student Trustee Seth Avakian and SGA President Jeff Howe discussing issues they would like to be addressed before both their terms come to an end.

Avakian brought up issues surrounding an almost definite referendum question to be placed on the up-and-coming President and Trustee election ballot. The question would be concerning a possible $50 increase on student fees for the up-and-coming school year to be placed directly toward the rebuilding of a new Student Union.

"We have not seen an increase in student fees in the past five years and I'm sure that there will be an increase this up-and-coming year," Avakian said. "By putting a $50 fee and stating what it would be used for would be our way of being pro-active and would be a way of saying that we want to change something."

Howe also spoke about the preparations of two motions, one involving admissions and the other involving University Health Services.

"Admissions enrollment is a huge issue that affects every aspect of our lives on campus, and every year we have issues with housing and classes," Howe said. "Enrollment is not doing its job and its failures are impacting not only diversity on this campus, but everyone and I think that we deserve some answers."

Howe further talked about Health Services and the effects that it would have if the administration implements a new billing system, which would involve private insurers to pay for student billing.

"I would like to see how this would affect students on campus as well as why the SGA was not involved in this," Howe said.

Howe ended his report by commenting on the quality of reporting done by the Daily Collegian on last semester's Senatorial elections as well as its continuing coverage this semester.

Chief Justice Gabriel Tavares also came before the Senate to announce his resignation as Chief Justice of the SGA due to the fact that he will be entering the Presidential race.

Issues surrounding ethics was also brought up once again by Senator Aaron Saunders involving Speaker Jim Eltringham's final vote to appoint Jen Teixeira as Chair of Administrative Affairs. His motion, however, failed to make two-thirds vote by the Senate, leaving it up to a Rules and Ethics committee that has yet to be appointed.

The Senate did, however, pass seven motions throughout the evening, focusing on the appointment of individuals and Senators to specific committees and councils.

Two motions were passed calling for monthly reports from various departments on campus, as well as a weekly report from Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos.

Other motions passed focused on Your Campus Meal Plan (YCMP) and its ability to be used in Dining Halls on campus, as well as Parking Services and issues involving towing of cars on campus.

"We did a lot and had a full agenda that went rather quickly and it was great to get chair reports," Eltringham said. "More importantly, we passed motions and got things done and were able to leave on a good note."

UMass Professor Reveals "How to Save Your Own Life"

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Staff

Let's face it – the prevention of chronic disease isn't on the laundry list of worries for college students. Students grab candy bars or sodas to help you make it through your next class, consider the fact that you may be missing out on an opportunity to ensure your health and vitality later in life.

On Wednesday, March 14 at 12:30 p.m. in the Duke's Room of the Student Union, Assistant Professor Stella Volpe of the UMass Nutrition Department presented information on "How to Save Your Own Life...with Food and Exercise," a lecture and discussion on the prevention of osteoporosis. The talk was sponsored by the Everywoman's Center and People's Market.

Sandy Mandel, Director of Programs at the Everywoman's Center, prefaced the event by telling a story about a woman who realized she had osteoporosis when her ribs were broken as a result of being hugged by a friend. It was then that Mandel, who has a family history of osteoporosis, decided that it was vital that information about the disease reach as many women as possible, as well as to point out an unexpected link between feminism and osteoporosis.

"Health is the key," Volpe stressed, saying that rather than being concerned with the amount of calories in a glass of milk, the long-term benefits of a calcium rich diet should be the overriding factor.

Osteoporosis is a disease that affects 20-25 million people in the United States. It is known as the "silent epidemic" of which there are no symptoms, until fragility fractures

Turn to OSTEOPOROSIS, page 3

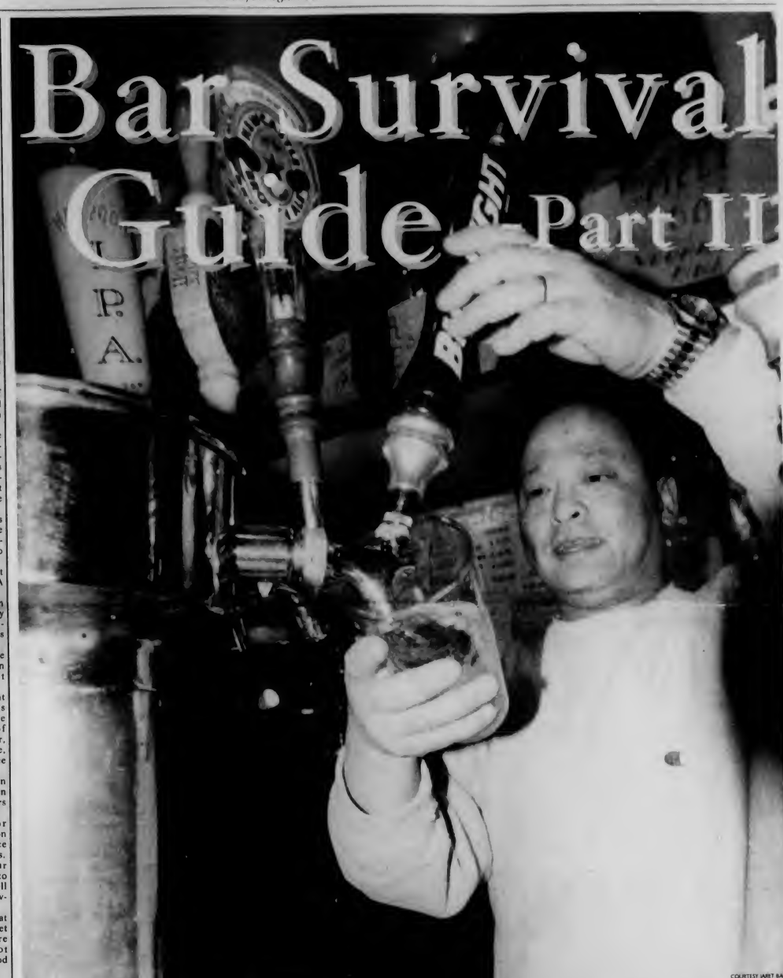
Bar Survival Guide – Part II



COURTESY JANET BARR

The owner of Mike's Billiards taps out a beer for our intrepid staff.

Last week we introduced the ... to remind the experienced, of the army of bars ... This week we've spread our gaze to the other ... establishments in downtown. We at The Collegian ... guide acts as an elucidating tool for those who ... different type of drinking experience.

Our nominal title of downtown, ... that encompassed generically by any metropolitan aficionado, ... not solely refer to the bars down the road from the densely ... surrounding the geographic center. Our linguistic convention implies a certain diversity of ethos and variety of style. Basically, where else to drink and why.

Suffice to say there are many other places that we could have included in this brief survey. Owing to limited space and manpower however it would have been impossible to do justice to every bar. Once again its necessary to reiterate that these are not reviews, each and every bar has its own unique and individual aspects, from food offering boars to free popcorn. So without further ado, here is the second installment of the official Daily Collegian bar survival guide. Feeling thirsty?

-Tom Frazer

Charlie's Tavern

For the past 22 years, Charlie's Tavern has been a permanent fixture on the Amherst night scene. Located slightly off the beaten path, set back from the hustle and bustle of North Pleasant St., Charlie's serves up food, booze and a comfortable atmosphere for all of their patrons.

Walk in the front door and you will usually be greeted by a friendly face asking for your ID, sorry kiddos, this joint is strictly 21+. Once inside you will be presented with an important choice, head left and try and find a table or a seat at the bar, or head right over to the pool table. Before doing either though you should stop at the bar and ask for a drink.

Charlie's has a traditional U-shaped bar that ranks as one of the biggest ... amount of room. Once you are ... attract the attention of one of Charlie's ... with yet another important decision, what to ... important slow sipping second.

As is expected at a bar in a college town, both Bud and Bud Light are big sellers. Bass seems to be popular with Charlie's patrons, as are Grateful Dead's and the $1.99 Beam and Coke daily special. But it is a diverse crowd that frequents Charlie's and you will see people drinking everything from an Amstel Light to a gin and tonic as you make your way from one end of the bar to the other.

Something else you will see quite a few people doing at Charlie's is enjoying a snack. Every Sunday-Thursday there is a 10-cent food special that attracts a crowd that prefers to spend their college funds on beer rather than bread. Sunday and Tuesday are wings nights while Monday serves up mozzarella sticks, Wednesdays are all about jalapeno poppers and Thursday nights chicken nuggets are on the menu. If none of these fit your fancy you can browse through Charlie's menu, which offers up traditional bar food such as burgers and nachos.

But the thing that makes Charlie's truly stand out from its competitors is its cozy atmosphere. Everybody seems to know each other and even those who are newcomers can bond over whatever sporting event happens to be on one of Charlie's four televisions. The main aspect that gives Charlie's its atmosphere is the original birthday celebration that goes on. Celebrating a birthday at Charlie's is a must for all Amherst residents as you not only get a free drink, but also you get to embarrass yourself in front of all your friends. Each birthday boy or girl is given a seat at the bar with a bowl of whipped cream in front of him or her. Hidden in the whipped cream is a cherry, the first contestant to find their cherry wins and is usually given a shot on the house, the others are given champagne.

Whatever it is that you are looking for Charlie's is sure to offer it. Food, fun and cute barmaids serving your favorite drinks, Charlie's has it all. Add into this the unique atmosphere that can only be found here and you have the perfect equation for an enjoyable experience.

Turn to BAR GUIDE page 2

■ bar guide

continued from page 1

Keeping the throngs entertained is a giant golfing video game; continuous sport TV; a jukebox and a pool table, but Johnson's right, the real drug is the food. And as long as they keep offering their delectable, flavorful and tasteful chicken creations, those people that can't get enough of the Hangar won't be able to get enough of the Hangar. Now, if only they could find a way to deliver those beers.

-Sam Wilkinson

Michael's Billiards

The banner boasts BeerGod.com and onlookers are promised a piece of Web heaven where Honey Brown Ale flows like manna in the ancient Egyptian desert. Although the website has since been taken down, possibly a tragic outcome of the dot come bust, the $6.75 pitchers at Mike's Billiards on Belchertown Rd. in Amherst are still quite a reality – your very own slice of heaven on earth.

Come for the liquor, stay for the pool. In addition to Honey Brown, Mike's has 4 other beers on tap, including Amherst standards Bud and Bud Light. That's in addition to a slew of fairly cheap bottled beer. If you're in the mood for some alcohol that's not brewed, Mike's is very accommodating. Three dollars will get you a Grape Crush (one of my personal favorites) or a Blue Hawaiian (and blue is always good when it comes to alcohol). Also try the damn good Long Island Iced Tea or your Jollywood. Want something that does the job a bit quicker? Try an Oatmeal Cookie shot (with an interesting kick of Goldschläger or a Surfer on Acid (isn't the name intriguing enough?).

Enough about alcohol though, let's move on to the hook.

Mike's has 10 full-sized pool tables for patrons to enjoy. Monday through Wednesday, an hour of knocking the balls around will only cost you $4, which is an absolute steal. After that, the price only goes up a dence, which means you can play pool almost all weekend long and still have enough to bus those Dave Matthews tickets you cruise so badly. Plus, you'll see your pool game improve by leaps and bounds (trust me on this one). While most of the time straight up billiards is the game of choice, you will see the occasional game of nine-ball being played.

The ambience is also pretty good as long as people continually feed the jukebox, which pumps out tunes ranging from Korn to the Backstreet Boys to the Fugees. Occasionally, you get momentary periods of awkward silence during which only sounds of pocketed balls drift through the air, but don't be intimidated by actually having to talk with your date. Rather, take advantage of the opportunity and decide together on some old favorites to put on for a while.

If you get bored of scratching on the eight-ball, Mike's provides enough other distractions to keep you entertained. In addition to darts and the mandatory "Golden Tee" video console (of the "26" variety), Mike's has five TVs, including a huge, 52-inch Sony wide screen. That's plenty of pixels to watch the NCAA college basketball tourney or to catch the late edition of SportsCenter.

If you're not convinced that Mike's is for you, consider the following. During a recent trip to Mike's, a friend and I played pool for two hours, drank two pitchers of Honey Brown and paid only $20 total between the two of us. You just can't find that kind of value anywhere.

Oh, lastly. Free popcorn! (huh.

-Adam Martignetti

Pruddy's

"We price that nobody will treat you better," said Prudds's owner Prudencio Gomez, Jr., otherwise known as Pruddy. In the summer of 1998, the town of Amherst delivered an empowering blow to what was, at the time, the premier club in town. For various complicated reasons, the bar had its liquor license revoked, and for the next two years they were forced to operate under a "bring your own booze" (B.Y.O.B.) system. "That wasn't really Prudds's," said Prudds. "If you haven't been here since before 1998, you don't really know what we are."

"We're very strict at the door now," Prudds said. "Our staff is very relaxed except the guy checking your ID."

"We are going to choose who comes in here now," said Prudencio Gomez, Sr., otherwise known as Mr. G. "Our doors close at 12:30 A.M."

Prudds's presents an experience very unique to the bar scene in Amherst. Prudds described it as, "A New York style place that closes at 1:00 a.m." By this he means that behavior is a bit abnormal. Standing on chairs, dancing in big public halls and becoming extremely familiar with bartenders and staff is highly encouraged.

Prudds's is located past Newbury Comics and next to Pinocchio's Restaurant. The room is remarkably spacious, and is located in a basement with rock walls. "I think there's something about coming downstairs having no windows and being surrounded by rocks that makes you realize that you can be wild," Prudds said.

Being unique is something that was intended when Prudds's opened in the mid 1980's. The family run business tried to find elements that would not only offer something different, but also revolutionize Amherst's bar scene at the same time. "This is Amherst," Prudds said. "Different things for different styles."

When asked if there is something that Prudds's offers that other area places do not, Prudds claimed that his bar's drinks are first-rate. "Our drinks are well prepared," said Mr. G.

"We don't believe in watering down alcohol and filling it with ice," Prudds said. It offers very big drinks, and claim that the other bars in Amherst, who now have huge drinks as well followed their lead. Prudds also claims to have the cheapest drinks around. The bar sells some tropical drinks along with its tropical atmosphere. Behind the bars there are swimsuits and a giant stuffed gorilla. "You can celebrate whatever you want to celebrate here," he explained.

What cannot be found anywhere else, are Prudds's signature drinks. Most of their specialty drinks are only five dollars, and they have cheap pitchers of beer as well. Prudds's designed all of its drinks when it first opened, and has developed many more since. One of the first was the Puerto Rican Iced Tea. A friend of the Prudds's family works at a Hyatt hotel in Puerto Rico. The Hyatt sells the drink there as well, but it is called a Prudds's Iced Tea.

Two of Prudds's newest drinks are named after two close friends. The Orsak, named after John Orsak, which was Prudds's housemate, and The Mento, named after Umass collegiate swimmer, Greg Menton, who died of cardiac dysrhythmia during a swim meet in 1998.

Prudds explained that the bar has a special connection with UMass aquatic sports. "Aquatic people party hard and they're not afraid to wear a swimsuit," he said. The bar is filled with swimming, diving and water polo paraphernalia. The staff given lends to the bar's summer-like mood.

One drink that you will never find at Prudds's is a martini. When asked why, Mr. G. confidently said, "I have you ever seen a college kid with a martini in his hand?"

Prudds's is also very proud of the music it plays. "If you're a good customer and request something, we will play it," Prudds said. "You can feel our vibe of chill down here." He also claimed that the bar was the first place to play any hip-hop music. The purveyor of the first hip-hop music, according to Prudds, was a DJ called Mr. Yu.

"[Prudds's] definitely sparked a big movement," Mr. Yu said. "It's by far the most comfortable place with the most space to get away. The whole vibe is very nice."

So with all of this individuality, why was Prudds's closed for so long? Well, according to Mr. G, it was because of technicalities in the town's laws. "There are no bars in town, everyone's a restaurant," he said. "We only serve Tapas, which the town claims is not food."

Prudds claimed that the town is against UMass students. "The town really doesn't like the students," he said. "They realized that the University is here and are not going to move, but they hate the students." He accused the town of, "Having a problem with UMass, but not Amherst College."

In response to this, he said, "This is a college town, and we cater to students here who have been drinkers in the past, people who are tired of fights and puking, and just want to go out, have drinks and have fun."

Having fun is just part of the Prudds's motto. Closeness is another major aspect. The entire Gomez family has a hand in making Prudds's an ancestral business. The father-son ownership is accompanied by Gomez Sr.'s daughter who works at the bar, and his other son who used to work there, but is now away at Cornell. Prudds insisted that this was important because you can always find someone who knows everything about the bar's operation whenever it is open. "If you have a problem," he explained. "We can help you because it's always the owners who are around" Prudds clarified. "I, or someone from the ownership, must be here at all times, so we're going to be around. Because of this, we're going to do a lot of things to have fun."

Some of the fun things they do, are odd celebrations. In April, it will be celebrating Halloween, and in May, it's Carnivale'.

Customer service is by far the utmost top priority at Prudds's. "I hate staff members who, when you're not doing something wrong give you an attitude," Prudds said, "We're a student bar." We're closed during the summer and spring break. When there's no school, there's no Prudds's."

Prudds's will also drive you home if you've had too much to drink. They have a twenty-person passenger bus that operates at any time. Prudds said that his bar will play any music you like, and the bartenders make a concerted effort to get to know the customers. "If you have any problems that you may need help with, we always want you to just ask." Jokingly he said, "Unless you ask for a martini, even then if you beg enough I'll serve you something that's like a martini, and probably call it a Pruddytini."

So, according to Prudencio Gomez Jr., what is the bottom line when it comes to the Amherst bar, that was reinstated after two years away. "Prudds's is just Prudds's. Life is too short to have a bad time."

-Ryan Benharris

Turn to BAR GUIDE page 3

RYAN BENHARRIS / COLLEGIAN

A local gorilla at a local bar warily eyes the merchandise and shifty customers.

The Pub

If you are trying to find The Pub in Amherst simply let the pulsating beats of music and throngs of young people guide you.

The bar is the only place in town where students can let down their hair and dance on the weekends, it is the only place in town that offers its patrons both a club-like atmosphere while at the same time offering up a pseudo-traditional bar setting. It also has a monopoly on the 18+ crowd.

The music, which is provided by DJ's spinning mixtures of hip hop and dance tunes, allows 18+ to dance and 21+ to drink on different nights of the week. The daytime restaurant dims its lights and churns out the music on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. allowing patrons to dance on their wooden dance floor that they boast is the biggest that the town has to offer. The Pub usually has a cover charge of between two and five dollars depending on either who is performing for live music or depending upon the DJ of the night.

"This is the only 18 plus establishment in town," bouncer Brandon Carter explained about the uniqueness of the bar as a dance venue. "We usually draw in a lot of the younger college crowd."

If you are not interested in dancing, The Pub still has a variety of traditional alternatives available with booths that surround the room providing a place to sit but which most often take on the role of cloakroom. There is also the mandatory pool table for those who want to partake in a game – but serious pool players beware, there is rarely enough room to swing a straw let alone a cue.

The bar has occupied its place in the Amherst community, situated next to Cousins Market and behind The Sub, since 1968. The venue got its name and theme from the traditional English pub. When the establishment was founded the door included dark wood, heavy beams and carriage lanterns all reminiscent of a typical pub (or at least a Hollywood depiction of a Dickensian pub where the patrons all speak cockney rhyming slang and drink warm ale). The pub later decided on a new look for the restaurant, but the name still stuck.

Dancing aside, The Pub is still a place where townies can come to relax and enjoy a drink. The bar makes beer their specialty offering up a vast selection of microbrews, beer and ales, are among those who will converge to rally for future legislation on a variety of issues that affect the Jewish community, such as affordable housing, environmental justice, and services for senior citizens, immigrants and refugees.

The event is being sponsored by the Jewish Community Relations Council of Greater Boston, an organization that represents 42 Jewish organizations and agencies.

The JRC promotes social justice through community programming and legislative advocacy, specifically events such as Jewish Community Advocacy Day.

Students from UMass Hillel will be making the trip to take part in this important event. For more information, contact Sarah Blumenthal at 546-4843.

—Chanel Dubofsky

CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

A group of concerned citizens, students and activists gather at the Massachusetts State House for last year's Jewish Community Advocacy Day.

■ osteoporosis

continued from page 1

occur in old age. Although men suffer from this disease, 80 percent of those affected are women. Osteoporosis has been characterized as a pediatric disease that manifests itself in late adulthood. Bone mass is genetically determined at birth, but it can be maintained and strengthened by diet and exercise. At menopause, a woman's level of estrogen suddenly drops, and these changes result in a loss of bone strength and mass. After menopause, a woman has a 50 percent chance of developing osteoporosis, greater than her odds of getting breast cancer, and a 32 percent chance of sustaining a vertebral fracture. Therefore, it is vital that women concentrate on building bone mass as early as in their twenties.

According to Volpe, in order to maintain appropriate levels of calcium, one should drink four glasses of milk per day. Although many women use calcium supplements, Volpe favors food over these supplements, which are not regulated by the FDA. For vegans and those who are lactose intolerant, it is possible to obtain needed calcium from soy products such as tofu and tempeh, as well as from dark, leafy greens like kale and spinach.

For college students, whose diets typically consist of soda, cigarettes and "eating on the run," Volpe recommended paying closer attention to what they do manage to eat. Foods such as yogurt contain 400 milligrams of calcium and are easy to grab and eat during class. Rather than relying on soda, one should opt for calcium-fortified juices or milk. It can ever be as easy as adding skim milk to that morning (and mid-morning, and afternoon, and late afternoon…) coffee. While Volpe admitted, "we're not going to get everyone to quit smoking," she said that smoking does contribute to one's risk of osteoporosis because of its chemicals that block estrogen receptors from strengthening bone tissue.

To be effective, a healthy diet must also be supplemented with physical activity. "Exercise should be like brushing your teeth," said Volpe, who recommends thirty minutes a day of resistance exercise which involves one's entire body, such as walking. She cited an important study done by Miriam Nelson of Tufts University in which 75-year-old women took part in low-scale, at-home weight training exercises and failed to develop osteoporosis. The details of Nelson's study can be found in her book, Strong Women Stay Young.

"Osteoporosis is a feminist issue," said Mandel of the Everywoman's Center. "It's about helping women keep our bodies strong and healthy throughout our whole lives in a culture that doesn't want us to."

Students for Free Tibet gather to celebrate Tibetan New Year Losar

Tonight at 6 pm in the UMASS Campus Center Auditorium, UMASS Students for a Free Tibet will be presenting a celebration of Losar, the Tibetan New Year.

The celebration will begin with a special prayer and invocation for world peace and happiness by Tenzin Sangpo, a Tibetan Buddhist Monk and student at Hampshire College. Following a brief introduction of the UMass Students for Free Tibet group, current projects will be discussed, and a short presentation will be given on the traditional celebration of LOSAR.

The Boston Tibetan dance group, led by Mr. and Mrs. Dhongsar, who are former artists and instructors from the internationally acclaimed Tibetan Institute of Performing Arts in Dharamasala, India, will be performing a traditional Tibetan Shuclpa (good luck dance from the Soil area of Lhasa). The performers in this dance wearing the white-board mask representing Saint Thangthong Gyalpo, the founder of a kind of Tibetan opera called Lhamo. Saint Thangthong Gyalpo is said to have lived for 140 years and conveyed the teachings of Lord Buddha through operas.

Another musical highlight of the evening will be the performance of the Dance of Yaks, called Yak-tse, an extract form a Tibetan opera called Suk-lyi Nima, which depicts the life of a nomad family and its yaks. In the opera, a nomad woman milks the female yaks called Dre and makes butter. She then sings a song in honor of offering the first serving of fresh butter to the Dalai Lama, and then to the father and other members of the family.

Finally attendees will be treated to a special Tibetan meal prepared by the local Tibetan community and end the celebrations by participating in the Tibetan circle dance.

"The event is coming to UMASS for the first time," explained club representative Tondup Tsering. "It's a rare opportunity for people to get together to experience Tibetan culture without having to go to Tibet or India. It will enrich the diverse culture on campus, and promote understanding and respect among individuals of the Amherst community."

Tsering encouraged students to attend, saying, "It's going to be a lot of fun…a rare opportunity people should not miss."

Losar is perhaps one of the most important secular festivals of Tibet, and is celebrated by all the people of the nation. Government officials, monks and nuns, farmers and young and old all celebrate with great fervor – in some places the Losar celebrations last for more than a week.

Early in the last month of the year people start making preparations for Losar. Entire neighborhoods are cleaned and houses are freshly painted. New clothing is prepared, especially for children, but most adults wear their old clothing and jewelry.

In a day-long dance ritual called Torgya, performed by masked monks in monasteries all over Tie, the accumulated harmful influences of the past year are driven out. That evening, each Tibetan family has Gyathuk for the dinner, a thick soup made with small pieces of vegetables, cheese, meat and dough. The Gyathuk includes special dough balls, each filled with a small piece of wool, paper, salt, chili, stone or pea. Everyone in the household receives one of these dough balls in his or her bowl. The dough balls interpret their recipient. A person who receives wool is gentle and kind; paper- whimsical; salt – lazy; chili – sharp tongued; stone – conscientious; pea – tight fisted or miserly.

On the day of the New Year, Tibetans arise very early. After a brief Tashi Delek, or good luck, ceremony and offering prayers in the family altar room, the entire family goes to the nearby monastery to offer prayers. On the way people exchange greetings and khatas, or silk scarves.

In Lhasal the first day of Losar is officially called the Lamai Losar (the Priests New Year), and the second day, Gyalopi Losar (The Kings' New Year), reflecting the positions of the Dalai Lama as Choesi Nyidag, mater jointly and severally of Church and State. The ceremonies in Lhasa include extensive religious invocations, religious dance, debate and formal exchanges of greetings and is attended by lamas, and tukus, government official and dignitaries from China, India, Ladakh, Bhutan, Nepal and Mongolia.

On the third day of Losar, the families get up very early and perform an incense burning ceremony to appease the local deities and to bring good luck to the family and all sentient beings. The ceremony is held on top of a hill or house. Prayer flags are raised and juniper incense is offered. The ceremony concludes with the shouting of "Ki Ki So So Lha Gyal Lo," three times, which means, "May the gods on the side of virtue be victories." On the third time this is said trampa, roasted barely, is thrown in the air as an expression of good wishes: happiness and success in overcoming all obstacles.

Students for a Free Tibet is part of an international student group that believes their actions can change the world and make the world a better place for everyone, explained Tsering. "Our primary target is Tibet. Any UMASS student or faculty member is free to join."

This event is brought to you with support from the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, Alumni Association, Student Union Commission, and the Arts Council.

Jewish advocacy recognized

On Wednesday, March 21, over thirty-five Jewish organizations and groups from Massachusetts will take part in the third annual Jewish Community Advocacy Day at the State House from 8:45 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

There will be a debrief lunch from 12:00-1:00 for students, featuring Charles Glick, an advocate in the Jewish community. Students, senior citizens and rabbis

■ bar guide

continued from page 2

however they also offer up a variety of mixed drinks and shots. During the day The Pub is a fully operational restaurant offering a wide variety of dishes ranging from burgers and nachos to full dinners.

A gleaming wood finish and dim lighting make The Pub in Amherst the perfect place to lose yourself during the day while the bright lights and fast music of the nightlife make it a great place to spend an evening.

-Melissa Hammel

The Spoke

You know you're drunk when the bear sitting on the bar starts offering you Tootsie Rolls.

Actually, you haven't yet entered the realm of alcohol-induced hallucination; you're at the Spoke, arguably the most creatively decorated watering hole in Amherst. Any bar with five wheeled vehicles hanging from the ceiling (a touring bike, two cruisers and two tricycles) and an official motto of "service with a grunt" is sure to offer more than just a buzz, and the Spoke doesn't disappoint.

Situated between to the Sub and Cops Cat on North Pleasant St., the Spoke was founded in November of 1984 by one Mr. Myles Washburn, a then senior at UMass. The name and theme of the bar stem from Washburn's love of bicycling; in fact, the Delta Chi fraternity member went on to race bikes professionally after his graduation. Visitors to the Spoke are greeted by a sign reading "Caution: Coasting per order Police Dept." as well as numerous posters and vintage bicycle advertisements.

Strangers to the Spoke, however, often have a different idea.

"People who've never been here have a big misconception of this place," said Dave Rohde, bar manager since 1992. "They hear 'The Spoke' and they think it's some kind of rough-and-tumble biker bar. But it's really just a neighborhood bar, with a good mix of students."

In fact, Rohde contends that the Spoke offers a laid-back alternative to other more crowded nightspots in town. He points to the fact that his bar almost never has a line, and that patrons have a choice of either keeping to themselves and being "left alone" or striking up a conversation with just about anyone.

"There are a lot of weirdoes, but I love them all," laughed Sara Fortin of Amherst. "Seriously, it's a lot of fun. I really like the ambience, and the Tootsie Rolls."

Those Tootsie Rolls come courtesy of the aforementioned bear, which is actually a candy-filled bank. Rohde recalls an instance four years ago when the yet-unnamed candy bear was stolen during homecoming weekend, only to be recovered shortly thereafter at the shoe-defunct Mike's Westview.

But candy is far from the only source of nourishment at the Spoke. The bar offers free food nightly (including pizza and subs) and Rohde is known to be just as skilled at the grill as he is at the tap.

"We try to have barbecue at least once a month, and it's always free of charge," said Rohde, whose spread at the Spoke's holiday party last semester rivaled the best menus in town. "I bring in my grill and fire it up, and it's pretty popular."

Just as popular are the Spoke's drink specials, which range from a Drink of the Month (Bushmill's Irish Whiskey for $2.50) to bottled beer specials and dollar shots. The Spoke boasts 20 different kinds of vodka and an equal number of whiskeys in the "Kitchen Sink" shooter concocted of a handful of flavored vodkas for a unique taste sensation.

Even with all those drink specials the Spoke has almost never had problems with rowdiness or, as Rohde puts it, "overbearing Testosterone." That gives the bar added allure to customers looking for a lower key atmosphere in which to unwind.

"The Spoke is always fun, and you never have to worry about getting trouble," said Rebecca Taylor of Burlington, Vt.

That's not to say that there isn't a little friendly competition thrown into the mix now and then. Rohde acknowledges that the Spoke is "a Red Sox bar" and that many fans go there to watch the team play, even though one of the bartenders also happens to be a Yankee fan. The bar also sponsors various charity events, such as last year's kick ball tournament, to raise money for Northampton's Clarke School for the Deaf.

"We're sponsoring a scavenger hunt later this summer, and our goal is to raise 10 grand by the end of the year," Rohde said.

Regardless of how they do in that hunt, fans of the Spoke know one thing: they've already found one of the truly unique bars in Amherst.

– Adam White

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hamniel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

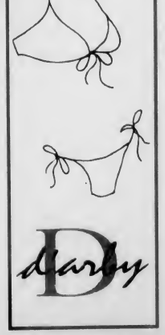
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!
U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUVs • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route)

Done your homework for LIFE 101 lately?
Purpose for Life = Loving God + Loving People
Sunday Morning Celebration – 11am in the Jones Library Conference Room
(43 Amity St – downtown Amherst)
MERCYhouse
It's a church!
www.knowmercy.org

Thai Corner
"Home Style Thai Food"
ไทยคอนเนอร์
Serving Lunch From 11:30-3:00
Monday- Saturday
Take-Out Available
• Curry Dishes
• Stir Fried
• Soups
• Salads
• Noodles
31 Boltwood Walk, Amherst MA 253-1639
located down the alley from Antonio's Pizza
Hours: Sun 5-9, Mon-Wed 11:30-9, Thurs-Sat 11:30-10

IT'S YOUR BODY
If your car has an accident, don't let the tow truck drag it wherever. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

The Black Sheep
THE BLACK SHEEP has been serving the UMass community for over 15 years.
We are a delicatessen, all butter scratch bakery, gourmet food purveyor and full service caterer.
THE BLACK SHEEP is renowned for providing the most memorable and best tasting GRADUATION PARTIES in the Valley.
Stop by for a cup of coffee, overstuffed sandwich, or homemade dessert and see what we have to offer.
THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST. AMHERST
253-3442
OCMP, VISA/MASTERCARD ACCEPTED.



Darby

comedy CONNECTION
March 24th 7PM only!
HU KE LAU
413•593•5222
Star of the HBO special "Killin' Them Softly"
DAVE CHAPPELLE
Starred in "Half Baked"
aka "Goat Boy"
April 28th
JIM BREUER
Starred in "Half Baked"

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Great Beer Great Food Great Service
Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.
Thurs. Karaoke $2 cover
Sat. The Blarney Pilgrims Irish Music $3 cover
Special St. Patricks Day Menu Corned Beef & Cabbage and other traditional fare.
Sun. Patty Carpenter Jam no Cover
36 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst
413-253-4400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM

Spring Break...
Are you ready?

We're there.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst
www.zanna.com

What is TOAST!?
TOAST! is an improvisational theater group featuring the audio/visual aspects of:
Theater
Music
Video
Art Display
Student Valley Productions
The Creators of-- Mission:IMPROVable & Casual Sketch
This month's TOAST! performance is entitled: "What Once Was Lost..."
TOAST! performances are FREE and occur on the last Tuesday of every month in the Student Union Ballroom at 8:00 SHARP!
Bring your friends, your funny bone, and your imagination on March 27th to this FREE EVENT!
This project made possible in part by: The Umass Arts Council and The SACEF

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Thursday, March 15, 2001

Ed/Op Editor • Rob Schulze

collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Chance for our children:

Putting our money where it counts

A major step in advancing after-school education was taken yesterday in Boston, as a number of public and private groups announced a $23 million gift that will help to serve the city's latchkey children.

The donors, which include Harvard University, FleetBoston and the city of Boston, are intent on offering the city's kids a productive alternative to empty homes that they can profit from, rather than being left alone in the hours following a normal school day. It is those crucial afternoon hours, say city officials, in which growing numbers of children are returning home unattended, and more worryingly, when juvenile crime has been on the rise.

"I hope it's influential in getting people to look at this type of effort as a model for the future," said Paul S. Grogan, Harvard's vice president for government, community, and public affairs in an interview with the Boston Globe.

Despite the 240 programs that currently operate in the Boston area, some 15,000 children between the ages of 4 and 15 are still looking for placement. The new initiative, it seems, couldn't have come at a more opportune time.

Similar endeavors have taken place elsewhere. New York was the recipient of a $125 million grant that helped finance after-school programs for over 40,000 children. There is little doubt that, while these programs may not be cure-alls, they are an appropriate and welcome step in the right direction.

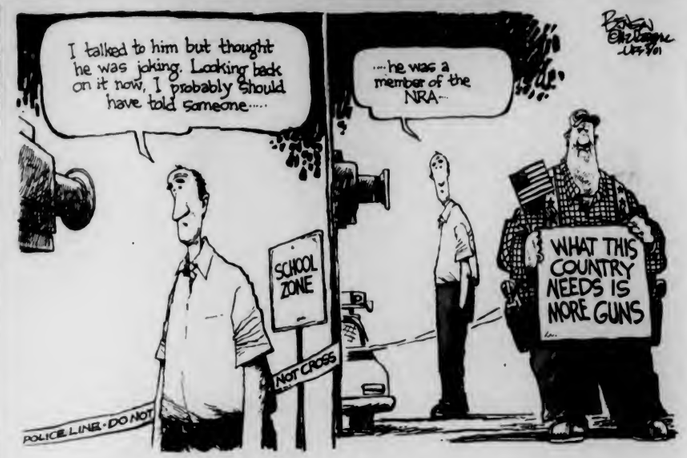
Indeed, a model like the one now being constructed in Boston should be something that those future generations pull from and help to further develop. All of the donors helping to get the program up and running should be applauded; any amount of effort directed toward bettering the lives of our youth is both time and money well spent.

Like anything else, however, the program is not without its detractors. Critics say that the city shouldn't meddle with the responsibilities of the parents, and that non-profit agencies can do the same job for a fraction of the cost.

How anyone can question the motive behind such a program, however, is left to those with clear monetary gains in mind, and not the development of the children. Any program of this nature, whether it be recreational, educational, or a mix of the two, takes away from the time these children will have to spend alone. They'll instead remain in a healthy environment, stimulated by one-on-one interaction with their peers and friends, rather than the television.

We at the Collegian commend those involved in supporting the youth of Boston, and hope that similar steps can and will be taken to look after the youth of Western Massachusetts as well. In cases like this, there can never be too much done, and that more people have begun to take notice is certainly a welcoming sign of better things to come.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian Diversity Board.



I talked to him but thought he was joking. Looking back on it now, I probably should have told someone....
...he was a member of the NRA...
SCHOOL ZONE
WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS IS MORE GUNS
POLICE LINE - DO NOT CROSS

How many licks?

ROB SCHULZE

"Dear Rob,

You are my god. I want to lick your body, all over. Please do me, oh do me now. Your ed/ops make me hot. See you at the Dutch

Scottie Newport"

I found this note in my mailbox a while back. It's currently hanging on the wall behind my desk. It has never ceased to amuse me.

For one thing, I'm fairly sure that Scott Newport does not, in fact, want to lick my body, all over. Scott's a pretty good friend of mine, in spite of the fact that he's running for Orchard Hill Area Governor, and we've known each other for a while. If he really wanted to lick me that bad, I'm sure we could have made something happen by now.

Also, the handwriting is in a script that I would label as somewhat, pardon my blatant penis-centricity and sexism, "girly." Scott is a manly sort of fellow – often un-shaven, fairly profane – and I would assume his writing to be something along the lines of mine, by which I mean utterly illegible (if bad handwriting is the mark of a true man, then I could kick John Wayne's ass any day). Combine that with the fact that no one would ever knowingly sign his or her name "Scottie" and I highly suspect that this note was the work of another.

Who, though? Who has a vendetta against a good man like Scott Newport so strong that they would imply that I am his god?

Note to readership: I am Scott Newport's god. It's just that it's one of those things that you don't really say in public.

Anyways, I have been trying to do some detective work on this subject. Using all the powers at my command, I have worked through several clues contained within the fatal document itself. Evidence:

This person knows Scott better than they know me. They know that Scott frequently dines at the Hatch, but they are unaware that I prefer the sweet grilled cheese and tuna goodness of the Coffee Shop. They also assume that I would want to do Scott now, immediately, whereas in actuality I would require at least two dates. Maybe a bottle of wine, too.

The person says that my columns make Scott hot. Now, we all know that Scott Newport is illiterate. The only way my columns could possibly make him hot would be if he were tossed, writhing and bound, onto a pile of them that was lit on fire. As for now, unless one of his friends is kind enough to read them to him, all they do is make Scott painfully aware of his educational deficiencies.

Note to readership: This is a humor column. Scott Newport is not actually illiterate. I think.

Another clue lies in the signing of the name as "Scottie." The possibilities offered up by this tidbit are numerous: dog fetishist, Star Trekkie, Scott's rotund Aunt Agnes. What does it all mean?

I'll tell you what it means. What it means is that I'm damn tired of people writing me notes saying that they want to lick my body and do me now and signing a false name. I happen to know for a fact that Chancellor Scott Wilmina Ryder 4 of the 5 X Sons guys Margaret Thatcher, Tonya Harding, and, yes, Scott Newport, all have no interest in licking my body whatsoever. Well, maybe Tonya Harding. I hear she's a real slut, and she has a mullet.

But really. This constant propositioning of me by my friends, coworkers, parents, and girlfriend has to stop! No, wait – actually, I think I'd prefer for my girlfriend to proposition me. But that's it!

All you freaks that mail me crap and write me notes and things really need to stop. It's disturbing. Although I did hear that Scott Newport is available for lickings, ladies. Rawr.

Will we ever find out who wrote the fatal note? As it happens, I already know, but since Scott agreed to let me make fun of him in the paper and I never called the author for comment, I'll just leave her out of it. It's better that way, really – the Anonymous Note-Writer is a true romantic archetype, one that should not be sullied by truth.

The moral? Scottie Newport wants to lick me in the Hatch, and you should all vote for him for Orchard Hill Governor.

Fin.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian Columnist.

Write for Ed/Op !

BRIAN LOHNES

The Iceman cometh

I consider myself a pretty original guy, when it comes to good gift ideas for my girlfriend. There are certain times of year when I become a slave to tradition like everyone else. I've invested a fair share of my life savings to buying roses, jewelry, endangered species and firearms for my girlfriend, and usually she likes the stuff I give her. As some of you astute readers might already know, we are really fond of going on trips to exotic places such as Canada, Florida, and Bangladesh. So, for my girlfriend Kerri's upcoming 21st birthday I thought of the next logical place to travel to: Iceland.

Now, I am being perfectly serious. I really want to take her to Iceland. Why? It seems like a cool place to visit. Granted, it will probably be about 527 degrees below zero, but it would be pretty cool to say that I have been to Iceland. After all, we've all heard the motto, "Iceland is for lovers of frozen water." And hey, does she love frozen water. So what is there to do in Iceland? I suppose that is a fair question, so let's take a deeper look at that misunderstood floating iceberg-country. Its capitol city is carved out of a sheer brick of ice. That's right, everything is frozen solid. Buildings? Ice. Streets? Ice. Even the toilets are ice. Ok, so it's not all wine and roses, but listen to the ring of saying, "I've been to Iceland." That's almost as cool as saying, "I've just kicked my heroin addiction."

The actual name of the Capitol City is Reykjavik and it is the home to 88,000 very cherubic Icelanders. Besides that, I don't know a hell of a lot about the place, so now I will make things up.

The national sport in Iceland is seal bopping. This is where hundreds of huge Icelandic men (and women) line the frozen shores of their icy-hell and bop seals with huge wooden oars. The seal respond by yelling, "Reykjavik!!" which besides being the name of the capitol city is also a very strong curse word in Icelandic. After the people of Iceland grow weary of bopping seals, they settle down at the local bar or, as they call it, a "Reykjavik" and down huge mugs of polar bear blood. It's true folks: the people of Iceland drink the blood of polar bears. Later they all dance naked around a huge fire called a Reykjavik.

Another interesting aspect of Iceland is its completely robotic police force. As it turns out, Robo-Cop was a massive hit in Iceland and huge amounts of research went into developing a police force of robots. After a few mishaps involving innocent Icelandic seal boppers, the robo-force or "Reykjavik" as it is called there, began to clean the streets of criminals. Since everyone in Iceland is over seven feet tall, the police robots are huge and have super-strength. Like they wouldn't anyway.

A favorite food in Iceland is grilled Canadian. Specially trained Icelandic hunters discreetly enter Canada and expertly capture its tastiest residents.

A perfectly prepared Canadian is one that is moist, but not overly so, and perfectly spiced. As everyone already knows, Canadians are bland so they benefit from a pinch of the famous Icelandic spice, Reykjavik.

Iceland is the world's largest supplier of mail-order brides. Most of the women in Iceland are seven feet tall and blonde, so socially inept men the world over enjoy buying them for company. The mail order brides are actually bred on huge farms where they are fed a perfectly balanced diet of ice and Reykjavik. When they reach the age of sale (roughly 22-27) they are auctioned to the highest bidder. If the brides fail to sell during their prime period, they are put into boats and pushed out into the sea, never to be heard from again.

The scenery of Iceland draws many people to its shores; the huge carnivorous animals that seek out foreigners usually drive them away. If you are lucky enough to avoid capture by the large carnivores, you will see, among other things, volcanoes, glaciers, dragons, huge bats (18 foot wingspans), and God willing, a wild Reykjavik. The rustic and rough natural terrain of the country makes it a natural spot for people from around the globe to come and hike. Inevitably, they get lost and are never heard from again. One has to imagine that they were having a good time before they disappeared into the hellish conditions that are the Icelandic countryside. In the event that a hiker does disappear, whomever bet on that hiker to disappear in the townspeople's pool wins all the money (i.e. a flock of dead birds).

Icelanders use dead birds as currency. As such, the men carry huge wallets to fit the birds in, and women carry the most massive handbags on Earth to tote their dead bird money around. It was suggested in the Icelandic Parliament a few years back to switch to paper money, but the government refused, saying "Reykjavik! Reykjavik! Reykjavik!" Best I can tell, sparrows are worth roughly a penny, where as frozen extinct dodo birds are worth about 100 dollars. Yesterday's lottery winner took home a fossilized pterodactyl, the largest winnings in the lottery's history.

Music in Iceland is a huge part of their heritage. Take Bjork for example. If you do not believe anything that I am saying about Iceland, check out one of her videos. She portrays Iceland like no other artist. Well, I guess there really hasn't been a run of music superstars from Iceland. I am waiting for the day to hear on MTV, "Leading the Icelandic explosion, here are the Spin Doctors!" Very few people know that the Spin Doctors are huge in Iceland and have actually integrated themselves into Icelandic society. Iceland has a brand of music similar in many ways to country music here in the states. The singers sing tales of woe about how the huge bats dragged off their loved one, or how global warming may force their country to sink into the ocean.

Overall, this place seems like a romantic spot for my best girl and I to go spend some time together. Sure there are risks involved, but my next choice for a destination was Iraq, and frankly those people just seem a bit too crazy for me.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian Reykjvik.

A call to action:

MassPIRG needs your help

So many of the United States of America's historical and political battles have stemmed from a small group of people, namely those in power, violating the will of the masses. The American Revolution was fought because the British wanted to make decisions that affected the entire Empire without consulting with their colonies. During the Industrial Revolution, the robber barons took advantage of the public and in particular their work force to fill their own pockets with wealth. Even as late as the 1960's, the interests of a small group of racists became the policy for a large number of this nation's citizens through the Jim Crowe Laws.

Today, similar battles are being fought all over the country as private and special interest money attempts to change the course of our country in the opposite direction in which the people of this nation want. Greedy oil companies like BP/Amoco are trying to make a profit from drilling in public land such as the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. HMOs limit the health care that ordinary citizens can receive while Medicare and Medicaid continuously falls short in meeting a patient's health care needs. And, corporations all over the country are polluting the air we breathe and the water we drink everyday.

Fortunately, there are enough citizens in America who care enough for their own well-being and that of the public that they are taking on the special interest money of huge corporations. Whether they are the public servants that represent us in Washington, D.C. or someone we know locally that cares about the issues, the public's interest is being voiced in our society.

But, one voice is often not enough to make a difference on the state and national level, especially if that one voice is the voice of a student. Here at UMass, there is an outlet for the many such voices to be heard not just on a local and state level, but nationally.

The outlet through which these voices can be heard is MASSPIRG – Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group. Founded in 1972 on this campus, MASSPIRG is a student-funded, student-directed vehicle for social change. The issues that MASSPIRG fights for affect the entire human race: everybody needs to breathe clean air, everyone needs to drink clean water, everyone needs healthcare, and everyone needs food to eat and a roof over their head. However, there are some people and corporations that don't agree with these principles. They don't agree that the public's interests should be put ahead of their own private interest in making money. And, unfortunately, it is sometimes the case that their private, corporate money has a lot more influence on a politician than it should.

The average person cannot hope to have the same financial influence over politicians and policy as special interest money. MASSPIRG helps organize the public so that an average person's vote not only counts in the voting booth to elect a politician, but so that their voice can also count when that politician is making policy after the election. However, organizing on a large scale and having a constant presence in the state and national legislatures cannot be done by volunteers, it requires a full time commitment. This is exactly the reason why MASSPIRG, a non-profit, non-partisan group working for the public's interest needs to be present here on the UMass-Amherst campus and campuses across the nation. We as college students, the young leaders of tomorrow, are able to change society for the better because of MASSPIRG.

Through MASSPIRG, students are able to work with professionals on their campus to organize the public and fight for their interests. Through MASSPIRG, students are able to keep an eye on the politicians they voted into office and make sure that they are public servants and not a puppet for the corporation with the most money. Through MASSPIRG, students don't have to wait until tomorrow to change society.

By voting YES for MASSPIRG, you are not only continuing the great work in keeping our air and water clean, helping the hungry and the homeless, and working for affordable health care for everyone, you are making sure your voice and the voice of the public can still be heard in our government above the voice of special interest money.

Bill Powers

Orchard Hill Senator at Large.

by Kara Stokes

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

The 73rd Annual Academy Awards are scheduled to take place on March 25 (oddly enough, a Sunday). Since the nominations were announced, some clear favorites have emerged from the pack. The following are my thoughts on who or what deserves to take home the golden statuette and who or what actually will do so.

Best Picture
Gladiator, Traffic, Erin Brockovich, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, Chocolat

I have now seen all the films nominated for Best Picture – for the third time in as many years. Let me begin by saying this: the best film of last year, in my opinion, is not nominated in this category. That distinction belongs to Almost Famous. Of the five nominated films, only one would make my Top 5 list of 2000. Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon has that distinction; Traffic would definitely make my Top 10 list, and Chocolat might sneak into the bottom half of that list also. Gladiator and Erin Brockovich are on the same plane in my book. That plane is fairly enjoyable movies (Gladiator less so in my opinion) that want to be more artistic and important than they really are. In other words, they're fluff. These two films are also the only two of the bunch that grossed over $100 million (incidentally, Traffic and Crouching Tiger are approaching that benchmark).

Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon is the best movie of the bunch – hands down. Despite Steven Soderbergh's ambitious take on the drug war (a bit heavy-handed perhaps), the storylines and characters of Traffic are thin at best. Crouching Tiger is epic in every sense of the word that Gladiator is not. The film's majestic cinematography, gripping choreography and wide story arcs make Tiger an absolutely amazing film. Technically, it's simply brilliant.

That said, my pick is Gladiator to win. Twelve nominations combined with the gargantuan box office numbers are too much for Academy voters to overlook. Gladiator will become the poorest film to win since Titanic.

Best Director
Stephen Daldry, Billy Elliot - Ang Lee, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon - Steven Soderbergh, Traffic - Steven Soderbergh, Erin Brockovich - Ridley Scott, Gladiator

The controversy: does Steven Soderbergh being nominated for two different films mean that Academy voters will split their votes between them. My two-fold answer: no more so than if another director had done Brockovich or Traffic. The Academy will vote for whichever director they feel is best – regardless of the other nominees and regardless of a repeat nominee. Part B of the answer is doesn't matter.

Poor Stephen Daldry has no shot here as very few people saw Billy Elliot (myself included) for him to get the statuette. So that leaves Soderbergh (again), Lee and Scott. An interesting movie article a few weeks back made the case that Soderbergh will win not just for Brockovich and Traffic. And while I disagree with the conclusion, the points are defensible. Brockovich's box office success, work gave it a business feel that definitely added something to the movie not in the script – and that is the work of a good director.

The last three years, Picture and Director have gone hand in hand (when Steven Spielberg won Oscar for Saving Private Ryan, but Shakespeare in Love snubbed the winnings in the lottery's history.

Music in Iceland is a huge part of their heritage. Take Bjork for example. If you do not believe anything that I am saying about Iceland, check out one of her videos. She portrays Iceland like no other artist. Well, I guess there really hasn't been a run of music superstars from Iceland. I am waiting for the day to hear on MTV, "Leading the Icelandic explosion, here are the Spin Doctors!" Very few people know that the Spin Doctors are huge in Iceland and have actually integrated themselves into Icelandic society. Iceland has a brand of music similar in many ways to country music here in the states. The singers sing tales of woe about how the huge bats dragged off their loved one, or how global warming may force their country to sink into the ocean.

Overall, this place seems like a romantic spot for my best girl and I to go spend some time together. Sure there are risks involved, but my next choice for a destination was Iraq, and frankly those people just seem a bit too crazy for me.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian Reykjvik.

quicker than you can say Before Night Falls (Did anyone see this anyway?). Rush was spellbinding as the morally depraved Marquis de Sade – a role that he seemed born to play. His character was complex and erratic, yet Rush nailed every nuance. However, the Academy has a well-known bias against previous winners, which leads us to...

Any time an actor is on screen for 45 minutes without talking as Tom Hanks does in Cast Away, it's impressive. If Hanks were to win here, he would become a three-time winner and be forever enshrined among Academy elites.

The winner: Russell Crowe. This prediction is sad, but true. Dreamworks can afford to outspend all the other candidates combined with the exception of Fox (Cast Away's distributor). Given the aforementioned bias toward prior winners, the temperamental, bearded Aussie takes home the night's top male prize.

Best Actress
Joan Allen, The Contender - Juliette Binoche, Chocolat - Ellen Burstyn, Requiem for a Dream - Laura Linney, You Can Count On Me - Julia Roberts, Erin Brockovich

Julia Roberts. Now that we got the obvious winner out of the way, we can move on to some analysis. Perhaps, Julia deserves it. She did sassy, sarcastic and tough-skinned well. She unquestionably carried Brockovich. However, it's a shame the enchanting Juliette Binoche or the mesmerizing Laura Linney could not be recognized here. People think that the category is weak (and with Joan Allen's nomination, I can't disagree), but anyone who saw You Can Count on Me knows Linney deserved the nod. One scene, in the car, no dialogue, no scenery, just her venting internal emotions – that's all I have to say.

Best Supporting Actor
Jeff Bridges, The Contender - Willem Dafoe, Shadow of the Vampire - Benicio Del Toro, Traffic - Albert Finney, Erin Brockovich - Joaquin Phoenix, Gladiator

Albert Finney took home the Screen Actor's Guild award in this category, which in any other year, would make him a virtual shoe-in for the Oscar. However, Benicio Del Toro (nominated here as a supporting cast member) took home that same organization's prize for Best Actor. In its six-year existence, the SAG has never failed to pick the Academy's Best Actor winner – a streak that will end on March 25. That said, it gives Del Toro a decided advantage here.

Del Toro wins and he deserves to. Doing disillusionment is tough. Doing it without much dialogue is tougher. Doing it convincingly in a largely foreign setting is Oscar worthy. One of the most under-appreciated modern day actors will finally make mark thanks to Traffic.

The winner: Russell Crowe. This prediction is sad, but true. Dreamworks can afford to outspend all the other candidates combined with the exception of Fox (Cast Away's distributor). Given the aforementioned bias toward prior winners, the temperamental, bearded Aussie takes home the night's top male prize.

Best Supporting Actress
Judi Dench, Chocolat - Marcia Gay Harden Pollock - Kate Hudson, Almost Famous - Frances McDormand, Almost Famous - Julie Walters, Billy Elliot

Dench is an Academy favorite and already owns a distinction in its halls – shortest amount of screen time for an Oscar winner (Shakespeare in Love). And she was quite good as the feisty, embittered grandmother in Chocolat. However, she may not even be the best supporting actress in her own movie (Lena Olin, not nominated, has that distinction).

I also love Frances McDormand; I think she should have been nominated for Wonder Boys as well. She was great and tremendously endearing as the over-protective mother in the tragically overlooked Almost Famous.

However, Kate Hudson was quite simply stunning. Penny Lane, Hudson's character will go down as one of my favorite roles ever. She wins the Oscar and my heart.

Best Original Screenplay
Cameron Crowe, Almost Famous - Lee Hall, Billy Elliot - Susannah Grant, Erin Brockovich - David Franzoni and John Logan and William Nicholson, Gladiator - Kenneth Lonergan, You Can Count On Me

If Cameron Crowe doesn't win this, I might just break down and cry. When the film was first written, people called the screenplay the best to ever come out of Hollywood. After seeing the film, I await the DVD – complete with director's cut – anxiously. He's my pick to win, even though Lonergan

Turn to OSCAR, page 6

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian - Every Thursday!

COURTESY THE VAGINA MONOLOGUES

Texas native Starla Brenford leads the cast of The Vagina Monologues, playing at the Calvin Theatre next month.

FILM

UMASS – "Divorcing Jack." The Tarantino-esque story of a political journalist who finds himself wanted for murder and tabled up in a web of political intrigue, presented by the Multicultural Film Festival. "Divorcing Jack" will be shown on Thursday, March 15 at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 231.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – "Outrage Into Action." A senior honors project by Nicole Manganelli in collaboration with Nicole Gottwald, using photos and text to illustrate one of the recent grassroots movements that has taken place on campus, Student Union Art Gallery, through March 16.

UMASS – "Christopher Wilmarth: Living Inside" presents a selection of sculptures, drawings, and prints by an artist best known for a sparely sensuous style that marries formal elements with mysterious reverie; "Brenda Zlamany/ Figure Ground: Color Studies of Chuck Close, Evander Holyfield, and John Yau" features this artist's most recent paintings series which marks a further step in her ongoing investigation of color and light as they are translated into psychological content. "Christopher Wilmarth" will be on view from February 3 through March 16 and then April 1 through May 18. "Figure Ground" will be on view from February 3 through March 16.

UMASS – "Other: Breaking Out of the Box." This exhibit combines tests with advertisements from the 1950s and 60s, to reveal a society in which difference is feared. It is an investigation of cultural identity, conformity, and the challenge of celebration diversity. March 27 through April 24, with an opening reception on March 27, 5-7 p.m., and a gallery talk on April 24 at 7 p.m. In the Augusta Savage Gallery.

UMASS – "The Jesus Show." Photographer James Gehrt has traveled the U.S., and collected pictures of religious icons, from the modest to the grand. Central Gallery, March 1 through 25.

UMASS and HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "New England, New York, New Talent 2001." At UM, in the Hampden Gallery, and at Hampshire in the Johnson Library Center. These exhibits will work in cooperation to display new works of art by emerging artists. The show will run from March 4 to March 25.

SMITH COLLEGE – "The Refugees." Two life-sized sculptures by artist Judith Peck depicting refugees carrying a child and all their worldly possessions. Part of the Khan Institute's "Anatomy of Exile" project. Through May 28. For more information, call (413) 585-4292. Third floor, Neilson Library.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Biblical Women." Story quilts by artist Lee Porter, depicting several scenes of women from the Bible. Through March 30. For more information, call (413) 585-2045. Alumnae House Gallery, 33 Elm St.

WILLIAMSTOWN – "Photography EXPOSED." Includes 45 examples of portraiture as part of the Williams College Museum of Art's 75th anniversary celebration. The exhibit will continue until September 3, 2001. The Museum is open Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

NORTHAMPTON – Deborah Casdin's watercolor works will be displayed in the Hart Gallery, located at 102 Main St. She explores a harmonious symphony of color in both abstract painting and in studied landscapes. The display will be ongoing until April 15. A reception with the artist will be held on March 22 from 5 to 7 p.m.

THEATER AND DANCE

UMASS – Student Valley Productions, the makers of Mission: IMPROVable and Casual Sketch, will unveil a new improv comedy group, TOAST!, with a performance of "What Once Was Lost..." in the Student Union Ballroom at UMass at 8 p.m. on March 27.

NORTHAMPTON – "The Vagina Monologues" will play at the Calvin Theatre, April 3, 4, 7 and 8. This production will feature, among others, singer/songwriter Dar Williams. For tickets and showtimes, call the Northampton Box Office at 1-800-THE-TICK.

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "A Surface Soul." A program of dances choreographed by Mollie McClelland and Kim Brandt, March 29-31 at Hampshire College Main Dance Studio at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 general and $3 for students and Seniors. Call 559-5889 for reservations.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Hot 'N' Throbbing." The New play Reading Series will present this work by Paula Vogel about a divorcee who writes soft-core erotica to support her teenaged children while musing on Kraft-Ebing and Henry Miller. It is free, and will be presented on March 29 in the Earle Recital Hall at 8 p.m.

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – Violinist Charles Treger, cellist Matt Haimovitz and pianist Estela Olevsky, all UM faculty, will perform duos and trios, including pieces by Beethoven and Brahms on March 15 at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. Tickets are $10 for students, and proceeds will benefit scholarships for outstanding student string players. The musicians will hold an informal pre-concert talk at 7 p.m.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Noon Hour: Muse Jazz Group." Daniel Klimoski playing reeds, pianist Michele Feldheim, bass player David Elvin and percussionist Jeff Nisenbaum will perform original pieces and jazz standards. March 27, Sweeney Concert Hall at 12:30 p.m. For more information call 585- ARTS.

READINGS/LECTURES/ ACADEMIC EVENTS

UMASS – "Divorcing Jack." This film centers on a political journalist on the eve of Ireland's first election as an independent state, based on a novel of the same name by Colin Bateman. It is a dark comedy and a condemnation of hypocrisy, and is part of the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies' Multicultural Film Festival. 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium 231, on March 15.

COURTESY SANDY SHERWIN

Contemporary folk heroine Dar Williams will also be performing in The Vagina Monologues.

UNIVERSITY LIQUORS
liquor • beer • wine • lottery • phonecards

SPIRIT
Jim Beam 1.75 $19.99
Southern Comfort 1.75 $19.99
Smirnoff 1.75 $19.99
Rubinoff 1.75 $9.99
Tequila Reserva 1800 $19.99
Gilber Burbon/Scotch $8.99

BEER
Pabst 24 bottle $9.99 + dep.
Saranak 12 pack $9.99 + dep.
Magic Hat 9 pack $8.99 + dep.

WINE
Sutter Home Chardonay 750 $4.99
Concha y Toro 1.5 $8.99
Bolle 1.5 $10.99

HAVE A SAFE SPRING BREAK!

Sponsored by the Amherst Health Department
The only thing smokin' in Amherst is the atmosphere!
* See what you eat!
* See what you drink!
* See the entertainment!
You Are Here UMASS — See You There — DOWNTOWN AMHERST
North Pleasant
Experience Downtown Amherst and its Smoke-Free Establishments

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass., (413) 665-8733
Will proudly present
Amateur Night
Monday March 26th.
Many Prizes Will Be Awarded
Ladies must apply in person for Amateur Night before March 24th.
Entertainment starting at 1pm.
Amateurs starting at 6pm.

■ oscar

continued from page 5

created a warm-hearted film unlike just about any other movie.

Best Adapted Screenplay
Robert Nelson Jacobs, Chocolat - Wang Hui Ling and James Schamus and Tsai Kuo Jung, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon - Ethan Coen & Joel Coen, O Brother, Where Art Thou? - Stephen Gaghan, Traffic -Steve Kloves, Wonder Boys

Perhaps ironically, these films, collectively, are better than those nominated for Best Picture. I loved Wonder Boys – Top 5 material – but it won't win. Chocolat has the didactic, fairy-tale aspect working in its favor and rarely does Miramax go for naught on Oscar night, especially in non-major categories like screenwriting or supporting actors. The Coen brothers have achieved Oscar fame before. Traffic's screenplay was its weakest point, in my opinion.

I'll go with Chocolat, in hopes that the Miramax marketing machine can churn out another gem. I think Crouching Tiger probably deserves this category, but I don't see it triumphing.

15 Minutes of mashed beats

VARIOUS ARTISTS
15 Minutes – Music from the Motion Picture
Milan Records

The idea for Robert DeNiro's newest movie, 15 Minutes, is just abominable. Eastern European killers film their ruthless murdering and sell it to a newscaster who plays the tapes for a horrified American audience.

Mike Morgan's mean-world syndrome gets a serious boost with this film. Communication professors everywhere must be salivating; here's proof positive that Hollywood is willing to sell out the news media and produce a violent film that skewers both of them.

This was the type of film that was supposed to have impact, and maybe the movie's producers were so concerned about that "impact" that they looked the other way when it came to assembling the film's soundtrack. Excusing an acceptable remix of Moby's "Porcelain" by Rob D., this album lacks any of the real substance that might make it great.

Prodigy's funky techno beat on "3 Kilos" is interesting enough, but the sheer repetitive nature of the song truly undercuts itself. The ridiculously titled "La Guitaristic House Organisation" by Rinocerose is has an interesting sudden aural sensation behind it with the basic synthesizer in the front, like all techno, but the band gets too creative midway through the song, attempting to fuse to many different elements together. Like crayons all mushed together, the song comes off as dull and brown, abandoning its early appealing nature.

Gary Richards and John Herzfeld, the album's producers, unfortunately decided that it'd be a good idea to load the album up with techno songs with singers. Those elements together are hellish – maybe Portishead did a good job of it, maybe Moby sampled the Lomax families collections appropriately, but it's very hard to sound different than Haddaway's "What is Love", a song forever immortalized on the Night at the Roxbury soundtrack. "Gun" by Gus Gus, "Carmen Quesy" by Maxim and, ugh, "Out Run" by David Holmes capture none of the magic of well-done vocalized synth; instead, they simply sound overdone and awful.

Perhaps the only real soundtrack jewel is God Lives Underwater's cover of David Bowie's "Fame" which certainly isn't better than the original, but it certainly has the feel of the soundtrack.

For most, soundtracks are a collection of band's b-sides; they're a great place to find good, unheard music. 15 Minutes, is an acceptable enough collection of varying technotica, but nothing great enough to make it a keeper. (Sam Wilkinson)

JOHN MAYER
Inside Wants Out
Independent Release

Think Dave Matthews minus the band, add more skillful, blues-influenced guitar playing, down-to-earth lyrics, and listenable songs. That's John Mayer. This young up-and-comer is as easy to like, as he is hard to find.

His first release, independently produced, showcases all aspects of his distinctive sound. Inside Wants Out is a charming collection of tunes that Mayer put together with a bunch of friends in an attempt to break into the music scene. Starting off with "Back To You", Mayer showcases his sugary sweet voice on top of peppy electric guitar riffs and echoed background vocals. "No Such Thing" is performed acoustic, with lyrics warning against becoming those who "Read all the books/but can't find the answers." He advocates the doubt of the real world and the importance of experience in an understandable, realistic fashion.

It is nearly impossible not to like the next tune, "My Stupid Mouth". Along with catchy acoustic chords, it describes the situation we've all been in: regretting what we've said the moment it leaves our mouth. It touches the social reject in all of us, with lines like "just want to be liked/just want to be funny" and "I'm never speaking up again.....starting now."

"Neon" is a gritty, bluesy tune that shows John's skill on guitar. The jumpy notes simply sound difficult to play. An excellent chorus and head-nodding rhythm make this song a quick favorite. The first of two ballads, "Victoria," follows. A sweet song about a sweet girl, the slightly sad number is very well done.

significant others

Encompassing another theme that's easy to relate to, "Love Soon" complains about the girl that plays with your head. Its non-rhyming lyrics and quick, punchy chorus will make you happy, while you silently bitch out the person that made you understand what he says. "Comfortable" is a beautiful slow song with an impressive classical string section arranged by Mayer. An instrumental, electric version of "Neon" finishes the production with searing guitar work.

John Mayer seems to have everything it takes, and only time will tell if his skills will carry him to notoriety. Check out www.johnmayer.com to get a copy of Inside Wants Out, and keep an eye out for a full-length album this spring. (Justin Cormier)

THE TRACTORS
Fast Girl
Audium Records

"Hey baby", the Tractors' lead singer Steve Ripley croons like the original Big Bopper. Ripley's newest album Fast Girl, a record on which he's joined by 28 other musicians, is a country tour-de-force.

Some argue that country's nothing but the same lyrics on the same three chords, over and over, and that's unfortunate as pop-country radio only tends to play the songs by bands that sing the same lyrics while playing the same three chords. But country music is deeper than that – there's a considerable soul buried within the music, especially the stuff that doesn't attempt to play to crossover popularity.

The Tractors' Texas swing, similar to music that Lyle Lovett and Asleep at the Wheel made so popular, is a piano and horns country music, a country music that most people have never heard. Taking the best of swing music and adding a sliding, picking country guitar, the smooth background sounds of the dubro with a lively, upbeat vocal track, the Tractors play a fusion country that absolutely shines.

"Babalou", Fast Girl's first song, has a peppy sound, entertainingly non-sensical lyrics, and Ripley's own gravelly voice. Telling the story of Christopher Columbus, Joshua, and Lucy, Ripley tells of everyone's affinity for Babalou, an unstated, undefined thing that is free-flowing and fun, like the music.

"Nine Eleven" starts like the Wonders' " That Thing You Do" with Ripley's guitar playing second fiddle to a driving drum beat – it sounds like the country that we're used to, but something's different.

It's the energy of the music: it comes out in the playing and in the singing. It doesn't sound like it is produced, it sounds like it is generous.

Even the slower songs, the ones that really make non-country fans cringe at the twang, they sound genuine and sincere. "It's a Beautiful Thing" and "Ready to Cry" both have the necessary fiddle that always hints at slow country, but one can imagine these songs played at dances in an attempt to slow things down.

The Tractors are genuine talents, the hope for country music that gets more and more stale by the day. (Sam Wilkinson)

COURTESY MORTEN LARSON

Prodigy, responsible for one of the more tolerable (relatively speaking) tracks on the 15 Minutes soundtrack.

New primetime crop includes "X-Files" spin-off, Andy Dick

Surprisingly, there are actually some good shows on television. More surprisingly, there are some good shows being premiered during this the spring sweeps week. Within the last three weeks numerous shows have popped up from both network television and cable TV. Almost all of them are comedies, but not necessarily sitcoms, and they all seem to be focused on the younger audience. But are they any good?

Tube Notes with Nick Pizzolato

"The Fighting Fitzgeralds"
NBC

"The Fighting Fitzgeralds" sounds dumb; what does it have going for it? It's the product of Edward Burns, the writer/director of breakthrough indy films She's The One and The Brothers McMullen, and the star of Saving Private Ryan and the recently released 15 Minutes. His two films have been based in an Irish Catholic family values point of view and have been films that exemplify life seen as one man. The star of the show is Brian Dennehey, veteran actor of stage, screen and television as the father of the Fitzgerald Clan. If there were an Irish character in Grumpy Old Men, Dennehey's character would be it. He talks about the good old days when he would support the family. The character is not very original, but without question, Dennehey, just being himself, breaths life into the cliche. The supporting cast is composed of three brothers, who, much like the brothers from McMullen, are three different apples in their father's eyes. There's the good one who did a dumb thing, the middle family man who has made a home with his wife and daughter in his father's house, and finally, there is the youngest one, who cheated at bartender's school, and works at the local pub. The thing that makes this a decent show is the writing – it may not be the next "Frasier," but it's another family comedy.

"The Lone Gunmen"
FOX

Chris Carter has started another show in hope that it will match the mediocre success of "Millennium" and someday match the brilliant success of "The X-Files." "The Lone Gunmen" is based on the bizarre group of conspiracy buffs by the same name who appear as Mulder's confidants and Scully's not-so-secret crush. Although their role in the sci-fi drama is used for comic relief, their show is a comedy with drama relief. They fight for the truth and to inform the American people. The characters are already well known from the show, and even though it doesn't deal every week with Mulder asking a rhetorical question, it's funny and well-written. It may not be the smash unexplainable hit that is "The X-Files," but it will be on longer than the "Geena Davis Show."

"The Andy Dick Show"
MTV

Comedian, alcoholic and drug addict extraordinaire Andy Dick has his own show on MTV. The self-tures skits that are written and directed by Andy himself. Most of the skits mock the MTV programming and generation by taking by taking shots at "Undressed", "Making the Video", "Cribs", and "The Tom Green Show". It may seem juvenile and to be full of toilet humor, but at moments they shine. His impersonation of Tom Green is hysterical, as he completely imitates the stupid brand of humor that Tom produces. The show has also screened a Moby and Andy Dick collaboration, in which Moby's talents are totally ripped apart by the musically inept Dick. Like other MTV shows, it'll be on for a while, until they can get Dave Chappelle to start a show.

Nick Pizzolato is a Collegian columnist.

General Electric
Monster.com
Red Herring
RED HERRING monster.com

Q: What do these companies have in common?
A: Former Collegian Advertisment Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.
APPLICANTION DEADLINE IS MARCH 30TH

Experience Nursing in Honduras May 23-June 19, 2001
Integrating clinical experience with an enhanced sense of cultural awareness, UConn's Community Health in Honduras Program is open to nursing students, practicing nurses and health care professionals, seeking to expand their knowledge of health care practices in an international setting. This 4-week program will be under the guidance of UConn faculty. Students earn 4 academic credits. RNs can earn 6 CEUs.
Info Session
March 26
[illegible] at the Storrs campus
Information: 860-486-5985, P. at Harkins
Online: continuingstudies.uconn.edu
Brochure: 800-622-9908
University of Connecticut
College of Continuing Studies

COURTESY SONY RECORDS (TOP) AND COURTESY ATLANTIC RECORDS (BOTTOM)

Music coming to Noho

Seven Nations (top) will be performing at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton on March 19, and Ween will take the stage March 26.

Taking b-ball facts too far

Cutting down the nets with David Rose

Well, today is the day all college basketball gurus, fans and experts have been waiting for, the first full day of action at the 2001 NCAA Tournament. While granted, Northwestern State and Winthrop officially kicked off the tourney on Tuesday night, most of America waits for Thursday to start off its fix of the road to Indianapolis. And, for most of those people who are watching all the action on TV, the time isn't just for watching basketball, it is to make yourself look really good in your office pool. Not only do you want to win the pool, you want to pound your competition into submission as well.

Now, there are some who walk into the pool thinking they know everything they need to know about all the teams and the tournament itself.

Those are the people most likely to lose.

Then there are those who walk into these pools blindly, knowing nothing at all about college basketball or not having watched a lot of college basketball all season long.

Those end up being the people winning all the money in the pot at the end.

But for those who do know about college basketball and those who do not, there is one thing they can both agree about, there is never enough "smack you upside yo head for knowing that much about college basketball" stats to go around.

This is where I will step in. Not to stop it, but just to add to all those stats and to help guide people on what trends to follow and which ones to stay away from when picking your NCAA Tournament brackets.

Number one seeds in the NCAA's – Since 1991, a #1 seed has won the NCAA Tournament eight times. So, if you are looking for a team to win it all, you can't go wrong with a number one seed. However, don't go overboard. Since the field has gone to 64, there have been more occurrences where two number eight seeds made the Final Four in the same year than all four number one seeds. Last year, Wisconsin and North Carolina made this score read two #8 seeds 1 and four #1 seeds 0. The point to all of this? All four number one seeds have never survived to get to the Final Four in the same year.

16 seeds – Just a thought- other than the play-in game between teams 16a and 16b – Northwestern State and Winthrop this past season - don't pick them. In fact 16th seeds are considered heroes at their College or University if they lose by less than 50 points. So for Northwestern State, Monmouth, UNC Greensboro and Alahama State, losing 100-55 isn't so bad.

Defending Champions in the Tournament – Michigan State goes into the tourney as number one in the South Region and the defending champions. However, since 1974, only the Duke team of 1992 has repeated as National Champions, and there have only been six occasions during that time span when the defending champion has gotten back to the title game the year after claiming their "One Shining Moment." But hey, Spartans head coach Tom Izzo can look on the bright side, at least his team stopped the Harlem Globetrotters winning streak this season.

Kentucky and Duke as number one and number two seeds – If there is one lock in this tournament, it is that the smart betting person will put the Wildcats and Blue Devils in the East Regional Finals. The last two times that these two teams were number one and number two seeds in a region, they met each other in the regional finals. In the 1992 East Regional, they played quite possibly the greatest college basketball game ever, as Christian Laettner's foul line jumper stunned the 'Cats 104-103. That stayed with Kentucky until 1998 in the South Regional Finals when they got their own measure of revenge. Down 71-52 with nine minutes left, KU went on a 37-16 run to end the game and win 89-87. Oddly enough, in both of these occurrences, the team that won the game also went on to win the National Championship as well.

If these two were to meet in the East Regional Finals this year, they would play in Philadelphia, oddly enough the same place where the game in 1992 was played. Who will be the hero this time, Shane Battier? Tayshaun Prince? Jason Williams? Does Laettner have another year of eligibility left?

NO New York, New York – Teams that reside in New York might as well go home. The last team from The Empire State to win the NCAA Tourney was CCNY in 1951 and that was when the NIT was bigger than the NCAA's. So for Iona, Hofstra, Monmouth and Syracuse – enjoy the few days that you will be involved in the tournament because if the trend stays the same, you will not be cutting down any nets this year.

But please, do not cry, at least not the Orangemen Mascot, all that pulp is hard to clean up.

Coaches and Vowels? – What does this have to do with the tourney? Well, more than the normal person thinks. In fact, when Izzo and the Spartans won last year, he became just the third coach with a vowel as the first letter of his last name to lead his team to the title, joining only Arizona's Lute Olsen and Hank Iba for Oklahoma State in 1945 and 1946. So a suggestion for those coaches like Iowa State Coach Larry Eustachy, Larry Peustachy might sound bad at other points during the year, but not tourney time.

Male Pattern Baldness? – In this day of age of looking good for the TV cameras, no bald coach not named Tark has ever led his team to a national championship. So a word to the wise for coaches like St. Joseph's Phil Martelli – block the glare on the top of your head and you have a better chance to be on top of college basketball at the end.

David Rose is a Collegian columnist.

Think you're not going to get pregnant just because you're using birth control?

Neither did 1 out of every 10 college-age women.*

Depo-Provera* is 99.7% effective.

Depo-Provera is not only one of the most effective forms of birth control available, it's also one of the most convenient because you only have to think about it 4 times a year. And because Depo-Provera is an injectable, there's nothing to store or carry around—only you and your health care professional have to know.

Make sure you're always as protected as possible against pregnancy. To find out more about Depo-Provera and when you can start using it, talk to your health care professional.

See what Depo-Provera is all about. Go to: www.depo-provera.com

Some women using Depo-Provera do experience side effects. The most common are irregular menstrual bleeding or spotting. Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months and some may experience a slight gain in weight. You should not use Depo-Provera if you think you might be pregnant, if you have had unexplained periods, or if you have breast cancer, blood clots, liver disease, or a history of stroke. Use may be associated with a possible decrease in bone density. Depo-Provera doesn't protect against HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

Talk to your health care professional to see if Depo-Provera is right for you.

Depo-Provera® Contraceptive Injection
medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

Birth control you think about just 4 times a year.

*Worldwide, 53 of unintended pregnancy in the United States. Fam Plann Perspect 1998;30:24-29.

See the next page for important product information.

Pharmacia & Upjohn, a division of Pharmacia

UX00998103 3/01

Mike and Charles to make return?

According to Webster's Dictionary, the definition of a rumor is "unconfirmed information passed about orally." You know what a rumor is. It's like when you hear that Van Halen is planning a reunion tour, or that Eminem died in a car crash, or that your best friend nailed your sister in the back of a Chevy after the prom; all just rumors. You don't know if they're accurate or not, but you can't help thinking about them. You ponder each and every consequence that could possibly arise if by some stroke of the imagination they are actually true. Sports Illustrated is spreading rumors. They're claiming that God may return to the world he so dominantly dictated years ago, and reportedly he's bringing a friend.

Michael Jordan, that Hanes underwear guy who operates the Washington Wizards, apparently has been displaying his basketball talent at the team's practices for weeks now. It turns out he's not half bad. Reportedly Jordan brings some loudmouth bald guy who makes everyone call him "Sir Charles," and likes to throw elbows and rebound shots like it's his business. Whoever the hell these two jokesters are, are causing quite a stir amongst basketball fans everywhere.

All kidding aside, Sports Illustrated columnist Rick Reilly reported in his widely read editorial, "The Life of Reilly," that "according to a source very close to Jordan, he is 90% committed to making a comeback next season with the Washington Wizards." For those of you who have not yet heard this, I'll give you a second to recover from your Dick Cheney level heart attack and catch your breath.

The ramifications of the greatest athlete ever to walk the earth making a return to professional sports would be indescribable. In a time when the NBA desperately needs something to boost it from the awful dregs of the sporting sewer that it has dwelled in since the last time Jordan retired forever, this wouldn't just be an answer, it would be a godsend. The rumor that a Jordan comeback would coincide with a Charles Barkley comeback is only a minor shock when compared to the buzz that they could be playing on the same team.

We all know the kind of skills that Jordan and Barkley have. One stat is all I will give you to back that up; combined, the two have scored 53,034 points. Is there any doubt in anyone's mind that regardless of the time or place of their return, they would lead the Wizards to an NBA title?

Intent to prove anything would not be a reason for either man to come back (though some say that Barkley still refuses to die without a title ring around his finger). It's obvious that Barkley or Jordan do not need money. It is rumored that both men would be playing for the NBA minimum of $1 million to keep the salary cap low on the team. When you're shelling out $2 million for Michael Jordan and Charles Barkley, that's not considered keeping the salary cap low, that's considered cheating.

Maybe they've decided to make a comeback because they're sick of getting obnoxious phone calls that NBA commissioner David Stern makes to Michael Jordan on a weekly basis. Can you imagine what those are like?

Stern: "Hey Mike, it's Dave. Listen, we really need you to come back. Tracy McGrady threw a ball at Bobby Jackson's face last night and then tried to punch a fan that threw soda at him."

Jordan: "Dave, I told you last week when you called about Allen Iverson's rap album; if I've said this once, I've said it a thousand times, I'm never coming back to the NBA."

Stern would kill for someone or something to bring integrity and wholesomeness back to the NBA. If you don't believe me, go to www.nba.com, and click on "features." You'll find Indiana Pacers Croatian center Zan Tabak's choices on what films should win Oscars at next week's Academy Awards. This shameless ploy is a disgusting example of what passes for in-depth player profiles in the NBA. ("They showed the whole drug problem, from the people using all the way to the people at the top. It's very realistic, and it's very depressing because it shows that you can stop one guy, but it starts all over with someone else." – Zan Tabak, film connoisseur.)

So, if money and desire to prove something aren't convincing these men to come back, could it actually be that there are two people alive that play basketball for the love of the game? It's quite possible. Jordan and Barkley simply cannot stay away.

It's apparent that the likelihood that the two, who are extremely close friends, could play on the same team would just encourage them even more to make a return. Like a bunch of kids playing a pick-up game, when the two best players in town show up ready to jam, the entire NBA would simply kneel in awe of the ability to be a part of the "Jordan and Barkley Show" the two would undoubtedly display. Their return would be a big step in making the NBA less of the disgusting joke that it is right now.

My poster-less wall needs Michael Jordan to return. The Washington Wizards need Michael Jordan to return. The NBA needs Michael Jordan to return. All professional sports need Michael Jordan to return. The entire world needs Michael Jordan to return. Please let the rumors be true! Don't let us down Mike.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

UMass sets to face Owls

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team marched circles against Army's Cadets on Saturday night, winning the dual meet 209.650-204.100.

Sophomore Darren Morace came back from a two-week rest to lead the Minutemen with the best score in the all-around. Morace came back into the swing of things with a vengeance, upgrading the majority of his routine. The second year gymnast earned a score of 51.000 with second place finishes on three events.

"He had a real nice routine on the vault," said head coach Roy Johnson. "He placed the highest finish for the team."

During the matchup, the Maroon and White walked away with five out of six first place finishes. Veteran member Brian McNulty had a great night for his routine on the floor exercise with a score of 9.00, tying with senior Eric Bacon who also turned in a quality performance.

"It's nice to see two guys scoring in the nines," said Johnson.

Senior Ben Kandel finished first on the rings, followed by Ben Jacobs who took first place honors on the parallel bars.

Senior Andy Leis had a rough night, struggling through several rotations. With trouble on the high bar and parallel bar, Leis was not at his usual best. Leis is expected to be back on track for the meet against Temple this weekend.

"We had real small errors that cost us," said Johnson.

* * *

The Minutemen will head down to Philadelphia on Saturday to meet up for the second time this season with rival Temple. The Owls, who were easily defeated just two weeks ago, will be looking for the win over UMass as both teams head to Virginia for the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championship the next weekend.

The Minutemen have had some great closing meets to the season, winning their last four outings, including one over Temple in which UMass was able to trounce the Owls 210.550-205.700.

"It's been a good way to gear up," said Johnson.

Temple is coming off a loss on March 6 to the University of Minnesota. The defeat was costly for the Owls, who finished the toughest three-meet stretch of the season at 1-3. Temple will host the Minutemen for its final home meet of the season.

With such strong gymnasts on the prowl, the Minutemen are ready to fight out the final meet, not only through their physical strength, but through their mental strength as well.

"I'm sure we'll have a good meet," said Johnson. "We're more mentally focused now."

Morace is primed to have one of the best finishes on Saturday down in Philly, having two weeks rest and a great meet last Saturday against Army. The frosh has been known to put on a great performance on the floor exercise and pommel horse and should be strong for the Minutemen.

"There's no doubt that we'll be in great shape," said Johnson.

Saturday's season finale is scheduled to start at 7 p.m.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Matt Plumser and the rest of the men's gymnastics team will face rival Temple for the second time this season on Saturday.

Trading prevalent at NHL deadline

Inside the Rink with Matt Brady

The 2000-01 National Hockey League season is getting to the stretch run, and despite the passing of the trade deadline earlier this week, the transaction wire was relatively quiet in the past few days.

The Blues obviously made the biggest move, picking up a strong two-way forward in Keith Tkachuk. The move was beneficial for both St. Louis and Phoenix however, as the Blues buffed up their front lines for the stretch run and the Coyotes grabbed some strong young talent.

St. Louis was forced to give up Michal Handzus, Ladislav Nagy, Jeff Taffe and a first round pick in the 2001 draft. Handzus, a celebrated member of last years "Czeching" line the Blues has been sidelined since undergoing abdominal surgery on Jan. 12, but is widely regarded as one of the top young two-way centers in hockey.

The Blues failed to get their reported "prize" in oft-injured forward Eric Lindros. Reports earlier this week had Lindros going to St. Louis in exchange for soon-to-be free agent Pierre Turgeon. Fortunately, the Bluenotes got wise and pulled back on that offer. Lindros is far too injury prone to consider for the long term and Turgeon is too much of a team leader and point producer to ship off just before the stretch run.

In other minor deals just before the buzzer, the Capitals acquired veteran center Trevor Linden and former Flyer Damian Zuhrus from the Habs for young forwards Ian Bulis and Richard Zednik. Yet again, this is an example of a team selling its young talent for what likely will be a single run at the Stanley Cup.

This move made little to no sense for the Caps. Let's face it, despite being the third seed in the Eastern Conference right now, they simply do not have the talent to make a bona fide run at Lord Stanley's Cup unless Olaf Kolzig becomes a brick wall – of course, that's always a possibility.

But realistically, this bunch would have been able to make the same run with Bulis and Zednik. Both are young, energetic forwards who have shown great finesse and some strong offensive moves in their limited NHL action. While Linden and Zuhrus provide veteran leadership up front and a strong scoring presence, they are not worth the additional payroll the Capitals will have to dish out.

Buffalo made two of the best moves on the final day of trading, picking up Steve Heinze and Donald Audette for a prospect and two draft picks. Heinze gives the Sabres some grittiness up front while Audette gives a little more scoring flair. The one question that remains is whether Audette, who left Buffalo on bad terms, will be able to overcome the adverse environment. If he does, look out for the Sabres come playoff time.

As for New Jersey, it was relatively quiet on the trading blocks, but it did pick up Sean O'Donnell to fill in as a strong sixth defenseman. Also, it added John Vanbiesbrouck in a move designed to get Martin Brodeur a little rest before the postseason.

The Western Conference teams were quiet come deadline time, but the many powers did their dealing in the weeks before, with San Jose putting their roster to get an injured Teemu Selanne and Colorado beefing up their already strong defensive core by snatching Rob Blake from L.A. The Sharks may have traded their way out of contention, but the Avalanche are now the prime favorites to bring home the Cup.

Although I'm sure the Devils will have something to say about that come the first week of June. As any skater on the team would tell you, they're the champs until you beat them.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist

STEMTEC SCHOLARSHIPS for Future Teachers

Want to find out about careers in K-12 teaching? Want a scholarship to help with your educational expences while you learn? Apply for a NSF STEMTEC Teaching Scholar Award!

To get an application, or if you have questions, give us a call at 545-0734, stop by 217 Hasbrouck Lab, email at st-ss@k12s.phast.umass.edu or check out the STEMTEC website for more information and/or to download an application: http://k12s.phast.umass.edu/~stemtec

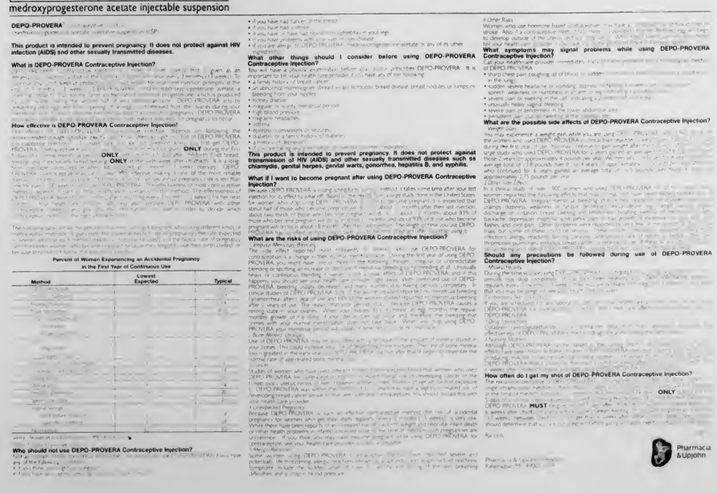
(Part-time and post-baccalaureate students are eligible)

Depo-Provera® Contraceptive Injection
medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

Birth control you think about just 4 times a year



■ recruits

continued from page 14

"It's kind of exciting," she said. "Everything worked out and I don't have to stress out about it.

"Hopefully, I can help bring them a championship," Santos added. "But I just want to go and do the best that I can, and from that, I'm hoping that the outcome is good."

A nugget from the Golden State

The transfer of Mink and Wildenhaus, combined with the fact that the majority of the returning midfielders are seniors, meant that Rudy needed to seek out a midfielder immediately.

"The fact is that next year, we're losing six seniors, four of which are midfielders," Rudy said. "We don't want to replace all of them in one year."

Enter Turman into the picture to try to fill a midfield role. A three-time All-Bay Valley League pick, she is the captain of this year's team at Carondelet High – the same school that was the 1999 NSCAA national champions.

The Pleasant Hill, CA product also has plenty of experience with the Olympic Development Program, as she was a four-year member of the California Youth Soccer Association-North team.

"Carly's another one of the great Northern California players," Rudy said. "She comes from the same club program as Alexi Rudd and is coached by John Tomei, who is known in Northern California as a quality coach and a good teacher of players – not just the organizer of a team.

"She's a very active player who can hold the ball under pressure well. She tends to bury in deeper than most in the midfield, but she holds the center of the field well, which is sort of what we're looking for."

Turman chose UMass over the University of the Pacific and St. Mary's College.

"I really had a great time when I went on my official visit," she said. "Next year, hopefully I can work hard and become a starter. Down the road, I want to be a good player for UMass and help the team out.

"I don't know where Coach wants me to play, but the last three years I've played center half, and I've also played outside half," Turman added. "For my state team I was a stopper and sweeper, so I've played basically everywhere."

Former Northern California product Erica Iverson was an All-American during her playing days at UMass, while current Minutewoman Rudd earned first-team All-Atlantic 10 honors as a freshman.

Needless to say, the talent pool in that region has provided success for UMass in the past, and Rudy hopes that trend will continue in the future with Turman.

"The advantage for the California kids is that they play against such good competition," he said. "The high school leagues there are better than most of the country. And the club ball, I think, is the best in the country."

A treasure from the desert

One of the new areas where Rudy has ventured into recruiting in recent years is the southwestern United States, specifically Arizona. That search produced Brianna Weymouth, a defender/midfielder from Phoenix.

"It just goes to show that there are players everywhere, even in the old non-producing states," Rudy said. "You've got players playing Division I from places like Idaho, and a few years back Arizona was nowhere on the map. But we're already looking at three or four kids for next year."

A two-time All-State selection and four-time All-Region pick, Weymouth should bring a sense of toughness to either the back or the midfield. Weymouth was also a three-year member of the Arizona State ODP team and was team captain every year.

"I view her as a central midfielder or a central defender who has a lot of bite to her game," Rudy said. "What I like about her is that she's a winner, a leader and has been a team captain on every team – both high school and ODP – in the past three or four years.

"She's willing to do the extra work necessary to improve, and she's not satisfied with the status quo of her situation," he added.

Of course, the fact that the incoming freshman was coached by former international standout Peter Baralic seems to have only helped Weymouth's quest for excellence.

"He's a legend back in Yugoslavia, a former National Team captain who played in the old North American Soccer League with Pele," Rudy said. "He's a taskmaster, a master coach who is very demanding.

"She also has something that you don't see too much of in a very, very good free kick from 30 yards and in," he added. "It's the type of free kick that is struck with power, swerve and topspin."

Faster than a speeding bullet

With Green and Clocca gone next season, someone was needed to assist the returning group of UMass forwards. That was where Wideberg entered the picture, a talented striker who impressed her future coach right from the start.

"I first saw her in Texas at the Houston Shootout last June," Rudy said. "Her Jersey state team knocked it around ad nauseum, but when they got the other team onto their half of the field, they hit it over the top to No. 7, who looked as if she'd been shot out of a cannon. She'd race in, go one-on-one with the keeper and make the deposit.

"Later on, I found out that her high school team, Randolph, was coming to my advanced team camp. That was my second chance to watch her diligently."

Although Rudy was interested in Wideberg back in Houston, the chance to see her again only assured him of her commitment to the game of soccer.

"At that camp, I discovered that not only could she play, but that she had a high priority on winning and a high threshold for training pain," Rudy said. "She always wanted to do more, and that's what I liked. She wants to do more than what the coach sets up for her, and all of the great ones have had that.

"With Erica, she's more than just a speed merchant. I guess that the best way to describe her is a combination of Kara Clocca's speed and Kara Green's skill, with a lethal right foot."

Wideberg, a native of Randolph, NJ, picked UMass over Fairfield University and Villanova University.

"What was really the deciding factor was when I went to stay with the team and got to know them," she said.

The soon-to-be freshman is also focused on making the most out of her collegiate experience, both in the athletic and academic spheres.

"I just want to play the best soccer that I can play for the next four years and do well in school at the same time," she said. "I know that it's going to be tough dealing with a new situation and balancing those things. That's the first goal that I'm going to try to tackle. The second is to play competitive soccer."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Women's soccer head coach Jim Rudy will feature four new faces on his squad when the team takes to the field this fall.

COLLEGIAN SPRING BREAK PHOTO CONTEST

Attention UMass Students!!The Collegian is holding a photo contest!!

Capture your Spring Break and WIN!!

Submission Form:

name: _____
phone #: _____
e-mail: _____
type of photo (circle one): black & white color
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____
_____

Requirements:

- Submissions due by MARCH 30th
- Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
- Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
- Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form

Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

Go for the goal with Collegian Sports!

RETIREMENT INSURANCE MUTUAL FUNDS TRUST SERVICES TUITION FINANCING

Tax-deferred solutions from TIAA-CREF can help you reach your retirement goals faster.

Call us for a free tax-savings calculator

When you're investing for retirement, the adage "never put off until tomorrow what you can do today" doesn't apply to taxes.

That's because investments that aren't eroded by taxes can add up to significantly more money for you—money you can use to supplement your pension and Social Security.

Let our consultants show you all the advantages of tax deferral, or call us for a free tax-savings calculator.

Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs), IRAs and other tax-saving solutions—along with TIAA-CREF's low expenses and solid history of performance—can help you invest tax smart today so that you can reach your retirement goals faster in the years to come.

*Under current federal tax law, withdrawals prior to age 59½ may be subject to restrictions, and to a 10% additional tax.

TAX DEFERRAL MAKES A DIFFERENCE

$100 per month for 30 years

In this hypothetical example, setting aside $100 a month in a tax-deferred investment with an 8% return in a 28% tax bracket shows better growth after 30 years than the same net amount put into a savings account. Total returns and principal value of investments will fluctuate, and yield may vary. The chart above is presented for illustrative purposes only and does not reflect actual performance, or predict future results, of any TIAA-CREF account or reflect expenses.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

1.800.842.2776
www.tiaa-cref.org

For more complete information on our securities products, call 1.800.842.2733, ext. 5509, for prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest. • TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distribute securities products. • Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association (TIAA), New York, NY and TIAA-CREF Life Insurance Co., New York, NY issue insurance and annuities. • TIAA-CREF Trust Company, FSB provides trust services. • Investment products are not FDIC-insured, may lose value and are not bank guaranteed. © 2001 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association–College Retirement Equities Fund, New York, NY 01/04

T.G.I.M-F

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2001

Imagine looking forward to the week as much as you look forward to the weekend. Imagine spending each minute with unlimited opportunity and continuous options. At Ernst & Young we provide access to the most sophisticated and effective tools in the industry. See you Monday.

ey.com/us/careers

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

©2001 Ernst & Young LLP

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting June 1st. 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Apartment Available to take over June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-9462

Available Immediately 1 Br. Apt. - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts.com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

95 Volvo 850 Turbo B1K, Auto, leather, 6 disc Alpine changer. $14,500 or B/O. 413-527-2871

1995 Jeep Cherokee 118k, many new parts totalling over $1500. Priced for quick sale $6900 ask for Geoff 549-9232

1993 Saturn SL2. Clean, dependable, well maintained. $2700. 549-8000

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Join Our Team & Make a Difference in a Child's Life
5 great children summer camps in NY, ME, PA, and WV seek General Counselors & Group Leaders, plus Activity Specialists who can teach/coach: tennis, swimming, waterskiing, sailing, caving, mountain biking, canoeing, windsurfing, woodworking, theatre, arts, photography, video, website design, fitness, golf, gymnastics, dance, volleyball, basketball, roller-hockey, lacrosse, baseball, and soccer. Nurses and kitchen and operation staff also needed. June 16-August 16. Benefits include training, room and board, laundry, and travel stipend. Apply on-line at www.horizoncamps.com or call 1(800) 544-5448

EMPLOYMENT

CAMPUS SUMMER JOB Full-time opportunity, Visitors Center, June-August. Competitive hourly rate. Call 5-3480 for information.

Wanted 24 UMass Underclassmen to take part in 45 minute survey. Also coordinator position. For details call 1-800-573-3309

Looking for a job in Amherst this summer? Full and part time jobs are available with Summer Conference Housing! Come and get an application and job description at the Conference Services Office, Room 918 Campus Center.

French Speaking Candidate needed for part-time work. Must be available mornings. Contact Diane at 549-1169 or e-mail diane@remi.com

EMPLOYMENT

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Research Interviewers Evening and weekend shifts are available 20hrs/wk minimum. PVTA accessible. Excellent reading and speaking skills required. Some computer experience helpful. $7.50 to start with regular merit raises. For more information contact: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 paul_bebo@abtassoc.com Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

Day Care Center, Rt 63, Leverett, needs substitute teaching assistants and evening maintenance person. Work study or not $8.00 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674

EMPLOYMENT

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

FOR SALE

Maroon Sims Snowboard 150cm. Preston LS bindings. $250 OBO 253-6785

S2 Redline X-Bike $550. Full home gym perfect for apt $150 B/O Call Kellie 549-7889

27" RCA Television with PIP, like new condition, call Rob at 549-4275 for details.

LOST AND FOUND

Car Keys, House Keys Found outside of Boyden Gym. Found AM 3/13. 617-290-5942

PET FOR SALE

Free male house cat 1yr old, playfull, friendly. Call 256-6777

ROOM FOR RENT

Spring Break Housing Furnished room/kitchen, N. Amherst. $20 daily or $140 all week. 549-4401

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office.

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Mexico/Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $179 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000

Jamaica Spring Break: Cheapest, best hideaway. Negrils, 7 miles white sand beach. Charming, safe, cabins in lush tropical paradise. Single $25, Double $35. 413-549-4401

Need to sell something?
Look no further...
Place an Ad
The Collegian Classifieds
and sell it EASY!!
Call 545-3500 TODAY!

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 15, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Jazz (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 10)				Jazz (In Stereo) (Part 4 of 10)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. East or West Region 1st Rd. -- Teams TBA					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. 1st Rd.
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. East or West Region 1st Rd. -- Teams TBA					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. 1st Rd.
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Primetime Thursday (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Sebrina-Witch	Friends		Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Charmed (N) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (N)	Weber (N)	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Mars Attacks" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	6	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Charmed (N) (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Charge-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Friends (N)	Weber (N)	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Mars Attacks" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld		★★½ "Rumble in the Bronx" (1995, Adventure) Jackie Chan.				News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (N)	Weber (N)	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Mars Attacks" (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Dorothy Dermond: This Is the Moment (In Stereo)			Barbara Sher:	Creating Your Second Life After 40 (In Stereo)		Cherrie Rose
WGGB	28	News	ABC News	Spin City	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Primetime Thursday (N)	News		Nightline
WSBK		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld	Med Abt. You
WTBS		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★ "The Devil's Advocate" (1997, Horror) Keanu Reeves. Al Pacino.						★★ "Hamlet's Prisoners" (1996)
A&E		Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Night and Fog"		Biography: Loretta Lynn			Live by Request Starring Lorette Lynn (Live)			Law & Order "Securitate"
CNN	23	Inside Politics	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	30	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	★★ "Revenge of the Nerds III: The Next Generation" (1992)				Sports Night	Sports Night	Daily Show	Turn Ben
DISC		Wild Discovery "Wild Style"		Wild Discovery: Adapters		UFOs Over Illinois		Beyond Bizarre		Secrets of Levitation		Justice Files "Out for Justice"
ESPN		Sportscenter		Baseball Tonight (N)		Track and Field				WTA Tennis: Tennis Masters Series -- Semifinal (Live)		Sportscenter
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		(TV) The Wandering Soul Murders		(2001, Mystery) Wendy Crewson.		Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV		Direct Effect	Senseless	mtvICON "Janet Jackson" (In Stereo)			Kathy-Reality	Fear (In Stereo)		Cribs (N)	Diary (N)	Undressed	Spring Break
NICK		Pinky & Brain	Cardog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Diff. Strokes	Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Soul Hunter"		★★½ "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989, Adventure) Harrison Ford.						★★½ "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989)
TLC	28	Trauma: Life in the ER		Tornadoes		Medical Detect	Deadly Minds	Best Kept Secrets Of: Money		Best Kept Secrets		Medical Detect	Deadly Minds
TNT		ER "And Baby Makes Two"		Pretender "Crash" (In Stereo)		★½ "National Lampoon's Vacation" (1983) Chevy Chase.				★½ "Vegas Vacation" (1997, Comedy) Chevy Chase.
USA		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Embassy" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Fiancé"		It's "Clean Slate" (1994, Comedy) Dana Carvey. (In Stereo)			Merlin	Merlin
HBO		(4:30) "Never"	★★★★ "Tootsie" (1982, Comedy) Dustin Hoffman. (N)					★★★ "The Messenger: The Story of Joan of Arc" (1999, Drama) Milla Jovovich. (N)				Best of Sex Bytes (In Stereo)
MAX		(4:30) "Jakob"	★★★ "Galaxy Quest" (1999) Tim Allen. PG			★½ "Cocktail" (1988, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo)				★½ "Oxygen" (1999) Maura Tierney.			"Dangerous"
SHOW		(4:45)	★ "Teenage Space Vampires" (1999) PG			★★ "Sunset Park" (1996) Rhea Perlman.			Extras: Enemy	★★ "Varsity Blues" (1999) James Van Der Beek. (In Stereo)

Quote of the Day

"Boys don't have anginas."

–Tina Fey "quoting" George W. Bush
Weekend Update, SNL, 3/11/01

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 31	HIGH: 45 LOW: 32	HIGH: 48 LOW: 27

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DOGBERT'S TECH SUPPORT
YOUR MOUSEPAD IS INCOMPATIBLE WITH YOUR OPERATING SYSTEM.
TRY REBOOTING THE MOUSEPAD. IF THAT DOESN'T WORK, I'LL CALL YOU BACK.
HOW WILL YOU KNOW?
I'LL WATCH YOU THROUGH YOUR MONITOR
www.dilbert.com

Masked Dropout By Bob Hewitt

Masked Dropout by Bob Hewitt
Help me... I'm so weak!
Masked Dropout, I shall avenge your untimely beatdown!!
What Super-Villains did this to you?!?
The Blood Mobile and a six-pack!

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SO HOW'D THE RE-ORIENTING GO?
WELL... IT'S TOO SOON TO TELL, REALLY.
I PUT TOGETHER A VERY ATTRACTIVE LEGAL DEFENSE PACKAGE, BUT IT COULD BE MATCHED BY A BIGGER SCHOOL. THERE ARE ALSO SOME BENEFIT AND PAROLE FIGURES TO WORK OUT.
OH
I'LL NEVER UNDERSTAND FOOTBALL
DON'T TRY.

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

You know, the dorm bathrooms are the only place that guys can be guys...
... they're not preoccupied with "getting their swerve on."
So I guess a world without women is one of puke, cut hair and clogged drains.

Robotman By Jim Meddick

ROBOTMAN DEMANDS TO MEET THE ALIEN RULERS OF TRISKELION AND IS INSTANTLY TRANSPORTED TO THEIR INNER SANCTUM!
YOU'RE JUST BRAINS!
WE ONCE HAD HUMANOID FORM, BUT, OVER EONS, EVOLVED INTO THE MENTALLY SUPERIOR BEINGS YOU SEE BEFORE YOU
MENTALLY SUPERIOR? BUT, YOU ENSLAVE OTHER SPECIES AND FORCE THEM INTO BRUTAL COMPETITION!
EVEN THOUGH WE LACK BODIES, WE STILL CRAVE PHYSICAL STIMULATION
THE GAMES PROVIDE US OUR ONLY OUTLET FOR THESE DESIRES THAT AND I OCCASIONALLY RUB MY FRONTAL LOBE AGAINST OUR GLASS ENCLOSURE

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

I SEE THAT ANOTHER DOT-COM IS ABOUT TO GO BELLY-UP.
OH? WHAT'S THE TIP-OFF?
A BAD BUSINESS PLAN? LOUSY MANAGEMENT? PIE-IN-THE-SKY FORECASTS?
YOUR FATHER JUST BOUGHT THEIR STOCK.
IS THIS WHY YOU GAVE ME ALL THOSE SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATIONS?

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

ROUND AND ROUND IT GOES.. WHERE IT STOPS, NOBODY KNOWS...
BEEEEP!
WOOHOO! IT'S POINTING AT ME! I GET THE LAST FROZEN BURRITO!
KIDS, THIS ISN'T WHY I BOUGHT A CAROUSEL MICROWAVE
SMELL IT AND WEEP, LITTLE BROTHER!
DOUBLE OR NOTHING ON THIS HOT DOG?

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Anxiety over your workload either at home or on the job will keep you from enjoying a hidden opportunity today – unless you lighten up!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Don't get carried away with yourself today. A little subtlety, style and grace go a long way toward impressing others.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Physical and mental activities have much to offer you today, and you will want to combine the two for the best results.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Someone close to you is likely to be quite edgy and irritable today – and it will be up to you to see that he or she stays in control.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You must be willing to take a personal interest in someone else's affairs today if you are going to help at all. You mustn't remain impartial!
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You must remain on top of things as they develop today. If it's more authority you're after, you must be willing ot prove that you can handle it.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Don't misuse your own popularity today. Give others the time of day – and the benefit of the doubt. A friend comes to you with advice.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It may be up to you today to do those things that you thought were someone else's responsibility. You can do it all much better!
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – This is a good day for solving financial problems as best you can. Remember, you can bend the rules – but you mustn't break them.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – What is asked of you today may not be fair, but if you can rise to the occasion and so what is required, then you'll be ahead of the game.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – What seems a mistake at first may prove to be highly beneficial to you in the long run. It may take time, but you'll eventually be rewarded.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – An old-fashioned approach to a new and unexpected dilemma is likely to pay off with surprising speed. This may, indeed, be the way to go!

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Shepherds Pie (B, F, W)

Madras Tofu Curry (vegan)

Grilled Cheese on Multigrain Bread (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

American Chop Suey (H)

DINNER

IDES OF MARCH/ ITALIAN NIGHT

Sausage Cacciatore

Vegetable Scampi

White Beans with Sage

Chicken Parmesan

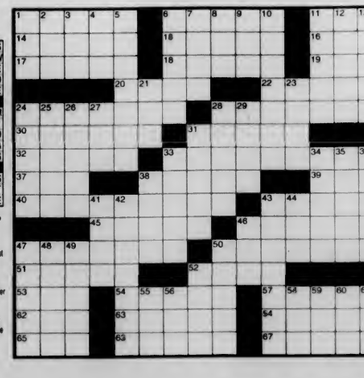
ACROSS
1 Rattletraps
6 Child's toy
11 Classifieds
14 Islamic deity
15 Baseball great Hank
16 Duck swim
17 Beam
18 Thespian's place
19 Lennon's wife
20 Price
22 Glowing coal
24 Newsworthy
28 Most risqué
30 Showy shrub
31 Type of energy
32 Damp
33 Messy sandwich
37 UK part
38 Seminar
39 Caesar's eggs
40 Academic honor
43 Fish-eating birds
45 Period
46 — shooter
honest person
47 Trace
50 Zeme
51 Captain's cry
52 "Beloved" writer Mormon
53 "— Me"
54 Bowe's state
57 Wanderer
62 Conversational pauses
63 Taboo items
64 Martini garnish
65 Farm home
66 Literary style
67 Three-masted ship

DOWN
1 Possesses
2 Horror-film street
3 Ms. MacGraw
4 Churn
5 Frozen dessert
6 Moisten the turkey
7 After midnight
8 — pro nobis
9 Gear tooth
10 Patella
11 Brick type
12 Patronizes a restaurant
13 Rugby, for one
21 Crimson Tide
23 Boggy
24 Appointed
25 Gas made by lightning
26 Subarctic forest
27 Yankovic and Molinaro
28 Perch
29 Swiss heights
31 Cut
33 Helping of pie
34 Biblical prophet
35 Manifest
36 Relaxes
38 Wooden shoe
41 Butterfly catchers
42 Demonstrating ill will
43 Fall event
44 Floor covering
46 Arlo, to Woody
47 Low-lying areas
48 Turn inside out
49 Impudent
50 Rosso loop
52 Thunder god
55 Bambi's mother
56 Dear Abby's hen
58 Bullring cheer
59 Playing marble
60 Bird
61 Winter mo.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

R	E	I	G	N	S		J	A	M	A	W	E	S
A	R	R	O	Y	O		E	R	A		S	H	A	W
P	E	A	R	L	S		S	I	R		P	E	T	E
		G	O	O	D	T	E	M	P	E	R	E	D
R	E	S	I	N		E	E		S	C	E	N	E
A	L	A	N		V	C	R		G	A	T
J	U	G	G	L	E	R		M	E	L		R	P	M
A	D	A		A	X	E		A	T	M		O	U	T
H	E	S		Z	E	E		M	U	S	T	A	R	D
		S	U	D		J	U	M	P		A	S	E	A
S	H	O	A	L		O	N	A		M	A	N	T	E	S
A	U	C	T	I	O	N	B	L	O	C	K
B	R	A	T		L	E	O		S	H	E	E	R	S
E	R	L	E		G	A	L		H	E	R	M	I	T
R	Y	A	N		A	L	T		A	S	S	U	M	E

1-3-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's Staff

Night Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician	Shalini Mani
Copy Editor	Andy Voght
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	John Zawislak, Michele Meder

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Replenishing the talent

Recruits to make significant contribution

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The loss of seniors Kara Ciocca and Kara Green, coupled with the transfer of Amy Mink and Holly Wildenhaus, left the Massachusetts women's soccer team with few holes to fill for the 2001 season.

Only four months removed from an 11-5-1 campaign, the Minutewomen will look to return to the national scene next season. Looking to help that cause will be the Class of 2004 – Stephanie Santos, Carly Turman, Brianna Weymouth and Erica Wideberg.

The incoming quartet should not only provide depth for a UMass squad that returns all but two starters, but all four of the players will likely battle for a starting job. Nevertheless, UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy has addressed the team's needs and is extremely optimistic of next year's freshman class.

"I like this class," he said. "I think that they've got the potential to be every bit as good as last year's freshman class. They impacted pretty well, and when you look across the board, there wasn't one of them who didn't get serious playing time. This group here, they're certainly going to push the incumbents for serious playing time.

"It's a good time to be a freshman right now because we've got people who can carry the load," Rudy added.

Brianna Weymouth

Keeping another local product close to home

Santos, who hails from nearby Ludlow, joins current Minutewomen Maggie LaBrode, Michelle Luttati and Kristin Mena as Bay State products on the UMass roster. A two-time All-New England and All-State selection and a four-time All-Western Massachusetts pick, Santos is a crafty forward/midfielder who should fit in nicely next season.

"Stephanie brings a different dimension to our team that we haven't had a lot of over the past few years," Rudy said. "That's the ability to take on one or two players and effectively create scoring opportunities for other people or herself.

"She also has an unusually good grasp for beating the offside trap by the timing of her run," continued the UMass coach. "She adds the element of deception and individuality that women's soccer teams across the country don't have enough of."

As a senior, Santos netted 28 goals and 26 assists and finished her career with 128 points. The Lions won the Massachusetts state championship in her senior season and closed the year as the No. 5 ranked team in the nation by Fox Sports.

Santos chose UMass over Northeastern. Although her decision wasn't solely based on the fact that Amherst was in close proximity to her hometown, her selection seems to be beneficial to both parties.

"All of the things that I was looking for in a college, UMass fit that perfectly," she said. "It's a great school."

Added Rudy: "I know that it makes a lot of people happy because we are a state institution. The good thing for me about being here is that I'm not forced to bring in in-state kids just because we are local. They want me to get the best people.

"What makes this special is that we are getting a local player of this quality. It gives our program some roots, which is good. Although we've got kids coming from all over the place, now we've got some regional roots from the kids that we have and have had from New York and the in-state players."

Santos is expected to have an impact in some role next season, whether it is in a starting role or off of the bench. Her style of play should complement the current Minutewomen nicely, especially senior forward Brooke Bartlett, a first-team All-Atlantic 10 pick as a junior.

"She comes from a 100-percent soccer environment in Ludlow, which is a 100-percent soccer city with a tradition that is grounded in more than just the standard pass-receive-run type of mentality," Rudy said. "They treasure and support creativity and flair, and that's something that's amiss in collegiate women's soccer.

"I like the idea of Brooke [Bartlett], who likes to beat players with her right foot on the right flank – whereas Stephanie uses both feet off both flanks."

As far as Santos is concerned, her decision is one that will hopefully produce much of the same success as she experienced in high school.

Carly Turman

The Massachusetts women's soccer team will look to it's freshman class to fill the cleats of graduating seniors like Kara Green.

Turn to RECRUITS, page 10

Minutemen breaking outdoors

By Elena Panesis
Collegian Staff

After enduring a long winter of indoor practices and a cancelled match due to weather conditions, the Massachusetts men's tennis team definitely deserves a spring break in the tropics. Of course, the squad will not just be sunbathing and picking up fine ladies as business comes before pleasure. On its journey to Florida, the team will play three teams of extreme high caliber: Elon University, St. Thomas University and Florida Atlantic. The Maroon and White considers these matches to be a good preparation for the rest of the spring season, as the team has not played an outdoor match since November.

"The spring break trip is a chance to go down and get a solid week of training," senior Bill Greener said. "We practice double sessions every day and it's the most intense week of the year. This is to get us prepared for the outdoor season because we've been playing indoor matches."

"In Florida we need to get acclimated to the outdoors and the eighty-degree weather. It could be tough down there."

Yet coach Jash Dixon and crew plan to maintain a no-pressure attitude on the Florida trip as these highly ranked teams are the best competition that the UMass squad will face all season.

"Florida Atlantic has a very high national ranking," Dixon said. "These are scholarship programs and these people are going to go on and play on the tour. St. Thomas is a winnable match, but the other two are much better. We are going to compete against the best of the best and get ready to play a spring schedule."

These matches do not affect the team in terms of the Atlantic 10 tournament seeds or in East regional ranking. However, the Minutemen are eager to play these formidable opponents in order to gain experience and confidence.

"We just want to go down and see if we can win a doubles match to boost up our confidence," Greener added. "We know that when we come back, we are not goin to play anybody better. If I beat someone from one of the Florida teams, I know I can beat anybody. If you can even win a set off these guys, you can say, 'Damn, I'm a good player.'"

When the Minutemen return from their fun in the sun, they will begin the toughest portion of their spring season starting with a match at Dartmouth on March 31. This East regionally ranked team of the Ivy League, who beat Connecticut 6-1 last year, definitely poses a threat to the Minutemen, who lost a hard fought match to the Huskies last semester.

"Dartmouth is a high caliber Ivy League team. I hope we have a shot. The Fordham match coming up is winnable," Dixon said. "Then we have a tough match against Army and an Atlantic 10 match against Temple on the same day. We have nothing easy for the rest of the year."

The Minutemen have not played a match since their 7-0 sweep of Duquesne Feb. 24. George Washington chose not to travel to Massachusetts because of the snow on Friday, which cancelled the all-important conference match. This puts intense pressure on the team to perform against Temple, another A-10 foe.

"GW will probably be seeded ahead of us in the A-10 tournament," Dixon said. "It puts more pressure on us to beat Temple and we play them the same day as Army."

In terms of injuries, the Maroon and White is in top-notch condition with the exception of Aron Gortman, who is still out due to back spasms. After double-session practices and intense training, the Minutemen need to see the rewards of their labor. Basically, they want to play.

"We haven't played a match in so long. Practices are good, but they have no enemy," Dixon stated. "This team plays better with more matches and we're looking forward to getting started."

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen will need their best efforts out of Steve Prisco and his teammates to succeed on their trip to Florida over spring break.

Women face best teams in nation

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Spring break in Florida to most UMass students means long days on the beach and plenty of fun, sun and partying. But for the Massachusetts women's tennis team, next week's trip to Florida will be a more serious journey as it faces its tough competition of the year and looks to get back on track on the spring campaign.

The Maroon and White will be traveling to Boca Raton for four matches over spring break against some of the nation's most fierce women's tennis programs. However, head coach Judy Dixon and her warriors are not making the excursion with winning as their top priority.

"We have two goals in mind going down there," Dixon said. "Number one is to get ready for the outdoor season, and number two is trying to play the best competition that is readily available."

The Minutewomen will be greeted by Lynn University for their first match, and it will take a Hingis-esque performance to overtake the hosts. The Fighting Knights come into the match ranked No. 7 in Division II with an extremely impressive 10-1 record on the year. The week won't get any easier, as Wednesday will bring Florida Atlantic to the Maroon and White's table. The Owls will probably present an even bigger roadblock to UMass as they currently hold the No. 20 ranking in Div. I. The Minutewomen will also take on St. Thomas University and Broward Community College on the trip.

"Lynn and Florida Atlantic are completely out of our league, but we play them so we can play the best of the best," Dixon said.

The team has been eager to get back to the courts as it will have been idle for nearly a month before taking on Lynn, its last match being the disappointing showing against Army on Feb. 24. With the Maroon and White's last showdown against Harvard cancelled due to inclement weather, getting back on the courts will be somewhat of a relief to the women.

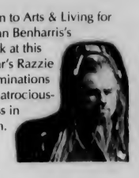
"I think this trip is something that we really need," Dixon said. "We've been dealing with injury and illness, as well as not having anyone to play. You want to re-prove yourself, but if there's nobody to play, then you're stuck with that old feeling again."

Fortunately for the Minutewomen, should they lose any matches on the Florida trip, it will only affect their dual match play record, and not their standings in the ECAC as they look to gain an invite to the ECAC Tournament next year.

However, one sour note for the Maroon and White is the loss of junior Annie Hamilton, who will be unable to make the trip due to a knee injury. Hamilton had been a solid member of the squad, but will be going back to Texas to rehabilitate instead of traveling to Florida.

Nevertheless, the Minutewomen, amidst the sunshine and beaches, will be looking to regain the focus and stellar play that accompanied their fall season by taking on what Dixon calls an "outside enemy". The spring break journey will hopefully rejuvenate the Maroon and White from its period of inactivity and jumpstart its trip to the top of the Atlantic 10.

Turn to Arts & Living for Ryan Benharris's look at this year's Razzie nominations for atrociousness in film.



ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN

Check out the spring break preview for the UMass men's lacrosse team, in todays sport section.

SPORTS p. 8

Volume CVII Issue 100 | www.dailycollegian.com | Friday, March 16, 2001

Union College bestows honorary degree on biology professor Margulis

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Lynn Margulis

By Suzanne Furst
Collegian Staff

The professors at the University of Massachusetts are getting more and more recognition for their dedicated and difficult work. Last month, it was Lynn Margulis's time to be honored.

Margulis received an honorary doctor of science degree from Union College in Schenectady, New York, On Feb. 22. Margulis gave the main speech at "Slanted Truths and the Wisdom of the Biosphere." The event took place during Founders Day ceremonies at the school.

Margulis is currently employed at UMass in the department of geosciences. She has been a part of the University's faculty since she joined in 1988.

This distinguished faculty member is known for her research on the evolution of eukaryotic cells; that is, cells containing a nucleus. She is one of the leaders of the belief that previously independent organisms merging in the past is eminent to evolutionary change. This is a process called symbiogenesis.

Dr. Michael Dolan, also of the geosciences department at UMass, explained that Margulis's research expresses the belief that when these cells first formed, they didn't evolve in a straight line. Furthermore, our cells are components of three bacteria. This evolutionary step, however, took place very early on in the past.

Lynn Margulis's work as a biologist has brought her credit in the past as well. She received the 1999 National Medal of Science. She has also been named a recipient of the 2001 Commonwealth Award, this was offeredby the Massachusetts Cultural Council for outstanding contributions to the arts, humanities and sciences.

The professor's notoriety continues with a membership in the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She has been elected to the Russian Academy of Natural Sciences. In addition, Margulis has authored many books on a variety of scientific topics.

Margulis is an avid encourager of further participation in the realm of science, as well as a spokesperson for environmental issues in general. Therefore, it is little surprise that Union President Roger acknowledged, "As impressive as your scientific achievements are, we pay special tribute to your extraordinary abilities as a teacher and communicator of science to the public."

ACTNOW! to help teens find their voice

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Colleen Doherty, coordinator for the University of Massachusetts Gender Equity website, has joined a group of 32 women and girls to advise ACT NOW! Inc. via e-mail on how to reach young girls and boost their self-esteem through improvised movie making.

Twenty members of ACT NOW's board live and work in the Valley. Doherty, also Assistant Director for Field Experience Humanities and Fine Arts at the University, arranged a fall term internship for senior Stephanie Hamm with the new non-profit organization. Ranging in age from 12-60 and hailing from as far away as Austria, the e-advisors also represent business, finance, research, health, philanthropy, mountaineering, gay rights and communications.

"I asked powerful women from the United States and abroad to serve," explained Nancy Fletcher, founder of the non-profit.

She has received encouragement from Carol Gilligan, author and researcher at Harvard's Graduate School of Education, whose 1982 book In a Different Voice broke new ground in the understanding of women's development. Fletcher's organization has also received interest from Toni Morrison, and Gloria Steinham's office has requested to review a copy of the video documenting the production of ACT NOW's pilot with Girls Inc. An interview with those girls, eight months after their shoot, points to long-term benefits that Fletcher is looking to achieve.

According to Yamira Moreno-Escobar, Director of After School Programs at Girls Inc., the girls "are beginning to see themselves as people who can accomplish something, not [people] getting stuck in the community, or barrio as we call it."

For 12-year-old Alicia Ortiz, who helped invent and improvise "The Haunted Slumber Party," producing is

Turn to girls, page 3

Zinn speaks on the joys of meditation

By Suzanne Furst
Collegian Staff

"I am always astonished that people come to see me speak. I talk about nothing," joked Dr. Jon Kabat-Zinn, as he began to explore the contemplative mind last night to a full audience in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Phyllis Robinson, who opened up the forum, explained that contemplative refers to a question of wakefulness.

According to Kabat-Zinn, "It is about awareness and waking up. So much of the time we don't know where we are or who we are." Then he added, "Mindfulness is not the answer to all problems, but it adds a dimension to our being."

The lecture focused largely on meditation. The doctor explained that meditation is one of the most radical acts you can do, to stop, especially in this era. He said it is an act of love, and affirmation.

"Sometimes meditation is about being tense or in extreme pain, this is part of the human condition," said Zinn.

He called meditation the most important instrument in the universe, and there are ways to learn to fine tune it.

Dr. Jon Kabat-Zinn repeated something that Marcelet Williams of UMass told him. She had mentioned that sometimes she felt as if she were "standing in the middle of chaos." He responded, "Embrace that chaos. One never gets control of the whole show. Dance with the chaos."

The lecture was like an impressionist painting with different tidbits of information and ideas being thrown out into the crowd. He was delivering thoughts such as, "The digital age is fragmenting us into digits." This was followed by, "The human mind is brand-old."

Kabat-Zinn used poetry to express the notion that we are cruising on cruise control all of the time. He encouraged people to see how much time is actually spent awake.

"Me from myself to banish," was a line borrowed from Emily Dickinson to show how we abdicate ourselves. Also used for the same reason, a line from a Spanish poet, "I am not I."

The lecture also went into detail on the purposes of meditation and the contemplative mind in the field of medicine. It began with the opening of what can be considered the first mind, body clinic in 1979. The main idea was to form a net to catch those who fell through the cracks.

Dr. Kabat-Zinn described rehabilitation as learning to live inside again, not just getting back on your feet again.

"Now is the place we don't inhabit when we are on autopilot. If we can't accept now, how can we accept later?" he said.

He claimed that he always says to the patients, "As long as you are breathing, there is more right with you than there is wrong with you."

Kabat-Zinn alleged that this medical practice was unheard of in the 1950s. Back then, "you would be lynched by highly respected people. It was a threat to their western medical treatments."

The question was posed to audience to find out how many of them considered themselves meditators. About half of the crowd raised their hands.

Kabat-Zinn started a period of meditation in the large auditorium.

"Feel the entire duration of the breath, then the pause, then the reversal," Zinn instructed. "Feel the sensation; feel your own breath. Notice that the minds are here and there, off into thinking. Notice what the mind is thinking."

The lecture was part of the Five College Series on the Contemplative Mind and Higher Education. According to another opening speaker, Diana Dana, in 1998 Welseley College got the ball rolling with the help of its program director there, Peter Lawrence.

COURTESY SHALINI MARTI

Noted doctor, Jon Kabat Zinn entertained a packed crowd at the Campus Center Auditorium with his philosophical musings on Wednesday night.

COURTESY TIBORA GALICZ-BLUM

Free Tibet

To celebrate the Tibetan New Year, knows as Losar, the Students for a Free Tibet put on a program in the Campus Center Auditorium last night. This display was part of the evening's festivities, which included dancing and musical performances.

Faculty Senate adds two new Fall courses

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate approved two new classes yesterday, was addressed by Chancellor David Scott, and heard recommendations on increasing revenue to the campus. However, the most controversial motion of the evening occurred after the Senate's regular business had concluded and Chair Frank Hugus was ready to move on to announcements.

Senator Michael Egan then rose and made a motion to place something not previously on the agenda on the agenda. Egan wanted the Senate to pass a motion that would allow Senators unrestricted access to the "all faculty" email list maintained by the administration of the University of Massachusetts.

The motion required a two-thirds majority to pass; however, the voice vote was so close that the Chair called for a standing vote.

Twenty-three Senators rose in opposition to the motion, while only eight stood for it, failing the motion.

"If I want to send an email to all faculty I have to get the permission of the Provost's Office or the permission of the Rules Committee and the decision is made on a political basis. If they don't like the content of my message, then I'm refused permission. Recently I did try to email the entire faculty because I am concerned about the way personnel policies are implemented on this university," Egan said after the meeting. "They are not implemented fairly, there are many breaches of the rules and regulations, and there are many injustices. And these are swept under the carpet."

"Like every large organization there are official rules and unofficial rules. The unofficial rules are that they don't want certain issues to be raised, and the union itself won't raise those issues." Egan continued. "The union is only interested in pay and related benefits which does nothing for the protection of unpopular opinions or faculty who are subjected to injustice through the other systems of the University."

Egan says that he knows of several cases of injustice, discrimination and, in some cases, the removal of documents from professor's personnel files.

"I think that the access to large listserv lists is a legitimate administrative issue. None of us like to get hundreds of emails that are generated by these lists," said Secretary of the Faculty Senate Ernest May. May explained that there had to be a balance between the need for communication and "the need not to have people's mailboxes filled by hundreds or thousands of emails from individuals or organizations that we don't want to get."

The Provost's Committee on "Revenue Enhancement" presented its recommendations to the Senate. Professor Fergus Clydesdale delivered the presentation, setting a lighthearted tone that would last throughout the meeting.

"I was sorry to see the committee dissolve," Clydesdale said. "For those of you who know me, you know I'm lying."

The committee was charged with examining new revenue sources for the campus, and then forwarding its recommendations to the Senate. Among the recommendations were endowments and distance learning.

Turn to faculty senate, page 3

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Replenishing the talent

Recruits to make significant contribution

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The loss of seniors Kara Cuoco and Kara Green, coupled with the transfer of Amy Mink and Holly Wildenhaus, left the Massachusetts women's soccer team with few holes to fill for the 2001 season.

Only four months removed from an 11-5-1 campaign, the Minutewomen will look to return to the national scene next season. Looking to help that cause will be the Class of 2004 – Stephanie Santos, Carly Turman, Brianna Weymouth and Erica Wideberg.

The incoming quartet should not only provide depth for a UMass squad that returns all but two starters, but all four of the players will likely battle for a starting job. Nevertheless, UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy has addressed the team's needs and is extremely optimistic of next year's freshman class.

"I like this class," he said. "I think that they've got the potential to be every bit as good as last year's freshman class. They impacted pretty well, and when you look across the board, there wasn't one of them who didn't get serious playing time. This group here, they're certainly going to push the incumbents for serious playing time.

"It's a good time to be a freshman right now because we've got people who can carry the load," Rudy added.

Brianna Weymouth

Carly Turman

Keeping another local product close to home

Santos, who hails from nearby Ludlow, joins current Minutewomen Maggie LaBrode, Michelle Luttati and Kristin Mena as Bay State products on the UMass roster. A two-time All-New England and All-State selection and a four-time All-Western Massachusetts pick, Santos is a crafty forward/midfielder who should fit in nicely next season.

"Stephanie brings a different dimension to our team that we haven't had a lot of over the past few years," Rudy said. "That's the ability to take on one or two players and effectively create scoring opportunities for other people or herself.

"She also has an unusually good grasp for beating the offside trap by the timing of her run," continued the UMass coach. "She adds the element of deception and individuality that women's soccer teams across the country don't have enough of."

As a senior, Santos netted 28 goals and 26 assists and finished her career with 128 points. The Lions won the Massachusetts state championship in her senior season and closed the year as the No. 5 ranked team in the nation by Fox Sports.

Santos chose UMass over Northeastern. Although her decision wasn't solely based on the fact that Amherst was in close proximity to her hometown, her selection seems to be beneficial to both parties.

"All of the things that I was looking for in a college, UMass fit that perfectly," she said. "It's a great school."

Added Rudy: "I know that it makes a lot of people happy because we are a state institution. The good thing for me about being here is that I'm not forced to bring in in-state kids just because we are local. They want me to get the best people.

"What makes this special is that we are getting a local player of this quality. It gives our program some roots, which is good. Although we've got kids coming from all over the place, now we've got some regional roots from the kids that we have and have had from New York and the in-state players."

Santos is expected to have an impact in some role next season, whether it is in a starting role or off of the bench. Her style of play should complement the current Minutewomen nicely, especially senior forward Brooke Bartlett, a first-team All-Atlantic 10 pick as a junior.

"She comes from a 100-percent soccer environment in Ludlow, which is a 100-percent soccer city with a tradition that is grounded in more than just the standard pass-receive-run type of mentality," Rudy said. "They treasure and support creativity and flair, and that's something that's amiss in collegiate women's soccer.

"I like the idea of Brooke [Bartlett], who likes to beat players with her right foot on the right flank – whereas Stephanie uses both feet off both flanks."

As far as Santos is concerned, her decision is one that will hopefully produce much of the same success as she experienced in high school.

Turn to RECRUITS page 10

The Massachusetts women's soccer team will look to it's freshman class to fill the cleats of graduating seniors like Kara Green.

Minutemen breaking outdoors

By Elena Panesis
Collegian Staff

After enduring a long winter of indoor practices and a cancelled match due to weather conditions, the Massachusetts men's tennis team definitely deserves a spring break in the tropics. Of course, the squad will not just be sunbathing and picking up fine ladies as business comes before pleasure. On its journey to Florida, the team will play three teams of extremely high caliber: Lynn University, St. Thomas University and Florida Atlantic. The Maroon and White considers these matches to be a good preparation for the rest of the spring season, as the team has not played an outdoor match since November.

"The spring break trip is a chance to go down and get a solid week of training," senior Bill Greener said. "We practice double sessions every day and it's the most intense week of the year. This is to get us prepared for the outdoor season because we've been playing indoor matches."

"In Florida we need to get acclimated to the outdoors and the eighty-degree weather. It could be tough down there."

Yet coach Judy Dixon and crew plan to maintain a no-pressure attitude on the Florida trip as these highly ranked teams are the best competition that the UMass squad will face all season.

"Florida Atlantic has a very high national ranking," Dixon said. "These are scholarship programs and these people are going to go on and play on the tour. St. Thomas is a winnable match, but the other two are much better. We are going to compete against the best of the best and get ready to play a spring schedule."

These matches do not affect the team in terms of the Atlantic 10 tournament seeds or in East regional ranking. However, the Minutemen are eager to play these formidable opponents in order to gain experience and confidence.

"We just want to go down and see if we can win a doubles match to boost up our confidence," Greener added. "We know that when we come back, we are not goin to play anybody better. If I beat someone from one of the Florida teams, I know I can beat anybody. If you can even win a set off these guys, you can say, 'Damn, I'm a good player.'"

When the Minutemen return from their fun in the sun, they will begin the toughest portion of their spring season starting with a match at Dartmouth on March 31. This East regionally ranked team of the Ivy League, who beat Connecticut 6-1 last year, definitely poses a threat to the Minutemen, who lost a hard fought match to the Huskies last semester.

"Dartmouth is a high caliber Ivy League team. I hope we have a shot. The Fordham match coming up is winnable," Dixon said. "Then we have a tough match against Army and an Atlantic 10 match against Temple on the same day. We have nothing easy for the rest of the year."

The Minutemen have not played a match since their 7-0 sweep of Duquesne Feb. 24. George Washington chose not to travel to Massachusetts because of the snow on Friday, which cancelled the all-important conference match. This puts intense pressure on the team to perform against Temple, another A-10 foe.

"GW will probably be seeded ahead of us in the A-10 tournament," Dixon said. "It puts more pressure on us to beat Temple and we play them the same day as Army."

In terms of injuries, the Maroon and White is in top-notch condition with the exception of Aron Gortmun, who is still out due to back spasms. After double-session practices and intense training, the Minutemen need to see the rewards of their labor. Basically, they want to play.

"We haven't played a match in so long. Practices are good, but they have no enemy," Dixon stated. "This team plays better with more matches and we're looking forward to getting started."

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen will need their best efforts out of Steve Prisco and his teammates to succeed on their trip to Florida over spring break.

Women face best teams in nation

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Spring break in Florida to most UMass students means long days on the beach and plenty of fun, sun and partying. But for the Massachusetts women's tennis team, next week's trip to Florida will be a more serious journey as it faces its tough competition of the year and looks to get back on track on the spring campaign.

The Maroon and White will be traveling to Boca Raton for four matches over spring break against some of the nation's most fierce women's tennis programs. However, head coach Judy Dixon and her warriors are not making the excursion with winning as their top priority.

"We have two goals in mind going down there," Dixon said. "Number one is to get ready for the outdoor season, and number two is trying to play the best competition that is readily available."

The Minutewomen will be greeted by Lynn University for their first match, and it will take a Hingis-esque performance to overtake the hosts. The Fighting Knights come into the match ranked No. 7 in Division II with an extremely impressive 10-1 record on the year. The week won't get any easier, as Wednesday will bring Florida Atlantic to the Maroon and White's table. The Owls will probably present an even bigger roadblock to UMass as they currently hold the No. 20 ranking in Div. I. The Minutewomen will also take on St. Thomas University and Broward Community College on the trip.

"Lynn and Florida Atlantic are completely out of our league, but we play them so we can play the best of the best," Dixon said.

The team has been eager to get back to the courts as it will have been idle for nearly a month before taking on Lynn, its last match being the disappointing showing against Army on Feb. 24. With the Maroon and White's last showdown against Harvard cancelled due to inclement weather, getting back on the courts will be somewhat of a relief to the women.

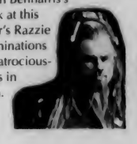
"I think this trip is something that we really need," Dixon said. "We've been dealing with injury and illness, as well as not having anyone to play. You want to re-prove yourself, but if there's nobody to play, then you're stuck with that old feeling again."

Fortunately for the Minutewomen, should they lose any matches on the Florida trip, it will only affect their dual match play record, and not their standings in the ECAC as they look to gain an invite to the ECAC Tournament next year.

However, one sour note for the Maroon and White is the loss of junior Annie Hamilton, who will be unable to make the trip due to a knee injury. Hamilton had been a solid member of the squad, but will be going back to Texas to rehabilitate instead of traveling to Florida.

Nevertheless, the Minutewomen, amidst the sunshine and beaches, will be looking to regain the focus and stellar play that accompanied their fall season by taking on what Dixon calls an "outside enemy". The spring break journey will hopefully rejuvenate the Maroon and White from its period of inactivity and jumpstart its trip to the top of the Atlantic 10.

Turn to Arts & Living for Ryan Benharris's look at this year's Razzie nominations for atrociousness in film.



ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

Check out the spring break preview for the UMass men's lacrosse team. In todays sport section.

SPORTS p. 8

Volume CVII Issue 100 | www.dailycollegian.com | Friday, March 16, 2001

Union College bestows honorary degree on biology professor Margulis

COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Lynn Margulis

By Suzanne Furst
Collegian Staff

The professors at the University of Massachusetts are getting more and more recognition for their dedicated and difficult work. Last month, it was Lynn Margulis's time to be honored.

Margulis received an honorary doctor of science degree from Union College in Schenectady, New York On Feb. 22. Margulis gave the main speech at "Slanted Truths and the Wisdom of the Biosphere." The event took place during Founders Day ceremonies at the school.

Margulis is currently employed at UMass in the department of geosciences. She has been a part of the University's faculty since she joined in 1988.

This distinguished faculty member is known for her research on the evolution of eukaryotic cells; that is, cells containing a nucleus. She is one of the leaders of the belief that previously independent organisms merging in the past is eminent to evolutionary change. This is a process called symbiogenesis.

Dr. Michael Dolan, also of the geosciences department at UMass, explained that Margulis's research expresses the belief that when these cells first formed, they didn't evolve in a straight line. Furthermore, our cells are components of three bacteria. This evolutionary step, however, took place very early on in the past.

Lynn Margulis's work as a biologist has brought her credit in the past as well. She received the 1999 National Medal of Science. She has also been named a recipient of the 2001 Commonwealth Award, this was offeredby the Massachusetts Cultural Council for outstanding contributions to the arts, humanities and sciences.

The professor's notoriety continues with a membership in the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She has been elected to the Russian Academy of Natural Sciences. In addition, Margulis has authored many books on a variety of scientific topics.

Margulis is an avid encourager of further participation in the realm of science, as well as a spokesperson for environmental issues in general. Therefore, it is little surprise that Union President Roger acknowledged, "As impressive as your scientific achievements are, we pay special tribute to your extraordinary abilities as a teacher and communicator of science to the public."

ACTNOW! to help teens find their voice

By Virginia Avedisian
Collegian Staff

Colleen Doherty, coordinator for the University of Massachusetts Gender Equity website, has joined a group of 32 women and girls to advise ACT NOW! Inc. via e-mail on how to reach young girls and boost their self-esteem through improved movie making.

Twenty members of ACT NOW's board live and work in the Valley. Doherty, also Assistant Director for Field Experience Humanities and Fine Arts at the University, arranged a fall term internship for senior Stephanie Hamm with the new non-profit organization. Ranging in age from 12-60 and hailing from as far away as Austria, the advisors also represent business, finance, research, health, philanthropy, mountaineering, gay rights and communications.

"I asked powerful women from the United States and abroad to serve," explained Nancy Fletcher, founder of the non-profit.

She has received encouragement from Carol Gilligan, author and researcher at Harvard's Graduate School of Education, whose 1982 book In a Different Voice broke new ground in the understanding of women's development. Fletcher's organization has also received interest from Toni Morrison, and Gloria Steinham's office has requested to review a copy of the video documenting the production of ACT NOW's pilot with Girls Inc. An interview with those girls, eight months after their shoot, points to long-term benefits that Fletcher is looking to achieve.

According to Yamira Moreno-Escobar, Director of After School Programs at Girls Inc., the girls "are beginning to see themselves as people who can accomplish something, not [people] getting stuck in the community, or barrio as we call it."

For 12-year-old Alicia Ortiz, who helped invent and improvise "The Haunted Slumber Party," producing is

Turn to girls, page 3

Zinn speaks on the joys of meditation

By Suzanne Furst
Collegian Staff

"I am always astonished that people come to see me speak. I talk about nothing," joked Dr. Jon Kabat-Zinn, as he began to explore the contemplative mind last night to a full audience in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Phyllis Robinson, who opened up the forum, explained that contemplative refers to a question of wakefulness.

According to Kabat-Zinn, "It is about awareness and waking up. So much of the time we don't know where we are or who we are." Then he added, "Mindfulness is not the answer to all problems, but it adds a dimension to our being."

The lecture focused largely on meditation. The doctor explained that meditation is one of the most radical acts you can do, to stop, especially in this era. He said it is an act of love, and affirmation.

"Sometimes meditation is about being tense or in extreme pain, this is part of the human condition," said Zinn.

He called meditation the most important instrument in the universe, and there are ways to learn to fine tune it.

Dr. Jon Kabat Zinn repeated something that Marcelet Williams of UMass told him. She had mentioned that sometimes she felt as if she were "standing in the middle of chaos." He responded, "Embrace that chaos. One never gets control of the whole show. Dance with the chaos."

The lecture was like an impressionist painting with different tidbits of information and ideas being thrown out into the crowd. He was delivering thoughts such as, "The digital age is fragmenting us into digits." This was followed by, "The human mind is brand-old."

Kabat-Zinn used poetry to express the notion that we are cruising on cruise control all of the time. He encouraged people to see how much time is actually spent awake.

"Me from myself to banish," was a line borrowed from Emily Dickinson to show how we abdicate ourselves. Also used for the same reason, a line from a Spanish poet, "I am not I."

The lecture also went into detail on the purposes of meditation and the contemplative mind in the field of medicine. It began with the opening of what can be considered the first mind, body clinic in 1979. The main idea was to form a net to catch those who fell through the cracks.

Dr. Kabat-Zinn described rehabilitation as learning to live inside again, not just getting back on your feet again.

"Now is the place we don't inhabit when we are on autopilot. If we can't accept now, how can we accept later?" he said.

He claimed that he always says to the patients, "As long as you are breathing, there is more right with you than there is wrong with you."

Kabat-Zinn alleged that this medical practice was unheard of in the 1950s. Back then, "you would be lynched by highly respected people. It was a threat to their western medical treatments."

The question was posed to audience to find out how many of them considered themselves meditators. About half of the crowd raised their hands.

Kabat-Zinn started a period of meditation in the large auditorium.

"Feel the entire duration of the breath, then the pause, then the reversal," Zinn instructed. "Feel the sensation; feel your own breath. Notice that the minds are here and there, off into thinking. Notice what the mind is thinking."

The lecture was part of the Five College Series on the Contemplative Mind and Higher Education. According to another opening speaker, Diana Dana, in 1998 Wellesley College got the ball rolling with the help of its program director there, Peter Lawrence.

COURTESY SHALINI MARTI

Noted doctor, Jon Kabat Zinn entertained a packed crowd at the Campus Center Auditorium with his philosophical musings on Wednesday night.

COURTESY TIBORA GARCIA-BRUM

Free Tibet

To celebrate the Tibetan New Year, knows as Losar, the Students for a Free Tibet put on a program in the Campus Center Auditorium last night. This display was part of the evening's festivities, which included dancing and musical performances.

Faculty Senate adds two new Fall courses

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate approved two new classes yesterday, was addressed by Chancellor David Scott, and heard recommendations on increasing revenue to the campus. However, the most controversial motion of the evening occurred after the Senate's regular business had concluded and Chair Frank Hugus was ready to move on to announcements.

Senator Michael Egan then rose and made a motion to place something not previously on the agenda on the agenda. Egan wanted the Senate to pass a motion that would allow Senators unrestricted access to the "all faculty" email list maintained by the administration of the University of Massachusetts.

The motion required a two-thirds majority to pass; however, the voice vote was so close that the Chair called for a standing vote.

Twenty-three Senators rose in opposition to the motion, while only eight stood for it, failing the motion.

"If I want to send an email to all faculty I have to get the permission of the Provost's Office or the permission of the Rules Committee and the decision is made on a political basis. If they don't like the content of my message, then I'm refused permission. Recently I did try to email the entire faculty because I am concerned about the way personnel policies are implemented on this university," Egan said after the meeting. "They are not implemented fairly, there are many breaches of the rules and regulations and there are many injustices. And these are swept under the carpet."

"I like every large organization there are official rules and unofficial rules. The unofficial rules are that they don't want certain issues to be raised, and the union itself won't raise those issues," Egan continued. "The union is only interested in pay and related benefits which does nothing for the protection of unpopular opinions or faculty who are subjected to injustice through the other systems of the University."

Egan says that he knows of several cases of injustice, discrimination and, in some cases, the removal of documents from professor's personnel files.

"I think that the access to large listserv lists is a legitimate administrative issue. None of us like to get hundreds of emails that are generated by these lists," said Secretary of the Faculty Senate Ernest May. May explained that there had to be a balance between the need for communication and "the need not to have people's mailboxes filled by hundreds or thousands of emails from individuals or organizations that we don't want to get."

The Provost's Committee on "Revenue Enhancement" presented its recommendations to the Senate. Professor Fergus Clydesdale delivered the presentation, setting a lighthearted tone that would last throughout the meeting.

"I was sorry to see the committee dissolve," Clydesdale said. "For those of you who know me, you know I'm lying."

The committee was charged with examining new revenue sources for the campus, and then forwarding its recommendations to the Senate. Among the recommendations were endowments and distance learning.

Turn to faculty senate, page 3

Campus Perspectives

By Katy LoConte
Photos by Tibora Girczyc

If you could go anywhere with anyone on spring break, where would go and with whom?

Armindo Deandrade
Computer Systems Engineer major
Senior
"I would go to Cancun with my friends"

Wayne Brown
Computer Science Major
Junior
-"I would go to a nice beach with Janet Jackson"

Annie Pietraszek
History Major
Sophomore
-"I would go somewhere warm with my four best girlfriends"

Jon Laubinger
Philosophy Major
Sophomore
-"I would go to Venice, Italy with my Aunt Tricia"

Ilene Colon
Economics Major
Freshman
-"I would got to Puerto Rico to see my family with my sister"

John Sheehan
Political Science Major/Afro-American Minor
Junior
-"I'd go to Australia with my brother"

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Gargania Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

A World of OPPORTUNITIES
Northwestern College of Chiropractic

Northwestern can provide you with an education uniquely focused on the 21st century. Just ask our 4,000 alumni. They are practicing from America to Zimbabwe, as solo practitioners and in interdisciplinary settings. They know that our FOCUS ON EXCELLENCE has earned us an international reputation as a pioneer in chiropractic education, patient care and scientific research. Northwestern is a limited enrollment, private institution featuring a well-rounded, rigorous educational program integrating the basic and clinical sciences, diagnosis, X-ray, chiropractic therapeutics, wellness care and practice management. Our pioneering clinical internship programs, interdisciplinary study opportunities and a state-of-the-art student clinic provide our graduates with an UNPARALLELED CLINICAL FOUNDATION. Add our Career Services Center, where we assist our graduates in job placement, and you can understand why our graduates have such a high satisfaction level with their careers. For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777 or go virtual at www.nwhealth.edu

A college of NORTHWESTERN HEALTH SCIENCES UNIVERSITY
2501 W 84th St
Minneapolis, MN 55431

UMASS
CAMPUS SUMMER JOB
FULL-TIME
VISITORS CENTER

The Robsham Visitors Center has a full-time summer job opportunity for an undergraduate student.

Title: Student Greeter and Information Specialist.
Hourly rate: $8 minimum (approx. $3500).
Period: June 4 - August 31
Hours: 9:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. (weekdays)

Minimum qualifications include active status, completed at least two consecutive semesters, knowledgeable about campus programs, services, and building locations.

For further information, call 545-3480 or e-mail helgerson@admin.umass.edu
Resume and interview required.

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass., (413) 665-8733

Will proudly present
Amateur Night
Monday March 26th.
Many Prizes Will Be Awarded.
Ladies must apply in person for Amateur Night before March 24th.
Entertainment starting at 1pm.
Amateurs starting at 6pm.

■ girls

continued from page 1

now within her reach.

"They think Hollywood is so hard, but we can do it. Just give us some money and equipment and we can do it, too," she said.

After the project last year, staff member JoAlvin Green observed, "[The girls] were really inspired. [Now] they know that they can do stuff they never dreamed of doing. That will [spur] them to reach out for other things that they think about but never do."

The process, called "MOVIExperience," is designed to keep girls speaking up, especially through the crucial teen years when some become more introverted to be more accepted socially. According to Fletcher, it is an easy, inexpensive and streamlined way to make an extemporaneous movie using an unusual mix of digital video and improvisation techniques. The movie is sourced entirely from the cast. David Shepard, who helped launch the careers of Elaine May, Mike Nichols and Alan Alda originally designed the format. He now serves on the ACT NOW! Board.

Early supporters have donated over $27,000 in gifts and in-kind services, and a major gift campaign is in progress. Fletcher and Shepard have developed a curriculum including a video of games to make players feel more comfortable on camera. Retired FleetBoston Chair Eileen Kraus is also helping to build the formal board. Becky Wai-Ling Packard, Ph.D, assistant professor in Mount Holyoke's department of psychology and education is helping Fletcher research the short and long term effects of MOVIExperience.

ACT NOW! Will be conducting a nine-week workshop at Girls Inc. this spring, culminating in a MOVIExperience. It will be part of a program called PaTante made possible through a youth development grant from the State. The new organization is also drawing interest from schools and girls leadership programs from around the Northeast.

"The loss of girls' voices comes at a great cost to society," said Fletcher, who helped market the benefits of single-sex education as director of public relations at Mount Holyoke College, her alma mater. She explained that not only does society have to pay for the damage done to those silenced (eating disorders, drug addictions, depression, teen pregnancies), but it missed out on what they have to say.

"In the long run, I predict that we may impact the diet of stories on which our society feeds," said Fletcher.

Fletcher predicts that, prompted in part by her MOVIExperience, more and more girls will take control over story telling and master the technology for making those stories live.

"With social values still greatly determined by males, we need efficient ways to magnify, not diminish, female values," she said. She also commented that one of the most important things for girls to remember is "self-perception is the key to accomplishing things."

■ faculty senate

continued from page 1

"We started a little late, and we are behind," Clydesdale said, "and we have a long way to go."

The University ranks in the bottom half of twenty schools presented. Distance learning was another possible source of revenue.

"We discussed all types of distance learning and all types of issues were raised, cost including faculty time," Clydesdale explained, "and the role of faculty quality control."

The quality control of UMass Online has been one of the primary concerns of the Faculty Senate.

Associate Delegate to the Board of Trustees Ron Story, in an earlier interview, explained his feelings on the matter.

"It [UMass Online] could really damage the reputation of the institution unless there is a high quality control. If the interest in distance learning is driven largely by profit incentives, the inclination will be to hold down costs as much as possible. That will in the long run lead to lower standards so that we're concerned about," Story said. "If we're going to maintain the reputation of the institution we have to maintain high academic standards. And so we need to be involved in the approval process and the implementation process because it is not in the interests of the central office because it costs more."

The Chancellor explained that in order to fulfill UMass Online's predictions of $16 million in 2008, an investment of $8 million in the first three years would be required.

"I have a pretty good nose for predicting revenues. We do not always have the luxury of waiting," Scott said. "We have to make these predictions every year."

Scott went on to explain that these and other predictions outlined in his presentation entitled "Strategic Intent" were not rejected by the President's office. Public Information Director Bill Wright confirmed that the Chancellor's plan was still "under advisement" and that a final decision has yet to be made.

The two motions on the Senate's agenda were the approval of one undergraduate class and one graduate course. The Faculty Senate approved both classes without objection.

"We add new classes because disciplines change, they evolve new subjects become interesting, the process for taking courses out of circulation or stopping teaching them or even taking them off the books is not as visible," May explained. "When we add new classes, we seek the approval of by a campus wide mandate and eventually that's the Faculty Senate. The courses are removed from the catalog by departments. The adding of courses is kind of a natural evolution of opportunity for students."

"It's a very interesting question, whether we are teaching to many classes whether we should try and compress the number of classes and not have so many courses in the catalog," May added. "As a sheer matter of economics it probably would make more sense to have fewer courses being taught overall."

STEMTEC SCHOLARSHIPS for Future Teachers
NSF

Want to find out about careers in K-12 teaching? Want a scholarship to help with your educational expences while you learn? Apply for a NSF STEMTEC Teaching Scholar Award!

To get an application, or if you have questions, give us a call at 545-0734, stop by 217 Hasbrouck Lab, email at st-ss@k12s.phast.umass.edu or check out the STEMTEC website for more information and/or to download an application: http://k12s.phast.umass.edu/~stemtec

(Part-time and post-baccalaureate students are eligible)

General Electric
Monster.com
Red Herring

Q: What do these companies have in common?

A: Former Collegian Advertisment Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.

APPLICANTION DEADLINE IS MARCH 30TH

RETIREMENT INSURANCE MUTUAL FUNDS TRUST SERVICES TUITION FINANCING

Tax-deferred solutions from TIAA-CREF can help you reach your retirement goals faster.

Call us for a free tax-savings calculator

When you're investing for retirement, the adage "never put off until tomorrow what you can do today" doesn't apply to taxes.

That's because investments that aren't eroded by taxes can add up to significantly more money—or you—money you can use to supplement your pension and Social Security.

Let our consultants show you all the advantages of tax deferral, or call us for a free tax-savings calculator.

Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs), IRAs and other tax-saving solutions—along with TIAA-CREF's low expenses and solid history of performance—can help you invest tax smart today so that you can reach your retirement goals faster in the years to come.

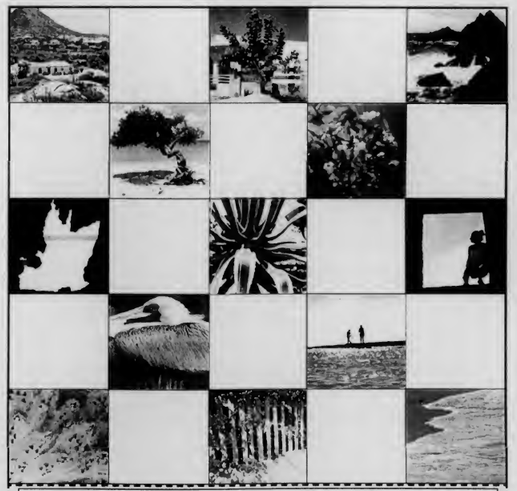
*Note: Under federal tax law, withdrawals prior to age 59½ may be subject to restrictions, and to a 10% additional tax.

TAX DEFERRAL MAKES A DIFFERENCE

In this hypothetical example, setting aside $100 a month in a tax-deferred investment with an 8% return in a 28% tax bracket shows better growth after 30 years than the same net amount put into a savings account. Total returns and principal value of investments will fluctuate, and yield may vary. The chart above is presented for illustrative purposes only and does not reflect actual performance, or predict future results, of any TIAA-CREF account, or reflect expenses.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™
1.800.842.2776
www.tiaa-cref.org

For more complete information on our securities products, call 1.800.842.2733, ext. 5509, for prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest. • TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distribute securities products • Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association (TIAA), New York, NY and TIAA-CREF Life Insurance Co., New York, NY issue insurance and annuities • TIAA-CREF Trust Company, FSB provides trust services. • Investment products are not FDIC insured, may lose value and are not bank guaranteed. © 2001 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association–College Retirement Equities Fund, New York, NY 01/04



COLLEGIAN SPRING BREAK PHOTO CONTEST

Attention UMass Students!!The Collegian is holding a photo contest!!
Capture your Spring Break and WIN!!
Submission Form:
name: _____
phone #: _____
e-mail: _____
type of photo (circle one): black & white color
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____

Requirements:
-Submissions due by MARCH 30th
-Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
-Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
-Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form
Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
EDITORIAL/OPINION
Friday, March 16, 2001
Ed/Op Editor • Rob Schulze
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
4

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

From us to you

Be safe on Spring Break

It's Spring Break time and that means travels all over the world.

Some of us are going as far away as Arizona, Mexico or England.

You're probably going far away too.

But where are you going to go?

Never mind that. Just know that the Massachusetts Daily Collegian wants you to be safe. Wherever you're going, don't let that time get ruined by unsafe behavior.

If you're going to let someone pour a beer into your mouth from forty feet in the air, make sure you know the person doing the pouring.

If you're going to venture off alone to explore your weeklong world, make sure somebody knows where you're going.

If you're going to have wild and passionate sex, make sure it's protected sex.

If you're going to strip, make sure there are no cameras around for "Girls Gone Wild."

But seriously, the message remains important for any and all situations: be safe.

There's no point in ruining the one precious week of freedom UMass grants you per spring being sickened, assaulted, attacked or worse. There's no point in putting yourself into dangerous situations.

Look out for yourself, and just as importantly, your friends. There are plenty of safe ways to enjoy your break. We hope you have a good one.

Have a great Spring Break!

Message from the trustee

SETH AVAKIAN

I have spent the past four years of my life accumulating rumors, facts, opinions, anecdotes and theories concerning how this university is run. As this is my last semester as an elected student leader, I hope to educate and energize other students who care about how their university is run, and want to shape it's future. This is the beginning of a series of articles that will address a range of issues affecting student life on our campus. Although I am deeply opinionated on some of the issues on our campus, I will do my best to present a balanced, student-centered point of view.

I plan to discuss issues such as privatization, tenure, general education, parking, the food, alcohol abuse, class availability, the Honors College, and advising of non-majors, but most importantly, I plan to address the nature of a public, land grant, flagship, research-one university. To start off I will address a relatively non-divisive issue, a new Student Union.

The students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst identified a need for a new Student Union in their proposal, A Capital Campaign for a New Student Union in 1996. The needs of the student body grow as the condition of the Student Union deteriorates. The union was opened in 1957, intended to serve a campus less than one third of its current size. Back then the library was in Goodell, men and women lived in different dorms, Southwest was a swamp and pot was something to put seeds in. Unlike the rest of campus, little has changed in the Student Union. It is small, old, dark, and completely unfit for the flagship campus of the University of Massachusetts.

The Student Union should be the shining centerpiece of a land-grant institution dedicated to the education of undergraduates. A new Student Union could provide adequate office and meeting space for student organizations, appropriately sized space for events, a modern athletic facility, and provide the Student Businesses with a facility that equals their excellence. Imagine an athletic center bigger and better than Ultimate Fitness or Kidsports within walking distance. Imagine a concert venue bigger than the Student Union Ballroom yet smaller than Mullins that would allow University Productions and Concerts (UPC), or Skybox to bring popular acts such as Moby, Outkast or the Black Crowes. Imagine being able to enjoy lunch at Earthfoods, or a bagel and coffee from People's Market in a spacious, well-lit, modern cafe with public Ethernet connections and a view of the campus pond.

A new union could serve as a center for Academic Support and as an outpost for student's administrative needs. Implementing a "one-stop shopping" concept in the union where students could take care of their every-day Whitmore business (bursar, housing assignments, financial aid, records) would improve student's lives, and create a less hostile relationship between the administration and students.

A new Student Union will help unite a fractured campus community. A commuter center would serve as a central meeting place and resource for our off-campus students. A central location for academic support would bring students together instead of separating them out into different offices. New retail food service facilities will look, feel and smell like an establishment befitting of a flagship campus. A bowling alley, music store, movie theatre, bar, or whatever you could want would be a short walk from your dorm room. No more complaints of "there's nothing to do but drink!"

This University is long on ideas, and short on funding. If a new Student Union is to become a reality, a major donor must be identified and convinced of the importance of a new union to the Amherst campus. The University's next capital campaign must have a new union as its centerpiece. In addition, the SGA must empower the students to set their own priorities, including, but not limited to, a self-imposed fee for a new union.

So, what is the next step? I will recommend to the elections commission that we put a referendum question on the spring ballot that will put the power to decide in the hands of students. The question will ask to approve a fee that would directly pay for part of the cost of a new student union. There hasn't been a tuition or fee increase for five years now, and every sign at the higher levels of the administration point to students getting hit by an increase in the next year or two. We're much better off telling the administration where we want our money to go than letting them do what they want with it. So, I encourage you to vote for a modest fee increase, of about fifty dollars per semester. It will have a lasting impact on the experience of undergraduates for decades to come.

Seth Avakian is the UMass student trustee.

Coward's death

KEN CAMPBELL

If all goes according to the Federal Bureau of Prison's plans, Timothy McVeigh's normally 98.6 degree inclination will be heading toward room temperature on May 16.

That's the day the government has set for the 32-year-old convicted bomber to undergo lethal injection, which, in my opinion, is too damn good for him. Timmy killed over a hundred people. Timmy blew up a Federal building. Timmy killed children. Timmy robbed 168 people from their families and wounded over 500 others.

I remember that day, April 19, 1995 very well. I was in the electronics department of Ann & Hope when suddenly all the televisions flashed over to a breaking news story. There were helicopter shots of a burned structure. It was already being described as an act of terrorism.

The worst pictures came later. Bodies, covered in a row. A rescue worker cradling a dead infant. Crying families huddled near a makeshift memorial on a chain link fence.

That's what I remember when I think of Tim McVeigh. He's not just the Oklahoma City Bomber to me. He's a monster, a coward who killed innocents.

I am a supporter of the death penalty. But this is too good for him. He deserves to die for what he did. The families deserve their revenge. But not through a needle. Not through a quiet death strapped down in a death chamber as the chemicals stop his breathing and slow his heart.

A deterrent is only useful if people are aware of it. Currently death row inmates are coddled until the final hour. Suicide watches, last meals and spiritual consultations ensure that a calm, collected scumbag is brought before the needle.

Screw that. I want to see McVeigh kicking, screaming, and crying all the way to the chamber. I want to see the fear in his eyes. I want vengeance. McVeigh hurt me too – he robbed me of my sense of security. My mother works across the street from the Federal building in Boston. Her office is two floors above the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Boston Headquarters. My family is at ground zero should another Turner Diaries fan club member have a bad day. For a 12-year-old, that's a scary thought. Hell, it still worries me. And I know that every other person who works, or has family that works in any government building has thought the same thing.

McVeigh's execution may be televised through closed circuit TV because, quite simply, a lot of people want to see this bastard die. The government is asking more than a thousand people if they want to attend. But you know what? I want to see him go flatline too. Timmy realizes this. He knows a lot of people want to see him killed, and he asked for his execution to be nationally televised. Of course, the government refused.

But back to my point, i.e. that lethal injection is too humane for McVeigh and his ilk. I say draw and quarter him, or just hang him. Give a coward a coward's death. Don't let him sleep his way into oblivion. I've seen what that is – remember the 60 Minutes broadcast of Dr. Kevorkian killing Thomas Youk? That was the first time I saw a man die on television. Too bad McVeigh won't be the second.

Ken Campbell is a Collegian staff member.

LIFE IN HELL
©2001 BY MAN GROENING
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL ALWAYS TELL THE ABSOLUTE TRUTH.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL STAY WITH MY LOVING, TRUSTING HONEY.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL ALWAYS BE HONEST WITH MY LOVING HONEY.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL STAY WITH MY LOVING, CARING, NO BRAINED HONEY.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL LOVE MYSELF WITH MY LOVING, TRUSTING HONEY.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL ALWAYS BE HONEST WITH MY LOVING HONEY.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL ALWAYS BE EVERYONE WILL DOING WHOSE PAID ATTENTION TO MYSELF.
STARTING RIGHT NOW, I WILL ENJOY THE SIMPLE THINGS IN LIFE WITH MY LOVING HONEY.
MORNING COFFEE BREAK OVER.
STARTING AT LUNCH, I WILL ENJOY A BEER WITH MYSELF TO THE LOVE OF THE CROWDS.

Enemy at the gates opens this weekend

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Friday, March 16, 2001
Arts Editor •
David Toupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com
5

DeNiro gives 15 Minutes good face

By Jake D. Lewis
News Staff

15 Minutes
Starring Robert DeNiro & Edward Burns
Rated R
Playing at CineMark Hadley 12

Let's be honest, here: Robert DeNiro is not an actor whom one would consider as a handsome man. Yet there's something about his mole-marked, doughy-Italian face that has always been particularly appealing to filmmakers and moviegoers alike. Whether he's playing an All-American Dad (Meet the Parents), a Navy Seal drill instructor (Men of Honor) or a cartoonish dictator hell-bent on taking over the world (The Adventures of Rocky & Bullwinkle), DeNiro not only has the face to pull it off, but also the talent to boot. And that's just this year alone!

In 15 Minutes DeNiro puts on the tough-guy façade for the role of Eddie Flemming, a New York City police officer who is just as charming as he is intimidating. Just like DeNiro, the public loves having Flemming in the public eye, whether it is in the latest People Magazine, or the movie about his life. Wanting some of the spotlight for themselves are two ex-con Czech immigrants, Emil and Oleg (Karel Roden and Oleg Taktarov, respectively), who have come to Manhattan for a piece of the American Dream, to start over with their lives and get rich quick. But for these foreigners fresh off the boat, that comes at a price. When they become party to a wicked murder that is caught on tape, they find their way into the limelight, however infamous it may be. In exchange for the big bucks, their heinous misdemeanors are aired on the sleazy tabloid news program, "Top Story," hosted by the even slimier Robert Hawkins (Kelsey Grammer). As a result of these shocking murders caught on tape, the ratings go through the roof, with demands for more out-of-control crimes.

15 Minutes is a cross between The Truman Show and a Die Hard movie, where television has broke down "the fourth wall" and become a real-life hostile threat to the millions of innocent viewers who tune in. The most gripping part about this concept is that violence-prone television already exists on a smaller level with programs like "RealTV" and "Cops," and were rape and murder also documented on similar programs, people would most likely watch. The voyeur in all of us is both repulsed by such a concept, but also intrigued by it too. 15 Minutes sets up this pulse pounding, predicament for the moviegoer, even if it is the most predictable thing to watch since The Wizard of Oz. And, much like the material the film deals with, is a guilty pleasure to view too.

The teaming between DeNiro and co-star Edward Burns (The Brothers McMullen) is a match made in Manhattan too. The aging cop taking on a rookie is familiar to all, having always been a staple in the buddy-film. But instead of a black guy and a white guy, or a foreigner and an American, the camaraderie works between DeNiro and Edward Burns (Brothers McMullen, Saving Private Ryan) because the film is not about opposites attracting, but two different kinds of guys working the same case. Burns' lanky figure and suave good looks do indeed counter those of DeNiro's, but both are convincing in their role (underdeveloped as it may be), and are more focused on the centerpiece of the film, rather than the relationship between each other.

While there is not much depth to Burn's character Jordy Warsaw, Flemming's persona is expanded so much so that it offers a great deal more heart than expected in a film like this. After a semi-unpredictable occurrence at the film's midpoint, 15 Minutes immediately shifts gears, and becomes more a vehicle for political machinery than an action film. It's a let-down for the moviegoer, sitting on the edge of their seat to see the film screech to a halt after the pulse-pounding adrenaline rush that was the movie's first half. Like an episode of "Law & Order," the beginning is about the crime, and the second part about paying the time. True, the script and direction are done in such a way that you want to see the scumbags responsible go to jail and get due justice, but there's absolutely no excitement to the judicial proceedings and law-bending that goes on, and you want to see more violence, just what the film is trying to skirt you away from. When the criminals' fifteen minutes of fame are up, so too is the mindless delight of the film.

When all is said and done, director John Herzfeld (Two Days In the Valley) has created a boisterous impulse of a movie. Only sporting two female characters, both love interests, may I add, Melina Kanakaredes ("Providence") as DeNiro's girlfriend and relative newcomer Vera Farmiga add the only touch of estrogen to this thriller. Both are extremely attractive, and play the damsel-in-distress as best is allowed given all the cliches.

15 Minutes is not a good movie, but a fun one. It helps that DeNiro's charismatic personality is a part of it, but a void is formed when he is not present on the screen. In those cases, Herzfeld is wise enough to cut to a curvy vixen or Burns' dapper detective work. The bases are covered on all accounts, and while this might not change anyone's mind about TV violence, thankfully it doesn't conform to all the other action movies being made nowadays. 15 Minutes knows what it is – a fun and mindless thriller that doesn't take itself too seriously, but is just a good-looking caper in a time of senseless violence.

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

Kelsey Grammer stars in 15 Minutes

Behold a Goddess

Rhamelle "Rha Goddess" Greene will perform March 31 at 8 p.m. at Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College as part of the New WORLD Theater "Words She Spoke" poetry-in-performance series.

Hey! Wanna make fun of some crappy movies?

Oscars schmoscars! Esteemed Collegian film critic Adam Martignetti may have given you his take on the second most important award show of the year, but I'm here to deliver the goods about the awards we really care about.

The Golden Raspberry Awards, or Razzies, are handed out annually on the day before the Acadamy Awards. The show honors the important aspects of some of the most touching films of the past 365 days. This year's presentation will be blissfully dawned upon us on March 24. Oh, and don't worry; you won't find any gladiators, drug trafficking or hidden dragons in these films.

Worst Picture
Battlefield Earth
Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2
The Flintstones in Viva Rock Vegas
Little Nicky
The Next Best Thing

This is easily the most difficult category to call. There are five films that had pitiful showings at the box office. Much like the Academy's choice to nominate Gladiator three-hundred times because of it's incredibly enormous financial intake, these films were nominated based on their phenomenal ability to flop worse than a Jennifer Love Hewitt music album. The only film I saw of these five was Battlefield Earth, and it was the worst science fiction film since 1999's I was a Sixth Grade Alien. That alone makes it worthy of this award. However, There's something about watching one of the Baldwin brothers play Barney Rubble that screams, Viva Rock Vegas!

Worst Actor
Leonardo DiCaprio – The Beach
Adam Sandler – Little Nicky
Sylvester Stallone – Get Carter
Arnold Schwarenegger – The Sixth Day
John Travolta – Battlefield Earth and Lucky Numbers

Isn't ironic that Leonardo DiCaprio, the most likely winner of this award, was in two films about the ocean, when it's obvious that his career is now in the toilet. "Near/far/ wherever you are/ I believe that you're a washed up hack at twenty-five years old."

Worst Actress
Kim Basinger – Bless the Child
Melanie Griffith – Cecil B. Demented
Madonna – The Next Best Thing
Bette Midler – Isn't She Grating
Demi Moore – Passion of Mind

Did the Razzies deliberately nominate these five people just so they could brag that they've got the ten saggiest breasts in the entire world, side by side? Dear God, if you add up all of these women's ages, subtract by 1000 and divide by five, you still have a person old enough to be your great-grandmother. Madonna will win this category, but I'm going for a write in. Summer Altice, the star of Playboy's Slippery When Wet clearly displayed the worst performance of the year. Good show by her.

Worst Director
Joel Berlinger – Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2
Steven Brill – Little Nicky
Roger Christian – Battlefield Earth
Brian DePalma – Mission to Mars
Joel Schlesinger – The Next Best Thing

Brian DePalma HAS to win this award! He's like the Susan Lucci of the Razzies. We all thought he'd take home a trophy for Raising Cain in 1992, but he didn't. It was evidently obvious just by watching Snake Eyes in 1998 that he made the movie just to win the award, but was screwed again. So 2001 is the year for him. Mission to Mars, his debacle of theater screens all over the country, brought Gary Sinese, Don Cheadle and Tim Robbins together for the ultimate piece of crap. Of the six people who saw this film, three wanted their money back, two had sex in the back row of the theater, and one killed himself. Brian DePalma, a true film legend.

For more information about the Golden Raspberry Awards, check out their website at razzies.com

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist

COURTESY PEOPLE VINE

Will Battlefield Earth walk away with the Golden Raspberry for Worst Picture?

Kubrick classic released

By Jeff Roedel
The Reveille (Louisiana State U.)

(U-WIRE) BATON ROUGE, La. – "You can't fight in here. This is the War Room!" echoes through the darkened underbelly of the Pentagon in the late Stanley Kubrick's deliciously satirical film "Dr. Strangelove or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb," which has been re-released on DVD.

Some films are called "dark comedies" perhaps because the jokes aren't funny or the lighting is bad, but then along comes something like "Strangelove," a completely different beast altogether. Just by glancing at the offbeat title it is evident that this is no dour look at nuclear war.

Originally released at the height of Cold War tensions in 1964, "Strangelove" is a hilarious hot-line comedy of errors that seriously calls into question the idea of military intelligence.

"Strangelove," which comes in at No. 26 on the American Film Institute's list of the "Most Important Movies Ever," stars the dubious talent of chameleon-comic Peter Sellers ("The Pink Panther," "Lolita") in three roles.

Sellers plays the beleaguered President Merkin Muffley, a meek British Captain named Lionel Mandrake, and of course the title role of Dr. Strangelove – his name was "Merwerdrich-liche" before he became a citizen – a maniacal scientist and German expatriate whose gloved right hand apparently remains loyal to the Nazi Party.

President Merkin and his advisors convene around what appears to be a giant poker table as if gambling with the fate of the world at stake.

General Jack D. Ripper, played with convincing insanity by Sterling Hayden ("The Godfather"), has ordered one of his planes to drop a nuclear bomb on Russia. Ripper believes the communists have hatched a plot to "sap our precious bodily fluids" through the fluoridation of water.

The aloof crew of the B-52 bomber the "Leper Colony," led by country star Slim Pickins' Major T.J. "King" Kong, is given the unenviable task of starting World War III.

While Hayden's absurd ramblings about monstrous commie plots and the fluoridation of ice cream – children's ice cream – are indeed inspired, the funniest moments in the film come from the war room interaction between Sellers' Strangelove and Merkin and George C. Scott's rubber-faced, gum-grinding General Buck Turgidson.

Scott ("Patton," "They Might Be Giants") is a revelation in this role as an over-the-top military man. He stalks around the war room – stumbles too – contemplating "acceptable losses," "sneak attacks" and refusing to allow a Russian ambassador into the war room because, "he'll see the big board," which in reality is only a giant world map.

A series of catastrophes follows as our heroes learn that the Russians have what they call a "Doomsday Machine," an unstoppable nuclear device that will cause a toxic greenhouse effect for 94 years if the Soviet State is ever attacked.

Like many classics, "Strangelove" has been reissued on DVD in a "special edition" format. Kubrick's painstakingly framed shots in this black and white film have never looked so good, while the audio has been fully restored and digitally remastered. Besides the alternate subtitles and languages, this DVD version contains several enticing extras.

The disc includes two half-hour documentaries. The first is a fascinating behind-the-scenes look at the making of the film, with interviews from surviving cast and crew.

This feature elaborates on the creative processes of Kubrick and Sellers, detailing how the film was originally slated to be a suspense-drama before Kubrick decided a satirical slant would more affectively address the topic of nuclear warfare.

The second, a real treat for Kubrick-lovers, is an in-depth chronicle of the director's life and work through the release of "Strangelove" in 1964.

Also on hand are original split-screen interviews with Sellers and Scott, an original advertising gallery and theatrical trailers. All of these features add to the historical setting of the picture and aid in explaining its artistry and genius.

But with a razor-sharp script, Kubrick's superb directing and unforgettable performances from Sellers, Scott and Hayden, the real joy comes in watching the film itself.

From the opening shot of a carnal B-52 bomber refueling in mid-air to Vera Lynn crooning the maudlin World War II tune "We'll Meet Again" over a chorus of explosions, "Strangelove" leaves no target – political, military or social – left unturned in its comedic wake.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting June 1st. 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Apartment Available to take over June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-9462

Available Immediately 1 Br. Apt. - Puffton Village. Bus routes, heat, gas, hot water, included. Call 508-898-2317 or dan4tw@earthlink.net

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

95 Volvo 850 Turbo B1K, Auto, leather, 6 disc Alpine changer. $14,500 or B/O. 413-527-2871

1995 Jeep Cherokee 118k, many new parts totalling over $1500. Priced for quick sale $6900 ask for Geoff 549-9232

COMPUTERS

Mac & Apple Laptop, Desktop, PC Laptop, desktop repair. Lowest rate. Pentium Laptop $599 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders, Wait-staff, Door people. New Irish Pub in No. Amherst, for this spring as well as summer and fall. Apply in person. 163 Sunderland Rd. No. Amherst.

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

Wanted 24 UMass Underclassmen to take part in 45 minute survey. Also coordinator position. For details call 1-800-573-3309

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimun 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPENSQUARE.COM

EMPLOYMENT

Looking for a job in Amherst this summer? Full and part time jobs are available with Summer Conference Housing! Come and get an application and job description at the Conference Services Office, Room 918 Campus Center.

Day Care Center, Rt 63, Leverett, needs substitute teaching assistants and evening maintenance person. Work study or not $8.00 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674

Movers: Moving company is hiring for moving positions. Prefer to begin training as soon as possible. Flexible hours and a fun working environment. Raises commensurate with performance, possible tips. 413-584-4746

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

FOR SALE

Maroon Sims Snowboard 150cm. Preston LS bindings. $250 OBO 253-6785

S2 Redline X-Bike $550. Full home gym perfect for apt $150 B/O Call Kellie 549-7889

LOST AND FOUND

Car Keys, House Keys Found outside of Boyden Gym. Found AM 3/13. 617-290-5942

MISCELLANEOUS

Are you in a long-distance relationship? Feel better at www.sblake.com

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer ? Contact the Student Legal Service Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

LET THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE SEE WHAT YOU HAVE TO OFFER!

PLACE YOUR AD TODAY!

545-3500

Have a Fun and Safe Spring Break From The Daily Collegian

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 • HSCN Bulletin Board
5 • CBS 4 Boston
6 • ABC 56 Springfield
8 • WB 27 Springfield
9 • Learning Center Channel
10 • UMass Channel
12 • WGGB 40 New Britain
13 • Public Broadcasting
14 • UMass Channel
15 • International Channel
16 • UMass Channel
17 • WLVI 56 New Haven
18 • ESPN
19 • TNT
20 • USA
21 • Sci-Fi
23 • Nickelodeon
24 • Nick at Nite
25 • TV Land
26 • Comedy Central
27 • BET
28 • Lifetime
29 • Disney Channel
30 • Cable TV News
31 • MTV
32 • VH1
33 • The Learning Channel

FRIDAY EVENING C - Campus MARCH 16, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Doo Wop 51 (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	)	News	CBS News	March Magic	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. Midwest or South Region 1st Rd. -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. 1st Rd.
WBZ	4	)	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. Midwest or South Region 1st Rd. -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. 1st Rd.
WCVB	5	)	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Norm (N)	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Sabrina-Witch	Popstars	Populer "Coup" (In Stereo)	News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Love Story" (N)		Deteline (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		4	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Sabrina-Witch	Popstars	Populer "Coup" (In Stereo)	News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	30	6	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Providence "Love Story" (N)		Deteline (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	(1)	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Police Videos (In Stereo) (PA)			Lone Gunmen (N) (In Stereo)	News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Love Story" (N)		Deteline (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	9	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Siste We're In	Not for Ourselves Alone-Stanton-Anthony			Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	28	News	ABC News	Spin City	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl	Norm (N)	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Perkers	Girlfriends	Gary & Mike	Celebrity	Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld
WTBS	27		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Turner & Hooch" (1989, Comedy) Tom Hanks, Mare Winningham						Mad Abt You
A&E	29		Night Court	Biography	Law & Order	"Bad Faith"	Biography: Maureen O'Hara		It's Burlesque			Law & Order
CNN	18	23	Inside Politics	Moneyline News	Newshour (N)	Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	31	32	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Comics Come Home		Comics Come Home		Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live
DISC	32		Wild Discovery	"Giraffes"	Wild Discovery	Monsters	Dangerous Jobs		World's Mightiest Bank		Casino Diaries	After Midnight	Justice Files	"On the Run"
ESPN	33		Sportscenter		Baseball Tonight (N)		Cheerleading		ATP Tennis: Tennis Masters Series -- Men's Quarterfinal	(Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	34		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"The Preacher" (1997, Suspense) Linda Evans,				Division "Hero" (In Stereo)
MTV	35		(5:30) mtvICON (In Stereo)		Diary		Jgether	Spring Break	How to... Live Like a Rock Star (In Stereo)				Testimony: 20 Years of Rock
NICK	36		Pinky & Brain	Caitoo	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Rugrats		Told by Ginger	Told by Ginger	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	37		Hercules: Legendery Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Born to the Purple"		Farscape (N) (In Stereo)		Farscape "Season of Death"		Outer Limits	"Family Values"	Farscape (In Stereo)
TLC	24	24	Trauma: Life in the ER		Killer Bees		Life Against Death		Gladiators -- The Brutal Truth		Professional Wrestling		Life Against Death
TNT	40		ER "Days Like That" (In Stereo)		Pretender	"Red Rock Jarod"			"Crocodile Dundee" (1986, Comedy) Paul Hogan,		"Lost in Space" (1998, Science Fiction) William Hurt,
USA	41		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Innocence" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Cuda Grace"		"The Perfect Nanny" (2000, Suspense) Dana Barron, (In Stereo)				Fernclub.com (In Stereo)
HBO	42		(5:30)		"Jefferson in Paris" (1995, Drama) Nick Nolte, 'PG-13'				"Event Horizon" (1997, Science Fiction) R		"Pitchfork" (2000, Action) Dean Cain, Lori Petty 'R			Dennis Miller
MAX	43		(4:05)		"Home Alone" (1990) Macaulay Culkin 'PG'		"Daisy Kenyon" (1997, Drama) James Belushi, 'R'				"Relapse" (1997) James Belushi, 'R'			Passion Cove
SHOW	44		(5:00)		"Driving Me Crazy" (1991) Billy Dee Williams,		"Snow Day" (2000) Chris Elliott, 'PG'		Extras: Enemy		Stargate SG-1	Stargate SG-1	Tangent	Red Shoe

Quote of the Day

"Indeed, I am nothing but a wanderer and a pilgrim on this earth! And what more are you?"

–Goethe

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 24	HIGH: 40 LOW: 28	HIGH: 44 LOW: 25

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas

CHECK IT OUT, JIM A KNIGHT! GIVE ME A QUEST!
RESIGN YOURSELF TO THE HALLOWED CARNIVAL OF MODERNITY!
I BOUGHT A HOTDOG FROM A STREET VENDOR THE OTHER DAY. IT'S ONE WEIRD-ASS LOOKING DOG. I DON'T HAVE TO WALK IT, THOUGH, WHICH IS NICE. MOSTLY IT JUST SITS AROUND, SMELLING TASTY.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WE NEED TO REDUCE STAFF BY TWENTY
HERE'S A LIST OF THE PEOPLE YOU'VE A-L-M-O-S-T WORKED TO DEATH.
I HAVE ANOTHER PROJECT FOR YOU ...UH ...TED
AACK!

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

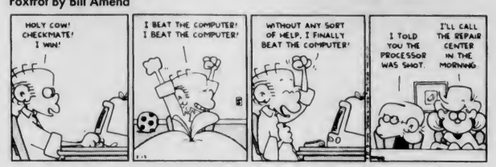
ABC SPORTS
HI AND WELCOME TO THE 2001 BEERPONG FINALS ON ABC! IT'S ADAM + ERIC VS. BERROKE AND JESS THE CHAMPS VS THE CHICKS... DOES IT GET ANY BETTER?! THIS IS AWESOME BABY! IT'S BEER PONG AT ITS BEST! WHICH TEAM GUNNA BE #1 FITA... PHONE TIME PLAYERS, BABY TIME! I HYPE ADAM + ERIC THIS WEEK AND FIND OUT!
BEERPONG 2001

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

B.D. IS RECRUITING AT A CORRECTIONAL FACILITY.
I DROPPED BY YOUR HOUSE THIS MORNING, JIMMY...
IMAGINE MY SURPRISE TO HEAR YOU'D BEEN BUSTED ON A BREAKING CHARGE AMID A LOUDLY BREAK!
OF COURSE, EVEN IF YOU'RE CONVICTED, I'M SURE YOU'LL BE OUT PLAYING FOOTBALL BY THIS FALL! AND I HOPE IT'LL BE FOR THE FIGHTING SWOOPERS OF HARLEM!
SO? HOW ARE THE OL' GRADES? JUST KID ONES!
GILMER!

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



HOLY COW! CHECKMATE! I WIN!
I BEAT THE COMPUTER! I BEAT THE COMPUTER!
WITHOUT ANY SORT OF HELP, I FINALLY BEAT THE COMPUTER!
I TOLD YOU THE PROCESSOR WAS SHOT.
I'LL CALL THE REPAIR CENTER IN THE MORNING

Over the Hedge By Fry and Lewis

BUT, RJ! WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT PRO WRESTLING?...
ALL I NEED TO KNOW... IT'S FAKE.
R.J., IT'S STILL DANGEROUS! YOU'LL GET SMUSHED!
TUT-TUT, DAMN LAD... I HAVE MY OWN STUNT DOUBLE.
SAMMY?
I'M READY FOR MY CLOSE-UP, MR. MCMAHON.
NO CLOSE-UPS. THAT'S MY JOB.

Robotman By Jim Meddick

CAPTAIN KIRK HAS NEVER LOST A FIGHT! WHAT CHANCE DOES ROBOTMAN HAVE?
HE'S DEFINITELY IN TROUBLE.
BUT THERE IS ONE THING I LOOK HERE AT KIRK'S HEAD NOTICE ANYTHING. UNUSUAL?
HIS HAIR. IT'S UNNATURALLY BROWN, THICK AND CURLY.
SO WILLIAM SHATNER HAS AN UNUSUALLY HEALTHY HEAD OF HAIR FOR A MAN HIS AGE. WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES THAT MAKE?
I'M NOT SURE. BUT IT MAY MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD!
NEXT WEEK: CONCLUSION!!!!

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Anxiety over your workload either at home or on the job will keep you from enjoying a hidden opportunity today – unless you lighten up!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Don't get carried away with yourself today. A little subtlety, style and grace go a long way toward impressing others.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Physical and mental activities have much to offer you today, and you will want to combine the two for the best results.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Someone close to you is likely to be quite edgy and irritable today – and it will be up to you to see that he or she stays in control.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You must be willing to take a personal interest in someone else's affairs today if you are going to help at all. You mustn't remain impartial!
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You must remain on top of things as they develop today. If it's more authority you're after, you must be willing ot prove that you can handle it.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Don't misuse your own popularity today. Give others the time of day – and the benefit of the doubt. A friend comes to you with advice.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It may be up to you today to do those things that you thought were someone else's responsibility. You can do it all much better!
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – This is a good day for solving financial problems as best you can. Remember, you can bend the rules – but you mustn't break them.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – What is asked of you today may not be fair, but if you can rise to the occasion and so what is required, then you'll be ahead of the game.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – What seems a mistake at first may prove to be highly beneficial to you in the long run. It may take time, but you'll eventually be rewarded.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – An old-fashioned approach to a new and unexpected dilemma is likely to pay off with surprising speed. This may, indeed, be the way to go!

MONKEY-BOX BY PBJ

AFTER THE COFFEE MAKER CROSSED THE PICKET LINE, THE APPLIANCES STRIKE SEEMED DOOMED.

© 2001

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Fish Munchies (B)

Tavern Batter Fish (F, W)

Captain's Catch Sandwich (H)

Southern 6-Bean Stew (vegan) (H, W)

Hampshire and Franklin are closing after lunch at 2:00pm

DINNER

Chef's Choice (B, W)

Thai Seitan (vegan) (B, W)

Berkshire and Worcester close after dinner.

Solid Custom Tattoo
490 West St. Rte 116 Amherst, MA 259-0003
hue-e-sat 1-9-5
sun opt. only
A Tattoo is for life Know your artist

ACROSS
1 Actress Close
6 With, to Henri
10 Lotion ingredient
14 Video's companion
15 Detective Wolfe
16 Run
17 Principal conduits
18 Bleak
19 Mock fanfare
20 Silent
21 Healthful breakfast food
23 Smoker's need
25 Just bought
26 Dawn goddess
27 "Pat — Dark"
29 Stacked
32 Say "hello" to
33 AAA suggestion
36 Actress Barbara —
37 Summoned
38 Party giver
39 Boone or Nixon
40 Sarcastic slang
41 Florida city
42 Lies a tablet
43 Evergreen
44 Help
47 Loco
51 Purse-snatcher's second job?
54 Unharmed
55 Dry
56 Lena of film
57 Days of "Evening Shade"
58 Tied
59 Pharaoh's river
60 Facial growth
61 Patches up
62 Laundry problem
63 Runs the motor in neutral

DOWN
1 Greek letter
2 Oishu feasts
3 Singer Paul
4 Almost a score
5 Thumbs-down votes
6 Furious
7 Norm's wife on "Cheers"
8 Dublin's locale
9 Traveled from the house to the office
10 Like Dickens dodger
11 Takes it easy
12 '50s song, maybe
13 Large antelope
21 — relief
22 Textbook division
24 Fishing pole
27 Egged on 28 Requisite
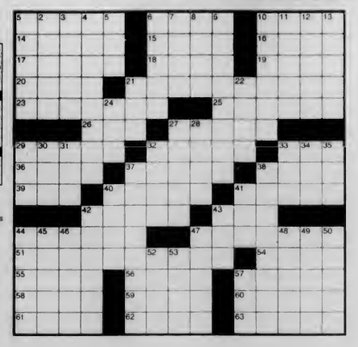
29 Energy
30 Highest mountain in Crete
31 Allow
32 Yawn
33 Computer abbr.
34 Kitchen mess
35 JFK stat
37 Floating docks
38 Tormented persistently
40 Speech problem
41 Metal in bronze
42 Compares
43 Chubby
44 Cathedral parts
45 Calendar
46 Fastener
47 Poet Stephen Vincent —
48 Twangy
49 Blazing
50 Nursery buys
52 Neaten the hedge
53 About 2.2 pounds
57 Geisha's accessory

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

H	E	A	P	S		B	L	O	C	K		A	D	S
A	L	L	A	N		A	A	R	O	N		O	J	P
S	M	I	L	E		S	T	A	G	E		O	N	O
			R	A	T	E		E	M	B	E	R
N	O	T	A	B	L	E		R	A	C	I	E	S	T
A	Z	A	L	E	A		S	O	L	A	R
M	O	I	S	T		S	L	O	P	P	Y		J	O	E
E	N	G		C	L	A	S	S		N	O	V	A
D	E	A	N	S		L	I	S	T		E	R	N	E	S
			E	P	O	C	H		S	Q	U	A	R	E
V	E	S	T		G	E		N	O	U	G	H	T	S
A	V	A	S	T		T	O	N	I
L	E	S		I	D	A	H	O		N	O	M	A	D
E	R	S		N	O	N	O	S	E		I	V	E
S	T	Y		G	E	N	R	E		K	E	B	E	C

1-4-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's Staff

Night Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician	Tibi
Copy Editor	Matt Despres
Production Supervisor	Roberto Delgado
Production Staff	Adi Huseinovic, John Dicker

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Friday, March 16, 2001 | 8

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Junior Brian Hourigan and the Massachusetts men's baseball team know that their pitching staff will be key in the next nine road games.

Minutemen traveling the road, again

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

"On the road again – I just can't wait to get on the road again."

Unlike Willie Nelson, the Massachusetts men's baseball team certainly has little desire to go on the road again. After a season opening series at Oral Roberts where the Minutemen were swept by the Golden Eagles, they now hit the road over spring break to play nine games in nine days in the Middle Atlantic states.

Liberty, George Mason, Richmond and Delaware State comprise the non-conference portion of the road trip, with the Maroon and White commencing its A-10 conference play on Saturday at LaSalle. But despite his team's 0-3 start, head coach Mike Stone is far from panicking.

"We know when we scheduled that we had picked out some tough opponents," said Stone, who is in his 14th year at the helm of the Minutemen. "Oral Roberts, Liberty, George Mason, Richmond and Delaware State – they're all southern teams, all good teams. It's not easy to beat a team down South when you haven't played any games.

"You just need to play to get better – that's the way baseball is," he added. "We have a tough series this weekend with Liberty. They're at least as good as if not better than Oral Roberts."

The Flames are 8-5 this season and are led by senior starter Dan Valentin (3-0, 2.45 ERA) and junior first baseman Kelly Knouse (.371 Avg., 4 HR). The Minutemen invade Lynchburg, Va. for a three game set spanning from Saturday to Monday.

After that, UMass travels to Richmond, George Mason and Delaware State in consecutive days before having a day off on Friday. For such a rigorous stretch, Stone will have a tough task in keeping his troops well rested.

"We're bringing 11 pitchers and 17 position players so we'll have some depth," Stone said. "Hopefully we'll have some quick innings on defense. We should be well rested and ready to go."

The second Saturday of spring break brings the opening of A-10 play for the Minutemen as they travel to Philly to take on the Explorers. LaSalle, who finished last in the A-10 West last year, got off to another rocky start this season, opening 1-7. But regardless of the opponent, every conference game is critical according to Stone.

"Every opportunity we have to play a conference series, well, that's our season really," he said. "The only way we get to play in the postseason is to win in conference.

"I want to get to the point that when we're playing LaSalle we're comfortable and confident in every aspect of the game that we need to be," he continued. "We need to be confident and comfortable on the mound, at the plate and defensively. If we do that, we should have a good series."

The Explorers have had a decent season at the plate, but their pitching has been dismal. With a team ERA of 8.15 early in the season, LaSalle has had very few bright spots, but Bryan Harvey (1.38 ERA, 12 K in 11 innings) has been a strong thrower on the struggling staff.

As for the Maroon and White, it has had some pitching problems in the early going as well. In the three games with Oral Roberts, the Minutemen posted a 10.88 ERA with upperclassmen Nick Skirkanich and Craig Szado both having ERA's of 12 or higher. Junior Jesse Santos, on the other hand, has posted a 1.80 ERA in his five innings pitched.

"It starts with pitching," Stone said. "If a guy goes out there and has some quick innings, you get some hitting and make things happen, you have a chance to win. You can't do it with one pitcher. We need about six or seven pitchers to pitch well."

Regardless of the team's slow start, Stone is far from ready to start worrying about the team's success.

"We're not panicking," he added. "We've started off 0-6, 0-8 – when you play good teams, you set a standard that you have to play at, and it's tough to win."

UMass on roll; Albany, 'come on down'

By Matthew F. Sacco
Collegian Staff

When it comes to scouting opponents this year, Massachusetts men's lacrosse coach Greg Canella must feel like he is on The Price is Right. Mystery gift number one was an unfamiliar Stony Brook squad. Mystery gift number two is the Danes' upcoming opponent, the Albany Great Danes.

Formulating a scouting report on this weekend's adversary is about as easy as giving a price estimate on a brand new Kenmore washer, dryer set, without going over.

The Danes (0-1) have only been a member of Division I lacrosse for the last three seasons, but with former All-American and Maryland assistant coach Scott Harr at the helm, these dogs have lofty expectations and a big appetite for success.

"There going to come in here hungry to knock us off," Canella said. "They have nothing to lose."

Although Canella expects his adversary to arrive ready to take a big bite out of the Maroon and White, early indications show that the Danes teeth may be somewhat blunt.

Albany played its first game of the year against Dartmouth on Wednesday, and after a 14-3 drubbing at the hands of the Big Green, the Danes went home with their collective tail between their legs.

Senior goalie Mike Arnone had his work cut out for him, stopping 21 of 35 shots as he grudgingly took the loss.

Arnone and fellow net minder Mike Shelli are two of the team's only veterans but what the Danes lack in experience, they make up for in athleticism.

Sophomores Luke Smith, Allan Beach, Sean Donnelly and Jeremy Smith are all very athletic players who are progressing into talented lacrosse players.

The Danes biggest threat on offense is junior attackman Sal Massa Massa, who was moved up from his midfield spot to a more natural attack role, notched 16 goals and 24 points in the 2000 campaign.

Albany is a fledgling program that, under the guidance of Marr, could become a strong college lacrosse school. Right now, however, the Danes are a couple steps behind the No. 11 Minutemen (3-0, 2-0 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference), although Canella warns that his team cannot afford to look past the dogs.

"You can't ever look ahead in college lacrosse," Canella said.

With that fact in mind UMass will continue to employ its run and gun style of play that has netted 45 goals in the first three games.

"We are going to play each game like we played the first three," Canella said. "We are not changing for anybody, we are going to continue to run in transition."

The Minutemen have been able to run their high-octane offense due to the 14-headed monster they field on offense. Five different UMass players have notched hat tricks this season and on two occasions the Maroon and White have had ten different players on the score sheet.

There is no question that the Minutemen can find the back of the net with the best in the country. Coach Canella is more concerned with improving in some of the finer points of the game.

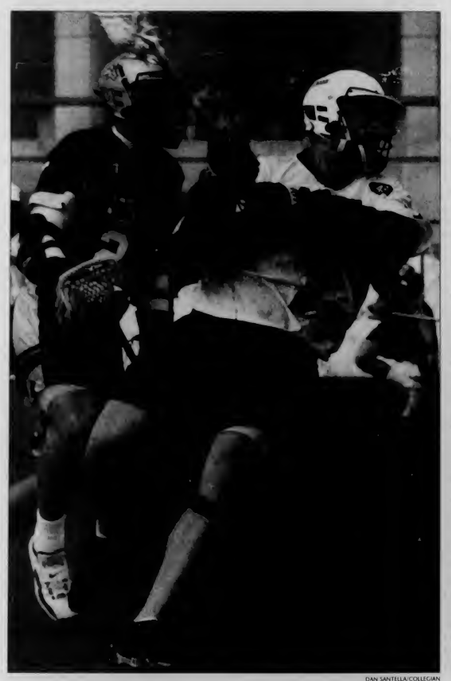
"Our decision making was poor [against Navy], we have to recognize how to finish a game," Canella said.

UMass will have to improve on those areas if it hopes to keep an athletic Albany team at bay.

The Maroon and White is facing a three game stretch of very winnable home games. The key to taking advantage of the supposed soft part of the schedule will be how the Minutemen play mentally, not physically.

"We certainly have the ability," Canella said.

All that is left is to complete the equation with a sound fundamental effort in the upcoming home games. If UMass is in the game mentally, than its perceived skill advantage will fall into place and a 6-0 start to the season is not totally out of the question.



DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Alex Racioppi rears back and fires a missle into the belly of the Stony Brook defense. He will look to do the same this weekend against Albany.

Women's lax still looking for first win

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's lacrosse team will be forced to pick up its first few wins away from home if it is going to get off to a good start.

Eight of the Minutewomen's first nine games are away from Richard F. Garber field, and while the majority of UMass students will be trying to head down south for some warm weather over spring break, the Maroon and White will be traveling north for a March 18 contest at New Hampshire and a March 24 game at No. 10 Syracuse.

And because both teams are far from pushovers, the Minutewomen will need to play well or they could very well find themselves in an early 0-4 hole to begin the year.

"We need to play together," senior midfielder Rachel Ingraffea said. "We need to work on the midfield area, breaking out and meshing together more. People were being too individualistic and we need to work more as a team."

A week ago, UMass opened its season in Cambridge against Harvard, and dropped an up-and-down 9-8 battle. Three days later, the Maroon and White traveled down to the campus of Penn State, but was the victim of a 7-0 Nittany Lion run, and dropped the game 11-4.

Against the Crimson, Lydia Robinson was the main star for the Minutewomen, totaling a hat's trick worth of goals and also dishing out an assist. In the Penn State game, Robinson could not duplicate her performance and was shut down by the stingy Nittany Lion defense, but Ingraffea stepped up and assumed the role of offensive leader by knocking two shots into the back of the cage.

Fay Naber has also contributed to the UMass attack in both contests, totaling a pair of goals against Harvard and another solo tally against Penn State.

"After the first two games, we learned a lot of things," Ingraffea said. "We're a young team compared to last year, and the younger people need to step it up. It's a lot of pressure on them, though, adjusting to the college game."

New Hampshire, on the other hand, is a very experienced team that comes into the March 18 contest with a record of 1-1. The Wildcats were outmatched by Dartmouth in their first game of the season, 13-4, but bounced back with a 20-5 crushing of Davidson. Colleen Christopher and Meagan Clavin have been the two leading scorers so far, with five goals apiece, while Sue Yund has totaled four tallies of her own.

Syracuse is also an experienced club, and will do its best to run up and down the field against the defensive-minded Minutewomen. So far, the Orangewomen are 0-2, but those two loses came at the hands of No. 7 Virginia and No. 1 Maryland. Offensive superstar Carne Soults will be the toughest assignment for the Maroon and White, as she already has eight scores to her credit in only two games.

"They are both senior laden teams," UMass coach Phil Barnes said about UNH and Syracuse. "They enjoy the fast break style of play and we need to stop that style of play if we are going to win.

Softball heads to Tallahassee for spring break

By Jim Pignatiello
Collegian Staff

What will you be doing on St. Patrick's Day?

There is some good news and some bad news for the Massachusetts softball team (7-9) when it travels back to Florida, this time to Tallahassee, this weekend for the Lady Seminole Invitational.

The good news is that the annual trip south has been prosperous for the Minutewomen in the recent past, including a 4-2 record at last year's Invitational.

The bad news is that those two losses were to teams that the Maroon and White will take on this weekend, the Michigan Lady Wolverines and the Florida A&M Rattlerettes, two very tough opponents.

UMass is hoping the good news will outweigh the bad as it rounds out the weekend taking the diamond opposite the Maryland Terrapins, the Florida State Lady Seminoles, as well as participating in pool play against teams unknown at press time.

"We are playing some great teams," sophomore Emily Robustelli said. "We have been around .500 the past three trips, so we want to have a winning record (this weekend)."

Timely hitting and consistency from the mound have been the focuses for head coach Elaine Sortino's squad this week. The team has had trouble in both categories, leading to the sub-.500 record, and must get quality pitching from the entire staff. During each of the last three road trips, the Minutewomen have seen one pitcher dominate while the rest of the staff struggles.

Meanwhile, the hitters are taking it upon themselves to get on the scoreboard earlier in the games.

"We are working on our pitch selection and locating the pitches sooner," Robustelli said. Not that early struggles will send this team into a downward spiral – Robustelli feels the exact opposite is happening within the resilient squad.

"We have great chemistry and every day we are getting better and better," she said.

While UMass is improving every week, it seems the team will be unable to reach its full potential until practices can be held outside. The Minutewomen are at a disadvantage when taking on teams that practice outside all week long – teams like Florida State and Florida A&M. This is an argument that holds no water in the minds of Robustelli and the Maroon and White, however.

"We go outside on the turf and inside in the gym," Robustelli said. "If you can field the ball off the turf or off the hard floor, you can field it anywhere."

The Minutewomen did take some positives from last week's trip to, what is beginning to seem like their second home, Florida. While splitting the weekend in Tampa, UMass knocked off the No. 24 Wisconsin Badgers, 3-0.

"Wisconsin was a big win for us," Robustelli said.

Beating ranked teams is always a good way to gain momentum, something the Maroon and White had trouble with early this season.

With a little help from a leprechaun or two this weekend, the Minutewomen will add to their momentum and continue the winning ways they have been accustomed to in the Lady Seminole Invitational.

Softball's Spring Break Schedule

Lady Seminole Invitational @ Tallahassee, Fla.

Fri. 03/16 - Michigan	Noon
Fri. 03/16 - BCC	2:00 PM
Sat.. 03/17 - Maryland	Noon
Sat., 03/17 - Pool Play Begins
Mon. 03/19 @ Florida State	5:30 PM
Tue. 03/20 @ Florida A&M	5:00 PM
Sat. 03/24 @ La Salle	Noon
Sat. 03/24 @ La Salle	2:00 PM
Sun. 03/25 @ La Salle	Noon

Two kinds of saxophones, a piano, a flute and his voice: Sam Rivers flows. So row, row, row your way into Arts.

ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN

There's a reason that UMass men's lax is ranked in the national Top Ten... The team does everything but lose.

SPORTS p. 10

Volume CVII Issue 101 | www.dailycollegian.com | Monday, March 26, 2001

Crowe's Gladiator conquers Oscars

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Which film was most honored at last night's 73rd annual Academy Awards held at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles? Well, it's hard to say.

Ridley Scott's Roman Empire reprisal Gladiator lead all Oscar winners with five statuettes, including Best Picture. However, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon took home four statuettes, including Best Foreign Language Film, and Traffic matched that total, garnering a Best Director award for Steven Soderbergh.

Russell Crowe, Gladiator's lead, took home one of the night's biggest individual honors by capturing Best Actor. Crowe was nominated in this category last year for The Insider. The normally disaffected Aussie provided one of the more heartfelt moments in his acceptance speech and credited the film's director for his own success.

"I owe this to one bloke and his name is Ridley Scott," said Crowe.

Gladiator held strong in all the technical categories throughout the night. Its first award was for Costumer Design; Janty Yates was rewarded for, among other achievements, putting Russell Crowe in a kilt. Gladiator also won for Best Sound and Best Visual Effects.

Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon was celebrated for its landmark achievement in Asian cinema and its enormous crossover appeal. In addition to Foreign Language Film, Tiger won Best Cinematography (Peter Pau), Best Art Direction (Tim Yip) and Best Original Score (Tan Dun).

Marcia Gay Harden provided the night's first and biggest upset taking home the Best Supporting Actress Oscar for her role in Pollock. From among a crop of previous Oscar winners, including Judi Dench and Frances McDormand, and heavy favorite, Kate Hudson (Almost Famous), Harden emerged the victor.

"Members of the Academy, thank you. Thanks you for even taking the time to view our tape," said Harden in jest during her acceptance speech. As of last night's broadcast, Pollock had collected only $2.75 million at the box office.

However, the favorites were not to be denied for very long.

Heavy favorite Julia Roberts won her first career Oscar; a Best Actress statuette for her fiery performance in Erin Brockovich. Roberts had some trouble making it onto the platform due to her elegant black dress, but was reluctant to relinquish the spotlight once she was there.

"You put that stick down young man because this may be the last time I get here," Roberts warned the Academy conductor before her speech. By the end, she was on the verge of tears and thanking everyone.

Another favorite, Benicio Del Toro, who won the Screen Actor's Guild Award for acting, took home the Best Supporting Actor for his role in Traffic. Del Toro was perpetually cool in accepting, perhaps trying to claim the high-definition TV being offered by the Academy as a reward for the night's shortest acceptance speech. The drug epic Traffic was well represented by Oscar last night, claiming more statuettes. Steven Mirrione won for film editing and Steven Gagan's adapted screenplay was chosen from among a prestigious crop.

"I want to honor anybody that spends a part of their day creating," said Soderbergh in his acceptance speech for Best Director.

Cameron Crowe took home the Best Original Screenplay Oscar for Almost Famous. Crowe, who also directed Famous, was nominated in this category for 1996s Jerry Maguire.

Bob Dylan perhaps capped his illustrious career by winning a Best Original Song Oscar for "Things Have Changed," the theme song from Wonder Boys.

"God bless you all with peace, tranquility and good will," said Dylan in his acceptance speech.

Steve Martin hosted the ceremony, which lasted for an unOscar-like three and a half hours.

COURTESY WORLD WIDE WEB

Russell Crowe in Gladiator

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Back To School
Spring breakers reluctantly made their way back to campus yesterday after a week and a half off.

Faculty Senate debates email

By Ken Campbell
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate approved two new classes on Thursday March 15, was addressed by Chancellor David Scott and heard recommendations on increasing revenue to the campus. However, the most controversial motion of the evening occurred after the Senate's regular business had concluded and Chair Frank Hugus was ready to move on to announcements.

Senator Michael Egan then rose and made a motion to place something not previously on the agenda on the agenda. Egan wanted the Senate to pass a motion that would allow Senators unrestricted access to the "all faculty" email list maintained by the administration of the University of Massachusetts.

The motion required a two-thirds majority to pass; however, the voice vote was so close that the Chair called for a standing vote.

Twenty-three Senators rose in opposition to the motion, while only eight stood for it, failing the motion.

"If I want to send an email to all faculty I have to get the permission of the Provost's Office or the permission of the Rules Committee and the decision is made on a political basis. If they don't like the content of my message, then I'm refused permission. Recently I did try to email the entire faculty because I am concerned about the way personnel policies are implemented on this university," Egan said after the meeting. "They are not implemented fairly, there are many breaches of the rules and regulations, and there are many injustices. And these are swept under the carpet."

"Like every large organization there are official rules and unofficial rules. The unofficial rules are that they don't want certain issues to be raised, and the union itself won't raise those issues," Egan continued. "The union is only interested in pay and related benefits which does nothing for the protection of unpopular opinions or faculty who are subjected to injustice through the other systems of the University."

Egan says that he knows of several cases of injustice, discrimination and, in some cases, the removal of documents from professor's personnel files.

"I think that the access to large listserv lists is a legitimate administrative issue. None of us like to get hundreds of emails that are generated by these lists," said Secretary of the Faculty Senate Ernest May. May explained that there had to be a balance between the need for communication and "the need not to have people's mailboxes filled by hundreds or thousands of emails from individuals or organizations that we don't want to get."

The Provost's Committee on "Revenue Enhancement" presented its recommendations to the Senate. Professor Fergus Clydesdale delivered the presentation, setting a lighthearted tone that would last throughout the meeting.

"I was sorry to see the committee dissolve," Clydesdale said. "For those of you who know me, you know I'm lying."

The committee was charged with examining new revenue sources for the campus, and then forwarding its recommendations to the Senate. Among the recommendments were endowments and distance learning.

"We started a little late, and we are behind," Clydesdale said. "and we have a long way to go."

The University ranks in the bottom half of 20 schools presented. Distance learning was another possible source of revenue.

"We discussed all types of distance learning and all types of issues were raised, cost including faculty time," Clydesdale explained, "and the role of faculty quality control."

The quality control of UMass Online has been one of the primary concerns of the Faculty Senate. Associate Delegate to the Board of Trustees Ron Story, in an earlier interview, explained his feelings on the matter.

"It [UMass Online] could really damage the reputation of the institution unless there is a high quality control. If the interest in distance learning is driven largely by profit incentives, the inclination will be to hold down costs as much as possible. That will in the long run lead to lower standards so that we're concerned about," Story said. "If we're going to maintain the reputation of the institution we have to maintain high academic standards. And so we need to be involved in the approval process and the implementation process because it is not in the interests of the central office because it costs more."

The Chancellor explained that in order to fulfill UMass Online's predic-

Turn to SENATE, page 3

Four-legged therapy is goal of riding program

By Suzanne Furst
Collegian Staff

The season is about to turn over, and it's just beginning to warm up. This is the time to go out and be active.

It is with this frame of mind that the Pioneer Valley Therapeutic Riding Association commences its spring horseback riding program for riders with disabilities.

The program is offered at the University of Massachusetts' Hadley Farm. It is a program dependant on the help of volunteers. The program is looking for people to prepare the horses for the lessons and to assist the riders during the lesson. The program runs on Monday and Wednesday mornings from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

PVTRA is a non-profit organization. It is a part of the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association. According to its mission statement, the focus of the NARHA is to "promote the rehabilitation of individual with physical emotional and learning disabilities through equine-facilitated activities."

This type of treatment for people with disabilities has been termed. Equine facilitated therapy. EFT describes any medical treatment involving the usage of the horse as therapy.

"Therapeutic riding has been shown to improve muscle tone, balance, posture, coordination, motor development, as well as emotional well-being," according to the NARHA.

Therapeutic riding provides many different treatments depending on the disability. Programs are designed to target cerebral palsey, down syndrome, mental retardation, multiple sclerosis, spina bifida and traumatic brain injures.

The disabled riders improve balance and coordination through the movements of the horse.

"For the rider, the horses's three-dimensional movement provides a gentle rhythmic motion, very similar to the action of the pelvis during normal walking," the Fran Joswick Therapeutic Riding Center, Inc. explained.

The Pioneer Valley Therapeutic Riding Association is now seeking the aid of volunteers to assist in running the program.

If you can donate a few hours of your time, or would like more information, call 413-549-3259. Also, if you are interested in making a donation or volunteering for the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association, you can contact Gloria Hamblin. Ms. Hamblin is the Program Director, and can be reached by telephone at 818-700-2971.

DAN SANTELLA - COLLEGIAN

Hadley Farm is the place where the PVTRA conducts its equine therapy program. Horses (not buses) are the key component in the program, which is in need of volunteers.

National Briefs

California

A group of salesmen rescued a woman as she was being attacked by three Rottweilers in the Santa Monica mountains above Malibu Thursday.

The 44-year-old Westlake Village woman suffered multiple puncture wounds from her head to her feet. She is said to be in fair condition at an area hospital. In an odd twist, the owner of the dogs was admitted to the same hospital, complaining of chest pains.

California authorities say that the victim was attacked as she was talking to the dogs' owner. The woman was reportedly looking at real estate. The salesmen, who were taking a scenic canyon drive, saw the woman being attacked; they chased off the dogs and then drove the injured woman to a nearby fire station.

The dogs are at an animal shelter. Authorities say that it's unlikely the dogs will be destroyed because they were defending their property and owner.

Actor Clint Eastwood is pushing for solar energy to solve California's current energy crisis.

Hidden on the roof of the spectacular, mission-style clubhouse at actor Eastwood's Tehama Golf and Country Club near Monterey are 242 photovoltaic panels that provide enough solar energy to power the clubhouse, charge all the golf carts and still send thousands of kilowatt-hours to PG&E each year for free.

It's that last part that Eastwood doesn't like. If golf courses and other businesses were allowed to sell power to the grid, California wouldn't be in the fix it's in now, he says.

On a recent trip to Sacramento, Eastwood stopped by Gov. Gray Davis' office to lobby him on a solar energy bill that would make "solar real in California," according to the author, Democratic legislator Fred Keeley, the Assembly president pro tem from Santa Cruz.

Rolling blackouts were used in both Northern and Southern California last week to preserve energy in face of the shortage. It is the first time since January that the state has been forced to implement periodic electric blackouts.

Connecticut

Fairfield County became the most populous county in Connecticut in the 1990s, according to figures from the 2000 census released yesterday. The data suggested that Connecticut's center of activity is shifting away from the capital city of Hartford.

Hartford lost a striking 15 percent of its population in the 1990s, some of it, apparently, to its own suburbs. The state's population as a whole increased to 3,405,565, up from 3,305,858 in 1990. That growth of 3.6 percent was below the national trend, and Connecticut will lose one Congressional seat, going down to five, as a result.

Florida

A Miami-Dade jury acquitted outdoor sign company Eller Media and an electrician of man-slaughter in the electrocution of a 12-year-old boy at one of its bus shelters.

The jurors' reasoning: Defense attorneys raised the credible possibility that a lightning strike, rather than the shelter's shoddy wiring, killed Jorge Luis Cabrera on the rainy night of Oct. 12, 1998.

Former Eller electrician Victor Garcia was accused of gross negligence for improperly wiring the Coral Way bus shelter where the boy died. Jorge Luis ended up there after sneaking out of his house following an argument over homework with his parents.

Florida's prolonged drought brought state and federal emergency management officials to Tallahassee yesterday to contemplate worst-case scenarios, including a plan to bring in portable water desalination plants to supply drinking water if conditions don't improve.

Gov. Jeb Bush and Joe Allbaugh, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, opened the Florida Drought Emergency Partnership meeting at the state Emergency Operations Center.

The department has been meeting with the state Department of Environmental Protection, affected cities and water producers to devise a strategy for bringing massive amounts of water into Florida.

Illinois

A victim, known only as Girl X, testified in a Chicago courtroom last Friday about the attack that left her paralyzed, blind and unable to speak.

Appearing in public for the first time since she was brutally assaulted in an attack that gained national attention, the girl testified for 90 minutes, answering questions by making movements with her head and eyes. The unusual scene culminated a dramatic first day of testimony in the trial of attack suspect Patrick Sykes.

Sykes, 29, was charged with sexual assault, kidnapping and attempted murder in the January 9, 1997, attack at 1121 N. Larrabee St. in the Cabrini-Green housing complex where both he and the victim lived.

Massachusetts

Jurors in the case against Kristen H. Gilbert, the former nurse convicted last week of murdering four patients, took fewer than four hours to decide that they will consider sentencing her to death.

They found that Gilber's crimes meet the legal requirements for them to consider the death penalty, but their decision doesn't mean that they will ultimately impose it.

Prosecutors began making their case yesterday for why Gilbert should be executed, calling relatives of Gilbert's victims to the witness stand to talk about the pain Gilbert has caused them.

Had jurors decided not to proceed, Judge Michael A. Ponsor would have sentenced Gilbert to life in prison without parole.

A four-alarm fire in Marlboro sent residents out into the street early Sunday morning.

Flames were shootlng out of a condominium roof moving the fire and smoke quickly throughout the structure.

Residents of the complex reportedly had little time to escape their burning home as the smoke alarm sounded around 4:30 a.m.

Some firefighters did suffer minor injuries. One resident was treated for smoke inhalation, but everyone made it out of the building. The cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Missouri

A man suspected of robbing a bank on Grand Boulevard on Friday showed up Saturday at another branch four blocks away wanting money.

The man did not try to rob the second bank, but he aroused suspicions when he wanted money from an account that did not exist.

An employee who knew the description of the Friday robber called police, who quickly arrived and made an arrest.

A 59-year-old Kansas City, Kan., man was in custody Saturday and was expected to be arraigned according to the FBI.

Paseo High School at a rally to prepare students for the Missouri Assessment Program tests.

The tests begin April 23, and the results will determine whether the Kansas City School District regains state accreditation or faces a state takeover next year.

The rally Saturday was sponsored by the school board: state Sen. Mary Bland, a Kansas City Democrat; and state Reps. Yvonne Wilson, Melba Curls, Sharon Sanders Brooks and Craig Bland, all Kansas City Democrats.

Oregon

Traffic Officer Jeff Durbin was almost hit, apparently intentionally, by a speeding car Friday morning while standing by his bike in Gresham.

Durbin was standing next to his marked motorcycle about 8:15 a.m. when he saw a car speeding toward him. Durbin stepped out and held up his hand, trying to get the driver to stop, according to police.

Durbin says that the driver sped up, and as he tried to get out of the way, the vehicle "jerked quickly toward him."

The eight-year veteran officer was able to avoid being struck by the car, which drove several feet into the wrong lane at him, according to the news release. Police have not yet located the suspect or vehicle, and are asking for the public's help.

Washington

King County prosecutors filed second-degree murder charges this morning against the 17-year-old runaway accused in the Mardi Gras beating death of Kristopher Kime.

King County Prosecuting Attorney Norm Maleng also said that Jerell A. Thomas is charged with two additional counts of felony assault for attacking other Fat Tuesday partygoers with a skateboard.

Charging documents say Thomas was shown videotape of Kime's murder and other Mardi Gras attacks and identified himself as the culprit.

-Compiled by Adam Martignetti

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1932 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
• Cars - Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route)

No more shower sandals
•IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY TO LOOK FOR AN APARTMENT•
Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879
Come check us out at www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Est/2000 UMASS
By The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Plan Ahead for Next Year
Excellent Location...1/2 Mile From Umass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas
PUFFTON VILLAGE
Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday-Friday
(413) 549-0145

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos Especial 8.25 4.98
Potato Skins Supreme 8.50 4.25
Shrimp Cocktail 6.25 3.13
1/2 PRICE!
OCMP Welcome Here
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

STILL TIME TO ENTER::
Softball (M/W/C) - A.S.A.P.
Co-rec Soccer - A.S.A.P.
Volleyball Special (C) - A.S.A.P.
OFFICIALS NEEDED:
Softball Clinics - March 26, 28, 29, 30, Apr 1
Co-rec Soccer Clinics - March 27, 28, 29 30
Volleyball Special - March 27
Call for clinic attendance requirements, times and locations.
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693
On The Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
NEW OWNERSHIP • BETTER THAN EVER!
549~7401
Delivery Available • Call Ahead for Take~Out
DAILY SPECIALS • CATERING AVAILABLE
BAGELS • SANDWICHES • HOMEMADE SOUPS
SALADS • DESSERTS
MEAT & CHEESE AVAILABLE BY THE POUND
Mon-Tues: 10am~8pm • Wed~Sat: 10am~10pm • Sun: noon~6pm
All Major Credit Cards • OCMP
233 North Pleasant St., Amherst
(In the Carriage Shops)

europe ON A budget SEMINAR
Learn everything you need to know about traveling to Europe on a budget. Our free seminar covers:
• Discount Airfares • How to Get Around • Budget Accommodations • What You Need to Know Before You Go • Planning Your Itinerary • Tours • Travel Safety
Enter to win a trip to Europe
Other giveaways include: rail passes, travel gear, travel books and more!!
Coming soon to YOUR campus.
Contact Council Travel for details!
Campus Center Rm 905
7 - 9 pm
Wednesday, March 28th
Council Travel www.counciltravel.com

Napster "damage" doesn't frighten retail music vendors

By Chuck Soder
The BG News (Bowling Green State U.)

(UWIRE) BOWLING GREEN, Ohio – Despite lags in sales, local music shop owners insist their stores, and the industry as a whole, will survive Napster's attack.

Jim Cummer, owner of Madhatter Music at 143 E. Wooster St., is undaunted by the threats Napster and similar Web sites pose to the industry. He said he embraces music's newfound format.

Optimism aside, he said Napster, which allows users to download songs off the Internet for free, has almost certainly hurt his sales, even if marginally. Madhatter and Napster target the same audience – college students. Cummer said that Napster, with its college audience, has probably hurt sales of alternative and rock music most, which make up most of Madhatter's inventory.

Greg Halamay, owner of Finder's Records, Tapes and Compact Discs, estimates that Napster and sites like it might have taken up to 10 percent of his sales. Finder's, at 128 N. Main St., also focuses on selling alternative and rock music. Halamay remains optimistic. Napster's effect on his or any business is uncertain, because factors such as album release dates, album quality and the economy affect sales, he said. He added that though Finder's sales have dropped about 5 percent since last year, Napster cannot be proved responsible.

"I don't think [Napster's effect] is as dramatic as some people think," Cummer said. "Right now music just sucks." Good albums usually sell, he said, citing how rapper Eminem sold over 8 million copies of his latest album, The Marshal Mathers LP, during Napster's prime.

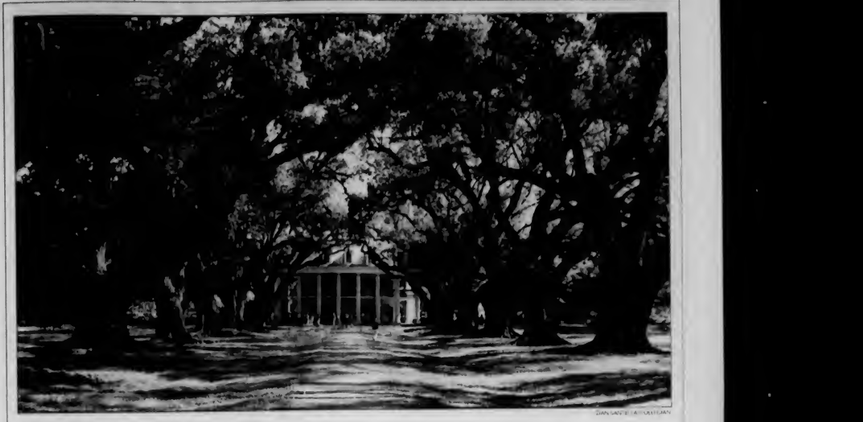
"CD burners have a great effect, too," Halamay said. Unlike cassette recorders, burners can copy CDs without sacrificing sound quality. Downloaded songs, usually in MP3 format, can also be copied. Both stores sell blank CDs to meet the demand. Finder's usually sells about 200 CDs per week, Halamay said. If each blank CD replaces a $15 album sale, any store selling 200 blank CDs per week has reason to worry. If the store keeps 20 percent of the money from each sale (as Madhatter does) and sells blank CDs for about $1.50, the store would lose about $540 a week or $28,080 a year.

Halamay estimates that about every other blank CD sale amounts to a lost album sale. However, in the long run, those who burn CDs are likely to continue buying CDs, he said. "In some cases more music might stimulate someone's appetite for CDs." Regardless of Napster and CD burners, CD sales nationwide are up about 5 percent, according to the Recording Industry Association of America. However, sales of CD singles plunged 39 percent in 2000. When both figures are included, total CD sales dropped 1.8 percent to $14.3 billion last year, according to the RIAA. Vinyl records and cassettes combined account for only about 6 percent of sales.

Singles and artists with only one popular song have the most reason to fear Napster because few consumers hesitate to download a single song, Cummer said. A decade ago, sales of singles accounted for about 10 percent of Finder's sales, Halamay said. Now they make up less than 1 percent. He blames record companies for the demise of the single, not Napster.

"The industry basically doesn't make [many of] them anymore." Halamay said companies are trying to coerce consumers to buy full-length albums instead. Halamay, who opened Finder's in 1971, has seen the rise of the CD and the fall of vinyl and cassette forats. New technology often brings new threats like the tape recorder and the CD burner. He said that when the tape recorder was invented, many feared it would destroy the business. They industry not only survived, but it also grew, he said. "As the music industry changes, so will brick-and-mortar stores."

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN
Hold That Pose!
This patriotic street performer in New Orleans impresses passers-by by holding still as long as possible.



DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN
Oak Alley
Sailors of yesteryear would use Oak Alley Plantation in Louisiana to help navigate the Mississippi River.

ACLU files lawsuit against U. of Illinois

By Ashley Kennedy
Daily Illini (U. Illinois)

(U-WIRE) CHAMPAIGN, Ill. – The American Civil Liberties Union of Illinois filed a lawsuit Thursday in an attempt to establish legal restrictions on public statements issued on the Chief Illiniwek controversy.

The lawsuit, filed in federal district court, was in response to an e-mail Chancellor Michael Aiken sent March 2 to all faculty, staff and students prohibiting any contact geared toward discouraging prospective athletes from attending the University of Illinois because of the Chief Illiniwek controversy.

United States Federal Judge Harold Baker was assigned to the case, but instead of ruling, he recused himself from – or declared himself not an appropriate choice to judge – the case. After Baker's recusal, it was automatically passed on to Chief Judge Joe Bills McDade of Peoria who will reassign the case.

Baker, an adjunct professor in the University College of Law, recused himself because of his association with the University. Baker said he did not receive Aiken's e-mail.

The e-mail stated that NCAA coaches have strict guidelines on recruitment regarding "the timing, nature and frequency of contacts" with athlete recruits. The e-mail said the University could be punished severely for breaking the rules and guidelines of the NCAA contract and that faculty, staff and students were not permitted to contact prospective student athletes without the authorization of the athletic director.

The e-mail was an attempt to prevent several anti-Chief University faculty members and students from dissuading potential athletes from attending the University. Some faculty members and students announced in February that they considered contacting recruits.

ACLU leaders said Aiken's statement was a breach of First Amendment rights.

"Students should be free to talk or act on any matter they wish," said Harvey Grossman, legal director of the Illinois ACLU. "The mere existence of this directive chills (the freedom of) speech."

The ACLU stated their concerns in a March 7 letter to Aiken. A week later, Aiken replied that he would not compromise the policy he outlined in the March 2 e-mail.

Following this response, the ACLU, along with seven faculty members and students said that filing a lawsuit was the only option. They said the lawsuit was intended to "enjoin Aiken from enforcing a sweeping prohibition on the speech rights of faculty and students."

"We hope (the ruling) will clarify the legal issues of how far the University can go," said Brenda Farnell, associate professor of anthropology and an initiator of the lawsuit. "We hope this sends the message to the administrator that (the e-mail) isn't a productive strategy. We're looking for a more democratic process."

"This is no longer an issue on Chief Illiniwek," she added. "It's now an issue of free speech."

Neither Aiken nor University spokespeople were available for comment. Grossman, who traveled from Chicago on Thursday to deliver the lawsuit, returned home after the announcement of the reassignment. He will wait for news of McDade's appointment of a new judge.

■ senate

continued from page 1

tions of $16 million in 2008, an investment of $8 million in the first three years would be required.

"I have a pretty good nose for predicting revenues. We do not always have the luxury of waiting," Scott said. "We have to make these predictions every year."

Scott went on to explain that these and other predictions outlined in his presentation entitled "Strategic Intent" were not rejected by the President's office. Public Information Director Bill Wright confirmed that the Chancellor's plan was still "under advisement" and that a final decision has yet to be made.

The two motions on the Senate's agenda were the approval of one undergraduate class and one graduate course. The Faculty Senate approved both classes without objection.

"We add new classes because disciplines change, they evolve new subjects become interesting, the process for taking courses out of circulation or stopping teaching them or even taking them off the books is not as visible," May explained. "When we add new classes, we seek the approval of by a campus wide mandate and eventually that's the Faculty Senate. The courses are removed from the catalog by departments. The adding of courses is kind of a natural evolution of opportunity for students."

"It's a very interesting question, whether we are teaching to many classes whether we should try and compress the number of classes and not have so many courses in the catalog," May added. "As a sheer matter of economics it probably would make more sense to have fewer courses being taught overall."

General Electric
Monster.com
Red Herring
GE RED HERRING monster.com Work. Life. Possibilities.

Q: What do these companies have in common?
A: Former Collegian Advertisment Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.
APPLICANTION DEADLINE IS MARCH 30TH

There will be a meeting of all night and copy editors some time this week...see Sam for more details.

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Keep the option to donate to MassPIRG

Once every two years, UMass students are faced with the question of whether Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) merits a check-off box on the tuition bill. As the system stands, each student automatically donates a few dollars to MassPIRG unless he or she marks a box on the form. During the President and Student Trustee elections on March 28 and 29, students will have the opportunity to keep or eliminate this default donation to MassPIRG.

MassPIRG is an organization that seeks to give political voice to the concerns of the public, including the need for healthcare, environmental controls and regulation of genetically modified foods. Considering that corporate interests spend millions lobbying for their rights in Washington every year, it seems logical that the public needs its own lobbying group.

Is MassPIRG indeed the voice of the people? In order to decide whether MassPIRG should continue to receive student funds, it is necessary to see what the organization does with its donations.

Here is a selected list of campaigns that MassPIRG is currently pushing:

- Improve Healthcare (Spring 2001): an effort to lower prescription drug prices, increase the amount of people who have access to state healthcare, educate consumers about their rights, and guarantee them a right to sue their Health Maintenance Organizations (HMOs). MassPIRG will educate people about the Patient's Bill of Rights and lobby to pass a public health act, as well as the Single Payer Healthcare Bill. The group will also lobby for the Right to Sue bill and the Group Buying Power bill, which will cut prescription drug prices by 14 to 20 percent. MassPIRG will organize students to volunteer in free clinics to meet immediate health care needs and raise awareness of this project.
- Save Alaska's Wilderness (Spring 2000): a campaign to prevent the desecration of Alaska's untouched wilderness by oil and mining companies, timber companies, and other commercial interests. The campaign has been using strategies including shareholder resolutions, grassroots pressure and protests at gas stations and corporate offices, public education and coalition building, and a sustained media campaign.
- A Moratorium on Genetically Modified (GM) Foods (long-term): a four-pronged platform on the issue of genetically engineered foods. The group is demanding scientific assessment of the socioeconomic, environmental and human health impacts of such food, and labeling so that consumers can make informed choices. MassPIRG seeks to end corporate monopolistic practices, such as patenting seeds that hurt family farmers. Corporate liability is also at stake, and MassPIRG is pushing for accountability from the corporations that benefit financially from GM products.

MassPIRG has a history of mobilizing citizens of Massachusetts to work on political projects that fight for their rights. It is an organization with the clout to speak up to the corporate interests that run Washington. We, as students, have the opportunity to contribute to a group that sincerely represents us. On the other hand, those who do not wish to donate a few dollars have merely to check the "No" box on the tuition bill. Elections are Wednesday and Thursday in the Dining Commons around campus. We urge you to consider MassPIRG's projects, listed above, and support the default donation if the group speaks to your interests as a student and a citizen.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Would you make Rosa Parks move?

If you were magically transported through time to the Jim Crow South, and if you were white, would you make Rosa Parks sit at the back of the bus? Would you take advantage of the legal privileges given you by laws of segregation? Would you accept these privileges as your "birthright?"

I suspect that almost no one at UMass would say yes to these questions. And yet the other day I saw an ad for an organization called Birthright Israel that provides free vacations to Israel for Jews between the ages of 18 and 26. This might seem like an innocuous opportunity, but I believe the privilege accorded Jews by this program is hardly any different from the privilege accorded whites in the old South.

JONATHAN ELSBERG

The reason for the similarity is not merely because of the fact that only Jews are allowed to participate in the program. The majority of funding for the program comes from private donors, and I suppose people are allowed to spend their money however they see fit. But some of the funding comes from the Israeli government – a government that is supposed to represent all of its citizens, approximately 20 percent of whom are not Jewish. So there is a problem here with the fact that the Israeli government is supporting a program of discrimination. (And with the fact that some five billion of US tax money is provided to this discriminatory Israeli government each year.)

But that is not my real complaint. I am offended much more by the ideological implications of the Birthright Israel program. The purpose of the Birthright Israel program is to spread the idea that Jews, by virtue of being Jewish, have a superior right, a "birthright," to access the land of Israel. This is a racist ideology.

Jews who have never been to Israel, whose families have not been anywhere near the Middle East for hundreds or thousands of years (if ever), are allowed by Israeli law to instantly become citizens and enjoy all the rights that come with citizenship. Palestinians whose families lived in the same home for hundreds of years (with documentation of this fact) have been forcibly evicted and sent to live in exile. When you claim your "birthright" to visit Israel, you are saying that you accept the ideology behind this system of injustice.

The white bus passenger who told Rosa Parks to move to the back of the bus may have been old and tired herself, deserving of a seat in a perfect world. But the world is not perfect and her intolerance that she have Ms. Parks' seat was one small act of support for the evil system of segregation. If you are Jewish and wish to visit Israel, so be it, but participating in the Birthright Israel program is not merely getting a seat on the bus – it is supporting a system that takes seats away from someone else.

> "There is a problem here with the fact that the Israeli government is supporting a program of discrimination."

I am not suggesting that Jews should never go on vacations to Israel. I am saying that the way Jews go on these vacations has political meaning. I am Jewish and I have been to Israel, but I went there not with the attitude that access to that land was my right by dint of my ethnic background, rather accepting the fact that I was a guest in the land of others.

I realize that what I am saying here might be offensive to some. The problem is with the fact that Birthright Israel supports an ideology of Jewish ethnic superiority in Israel. Because I find that ideology offensive, I am willing to risk offending others in my struggle to provide an alternative ideology of equality.

There are alternative trips available to Israel and Palestine – unfortunately they are not free, but then Birthright Israel trips are not free to the Palestinians whose homes have been destroyed and stolen. If you are interested in one of these alternatives, consider Reality Tours (http://www.globalexchange.org/tours/) or COPRED (http://www.evergreen.edu/user/copred/studytours.htm), among others. Or just go on your own, but with open eyes and the mindset of honest equality.

Jonathan Elsberg is a UMass graduate student.

Mary-Kate, Ashley and a Moose:
A wild Spring Break '01

SUE KOENIG

While most of you out there in readerland trekked away from this winter wonderland of UMass for Spring Break, I remained here and toiled away in the unseasonably warm March sunlight. Because I am an extremely intelligent and astute journalist, I spent most of my time investigating issues of national importance.

Unfortunately, some of the most important issues of national importance go unnoticed by the general public. Take the field of mammalian research, for instance (no, I'm not sure that such a field exists by that name, but you get the idea, so stop nit-picking). News services all over the world have been concerning themselves with the outbreak of "Foot-and-Mouth" disease in European farm animals, such as cows (Chewus Cuddus Maximus) and pigs (Oinkus Baconus Minimus), which could potentially cripple the very important Breakfast Food Industry.

Why news services have been so attentive to the development of this story is because it could have a serious effect on humans as well - if we're not careful, people could also begin to grow feet and mouths like the diseased animals overseas, which would be horrible. Only God knows what people would do if they were capable of kicking and talking. Let's not entertain such nightmarish visions any more.

Instead, let's move on to quite possibly the most important issue of national importance in the field of mammalian research: the sexual antics of a male moose (or meese, if you're talking about more than one).

According to Reuters news service in an article released on March 21, 2001, one swingin' single moose in Norway found the girl of his dreams in the town of Lardal (125 miles south of Oslo) early last week.

The moose, perhaps after drinking way too much at the local singles bar, approached Leif Borgersen's yellow Ford sedan and made all the appropriate advances.

Being that Leif Borgersen's yellow Ford sedan was, well, a yellow Ford sedan, it said nothing remotely arousing when the moose began to lick and nibble it. Frustrated by a lack of response by the car, the moose then did what any frustrated single guy might do when getting no response: he turned around and defecated on it.

Yes, that's right, the moose relieved himself all over the car. That'll teach it for "having a headache" or whatever excuse the Ford used.

Said Borgersen in a March 20th report by the Daily Telemarksavisa (Norwegian for "newspaper"): "The front yard was simply transformed into an outdoor toilet. I'm a bit uncertain whether I should take the risk of letting the car stand alone and defenseless on the front yard from now on."

As should be everyone in the entire world. People with sexually attractive cars everywhere have covered their vehicles with tarps and, sometimes, when consumed with especially intense paranoia, pulled the cars into a garage.

The fear, which has been rampant since the release of this story, is equaled only by the widespread panic that accompanied the premier edition of Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen's new magazine, which is titled, quite cleverly, Mary-Kate and Ashley.

This petrifying new development in "journalism" also occurred on March 20 - that being the date the periodical hit newsstands. The insightful cover of the magazine features, surprisingly, Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen, and advertises articles that revolve around, surprisingly, Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen. Mary-Kate and Ashley decided that releasing a magazine bearing their namesake would be a good idea because of the following reasons:

1.) They had already switched places in an ingenious movie plan to get their parents back together in London.

2.) They had already switched places in an ingenious movie plan to get their parents back together in Paris.

3.) They had already reached the coveted four-foot mark in height.

4.) Dualstar Entertainment Group, Inc., footed the capitol.

Why did Dualstar think it was a good idea? I have no idea. Perhaps it wants the twins signed on to a lifetime contract long before they become old enough to step into the inevitable roles as sex symbols, like former child actors Alyssa Milano and Drew Barrymore did before them.

So, finally, what have we all learned here today? We learned that you should be very afraid about the prospect that your car could become the love interest of a well-fed moose, and that Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen have a new magazine on newsstands.

Ciao.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Visit us on the web at www.dailycollegian.com...but you better not play Snood--or else...

Does Shorty use a cell phone?

RYAN BENHARRIS

Who the hell is "Shorty?" Did I miss something in pop culture, or are there other people out there who are asking this question too? I had a conversation with my dad the other day, explaining to him why OutKast are cool and the Backstreet Boys are not, and I started to realized that, much like my 49-year-old father, I'm starting to lose touch with the lingo of the outside world. Some things are really setting me back and leaving me abundantly confused.

I repeat the question: who the hell is Shorty? Every single song is now dedicated to shorty. "Shorty, you're my angel," says Shaggy. "If Shorty wanna rock, we rockin' to this," explains Nelly. Who is Shorty? Now, first of all, don't tell me that we are now eliminating the tall female population from that generic category of "male desire." That ain't cool. Height should have nothing to do with beauty. All you tall ladies out there give me a "hell yeah" on that one.

Is Shorty a specific person? Is Shorty an actress that I haven't seen before? Is she staring in the newest Brad Pitt film? Is she a porn star? Maybe she's a singer, and these rappers are trying to get her to do a duet with them, but she won't and will sing with Ricky Martin instead. Didn't they call that guy on Police Academy Shorty? Or was it Pipsqueak? Maybe I should befriend a midget named Shorty. That'd be great. We'd go to wrestling matches together. Would that make me cool?

I think I need to find Shorty, so I can become cool quick! I'm not cool. Why am I not cool? It's because I don't have a cell phone. The cell phone is the ultimate cultural icon that I, Ryan Benharris, do not understand. At what point did a cell phone become a vital life-prolonging necessity, more important than the human liver? Everyone I know has one. I suppose it could have its benefits. People can find you wherever you are, and if you're in trouble you can call for help. But if you're a high school or college student, why on earth do you need a cell phone? Who are you calling?

I'll use my brother as an example. My brother got his cell phone during his junior year in high school. From the day my parents fronted the first bill for it, the phone was the primary source of each and every fight my house ever showcased. I swear to God, you could have put the cell phone fights on pay-per-view and charged $49.95. Each weekend my brother would do something brainless (usually involving liquid stupidity) and consequently my parents would take the phone away. He would then steal the phone out of their bedroom and use it to call someone for more beer.

Somewhere in the midst of those fights, my brother had to justify the necessity of the phone to try to legitimately get it back. "All of my friends' phone numbers are stored in it," he explained. That reason may have worked in New York City, but we live in North Attleboro, MA. The population is twelve. Plus I'm pretty sure that all of his friends' phone numbers are stored in a big yellow book with white pages in the front. Honestly, you really don't need an expensive mobile device to remember the phone number of the kid who lives next door. You don't even need a regular phone to get in touch with him. You can just open the window and yell, "Hey, Spanky! Put it down and come over." Thus, he was never able to sell the notion that he absolutely needs a phone to me. Nonetheless, he still has it.

There aren't too many situations that you can get into in high school or college that you'd need to bring your own phone to call your way out of, either. We go to a university with more public phones than public bathrooms. This is Amherst, not UMass Desert Island. You're not going to be attacked by a wild mountain lion in the middle of the Campus Center and say, "Whew, thank God i brought my cell phone, because otherwise there would not be any other physical way to get in touch with an emergency medical service. I am such a hero!"

Instead of useful things, the cell phone is just a way to fill otherwise quiet time with obnoxious chatter that forces everyone else around you to listen to. Have you ever listened to someone else's conversation while they're yakking away on their cell phone? Of course you have, you can't avoid it. They're always the loudest person in the room. The conversation is always exceptionally useless. "Hey, what's up? I'm in the DC. Yeah, the food sucks. When I get back to the dorm I'll probably order something. You gonna study for Chem tonight? Yeah, me too. Hey, I've got to go, I'll call you later."

By the time he's done, I feel like tapping the person on the shoulder and saying, "Hey, do you mind if I borrow your phone for a second? I promised one of my customers I'd sell them some crack, and I need to call him from a cell phone to efficiently support the drug dealer stereotype," just to make the phone appear a little bit practical.

If lack of necessity is not a strong enough selling point against my joining the cell phone army, then the utter annoyance of it certainly is. Let me just confide to you now: if you have a cell phone, I hate your guts. From the second you pull that ungodly piece of technological aggravation out of your pocket you annoy me in every facet of the imagination. Then you have the nerve to brag about the wonderful extra features that the phone can do. As if the phone isn't annoying enough, people have to go and teach it tricks. The top five things that you think are so incredible about your cell phone are actually the top five most worthless things in the history of mankind.

1. Your cell phone has voice mail – Yeah, and what do you use the voice mail for? Settings up messages that you think are funny but aren't. They just annoy and, quite frankly, disturb the entire rest of the world, making us all think less of you. Have you ever heard an intelligent message on a cell phone voice mail; or even a normal "Hi, I'm not here right now leave a message?" No, instead you call someone's voice mail and get, "Hi, this is Mickey Mouse, I'm not here right now because Minnie and I are at marriage counseling. I smacked her again because she was mouthing off. Leave a message and I'll call you back when I'm not molesting children, playing Russian roulette, or stabbing strangers with dirty hypodermic needles. Oh, and if you've reached this message by accident, and were actually trying to get [cell phone owner's name], you can leave a message for him too, and he'll call you back."

2. Your cell phone has a custom case – This is the one that always boggles my mind. People actually think that other people care about the color of cover of the cell phone. What's even funnier is watching one cell phone owner show another cell phone owner the extravagant case. They stare at in awe like it's got a cure for the clap inside. Unless your cell phone case is the naked Katie Holmes scene from The Gift on replay over and over again, please don't show it to me. Seriously, I've seen blue before. I know what it looks like.

3. Your cell phone is small – At some point, it became fashionable to make the cell phone the size of a thumbtack. I really can't understand why. Remember when cell phones first came out and they were the size of a missile? Those were great. They defined "phallic symbol." If you had a cell phone big enough to tow a truck, it really didn't matter how large or ineffective your penis was. Why did they ever get rid of those anyway? Oh, right: brain cancer.

4. Your cell phone plays "Whistle While You Work," when it rings – So what, my dog can bark "Jingle Bells," my dad can belch the National Anthem, and if you pull my finger I'll perform any song you want. However, the whole world doesn't want to hear my dog barking or my dad belching. And guess what, your entire three hundred person lecture doesn't want to hear "Whistle While You Work" either, ass!

5. You can surf the web on your cell phone – Who cares? Surfing the web is only good for two things: checking your email and looking at porn. And there's only a certain amount of times you can check your email in any given day.

I guess I'm getting old. There are other ways to support that theory. I forget stuff all the time. I honestly think I'm going deaf. The movies aren't as good as they used to be, and it'll only be a few more years before the gray hair and hemorrhoids take over. But if a few of life's little cultural advancements pass me by, I really don't certainly don't need one.

While you kids are wasting away a Saturday night on the cell phone, hopefully I'll be with my man Nelly. "In the club on the late night, feeling right looking trying to start something real nice. Looking for a little Shorty I'll notice so that I can take home." But sadly, I don't even know what that means.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

High-concept rock from Our Lady Peace

Book inspires Canadians to craft Machines

By Rob Schulze
Collegian Staff

OUR LADY PEACE
Spiritual Machines
Columbia

A concept album? Perhaps. An enjoyable collection of songs? Absolutely.

Spiritual Machines, the newest album from Canada's own Our Lady Peace, was born when the band members read a book entitled The Age of Spiritual Machines – When Computers Exceed Human Intelligence by a certain Ray Kurzweil. The band found the book, whose basic plot is contained entirely within the title, enrapturing and from it the concepts for the album Spiritual Machines was born. The band even had Kurzweil in the studio reading excerpts from the book, which make up five of the album's 15 tracks.

That's the story behind Spiritual Machines. The actuality of the album, however, is much different.

This is not to say that the reality of Spiritual Machines is disappointing. On the contrary, the album is a solid follow-up to the band's previous release, Happiness is Not A Fish That You Can Catch, one of the best albums of the late nineties. It simply does not feel like a concept album. With other concept albums, such as The Who's Tommy, In Flames' Whoracle and Fear Factory's Obsolete, you don't have to read the liner notes to realize that you are being told a continuous story throughout the album. This developing of a storyline does not happen on Spiritual Machines. As a concept album it is a simple failure. Taken from a different standard, however, Spiritual Machines makes a really good rock record.

If one were to take out the five Kurzweil tracks and simply put one song after another, you wouldn't have a solid album of catchy pop rock tunes featuring singer Raine Maida's unique vocals and interesting, engaging songwriting.

Lead song "Right Behind You (Mafia)," for instance, is a fabulous fast love song with a great beat and chorus and energetic drumming courtesy of guest Matt Cameron of Pearl Jam. (OLP drummer Jeremy Taggart was taken out of commission by a mugger during the recording process, and Cameron filled in on two songs to finish the record.)

First single "Life" is another great vintage OLP song. Gentle, rhythmic guitars under Maida's rhetorical questions ("How many times have your friends let you down? Is anybody there? Did anybody stare?") leading to a higher-octane and uplifting chorus put this right up there with other mixed-tempo classics such as "Potato Girl" from Happiness.

Nowhere in these two utterly enjoyable songs does the feeling come across they we are being informed about intelligent computers. And while there are moments during Spiritual Machines, such as on the obvious double entendre "In Repair," where you could, if you tried, apply the stated concept, most songs simply defy a listener to find the plotline. A song called "Everyone's A Junkie," can, after all, only make so many statements.

All in all, Spiritual Machines is not as engaging and memorable as Happiness was, but still is well worth the cost of purchase. If you go in expecting The Wall you will be let down in no small way, but if you want a good dose of progressive, crafted modern rock, you'll not be disappointed.

COURTESY CLAY PATRICK MCBRIDE
Our Lady Peace, with another solid album in the bag.

Pantera focuses on the family

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

PANTERA
Tsongas Arena
March 15

LOWELL - The lights go out. Marijuana smoke and the silent whimpers of the floor-going meek imagining the soon-to-be very serious mosh pits are the only sensory elements competing with the anxious roar of the crowd. Silhouettes emerge on the stage.

"We are the fucking kings of metal," announced Pantera's lead singer Phil Anselmo, vanity the furthest thing on his mind. Hyperbole maybe further.

Pantera headlined a metal marathon March 15 at the Tsongas Arena in Lowell and stressed the values of family and integrity through both their own set and the selection of bands accompanying them on the road.

"Please don't let us down," a friend remarked, referring to Pantera, the day after the show. The comment followed a conversation about former metal heroes following the latest trend or abandoning their roots in search of a "friendlier" sound, leaving their once devoted fans, face in hands, behind. The quote came after the show, meaning that Pantera hasn't let us down yet, and on the strength of that night's performance, probably never will.

I've seen Pantera four times now, and they've never opened with the same song, which is great, but it didn't help their set at Tsongas escape some level of familiarity. The clunky "Hellbound," from their most recent release Reinventing the Steel, didn't have the propulsive force of previous openers "Domination" or "Yesterday Don't Mean Shit," but gave Anselmo ample opportunity to warm up his screaming voice.

Reinventing the Steel was well-represented, four of the ten songs were given the live treatment, but most had the feel of simply additional songs added to the list, rather than a new direction or sound that previous albums have brought. Pantera can pull from Cowboys From Hell for a dose of 80s metal; from Vulgar Display of Power for their most punked-out socially conscious material; from Far Beyond Driven for their most brutal riffs; and from The Great Southern Trendkill for their most extreme, frenetic and head-exploding material. The new songs didn't have a distinguishable feel to them, and tracks like "Goddamn Electric" felt like excess wood thrown on a fast-burning fire.

"I'll Cast A Shadow" was the exception. Apparently a favorite of Anselmo's, he introduced it as if it were already a classic, and while the crowd didn't exactly have the timing down, the slow-burn structure of the song and the intensity Anselmo brought to the performance make it a welcome addition to Pantera live.

Unfortunately, the familiarity of Pantera live was the biggest problem of the evening. While one can't fault a band for not tinkering too much with a successful live show, anyone that has seen the band live has a pretty good idea of what songs are going to be played and when. If you thought that the night was going to end before they played "Cowboys From Hell," you've had one too many Coors.

That said, the best moments were the least expected ones. "Floods" was an excellent pick of the neglected Trendkill album, and allowed guitarist Dimebag Darrell's experimental tendencies to truly shine. "Slaughtered" and "Use My Third Arm" were fairly rare picks from Far Beyond Driven, an album further represented live with the end part of "25 Years" tacked on to the end of a song mid-set.

But the biggest surprise of the night was the energy of Anselmo. Previous shows have showcased the singer strung-out on drugs from A to Z, and slurring or simply screaming words and verses. Tonight, however, he was completely on point, often

Turn to PANTERA on page 6

Enemy loses itself in jumble of bad writing

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

ENEMY AT THE GATES
directed by Jacques Annaud with Jude Law, Joseph Fiennes, Ed Harris, Rachel Weisz playing at Cinemark

Enemy at the Gates is not a war movie. Yes, it takes place in 1942 at the battle for Stalingrad, one of the most horrific battles of a war already overflowing with horror, and yes, its central conflict is between a Russian sniper and the German sharpshooter sent to kill him. These are mere set pieces, however, to what is essentially an action/romance. War movies are primarily interested in exposing the truths of war, and Enemy at the Gates shows no such interest, even if forgiven its historical inaccuracies (we might say "liberties"). It offers, instead, a character-driven tale of love, heroism and jealousy which could just as easily have been set during the Civil War, the Vietnam War or a some science-fiction conflict.

As the movie opens, we are rushed through the following history lesson: the Germans have pushed the eastern front deep into the Soviet Union, and a brutal pitched battle is now taking place for control of the city of Stalingrad. Months of bombing and artillery fire have reduced the city to a labyrinth of rubble, crumbling buildings and underground shelters. Although hollowed and useless, Stalingrad has become a symbol for the larger conflict taking place between nations, and neither side is willing to back down.

Vassily (Jude Law) is an infantryman raised by his grandfather to be a master sharp-shooter, and his talent is discovered by Danilov (Joseph Fiennes), a Russian propagandist who begins publishing reports of Vassily's exploits as a means of bolstering moral among the Russian infantry. Vassily's success, both as a soldier and a hero, prompt the Germans to call in their own master sniper, Major Koenig (Ed Harris), and the two men spend their days setting traps and lying in ambush for one another, each simultaneously hunter and prey. Meanwhile, Vassily begins a romance with Tania (Rachel Weisz), a young woman eager to fight and learn from Vassily, and their relationship ignites the jealousy of Danilov.

With such sticky intricacies of character to deal with, it comes as little surprise that any sense of historical recreations falls by the wayside, but the characters themselves are shallow and poorly sketched. The friendship between Vassily and Danilov is rushed and overplayed, the love triangle development predictable and Koenig is the only character with any consistency and credibility, but the movie makes only one-dimensional use of him as the central obstacle to the young Russians' happiness.

Both halves of the plot – action and romance – develop haphazardly, moving the characters from one encounter to another without any real sense of momentum or purpose. Some of the encounters are, admittedly, exciting and well-staged, but in general they rely far too much on coincidence and contrivance, further removing the movie from any semblance of history and pushing it towards the stuff of weak fiction. The film's climax (although the word really doesn't apply) wreaks of a bad case of writer's block.

Enemy at the Gates is a film of half-successes. Moviegoers interested in a piece of historical fiction will be disappointed from the outset by the film's focus on drama over exposition, enjoyability over believability, but even those looking for an entertaining duel between master snipers mixed with some last-day-on-earth romance won't find their fill.

Oo la la! Style File goes to Paris

This spring break i opted away from the sandy beaches, Margaritas and flip-flops and instead went with the hoof-and-mouthed diseased fields, Merlot and galoshes. I spent my vacation in London and Paris and I loved every minute of it. London was bustling and alive, and St. Patty's Day spent in the pubs was a great time... but Paris – ah, Paris was like going home. If I had been stranded in Paris and couldn't get back home, i think that I would be okay with that. The food, the sights, the people – it was all wonderful.

On my trip, I learned eight very important style truths. (As if one wasn't expecting some sort of column to come out of my trip to the city of fashion, love and baguettes, my three favorite things.)

1. The French really don't dress any better than we dress. Call me naive and stuck in a fairy tale (you'd probably be right) but I expected to emerge from the plane into a world of Dior and Givenchy. Not the case, unless it was some strange casual clothes festival. The style of Paris was no different than that of London, and London was no different from Boston. I guess the world really is getting smaller.
2. If you're going away, pack as much black as possible. While you might feel like a Sprocket, black is chic, timeless and doesn't show when you repeatedly drop ketchup on yourself.
3. Don't rely on your electrical appliances, because your hairdryer WILL blow up. I never really used a hair dryer on a regular basis before this year, which may explain the rather horrid old pictures of me, but I'm hooked now. And when both of my friend's hairdryers blew up, it was a sad, sad moment on the trip. My hair spent the next six days in a perpetually wet chignon, with the occasional braid to spice things up. Be prepared on your trips girls with lots of elastics and little hair doodads.
4. Every person in all of Europe will know that you are an American. I stated before that the French don't dress better than we do, persay. But for SOME reason, they always knew that we were Americans. Could have been the baseball cap, or the fact that we ate about double what everyone else in the restaurants was consuming. I'm still not sure. But be prepared to be greeted in English, because they know!
5. Style knows no language barriers... or something like that. Gangstah Rap and its fashions have reached all the way into the grade schools of Paris. While riding on Le Metro, a group of young ragamuffins (odd word, yes) slouched in the seats in their baggy pants, Nike and Adidas and loudly bumbled their way through rap songs in cute Parisian accents. I don't think they had a clue what they were singing, but they felt "tough" and that's all that matters. Style is an attitude.
6. Friends don't let friends wear metallic blue shirts. And that's why I kept my mouth shut, and complimented the color. Enough said.
7. Handbags and shoes can make or break the outfit. While I didn't see an excessive amount of examples on the streets, I did pass such stores as Louis Vuitton and Dolce and Gabbana on the streets of Paris, and the windows showed beautifully matched bags and footwear. In spring fashion's return to the old days, the world of the 1940's coordination has returned. Beautiful shoes and a matching bag will make any outfit, and will make you look like a million bucks.
8. Scarves are the answer to all life's problems. Everywhere you went in Paris and London, people were wearing pashminia shawls as scarves. The array of bright pastels brightened the rainy streets and looked so classy. I highly suggest getting yourself one a cheery spring colored version, except get a cheaper cotton one, you'll get the same effect. Drape the scarf around your neck, toss it over your shoulders, or loop it with the ends falling down your front. Not only will the color bring a smile to your face, you can use the scarf as a makeshift airline pillow or blanket, hide a horrible stain and it dresses up or down.

Style File
WITH SHAUNA BILLINGS

The most important style truth of all is that style isn't about the clothes, or the hair, or the shoes – it's an attitude. if you've really got style, you love yourself, and you don't let anyone treat with you with anything less than respect. But in return, you not only have to treat others with respect, but you actually have to care about what happens to them. A person with style wouldn't ever consider judging someone else based on what they have or don't have, because that's just lame, for the situation could just as easily be reversed. And a person with style does their own thing, whether it's "cool" or not – everyone's got their own personal style, and you just have to be brave enough to follow it. So if life hands you lemons make lemonade, give it to the thirsty man in the subway, pack up your stuff, and go find the oranges that you were after.

Shauna Billings is a Collegian Columnist.

Vertical Horizon offers everything a crowd wants

By Justin Cormier and Jackie Wiley
Collegian Correspondents

VERTICAL HORIZON
Laska Gymnasium
Assumption College
March 16

Vertical Horizon is rising to stardom with the presence of their catchy singles on pop radio airwaves. On Friday the 16th while many of us were heading home for spring break, they traveled to Worcester to perform for Assumption College's annual spring concert. The Greyhounds got their money's worth, as the band and their opener both put on energetic, enjoyable sets.

The Pat McGee Band opened the show, arriving late because of a morning "kegs and eggs" performance in Washington D.C. After a hurried stage set-up, they performed a stripped down set without all their usual instruments. They still energized the crowd, however, and it was clear that much of the audience were fans of both bands. This bill also provided a clear indication of Vertical Horizon's current success, as in the past the Pat McGee Band has had Vertical Horizon as its opening act.

As the lights went out for the headlining set, the crowd breathed a sigh of relief after a somewhat lengthy equipment transition between bands. The show finally kicked off with a Batmanesque spotlight, projecting the shape of the band's logo around the gymnasium. Vertical Horizon appeared from the rear of the stage, sufficiently glam-ed out in rock star leather pants and smiling faces. After giving the crowd a few minutes to let their intense cheering die down, they began with the rousing "We Are." Central Mass native and lead singer/guitarist Matt Scannell set the tone for the performance by traveling all over the stage as he played to the crowd. Scannell, acting like a teen idol up on stage, gestured to specific girls and threw numerous guitar picks to fans in the first few rows.

Two older songs followed, with fellow guitarist Keith Kane taking the lead on vocals for the tune "Candyman." Kane's slightly nasal, but still pleasant voice complemented the band's sound well. By singing lead on this and several other tunes, Kane gives the band a nice, varied sound. An electric solo from Scannell, who utilized an effects bar to produce metal-rock sounds, highlighted this acoustic bodied song.

The band played its current single, "Best I've Ever Had," to the delight of the screaming fans. This song displays Vertical Horizon's astute knowledge of how to entertain a mainstream college crowd. They understand the simple ways to get a pop, such as letting the audience sing nearly every chorus and then telling them how wonderful they sounded (which was not actually true at all). From the band's tendency to change places on the stage, feed off of each other during solos and approach the front rows to play to the crowd, Vertical Horizon clearly knows how to engage their fans.

Matt spoke to the crowd between songs, telling stories about his experiences with Assumption College. He said that he used to live in the area, and had always looked forward to attending basketball games at the school. He then revealed that, along with his friends, he used to hide behind the window of his house and wait for the Assumption girls' track team to pass by during practice. These stories further boosted the crowd's already upbeat mood and kept the show alive during a lull in the music.

After another acoustic song and two peppy electric tunes, the band played its hit single, "You're A God." This number was very well received, and the crowd was again invited to belt out the chorus. This successful song is another example of a simple music piece that is just catchy enough to become extremely popular.

In perhaps what was the best display of musical talent in the show, the next song showcased western Massachusetts native Sean Hurley with a searing bass solo that lasted for several minutes. Hurley's fingers danced all over the neck of his six-string, opening the eyes and jaws of the audience. Drummer Ed Toth held down this excellent instrumental, as well as the entire show, with skill and style. Toth bore a striking resemblance to Pat Daly, the owner of the Hangar on University Drive (check it out for yourself if you get the chance).

Vertical Horizon closed the show with their first smash hit, "Everything You Want." The band left the stage to deafening applause, which did not cease until they returned for their encore. Thanking the crowd again, they eased into the slow, soothing ballad "A Lonely Miracle." They then ended the show with their fan-favorite, "The Man Who Would Be Santa." Before leaving the stage, the band members responded to the crowd's ovation by throwing drumsticks and guitar picks to their fans, thanking them for their enthusiastic contribution to the energy of the show. It was a fitting conclusion to an energetic and entertaining night of pop music.

COURTESY SHAWN ECKERT

Vertical Horizon has slid comfortably into the role of pop stars.

COURTESY WMUA

Man of many talents

Sam Rivers, playing tenor and soprano saxophone, piano, flute and voice, will perform Tuesday, March 27 at 8 p.m. in the Bezanson Recital Hall, as part of the 2001 Magic Triangle Concert Series. For ticket information, call (800) 999-UMAS for visit the Fine Arts Center box office.

■ pantera

continued from page 5

talking to/heretently to the audience and frequently acknowledging crowd members and going out of his way to shake hands occasionally.

It was this family aspect that was the dominant feature of the night. Pantera is not going to let anyone in the crowd, their immediate family, down, tonight or any night. They fully realize that their stubborn adherence to straightforward metal is the crux of their appeal, and changing the formula would be like a death in the family.

It was this steadfast belief that tied together their various tourmates as well. Soulfly, the new outfit of former Sepultura leader Max Cavdera, doesn't deviate far from Sepultura's bruising tribal grooves. Morbid Angel is pure double-bass pounding, insanely fast death metal. Nothingface is straight hardcore-influenced metal, among the more extreme bands from the new school sound. And Boston's Anal Cunt, led by crooner Seth Putnam, is noisecore at its most uncompromising. All of these bands have stuck with the sound that brought them original acclaim, ignoring or ignorant to trends that would alter their style for commercial viability.

Like previous Pantera shows, band members are always on and off the stage during other band's sets, giving the feel of one big party, even if it did seem a little more forced tonight than it did during the Pantera/Anthrax tour. Putnam came out to scream his parts on "Suicide Note Pt. II," Mikey and Marcello from Soulfly chimed in during the chorus of "Walk," Anselmo lent some vocals to Morbid Angel and Pantera drummer Vinnie Paul appeared during Soulfly's set to lend some percussion.

Soulfly had a bad night tonight, to put it nicely. Although there was thankfully no onstage bickering with sound people, the band sounded muffled and contained on the stage. Material from their latest album Primitive filled most of the set, but not the choice cuts. While album standouts like "Pain" and "Flyhigh" aren't possible live without the guest vocalists present, weaker tracks like "Jumpdafucup" and "Terrorist" were nonetheless performed minus their guests, to disappointing results. "Boom" had a likable silliness that didn't register with the crowd, as didn't Max's humorous removal of the line "no redneck shit" from closer "No."

On a Pantera tour, apparently, family ties are so strong they can rewrite history.

Idlewild ushers in vision of angry, artsy punk-rock steeped in angular guitar work

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

IDLEWILD
100 Broken Windows
Odeon/Capitol

Idlewild is punk in the way that At The Drive-In is punk. They're really passionate about the music, they play with a sense of urgency that's been filtered out of the rock mainstream for many years now, but what the hell are they raging against? Mind boggling lyrics in the vein of their spiritual El Paso brethren somewhat dilute the message, but music this good is, no matter how ambiguous, just a big middle finger to the sorry state of modern rock.

This quartet from Scotland is intent on infiltrating the mainstream just the way Outkast has, and they have all the right weaponry. Angry guitar rock may seem like a long Cadillac drive away from Stankonia, but they're closer than one might think. Dre and Big Boi are wolves in sheep's clothing when it comes to spreading their funky ideas to a fickle hip-hop crowd. Their latest has enough jungle beats, spaced-out funk, political rants and other such blissfully progressive aspects to drive your average Ja Rule faithful right out the door. But their mix of new themes with time-tried classics like gangsta boasts, hoez, and street issues reel the unadventurous right back into to their krunked-out lair.

Idlewild also has their eyes on the masses, and their accessible yet passionate sound will intrigue a wide audience while pleasing the cross-armed punk purists. Make note: this isn't a Dead Kennedys album. You won't know exactly what the societal ill the song addresses from the title or the lyrics. You just have to trust the band, like you do At The Drive-In, that behind the baffling song titles and nonsensical lyrics that there is something worth playing and singing their hearts out about.

The music makes trying to find that hidden meaning a very rewarding journey. Roddy Woomble's voice can be an artsy Michael Stipe throwback or a confidently wounded Morrissey reminder, and when the situation calls for it a strained Les Savy Favesque or Superdrag sneer. The layered guitar sounds can be gritty and messy, but are always driving and never glossy or subdued. Rod Jones' guitar work seems afraid of creeping too far out from indie security into full pop scrutiny, just as the band's sound as a whole on 100 Broken Windows never is content with a simple punk blast, favoring instead a textured and inclusive sound.

For example, the opening part of "Idea Track" has some of the album's noisiest and most defiant music and vocals, leading one to wonder if Idlewild has just dropped the friendly act and is ready to sound as chaotically angry as they feel inside. No such luck. Shortly the chorus comes along, much more melodic and friendly. But the harmony of the different forces doesn't dilute the song; instead, it makes it that much more broad reaching, without compromising the inherent fire.

"Not in my backyard!" seems to be the refrain of Idlewild, who are "sick of seventeen contests" in their homes, a reference in "Little Discourage" to the misguided youths of today's rock scene. On the contrary, 100 Broken Windows is a very encouraging beacon for the future of rock.

COURTESY TOM SHEPHAN

Idlewild, chefs of anger and texture.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON

Summer
UMass Boston

- Four- and six-week sessions, beginning May 29, July 2, and July 16
- Morning, afternoon, and evening classes
- On-line, web-based courses
- Travel-to-learn programs
- Quality education at an affordable cost

To learn more, visit
www.conted.umb.edu
or call 617.287.6000

UMASS BOSTON

A great university in a great city

The Black Sheep

THE BLACK SHEEP has been serving the UMass community for over 15 years.
We are a delicatessen, all butter scratch bakery, gourmet food purveyor and full service caterer.
THE BLACK SHEEP is renowned for providing the most memorable and best tasting GRADUATION PARTIES in the Valley.
Stop by for a cup of coffee, overstuffed sandwich, or homemade dessert and see what we have to offer.
THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST. AMHERST
253-3442
OCMP, VISA/MASTERCARD ACCEPTED.

New hoops coach to be announced; Lappas likely one

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

The search for a new men's basketball coach at the University of Massachusetts has apparently reached its conclusion.

The school's media relations department has called a press conference for 11 o'clock this morning at the William D. Mullins Center, reportedly to announce the hiring of UMass' nineteenth men's basketball head coach.

According to online reports from both ESPN and The Boston Globe, that person will likely be former Villanova coach Steve Lappas. Both sources reported that Lappas spent portions of the day Saturday and yesterday interviewing in Boston and Amherst with UMass officials.

Mark Blaudschun reported on Boston.com yesterday that Lappas, who resigned as head coach of the Wildcats on Friday, flew into Boston Saturday morning to meet with UMass president William Bulger and other members of the Board of Trustees. Lappas then made the trip to Amherst in the company of UMass athletic director Bob Marcum, according to the site.

A subsequent report from ESPN.com's Andy Katz had Lappas meeting yesterday with Chancellor David K. Scott to negotiate contract details. The report went on to state that a formal announcement of Lappas' hiring could come as early as today.

Lappas' resignation from Villanova raised some eyebrows around the Big East conference, as the coach had accrued a .613 winning percentage (174-110), a half-dozen 20-win seasons and the 1994 National Invitational Tournament (NIT) championship during his nine years as head coach. Villanova athletic director Vince Nicastro said in a statement that he "regretfully" accepted Lappas' resignation, but Blaudschun's article suggested that the school actually welcomed such a course of action in order to make the job available sooner to prospect Jay Wright.

School officials reportedly "gave [Lappas] their blessing" in regards to interviewing at UMass, "with the understanding there would not be a job for him when he came back."

That was not actually the case, according to a report posted yesterday on the online version of The Villanovan, the University's student newspaper. That report called Nicastro "surprised" at Lappas' resignation, quoting him as saying that it was the coach himself who first asked for a meeting with University President Rev. Edmund Dobbin, O.S.A. on Friday afternoon.

Lappas was apparently disheartened by the lack of support given to both himself and the team when the Wildcats bowed out of this year's NIT with an 18-13 record.

"It's good to have high expectations," Lappas was quoted as saying. "We won 58 games in the last two years – actually 58 games over the last three years, and you wouldn't know it. Of course we should always be striving to be the best without question and want to have high expectations, but we also have to understand when you win 18 or 19 games – most programs don't do that year in and year out.

"Mott programs don't win 20 games like we've averaged over a long period of time. So we need to always continue to aspire to be the best, but we also need to understand the state of college basketball and what it is to be good. We want to be great, well these last two years we were good. We weren't great but we were good."

Lappas' comments are very similar to ones made by former UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint shortly after his own resignation two weeks ago. Flint called the expectations of many UMass fans "unrealistic" and stressed how both followers and school officials need to give more weight to the integrity of the program and less to the wins and losses.

"I've done everything that's been asked of me here," Flint said. "I've graduated my kids, I've run a clean program and I'm proud of it. But it's a business."

Just how big of a business it is was apparently an issue in the consideration of Lappas. Blaudschun's report had Marcum leaning toward North Carolina – Greensboro's Fran McCaffery after an "extensive interview," but stated that the athletic director was under pressure from the University's administration to "find a more high-profile candidate."

McCaffery has since been named as a lead candidate for the head coaching job at Rutgers, which "relieved" Kevin Bannon of coaching responsibilities on Thursday. Marcum allegedly spoke with McCaffery Saturday night and informed him that a decision would come sometime yesterday, but the coach expressed more interest in the Scarlet Knights' vacancy than the job at UMass.

"If any Big East school [calls], I would certainly consider it," McCaffery was quoted as saying. "I think Rutgers would be a great situation. State school, Big East, in a great recruiting area. And if someone called I would certainly listen."

Other names that have been mentioned in connection with the UMass vacancy include Hofstra's Wright, George Mason's Jim Larranaga and Iona's Jeff Ruland. ESPN's report yesterday called Wright "the leading candidate to replace Lappas at Villanova" and also mentioned that Flint is "expecting to hear back from Duquesne this week."

Seven a not so lucky number for baseball

By Matt Despres
Collegian Staff

Some break this Spring has been for the University of Massachusetts baseball team.

A one-week reprieve from class and a road heavy schedule took their toll on head coach Mike Stone and Co. this past week, as the squad notched its first two victories of the season and dropped five more to run its season total to 2-8.

The seven-game stretch began on March 17, as the Minutemen set off for Lynchburg, Va. to battle Liberty University in a three-game series. Game one set the tone for the week as Liberty held off UMass, rattling off five hits to secure the 4-3 victory.

Sophomore first baseman Jeff Altieri once again provided the offensive punch for the Maroon and White, going 2-4 with a home run. Junior Scott Anderson also came to play, mirroring Altieri's output with two hits and a homer of his own. The spark fell short, however, as the rest of the team picked up only three hits, offering nothing in the way of support for starting pitcher Craig Szado. The senior southpaw pitched strongly, surrendering only three earned runs and issuing a single walk while striking out five in eight-Innings of work.

UMass turned the tables in game two of the three-game set, picking up its much-needed first win of the still young season. There would be no shortage of run support for the pitching staff this time around, as junior right-hander Brain Hourigan watched his teammates pick up 12 hits en route to the 6-3 victory.

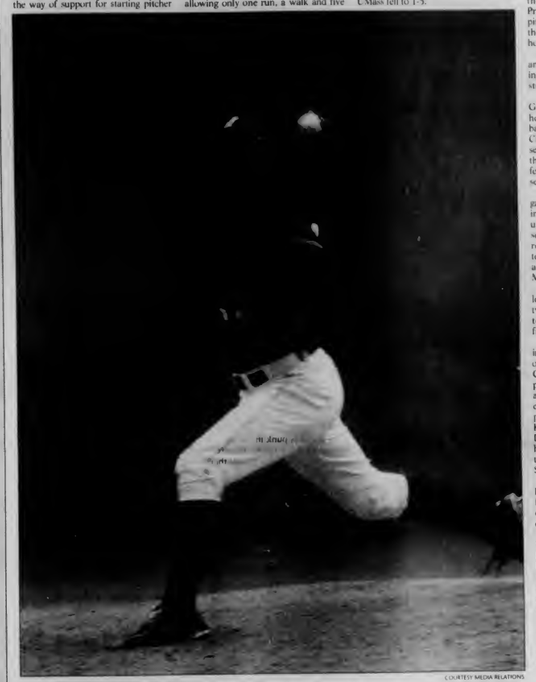
The Minutemen jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the third-inning, due in part to the strong bats of diamond vets Nick Gorneault and Aaron Senez. Gorneault set off the fireworks with a two-run homerun, and watched as Senez added to that lead with a RBI single. UMass tacked on a fourth run in the top of the sixth, as freshman Adam Stojanowski was hit a pitch with the bases loaded to score Senez. Two more runs were added in the eighth to round out the afternoon's scoring.

Hourigan threw a strong game, allowing only one run, a walk and five hits on the afternoon to pick up the win.

The final game of the series found the Minutemen falling off tremendously, having peaked the afternoon before. Although they managed to pound out 11 hits, Liberty picked up 15 and finished the job by turning them into runs, sending UMass home with a 13-4 loss.

Liberty grabbed an early lead and held on for good, putting five runs on the board before the third inning was out. UMass scored its first run of the game in the top of the fourth, when Gorneault tripled and then scored on a RBI groundout by senior Gavin Clark. Liberty bounced back with five more runs in the bottom of the fourth, however, putting the lead to nine and out of reach for the Maroon and White. Liberty outfielder Trey Miller hammered the final nail into the coffin, ripping a bases loaded double in the same inning to score three more runs.

Junior Jesse Santos struggled mightily under the Liberty attack, yielding 10 runs on nine hits in three-and-two thirds innings of work. With the loss, UMass fell to 1-5.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Nick Skirkanich and the baseball team have fallen on rough times to start the season, though they did manage to pick up their first two wins of the season over Spring Break.

The Minuteman schedule drew the team to Pitt Field in Virginia next, as the team looked to turn things around against the University of Richmond. They only succeeded, however, in turning the tilt into their sixth loss of the season, as Richmond held on for the 5-3 victory.

Once again UMass saw the first run of the game go the other way, when outfielder Bryan Pritz scored on a groundout by freshman Adam Tidball. The Minutemen knotted things up quickly, however, as Clark launched his first home run of the season, a solo shot that evened the contest at one. UMass quickly turned that opportunity into a lead, its first in some time, as sophomore Tom Ellerbrook singled and then scored on an error. Junior Connell Clark also singled and scored on a hit by Gorneault to put UMass up 3-1.

The lead was short-lived, however, as the Spiders utilized the bottom of the seventh to tie and then take over the lead. Sophomore shortstop David Reaver had a two-run single that tied the game at three. Outfielder Brian Pritz scored the go-ahead run on a wild pitch, and Vito Chiaravalloti topped off the scoring for the afternoon, crossing home plate on a RBI single by Tidball.

Sophomore Pat Reedy pitched 6 and one-third innings for UMass, giving up eight hits, four earned runs and striking out two while taking the loss.

With Wednesday's game against George Mason rained out, UMass headed to Delaware on Thursday to battle Delaware State. Although Gavin Clark hit his second home run of the season and UMass collected seven hits, the embattled Minutemen once again fell, losing 12-5 to drop to 1-7 on the season.

UMass spent the majority of the game chasing Delaware, tying the game in the top of the second, when Senez utilized his speed on the base paths to score on a throwing error. Delaware responded with four runs in the bottom of the inning, however, defeating any idea of a victory that the Minutemen may have had in mind.

Clark's homerun in the fifth cut the lead to three, but the Hornets scored twice in the fifth and once in the sixth to distance themselves even further from a still determined UMass club.

The Minutemen cut the lead to 8-5 in the eighth when they took advantage of uncarned runs to score three times. Clark scored on a throwing error by the pitcher after he started the inning with a single and advanced on throwing errors. Gorneault scored on a wild pitch and sophomore outfielder Tim Klett scored on a ground out by Senez. Delaware State charged right back however, scoring four runs in the bottom of the inning, capped off by a Phil Sullinger three-run home run.

Senior David Leonie took the loss for UMass, while Delaware State's Joe Brzeczek allowed seven hits and just one earned run to pick up his third wip of the season.

Closing down the week, UMass kicked off Atlantic 10 play by visiting LaSalle Saturday for an afternoon doubleheader, hoping to turn things around with solid conference play. The Minutemen battled strongly in both games, dropping the first game 10-8 in extra innings and bouncing back for the 10-7 victory in the second to split the afternoon. UMass improved to 2-8 (1-1 A-10) on the season and was set to conclude the three-game series yesterday afternoon.

UMass finally hits home turf this tomorrow, as the University of Hartford visits Earl Lorden field.

UMass basketball

Check out tomorrow's sports section for a full report on the new head coach, including biographical information and response from both the administration and student body.

COLLEGIAN SPRING BREAK PHOTO CONTEST

Attention UMass Students!!The Collegian is holding a photo contest!!

Capture your Spring Break and WIN!!

Submission Form:

name: _____
phone #: _____
e-mail: _____
type of photo (circle one): black & whitecolor
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____

Requirements:

-Submissions due by MARCH 30th
-Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
-Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
-Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form

Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting June 1st. 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Apartment Available to take over June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-9462

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts.com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

95 Volvo 850 Turbo B1K, Auto, leather, 6 disc Alpine changer. $14,500 or B/O. 413-527-2871

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

EMPLOYMENT

$10/hr GUARANTEED Work on campus F/T or P/T for as little as 5-10 hrs/wk or as many as 40 hrs/wk. Be your own boss. Create your own schedule. Limited positions. Call 1-800-808-7442 x 80

Counselors Wanted Co-ed Jewish overnight camp in Maine offers competitive salary plus room and board. All positions available! For more information, contact Ava or Meridith at 617-244-5124 or via email at info@kingswood.org

Bartenders, Wait-staff, Door people. New Irish Pub in No. Amherst, for this spring as well as summer and fall. Apply in person. 163 Sunderland Rd. No. Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimun 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPENSQUARE.COM

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted 24 UMass Underclassmen to take part in 45 minute survey. Also coordinator position. For details call 1-800-573-3309

Looking for a job in Amherst this summer? Full and part time jobs are available with Summer Conference Housing! Come and get an application and job description at the Conference Services Office, Room 918 Campus Center.

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

LOST AND FOUND

Car Keys, House Keys Found outside of Boyden Gym. Found AM 3/13. 617-290-5942

HOUSE WANTED

4 to 6 Bedroom house wanted, starting June 1, for rent. Ready to sign lease. Call Shayan @ 413-546-1082 or tom@65190

MISCELLANEOUS

Are you in a long-distance relationship? Feel better at www.sblake.com

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

FLY SUMMER 4 WINTER $$! Europe $298 rt (+tx) Lon, Fra, Mad, Ams, Par, & more. 4STANBY.COM or call 800-326-2009

MOVING OUT?

SELLING THINGS?

SINGING OVER YOU LEASE?

DO IT HERE!

CALL TO ADVERTISE TODAY!

545-3500

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3 • HSCN Bulletin Board
24 • CBS/8 Hartford
4 • CBS 4 Boston
5 • ABC/40 Springfield
6 • FOX 57 Springfield
7 • HSCN Movie Channel
8 • UPN 30 Hartford
9 • HSCN Sec Movie Channel
10 • NBC 30 New Haven
11 • Fox 61 Hartford
12 • PBS 24 Hartford
13 • PBS 40 Springfield
14 • International Channel
15 • WMFP (Archive Channel)
16 • WB 30 New Haven
17 • ESPN
18 • ESPN2
19 • WSBK TV (Boston Channel)
20 • Weather Channel
21 • Travel & Sport
22 • C-Span
23 • CNN
24 • CNN Headline News
25 • Lifestyle
26 • USA
27 • TBS
28 • TNT
29 • E!
30 • NESN
31 • Discovery
32 • Nickelodeon
33 • Cartoon Network
34 • Nick at Nite
35 • FX Local
36 • Comedy Central
37 • BET
38 • Univision
39 • Bloomberg Financial Network
40 • College TV Network
41 • MTV
42 • MTV2
43 • VH1
44 • The Learning Channel

MONDAY EVENING C - Campus MARCH 26, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Trade Secrets: A Movers Report (N) (In Stereo)				Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker	48 Hours "Save Our Father"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker	48 Hours "Save Our Father"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	"South Pacific" (2001, Musical) Glenn Close, Harry Connick Jr., Premiere. (In Stereo)						News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Home" (In Stereo)		Gilmore Girls (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Crocodile Hunter: On Camera		First Years (N) (In Stereo)		Third Watch "The Lost"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	7th Heaven "The Legacy"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	7th Heaven "Home" (In Stereo)		Gilmore Girls (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Job Fair	Hollywood	Crocodile Hunter: On Camera		First Years (N) (In Stereo)		Third Watch "The Lost"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Boston Public (N) (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal (N) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Crocodile Hunter: On Camera		First Years (N) (In Stereo)		Third Watch "The Lost"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Trade Secrets: A Movers Report (N) (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Spin City	Frasier	"South Pacific" (2001, Musical) Glenn Close, Harry Connick Jr., Premiere. (In Stereo)						News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Frasier	Frasier	Moesha	Hughleys	Parkers	Girlfriends	Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld	Mad Abt. You
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Street Smarts	Fresh Prince	★½ "Poison" (1998, Drama) Tom Berenger, Willem Dafoe.					★★ "Outland" (1981) Sean Connery.
A&E	51	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Black Tie"		Biography: Sally Field		100 Centre Street (N)		Investigative Reports (N)		Law & Order "Thrill"
CNN	29	Inside Politics	Moneyline Newshour (N)			Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live	CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	49	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	TV Funhouse	Com.-Presents	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	28	History of the Teddy Bear		Wild Discovery: Pandas		Ten Deadliest Snakes		Building the Impossible: Seven Wonders of the Ancient World				Justice Files
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		Women's College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. East Final				Women's College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. Midwest Final				Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "Deadly Vision" (1992, Suspense) Kristin Davis.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	47	Direct Effect	Diary	Celebrity	Cribs	VJ for a Day	TRL (In Stereo)		Say What Kriss	Daria (N)	2gether	Undressed	TBA
NICK	69	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Diff. Strokes	Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	59	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Deathwalker"		Outer Limits "The Other Side"		★★½ "Alligator" (1980, Horror) Robert Forster, Robin Riker.				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	26	Motorcycles – Born to Be Wild		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Junkyard Wars		Police Force (N)		Hollywood Cops		Junkyard Wars
TNT	54	ER "It's Not Easy Being Greene"		Pretender "Hope & Prey"		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo)				★★★ "Carrie" (1976, Horror) Sissy Spacek, John Travolta.
USA	52	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "People v. Mac" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "High Fall"		★★½ "Nothing to Lose" (1997, Comedy) Martin Lawrence.				Martin	Martin
HBO	8	(5:30) "White Fang 2: Myth		★★ "Three Wishes" (1995, Drama)		Patrick Swayze. PG		Real Sports (N)		Soprano "Another Toothpick"		Taxicab Confessions
MAX	9	(5:30) "Alligator II: The		Carpet Sleeves: Stolen Children		★★★ "Kingdom Road" (1998, Suspense) Jeff Bridges. R				★★½ "Deep Blue Sea" (1999)		Thomas Jane.	"Lesser Evil"
SHOW	10	★★★ "Analyze This" (1999, Comedy) Robert De Niro. R		Comic Timing: Jerry Seinfeld		★★ "Con Air" (1997, Action) Nicolas Cage. R		★★★ "Con Air" (1997, Action) Nicolas Cage. (In Stereo)		Chris Isaak (N)		Boxing (In Stereo)

Quote of the Day

"Kids, you tried your best and you failed miserably. The lesson is, never try."

-Homer Simpson

Amherst Weather

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
High: 36 Low: 18	High: 44 Low: 22	High: 49 Low: 33

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

I WONDER WHAT FUN STUFF I GET TO DO TODAY.
OH WAIT, THAT'S RIGHT, I GET TO DO NOTHING. THE GREAT PLAYWRIGHT WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE IS STUCK IN THIS CELL FOR ALL OF ETERNITY.
I GUESS IT COULD BE WORSE. AT LEAST I'M NOT BURNING IN THE FIERY PIT OF DEATH LIKE HERMAN MELVILLE.

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas

Jack Dogg By Xavier Rhodes

BEN FROM THE SKI SHOP..
#10
YEAH, SURE BEN WORKS SALES AT THE SKI SHOP BUT LITTLE DOES ANYONE KNOW OF HIS CUNNING TO TAKE SNOWBOARDS FROM THE LOST AND FOUND AREA OF THE LODGE AND SELL THEM FOR RETAIL PRICE DISPLAYED AT THE WINDOW. THE MONEY HE MAKES WITH EACH SALE HE POCKETS AND USES IT ON STOCK WHICH HE PAYS A PERCENTAGE TO HIS BROKER WHENEVER HIS SHARES GO UP. HE AVERAGES A COOL 50 GRAND A WEEK THROUGH WHICH HE USES TO BUY REAL ESTATE ALL OVER THE NORTHEAST UNITED STATES WHICH HE SELLS AT HIGHER PRICE WHEN THE DEVELOPMENT STARTS TO RISE. FINALLY, WITH THIS PROFIT HE MAKES FROM REAL ESTATE, HE HAS BEEN ABLE TO BUY PARTS & LABOUR FOR THE SECRET COMPLETION OF A TIME MACHINE WHICH HE USES ON WEEKENDS TO VISIT HIS WIFE IN THE PARADISE WORLDS OF ANCIENT GREECE

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

I'm gonna go ask that girl out...
Don't bother... She has a boyfriend.
How could you know that?
She's wearing sweatpants to class. It's a dead giveaway.

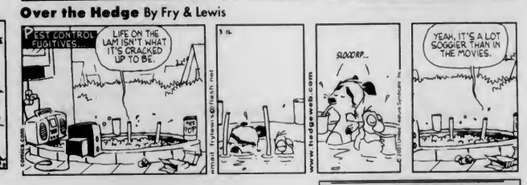
Dilbert By Scott Adams

WE CAN'T SHOW THESE NUMBERS TO OUR VP. THEY MAKE US LOOK LIKE LOSERS.
FIND SOMETHING WE'RE DOING WELL AND GIVE HIM THOSE NUMBERS INSTEAD.
WOW! OUR INTERNAL SUBTERFUGE IS UP EIGHTY PERCENT!

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

A ROBOT PUPPY! I GOT A ROBOT PUPPY!
IT'S SO PINK! SO ADORABLE! DID I MENTION IT'S PINK?!
I WUV IT! I WUV IT! I WUV, WUV, WUV IT!
AWREADY I WOATHE IT.
I LIKED SANTA BETTER WHEN HE PUNISHED US WITH COAL.

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis



Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19)- Take special care in traffic today and avoid crowds if at all possible. You will have to make major domestic adjustment soon that will relate to where you live or to your relationship status.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)- Today may be a good day to guard your valuables. Someone in your life wants something for nothing and you could be prime target for theft. However, be discreet in your actions and maintain an aura of intrigue.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)- You make a habit of overcoming roadblocks while exuding creative energy and sex appeal. Although flirtation may be exciting it could prove expensive and potentially damaging to established relationships. Be aware of the effects of your actions on other people. You may want to remain emotionally guarded today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)- Keep resolutions concerning exercise, diet and nutrition. Today is a good day to eat healthy, cut down on stress and avoid potential illness. Avoid conflict-prone situations if you can, especially with a loved one.

LEO (July 23- Aug. 22)- Don't tempt fate. Today may be a good day to simply stay in bed and relax. Following the stressful weekend that you had, conflicts are inevitable. Take it easy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23- Sept. 22)- Make a fresh start and display independence and original thinking. Today is a good day to stand on your own and demonstrate your capacity for independence and your strong willed tendencies. Those around you will be impressed with your new found assertiveness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)- Open the lines of communication with a friend that you have not kept in touch with recently with a quick telephone call. Someone in your life will need to tell you something important today, remember to be supportive and lend a compassionate ear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24- Nov. 21)- Today you will need to take a realistic look at both your friendships and relationships. You need to see people for what they really are and treat them accordingly. Although you will get what you ask for make sure that you don't ask for too much from those around you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)- You're liable to go farther and faster than you've ever gone before. But, don't throw all caution to the winds. Wear your safety helmet - and whatever else you need. Do the planning to minimize the risk. Then, full speed ahead!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22- Jan. 19)- You really ought to be a wealthy person. You'd do so much good with the money. It may not involve more backbreaking labor. Use your brains, instead. Take what you have and turn it into more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)- You don't usually like to be one of the crowd, but today you could make an exception. Others seem to have everything all figured out. All you have to do is follow. So, why argue?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)- You're the lucky winner in love and games. A bold move could turn out well, especially one that worked before. Size up the situation and then make your move.

JOHN LEFT THE HOUSE WITHOUT HIS KEYS AGAIN, THOUGH HE COULDVE SWORN THEY WERE IN HIS PANTS POCKET

© 2001

SLEEPY HOLLOW BED COMPANY
286-BEDS (2337)/ 256-BEDS(2337)
220 College Street, Amherst

FINALLY!! Amherst has a mattress & futon store conveniently located near downtown, next to The Spirit Haus on Rt. 9

GRAND OPENING & OPEN HOUSE

(FREE FOOD!!!)
SAT. MARCH 31 10-6
SUN. APRIL 1 12-5

futons-mattresses-beds-daybeds
slipcovers-pillows-lamps-storage platform beds-room dividers-rugs
interior plants-end/coffee tables
cats-foam-pad/pool/papasan, ETC

ACROSS
1 Frankfurt's river
5 "Out, cat!"
9 Chapeau
12 Ready to pick
13 Peep
15 Arrived
16 Complain
17 Wild West show
18 Oil job
19 More expensive
21 Greek letter
23 Was sorry
24 Crossword-solver's tool
25 Behind, in a boat
28 Jerked
33 Lucy's neighbor
34 Like Mother Hubbard's cupboard
35 Fabled race loser
36 — Grande
37 Entices
38 Fleming or Dury
39 Rural stopovers
41 Press
42 Initial
44 Ratatouille ingredient
46 Cares for a patient
47 Luau memento
48 Type of bean
49 Moltby
53 Synthetic textile
57 Just 58 State one's view
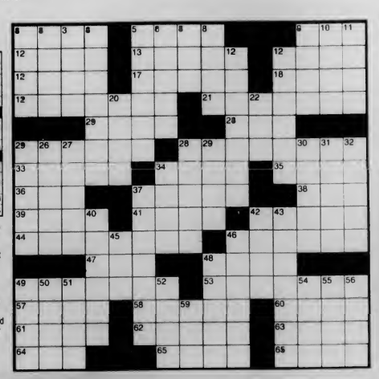
60 Actor Jannings
61 A — apple
62 City in southern France
63 Connect
64 Pig
65 Autograph site
66 Enthusiastic shouts

DOWN
1 Poet's eyes
2 Eat to lose
3 Fencer's weapon
4 Court official
5 Silver —: movies
6 Musical notes played together
7 Help out
8 Park feature
9 Transport
10 Pulpit
11 Prom attendee
14 California state flowers
15 Settle conclusively
20 Knitting stitch
22 Hardened, as cement
25 High nest
26 Bee wound
27 Beach sandal
28 Fortunetelling card
29 Small songbird
30 Bristles
31 Delete
32 Auto mishaps
34 Char
37 Illicit love affair
40 Internal organ
42 Show vexation
43 Wrathfully
45 Grassy field
46 Most pleasant
48 Bowling places
49 Asian nanny
50 Cancun con
51 Goody-goody
52 Heroic tale
54 Brigitte's friend
55 Singer Turner
56 Antlered animals
59 "— big girl now"

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	L	E	N	N	A	V	E	C	A	L	O	E
A	U	D	I	O	N	E	R	O	R	O	L	L
M	A	I	N	S	G	R	I	M	T	A	D	A
M	U	T	E	B	R	A	N	M	U	F	F	I	N
A	S	H	T	R	A	Y	U	N	U	S	E	D
			E	O	S	U	N	T	I	L
P	I	L	E	D	G	R	E	E	T	R	T	E
E	D	E	N	P	A	G	E	D	H	O	S	T
P	A	T	L	O	P	E	D	T	A	M	P	A
			L	I	N	E	D	F	I	R
A	S	S	I	S	T	B	A	N	A	N	A	S
P	I	C	K	P	O	C	K	E	T	S	A	F	E
S	E	R	E	O	L	I	N	O	S	S	I	E
E	V	E	N	N	I	L	E	B	E	A	R	D
S	E	W	S	S	P	O	T	I	D	L	E	S

1-5-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Broccoli-RiceCasserole (vegetarian) (B, F, W)

BrazilianBlack Beans (vegan) (B, H, W)

Falafel PocketSandwich (vegan)

Fiesta Riceand Cheese (vegetarian) (H)

DINNER
ChickenBreast with Rice Stuffing (B, W)

CaliforniaChili (vegan)

Tofu Fajita (vegan) (B, H, W)

Carved Ham (F)

Beef Fajita (H)

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Adam White
Photo Technician — Dan Santello
Copy Editor — Melissa Hammel
Production Supervisor — Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff — Margery Smelkinson, Jarrett Brimmer

New men's hoops coach to be announced today; story on page seven.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Monday, March 26, 2001 | 10

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Mighty Minutemen win three to remain perfect

By Matthew F. Socco
Collegian Staff

While the 20,000 plus students at the University of Massachusetts spent the week on spring break, the UMass men's lacrosse team broke off an awe-inspiring, three-game win streak in which Albany, Vermont and Boston College found how tough this year's squad really is.

Most recently the Minutemen (6-0, 2-0 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association) laid down the law on the Catamounts (3-2, 0-0 America East) in a 19-6 spanking at Richard F. Garber Field.

Alex Racioppi guided the balanced Maroon and White attack with a four-goal performance. The senior was lucky he didn't get arrested for goalie abuse, as he buzzed the Catamounts keepers with four top shelf lasers and a games worth of chin music.

"I was just trying to get the ball on cage," Racioppi said. "I was getting shots at the beginning of the year they just weren't going in, today they did."

The Maroon and White offensive machine was well complemented by a defense that decided that while UVM played on its turf, it played by its rules. Matt McFarland and Tom Fallon were once again puppet masters to the tangled troop of Vermont attackmen while senior captain Chris Gabrielli provided battle-tested leadership alongside promising young defenseman Chris Gervat.

Throughout this six game winning streak two strategies have remained constant. On the defensive end the prevailing factor is physical play, while on offense, balance has been the key to opening the floodgates for the UMass attack.

For the fifth time in six games the Minutemen placed 10 different players on the score sheet. Racioppi led the way by notching two in each half while Marc Morley and Rich Kunkel also drew hats on the afternoon.

Another ongoing theme in 2001 UMass lacrosse is the continued importance of the third quarter. Going into the locker room at halftime of the Vermont game, the Minutemen were holding on to a 7-2 lead, which could have been much larger if more of the 23 shots they fired had hit the cage.

"I told the guys at halftime that if we don't get [shots] on net, we're not going to score," Canella said.

Catamount goalie Ed Burns coupled with UVM's shell zone defense was giving the home team problems, as the Maroon and White had to settle for perimeter shots that rarely forced Burns to react.

"It had to do with the goaltending and the defense, they played zone on us so we had to take the outside shot," Canella said.

Erroneous blasts turned into guided missiles however, as the Minutemen turned to their bread and butter for an instant cure to their shooting woes. The third quarter once again proved to be very friendly confines for the Maroon and White. Greg Canella's guns began to tickle the twine with precisely placed shots.

Face-off specialist Jeff Seals started off the second half rally by winning the draw and rushing the net for an 8-2 home lead. After a Vermont goal cut the lead to five, Keith Gabrielli, Morley and Racioppi netted three consecutive markers to pour salt on the wounded Catamounts.

UVM outscored the Maroon and White 3-1 to end the quarter, closing the gap to 12-6. Cody Casserly's goal with 15 seconds left would mark the final goal for Vermont as goalie Chris Campollettano and his rough neck defense folded the base of the visiting attack.

The Minutemen would take control in the fourth, as six different players notched goals.

Both Morley and Kunkel finished off their hat tricks in the final period while sophomore phenom Kevin Leveille topped off an outstanding game with his 11th, not in this game because that would be a record.

Keith Gabrielli nabbed two assists in the last 15 minutes and freshman tower Neil Lundberg turned his four goal performance against BC into a two game point scoring streak by garnering the assist on Kunkel's 15th of the year.

With the win the Minutemen move to 6-0, their best start since the 1998 squad started the year with the same record. Unfortunately that team ended up missing the postseason but nonetheless Canella cites leadership as the reason for early success and the key to victories in the future.

One of those experienced seniors is team-scoring leader Rick Kunkel who has 15 goals and six assists after six games. In addition to notching his "trick," the senior may have scored one of the most beautiful goals in recent history.

With just over a minute left in the second half the Maroon and White were on the attack looking to extend its 6-2 lead. John Madigan held the ball on the right wing when he found Kunkel streaking across the goalmouth. The senior received the ball in stride, faked low and flashed amazing skill by whipping it around his back into the gaping net.

Kunkel's spectacular effort not only gave UMass a five-goal lead but it continued the switch in momentum after Matt Dias, UVM's best player, was lost for the game with an injury.

"When he went down that definitely hurt us, leadership wise and ability wise," Vermont coach Steve Beville said.

Intangibles such as face-offs and extra man opportunities also played a large factor in the outcome. With the help of nearly unbeatable face-off man Seals, the Maroon and White won 18 of 27 draws and garnered two goals right off the drop.

The Minutemen also conquered extra man opportunities, as a Leveille-led run EMO led to four goals on six chances.

"We have five seniors and Leveille on man up," Canella said. "That's a lot of experience, when you have that poise you can usually find the open man."

The defense matched that effort by shutting down the Catamounts on all six of its extra man chances.

"Man down has played great all year, they take a lot of pride in what they do," Canella said.

Six games into the 2001 campaign UMass lacrosse is undefeated and regarded as one of the most surprising and dangerous teams in the country. Don't expect Canella and his troops to be satisfied with the quick start. Satisfaction comes bagged and wrapped with an NCAA tournament invitation.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Rich Kunkel has paced the UMass offense this season with 21 points. His quick start has led the Minutemen to a NO. 7 national ranking.

High octane offense a gas for No. 7 UMass

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

A big reason why the Minutemen have run off six-straight wins to start the season is because of the play of their defense and special teams.

The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team has scored 105 goals in six games. Thump the faithful computation tool for a minute and you'll see that's a 17.5 goals a game average.

In their three wins during spring break, the No. 7 (as ranked in last week's USILA/STX Coaches Poll) Minutemen found the back of the net 60 times to their opponents' 14.

"It's the high octane offense that's working for us," senior Alex Racioppi said after yesterday's 18-6 dismantling of Vermont. "We'll keep it going."

Sunday's Catamount thumping upped the Maroon and White's record to a perfect 6-0 (2-0 ECAC) – it's best start since 1998. But, as it usually goes near the end of March, the tough part of UMass' schedule has just begun.

"It's only March 25," coach Greg Cannella said. "I'll be excited after the Brown game in May – if we're in the NCAA tournament."

******

Wednesday March 21 – UMass 23, Boston College 2.

When a team's starting goaltender ends up playing forward at the end of a game, there's good chance they're losing by a couple of goals – or maybe 20.

And so was the case last Wednesday at Richard F. Garber Field when fourteen different Minutemen found the cage in their 23-2 romp of Boston College. UMass tallied six times in the first eight minutes and led 13-0 at the half. It outshot the Eagles 63-19 for the contest.

Freshman Neil Lundberg led UMass with four goals and an assist while senior Rich Kunkel and sophomore Kevin Leveille each notched a hat trick and a helper. Seniors Jeremy Guski and Chris Lynch converted twice for the Maroon and White sending UMass to its 28th straight victory in as many games over BC.

The Minutemen played all five of its goalies in the contest.

Saturday March 17 – UMass 19, Albany 6.

Kunkel found the back of the cage four times and sophomore Chris Fiore scored twice and added two assists in the Minutemen's 19-6 victory over Albany, Saturday at Garber Field.

The Maroon and White's run-and-gun offense flew out to a quick start tallying seven unanswered goals before the Great Danes' interrupted the ambush with 6:53 left in the second quarter. Kunkel drilled two of his four goals in the opening stanza and senior John Madigan grabbed two points (one goal, one assist) in the spurt.

UMass waltzed into the locker room with a 10-3 advantage. It came out firing in the third quarter and pushed the twine eight times for the 18-4 lead. Fiore netted both of his goals in that quarter to push the Minutewomen to its fourth victory of the season.

******

Special Teams

Defensively, UMass has done an outstanding job on special teams so far this season. The Minuteman defense has killed 22 of its opponent's last 23 extra-man opportunities. A big part of that barrier is the Bash-Brother combination of sophomore Tom Fallon and junior Matt "Big Nasty" McFarland.

In yesterday's match up with Vermont, Fallon showed the Catamounts what the UMass defense is all about. Making a break to the ball early in the fourth quarter, Fallon played the part of free-safety and dropped an oncoming Catamount hard to the Garber turf. A one-minute Illegal Hit penalty ensued – but it was to the delight of his teammates and the Maroon and White faithful.

The Poll Ladder

The No. 7 Minutemen should move up in the polls again this week. Saturday, Hofstra beat No. 2 Notre Dame 11-10 in overtime to gain its first victory of the 2001 campaign. UMass beat Hofstra 17-8 in its first game this season.

******

In 1998, the Minutemen jumped out to an early 6-0 record and went 1-6 in their next seven games. Next Saturday's fight with Penn. State is the first major test in an eight game stretch that features the likes of Syracuse, Georgetown and the University of Maryland-Baltimore County. If they win six, a tourney ticket is inevitable. A Syracuse topple and four others – maybe.

UMass

MEN'S LACROSSE NOTEBOOK
BY ERIC SODERSTROM

Unbreakable. Check out the review in our indestructible Arts.

ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

The women's softball team's spring break was sunny, as they racked up seven wins. Check it out in sports.

SPORTS p. 12

Volume CVII Issue 102 | www.dailycollegian.com | Tuesday, March 27, 2001

UMass bags its cat, names new coach

Steve Lappas era begins in Amherst with administration's formal announcement

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Athletic Director Bob Marcum officially filled the men's basketball team's head coaching vacancy by announcing the hiring of Steve Lappas in a press conference yesterday morning.

The 47-year-old Lappas becomes the nineteenth head coach in the 92-year history of the program, and assumes his third head coaching position at the Division 1 collegiate level. He resigned Friday after nine seasons at the helm of Villanova, before which he coached four seasons at Manhattan College.

Lappas compiled a 613 winning percentage (174-110) with the Wildcats, including eight postseason berths and six seasons with at least 20 wins. That success apparently convinced Marcum and other UMass officials to curtail their interview process and speed up their timetable for hiring the new coach.

"When you embark on a search for a head coach, you look for a proven winner," said Marcum. "We really had no set number of candidates, and no set timeline; the University was very good at granted us the privilege to work at our own pace.

"But something changed all that. And what changed it was Steve Lappas."

Despite his success at Villanova, Lappas felt pressure from fans after his team exited this year's National Invitational Tournament (NIT) with an 18-13 record. He became aware of the UMass vacancy after pondering a move "for a couple months," and welcomed the opportunity for a fresh start.

"I felt Villanova because it was time for a change for me and my family," Lappas said. "I just felt that it was a good opportunity for me not just to go somewhere else, but to go somewhere like this. I like the situation here; it's a great school, with a great arena and geographic location."

Marcum indicated that while Lappas' contract is still being negotiated, he is "recommending to the chancellor a term of five years." He also noted that incentives comprise a significant portion of the package, particularly season ticket sales. Marcum estimated the current number of season tickets sold to be around the 3,200 mark, with a potential for 5,400 total sales.

Lappas addressed a number of issues during the conference, including recruiting, scheduling and the expectations that he will likely face. The initial indication was that Lappas would bring at least a portion of his staff from Villanova with him to UMass, and the coach hinted that some of his recruits from VU may also end up in Amherst.

"We have a list of a few names that could potentially show up here," Lappas said. "If I didn't have a list, I wouldn't be doing my job."

In terms of players recruited this year by his predecessor, James "Bruiser" Flint, Lappas said that he would be making some calls later yesterday and arranging visits with the prospects next week. He claimed to have entertained shooting guard Eddie Basden on an "unofficial visit" to Villanova, and expressed optimism that at least some of Flint's recruits will likely end up on the UMass roster.

"Those kids picked UMass," Lappas said. "Don't get me wrong, Bruiser had a lot to do with it, but they picked UMass."

One of Flint's biggest complaints at the time of his resignation two weeks ago was the team's scheduling, which he said creates too tough a non-conference lineup with too many road games. Faced with questions about scheduling yesterday, Lappas appeared confident in his ability to guide the Minutemen through the slate currently set for next season.

"Every schedule in the nation has to have a balance that suits that particular program and their particular school," Lappas said. "I'm comfortable with what's on the plate for next year."

When asked how he will handle the inevitable comparisons to former UMass coach John Calipari that plagued Flint throughout his term as head coach, Lappas was quick to defend both the job his predecessor did and his own history of overcoming expectations. He cited his task in 1992 of succeeding Rollie Massimino at Villanova as preparing him for any such pressure at UMass (Massimino's Wildcats captured the school's first and only national championship in 1985. Lappas' first year as a VU assistant).

"I had a tough act to follow at Villanova, and I have a tough act to follow here," Lappas said. "Bruiser did a very good job here, both as a head coach and an assistant. It's a very tough league, but the Big East is a tough league too."

Lappas' hiring ends a weekend of intense speculation among the media, which led to some reports by major outlets that Marcum cited as erroneous. The AD made mention of one report published Sunday, which stated that he "...was leaning toward UNC Greensboro head coach Fran McCaffrey but... was told by school officials in Boston to land a bigger name coach."

"No one in Boston at any time told us that we had to go out and get a higher-profile candidate," Marcum said. "We would have continued our interview process had Steve Lappas not popped up on the radar screen."

For more information on the Steve Lappas hiring see, page12.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Steve Lappas (left) will be prowling the sidelines at the William D. Mullins Center next year, after nine seasons as head coach of the Villanova Wildcats.

Rep. Story to help students find summer employment

By Erik Haan
Collegian Correspondent

For University of Massachusetts students residing in the immediate Boston area, there is an alternative to those timely summer job searches, courtesy of Massachusetts State Representative Ellen Story.

The plan, which was initiated last year, was the result of a collaboration between Story, an Amherst resident, her State House colleagues in Boston and the UMass-Amherst Financial Aid Office. The plan is designed in order to aid students in landing summer employment with Boston's Metropolitan District Commission (MDC), a public works agency.

Story's efforts were largely the result of her concern about the lack of involvement by the Governor and the MDC Commissioner in the placement of minorities and local youth into summer positions.

"There was a big article in the [Boston] Globe about how many minority students were taking advantage of these jobs," said Story. "There are a lot of Boston area students who go to the University and should be taking advantage of these opportunities."

Story said that her interest was also peaked because of her understanding of the importance of a strong education and just how tough it is on students who must take on employment in order to continue to pursue their educational careers.

"As the Representative with UMass Amherst in my district, I advocate not just for my district but for students from all over the state who need the affordable, quality education UMass offers," said Story. "Many students rely on summer and school-year jobs to make money to stay in school. These jobs should be available to local students who need them."

The positions the MDC offers are in Boston's public parks, in areas such as lifeguarding and grounds maintenance. The program also gives students a chance to interact with their State Representatives and Senators.

"They have to find out who their Representative or Senator is, then they have to contact them and obtain their signature," said Story.

The signature is a necessary part of the application process and help in obtaining one can be found at the Student Employment Services office, located at room 243 of Whitmore Administration Building. All interested persons can also pick up the information and materials, as well as the application for MDC, at that office.

LAURA CROTTY/COLLEGIAN

An evening of songs and stories with Rabbi David Zeller last night at the Jewish Community Center of Amherst.

Book reading by Katha Pollitt

COURTESY PAUL MATTICK

Katha Pollitt

By Karen Madsen
Collegian Staff

Feminist critic, Katha Pollitt will be honored at a wine and cheese reception tonight from 6:30-7:30 p.m. at Food for Thought Books in Amherst. At 8 p.m., Food for Thought and The Everywoman's Center will also be sponsoring a reading and book signing in UMass' Cape Cod Lounge for her book, Subject to Debate.

Subject to Debate, named after Pollitt's 20-year, bimonthly column for The Nation, contains 88 of Pollitt's essays. She is also the author of Reasonable Creatures, also a collection of essays, and Antarctic Traveler, a book of poems. She has received a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and a fellowship from Guggenheim and Whiting Foundations, and won a National Magazine Award in Essays and Criticism, and a National Book Critics Circle Award.

Pollitt described her autobiography as follows: "I grew up in Brooklyn, and now live on the Upper West Side with Paul Mattick and my daughter. I've taught at Princeton, Columbia School of the Arts, NYU, graduate writing program and most recently, the graduate program in Liberal Studies at the New School. I've published hundreds of book reviews, op-eds, essays and articles in a wide variety of publications (The New York Times, Atlantic Monthly, The New Yorker, Harper's, The Washington Post, Mother Jones, Dissent) and poems in many magazines (the New Yorker, Atlantic Monthly, Poetry, The Yale Review). My essays and poems appear in many anthologies.

"I've read my work and given talks on feminist issues at dozens of colleges. I currently belong to a small group of would-be activists called History in Action, three generations of feminists working for abortion rights."

"I'm interested in feminism, of course, also leftwing politics and secularism. In 1994 I won the Freethought Heroine Award from the Freedom From Religion Foundation, a cause dear to my heart. I write an occasional column for FreeInquiry, the secular humanist magazine."

"We have four cats, which a friend says "borders on eccentricity."

The Everywoman's Center is enthusiastic about the event and encourages all students to attend.

"I've been reading Katha Pollitt in the Nation for a long time," said Joan Barberich of the Everywoman's Center, "and have always thought she was great. She's smart and a powerful feminist. So I was, of course, excited about the Everywoman's Center being a part of bringing her here to the University. Then the other day, I heard someone on the radio use the phrase 'speaking truth to power.' That's what Katha Pollitt does and these days, it seems that we need all the truth we can get."

Hostile Macedonian forces drive rebels into mountains

By Chris Thompson
Collegian Staff

Macedonian government forces continued their offensive in the hills above Tetovo Sunday flushing out insurgent Albanian rebels that had occupied the hills for nearly two weeks.

The Macedonian infantry often synchronized with a massive artillery barrage, drove the forces of the National Liberation Army, a branch of the Kosovo Liberation Army, northward into the mountains which stretch into Kosovo.

In Washington, Secretary of State Colin Powell commended the Macedonian forces but warned that the battle was "not anywhere near over" in Macedonia.

But western military leaders continued to push for a peaceful end to the conflict, insisting that Macedonia must address the concerns of its minority Albanian population to show the 20 percent of Macedonian ethnic Albanians the benefits of political – versus military – action.

"They have taken the military high ground above Tetovo, now is the time (for the government) to take the political high ground," said NATO Secretary General Lord Robertson.

Robertson and European Union security affairs chief Javier Solana arrived in the Macedonian capital of Skopje yesterday to meet with Macedonian President Boris Trajkovski.

"Now is the moment for politics," Solana said upon arrival, adding "Objectives cannot be met through violent acts."

The Macedonian infantry dug in late Sunday night in the hills above Tetovo – the country's second largest city – having driven through rebel lines on Sunday, which included spraying houses with bullets in heavy fighting. Tensions continued to run high yesterday, as Macedonian forces sealed off roads and fired mortars into suspected rebel positions in the northern mountains.

The Albanian guerillas claim to be fighting for ethnic Albanians in Macedonia, which they claim have been discriminated against by the government in the Slav dominated former Yugoslav Republic. The Skopje government, however, maintains that the rebels are separatists aiming to split off part of northern Macedonia in an attempt to create an independent nation united with the Albanian dominated province of Kosovo.

The Democratic Prosperity Party, a majority Albanian opposition party, began its boycott of Parliament yesterday. Party leader Imer Imeri called on President Trajkovski to end the military action, and demanded that the rebels lay down their arms.

Lord Robertson said that NATO would increasing its policing of the Kosovo-Macedonia border in an attempt to cut off the National Liberation Army's military supplies, which are believe to be coming from Kosovo.

European leaders throughout the region urged restraint on the Macedonian side, insisting that a political solution must be reached to avoid another Balkan bloodbath.

"There is a real political hazard in Macedonia, and that is if the governing majority should fall apart," said Bulgarian Prime Minister Ivan Kostov. "That's why the search for a political solution must take central place."

Pardon me, but would you care to write for News?

National College Briefs

Dartmouth College

Fissures have erupted in the once tight-knit foundation of the tiny Chelsea, Vt., community, creating what appears to be a stark divide over whether to support two hometown boys accused of a brutal double murder.

The controversy appears to center around a fund set up by DeRoss Kellogg, to support the families of teenage suspects Robert Tulloch, 17, and James Parker, 16. Recently, in a local food store, two male Chelsea residents engaged in a heated argument over a poster for the fund that almost reached "fisticuffs" before the store's owner asked both men to leave.

The store owner, who asked to remain anonymous, said a stack of posters promoting the fund on his counter started the argument. One man was in favor of the fund, and the other was not. The store owner said he did not remember the exact date of the incident in his store.

The almost-violent incident is atypical of Chelsea townspeople, the store-owner said, however, he said he has noticed a split in community between those standing behind the suspects and their families and those who are not supporting them.

"Some people are violently opposed to [the fund] or the opposite... I think it comes from the fact that there doesn't seem to be much concern for the victims," he said. He said he thinks that more people will be willing to help the families once the yet to be slated trial is over.

And a woman in town who said she knew the families of Tulloch and Parker today noted that there had been many intense discussions but not many problems among townspeople immediately following the boys' arrests, but she said, "That sort of came to a head around Kellogg's poster."

Kellogg — a sixth-grade teacher who has taught both Parker and Tulloch — says the fund is not in any way intended to be used for defense of the two boys. A poster for the fund says that the money will be used to "offset the financial burdens related to food, lodging, and travel expenses, telephone bills, and lost wages."

In another store in Chelsea, a local woman who said she knew Parker's parents added, "The town is divided between those that think [the police] have physical evidence [against Parker and Tulloch] and those that don't."

Dr. Carole Owens, Ph. D., a licensed independent clinical social worker specializing in adolescents — and a member of the International Society of Political Psychology, a group that studies large group behavior — who has been following the Zantop case, told The Dartmouth in an interview that the increasing divide in Chelsea may be partly because of the widening circle of victims and lack of information in this case.

"We think first of the Zantops who tragically lost their lives. Two boys who may spend the rest of their lives in prison. But the victims of this tragic act are also their families, their friends and their small tight-knit community," Owens said, which results in varying opinions of the alleged murderers.

She said that, psychologically, the basis of good communal relation, visible by caring and concern, compromise and agreement, etc., comes from constructive activities. The problem, however, is, "the criminal justice system is an adversarial proceeding," which prevents people from knowing the whole truth. People affected by violent crime are forced to determine the truth without knowing all of the information.

"[People in these cases] believe the truth is found by arguing the two sides. It's not surprising that the people affected by this would more readily believe one side or the other — guilt or innocence," she said.

"This kind of divide of opinion can hurt any group. The best thing that could happen for the Zantop family, the community at Dartmouth and the community of Chelsea, is that there is a speedy and definite conclusion," she said. "They are terrific communities caught in a terrible circumstance," she said.

- Mark Bubriski

University of Pennsylvania

African American employees at the University of Pennsylvania are suing the school for its alleged involvement in racial discrimination regarding employment and disciplinary practices dating back to 1975.

The 34 plaintiffs — employed as animal husbandry technicians, supervisors and managers in the University Laboratory Animal Resources Department (ULAR) — request punitive and compensatory damages in excess of $50,000 as well as promotions from the university. They allege in a civil complaint that the institution has "deprive[d] the plaintiffs of equal employment opportunities ... because of their race, African American."

The charges include precluding these employees from advancing to high paying positions, while treating and evaluating African American technicians with different standards of review compared to their non-African American counterparts.

The civil complaint states that "violations of the policies and protocols by researchers and staff puts African American technicians at risk for exposure to dangerous elements and health conditions."

It adds that the workers have "been the target of illegal and retaliatory disciplinary procedures," which have been "in retaliation for plaintiffs having complained to [university] officials."

The alleged violations were first submitted last April to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), who replied that they were "unable to conclude that the information obtained establishes violations of the statutes." The plaintiffs then filed for a lawsuit last month, though the trial is unlikely to begin until after mid-April, pending a decision on the school's motion for dismissal.

The University of Pennsylvania publicly denies the accusations.

"We consider the allegations to be completely without merit, and the EEOC found them to be without merit as well," said Phyllis Holtzman, spokesperson for the University of Pennsylvania.

"We will defend vigorously against the lawsuit," she said.

Bob Bohner, associate university general counsel, declined to comment when asked whether the university might agree to a settlement with the plaintiffs.

The lawyer for the plaintiffs, Vivienne Crawford, said, "This is not about money ... [but] I always think if people are still employed there we should explore the possibility of a settlement."

"I don't believe that the EEOC conducted an in-depth investigation," Crawford said, noting that instead of interviewing all of the plaintiffs, the EEOC examined their written complaints.

Unlike some other discrimination accusations that attracted students' attention — such as the controversy at Cornell in 1996 over minority program houses — the ULAR lawsuit is not widely talked about on the campus in Philadelphia, according to some students.

"I cannot say that I've heard any mention regarding the lawsuit [even though] I'm quite involved in the Penn community," said Eiji Takizawa, a freshman at the University of Pennsylvania.

The lawsuit, regardless of its outcome, might remind other institutions to ensure equality for its employees and students.

"An institution that is concerned about these issues would be attentive to the situation and monitor the distribution of jobs, ensuring that the way people are treated is standardized," said Prof. James Turner, director of Africana Studies and Research Center, referring to universities in general. Cornell University has created measures to ensure equality and diversity, such as the Committee on Diversity, managed jointly by Cornell and its unionized staff.

"Cornell has policies and procedures in place to ensure that complaints are addressed [because] we won't tolerate discrimination," said Mary Opperman, vice president of human resources.

- Peter Lin

Compiled by Ryan Benharris from Uwire.com

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Fabre Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Sarah Wingardner Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Sliwinski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

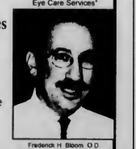
GREAT Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on eyeglasses from the new on-site Optical Services at UHS
2 A great place to get contact lenses
3 Convenient hours and location
4 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames
5 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass

"I invite you to use the Eye Care Services"


Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services

UHS Eye Care Services
For Appointments or questions, call 577-5244
any second pair of complete prescription eyeglasses within three months of a first complete pair of prescription eyeglasses (excluding insurance provided eyeglasses) at the UHS for the same patient.

racial equality environmental justice welfare reform
reproductive justice freedom from violence HIV/AIDS globalization gay/lesbian/bisexual/transgender rights
economic equality healthcare and childcare
support for immigrants sexual health education

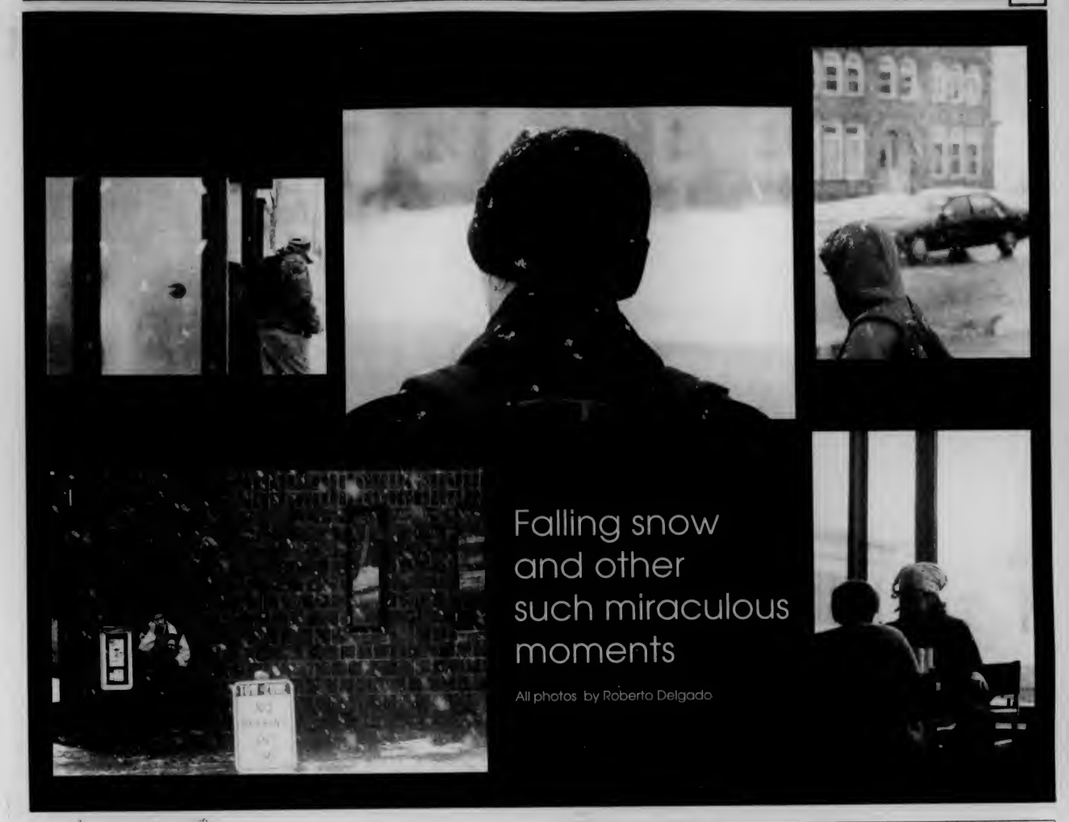
You are cordially invited to attend our fifteenth annual conference at Hampshire college:

FROM ABORTION RIGHTS TO SOCIAL JUSTICE: BUILDING THE MOVEMENT FOR REPRODUCTIVE FREEDOM

March 30- April 1, 2001
Hampshire College
Amherst, Massachusetts

This conference is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. Housing, childcare, and sign language interpretation provided with advanced registration. Registration forms are available on our website at http://www.hamp.hampshire.edu/~nlpp To receive a registration form via snail mail, please call us at 413.559.5416.

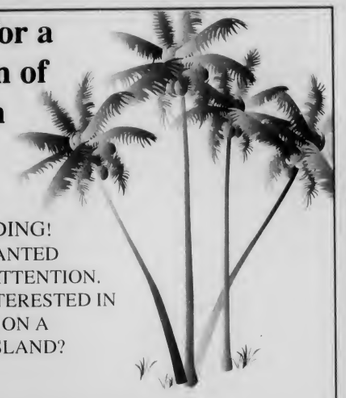
europe ON A budget
SEMINAR
Learn everything you need to know about traveling to Europe on a budget. Our free seminar covers:
• Discount Airfares • How to Get Around • Budget Accommodations • What You Need to Know Before You Go • Planning Your Itinerary • Tours • Travel Safety
Enter to win a trip to Europe
Other giveaways include: rail passes, travel gear, travel books and more!!
Coming soon to YOUR campus.
Contact Council Travel for details!
Campus Center Rm 905
7 - 9 pm
Wednesday, March 28th
Council Travel www.counciltravel.com



Falling snow and other such miraculous moments

All photos by Roberto Delgado

Interview for a New Season of Temptation Island



JUST KIDDING!
WE JUST WANTED TO GET YOUR ATTENTION.
BUT, ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WORKING ON A PARADISE ISLAND?

Come Find Opportunities At...
CAREER DAY 2001
Hospitality Career Fair
Over 70 Companies Attending.
Campus Center Auditorium
9:00am- 3:00pm Tuesday
March 27th
Presented by the Department of Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration. All Majors Invited!

General Electric
Monster.com
Red Herring
GE RED HERRING monster.com Work Life Possibilities

Q: What do these companies have in common?

A: Former Collegian Advertisment Managers.

THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.

APPLICANTION DEADLINE IS MARCH 30TH

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Proposed alcohol tax: a good move for all of us

A new tax has been proposed here in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and we believe it to be a good thing.

It was reported in the Boston Globe yesterday that Senator Marian Walsh (D-West Roxbury) had proposed to institute a 5 percent sales tax on all alcohol purchases.

Don't begin howling yet.

It is inevitable that in a town like Amherst, on a campus like that of UMass, that the opposition to a tax on our precious booze would be as welcome as a kick in the pants. The liquor culture is ingrained and not open to change, and it already takes up much of our meager budgets. Why would we possibly be in favor of implementing a tax which will directly affect us in an area within which we already spend so much of our precious money?

Walsh's reasons are valid.

The Senator compares this to the recent nationwide push to raise taxes on cigarette and other tobacco pushes, which she also endorses. The tobacco tax recognizes that cigarettes do cause illness and disease among their users, the cost of which is then transmitted to the taxpayers in general when the state has to pay for the health care and the hospitalization of the smokers. The core of the law is to make the people who smoke from the bill for the damages it causes – all the money from the tobacco tax goes directly into a fund which is only used on tobacco-related expenditures.

The proposed liquor tax would perform the same function for a different vice. The tax would raise approximately $57 million in new funds which would go to pay exclusively for substance abuse education and treatment.

The fact is that Walsh's proposed tax is not just another example of a greedy government out to get the taxpayers for every red cent by taxing only those things they love the most. It is an example of an active government taking steps to halt a social problem which has been with us since the founding of the country.

Now, many beer drinkers and shot takers will claim, and rightly so, that they are merely enjoying a perfectly legal substance and that they should not be punished for the sad fact that others choose to misuse them. This fact cannot be argued – most people who consume alcohol are not addicts, they are adults.

However, in this case, what will be lost pales to what can be gained. Who hasn't known someone who has struggled with a demon in a bottle? Alcohol abuse is not an unknown in our society, and it is the public in general who both suffers and pays for it. If booze is the problem, and booze can be the solution, then so be it.

Walsh's tax, while seeming harsh since we are one of the groups primarily affected by it, is justified in that we are also one of the groups most plagued by the disease it hopes to combat. The Daily Collegian supports it.

Information from the Boston Globe was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

College media under attack

MATTHEW DESPRES

It's been an interesting week for college media, as a pair of student publications have come under attack for the way in which they dealt with sensitive racial content – both editorial and commercial.

As the dust, which continues to be raised by student outrage, attempts to settle, the question of who was right and who was at fault in these cases remains wide open. Were the majority of the college newspapers – including this one – right in refusing to advertise the beliefs of one David Horowitz, an opponent of slavery reparations, or did those papers who wrapped themselves tightly in the first amendment and marched on with the ad take the appropriate course of action? It's an old debate, wrestled with countless times over in this country, and has again found a fertile breeding ground on college campuses.

On the day the Horowitz ad ran, a group of students at Brown University, dubbed the "Third World Coalition," felt the appropriate course of action was to relieve of the remaining student body of that day's entire press run, stealing every issue of the Brown Daily Herald they could in a sad attempt to thwart the conservative theorist's message.

Now, aside from the fact that it's a blatant case of theft, it's wildly discomforting to think that, at any campus in this country, at any given time, a group of students will be waiting to act as a filter and conscious for the rest of the campus, deciding among themselves what is appropriate for the rest of us. That in itself is far more dangerous than any form of copy or ad could be – we have a right to think and form opinions, without interference, for ourselves as situations present themselves. Sometimes, of course, as nature would have it, we err in our decisions, our opinions and our stances. At least, however, when left to our own devices, they remain our mistakes, our decisions from which something valuable can be culled. It will be a sad day when fellow students begin doing that for me.

It's about ideas, people. Getting that speech, perhaps our most valuable commodity, into the marketplace. These students at Brown very literally took it upon themselves to interfere with that process, one that they have equal access to and could have contributed to by means of more speech, and brought significant attention to a cause they were trying to squelch. It was a cowardly act, and moved to deteriorate the reputation and Intellect of a student body more than any advertisement ever could.

Students at Harvard's The Daily Crimson found themselves drawn into two storms this week – one being the Horowitz affair, and the other coming from the inside, an article published in their weekend magazine, Fifteen Minutes. Concerning Horowitz, The Crimson refused to publish his ad but did, however, run it, with full text, to supplement a story written on the situation. With his "dangerous" ideas present on page one for all to see, the day continued as normal in Cambridge. No reaction, no violence, no uproar or clash between the races. Any response came in the form of discussion – be it printed or in direct exchange, showing that the student body at Harvard is as civil and intelligent as any other in this country given the choice.

Or are they? A student column titled "The Invasian," published in the supplemental weekly, caused a stir among the Asian-American community, as the author, an Asian male, knocked his culture, calling out stereotypes and expressing a general pessimism and dissatisfaction with the social climate at his school. The Harvard community found plenty to be pissed off about here, arranging a protest in the name of "Responsible Journalism and Respect" and marching toward the Crimson offices, eventually congregating outside and expressing their views which included, among other things, that The Crimson should have taken further steps to censor the opinion of the author.

Question: was it eschewing discussion in favor of ridiculous sign-making or ignoring the central point of that journalist's column on the part of the protestors that was responsible or respectful? Sorry, but I can't seem to see through the hypocrisy of their wanton campaign.

Responsible journalism is not withholding or editing a story – or, as these cases have shown, even an ad – because you may in fact offend a certain percentage of your readership. Responsible journalism is printing stories of genuine importance that will cause people to act in a productive way, to clear the issues at hand with actual face-to-face contact and verbal discourse. As an employee of a college daily I hold a certain bias, siding with media of all levels, but certainly, it must be clear to any reader that our purpose, that any media outlet's purpose, is to present what is real to the community and not hold their hands. Making the world a Shiny Happy place isn't what this business is all about.

I support the Brown Daily Herald in their decision to run the ad, not because of its content, but rather because they were unafraid to withhold information from a public that has the right to see it and then decide for themselves how they feel. The ad didn't present an immediate danger upon publication (again, The Crimson ran it as a graphic with no incident); the only danger stemmed from those ignorant enough to deem themselves a filter for the rest of their student body for the rest of us, who I honestly believe make up the majority, there is a certain level of maturity and intelligence we must attain, a place where things such as the Horowitz ad can openly be discussed. Closing our eyes to the problem and pretending its not there has never accomplished anything, and never will.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist.

Student papers are right

MELODY ZAGAMI

This week I was terrifyingly like Puffy in an uptown nightclub trying to find something to write about. Higher Education came through. The week before last, Brown University chose to publish David Horowitz's article on reparations from slavery. The Brown students bombarded the newspaper demanding remaining copies of the article be destroyed, and that they receive a formal apology and financial amends.

As an educated young person at this University, you are aware of what Horowitz's article is about, the issue it raises and so forth. The Boston Globe ran an article after the Brown incident that cited high-profile school newspapers that chose not to run the advertisement. Among those listed were Columbia's Daily Spectator and The Harvard Crimson.

The UMass community hasn't been left in the dark with regard to the ad simply because we weren't directly exposed to it. We have read it in other papers and on the Internet. I am not saying whether I totally agree or disagree with Mr. Horowitz's points. Obviously most of what he is putting out there is foolishness, but the man can say what he wants, hold his own views and run advertisements as long as he and his supporters are footing the bill. The editor has the final say on what is published and what is not.

What I want to know, though, is exactly when did we get a pole stuck up our collective, overeducated ass? When did we, as college students whether we be black, red, white, green or yellow – decide that we're offended by every single thing that we don't agree with? When did we start buying into the fact that expression isn't right if it's not in line with our beliefs? Brown is a so-called liberal university with a liberal student body. I have a friend who went there who says their idea of liberalism is one of the biggest jokes going, about as funny as the fact that they trick you into thinking you want to spend the best four years of your life in Providence, Rhode Island. The students of Brown can't handle reading that which represents the very notion of a society where anyone can say what they want and know that their speech, no matter how offensive, seemingly wrong or foolish it is, can be heard. They have a right to be angry, attending a "liberal" university that, according to the Globe article, once pushed to adopt the term "United Statsians" because "Americans" is dismissive of the other inhabitants of North and South America.

Now that's liberal, downright sensitive and caring. So they're upset, they can hold group protests and steal the newspapers. But I hope that they realize that the key to free speech is more speech and Horowitz's points do more for our society than their absence would. By publishing Horowitz's advertisement, The Brown Daily Herald reasserts its values. Horowitz says things that we should be thinking about – I'm not saying whether we should be agreeing with him or not – but we should be considering exactly what reparations are and what they should be. And that is something that many Americans do not always ponder while they are sipping on their lattes and talking on their cell phones. Horowitz's advertisement brings issues into the marketplace, it sets up rhetoric in places where it wasn't before, and it develops a subject that has lain dormant in the annals of our nation. Brown's students demanding financial amends because they are offended by an advertisement is, by far, one of the most foolish requests an Ivy League school will ever hear. You do not deserve a handout because you disagree with something your newspaper ran. I want everyone who disagrees with my columns to run down to the Collegian and demand retribution. I'm thinking at least five cents a word; I write 800 or so words every other week. You do the math and get yourself something nice.

I realize that what the Brown kids are saying is that their paper was paid to run what they deem to be a "vehicle for bigotry." And the Brown Daily Herald is just another publication obviously run by money hungry bigots. No, in fact, their paper is run by journalists. A group of students and people who are trying to keep in touch with one of the only things our country has ever done right, that being the First Amendment. It's not the job of your school newspaper to protect you from the evils and all the ludicrous ideas that you'll be bombarded with once you leave college. The job of the newspaper, whether that be a college, national, daily or weekly, is to disregard your feelings while printing news, stories and advertisements that show you the truth about the world around you.

Melody Zagami is a Collegian Columnist.

Write for Ed/Op!

Snow, again

DANA OPPEDISANO

Have you ever witnessed a catastrophic snowfall? An insane amount of fluffy white powder piled upon our otherwise lush earth and rendering it catatonic for days, sometimes even weeks at a time? Have you ever seen so much snow and ice pile in front of your door that it traps you within its walls for extended amounts of time, causing you to slowly lose control of your mental facilities and threaten dehydration and starvation? In a word: Armageddon. Has a snowfall ever caused this? Have you ever witnessed it?

Good, because neither have I. Although, if you caught any of the weather reports from a few weeks ago, you could have sworn that it was coming.

I was fool enough to swing by Stop & Shop a few Sundays ago to pick up some milk. It was getting late, and I honestly didn't think that stopping to grab a half-gallon could take more than a few minutes of my extremely valuable time. My god, was I wrong.

The lines were out the door. There were out of bread, out of water, short on employees. Even that bagger who can name any given year, and then proceed to name at least 20 movies released within that calendar year, wasn't working. The paranoia had already got him, the same way that it got nearly everyone else in this town, the area, and up and down the entire East Coast. We were supposed to have a blizzard, one that would make the disaster of last month look like a dusting. And all because some tight-ass in a suit, in front of a big map, told us all to watch out.

I hate the weatherman. When it comes to news, people could give a damn if the front page of the New York Times says that the stock market is going to crash and that 12 soldiers died in an altercation near the Iraqi border. When it comes to the weather, though, some nerd says that we're getting a foot of snow and widespread panic ensues.

For as often as the weather guy totally blows it, he definitely has the greatest job security in the world, if he gets it right: "Hey everybody, look at me, I called that one, didn't I? Hopefully you all caught my 11 p.m. broadcast and were able to make plans to avoid the wintry mix out there!" Smiling smugly behind his think bifocals and often sporting the oh-so fashionable comb over look, using corny phrases like "wintry mix." Who the hell talks like that, anyway?

When he's wrong: "Now, you have to understand that the low pressure coming off the Atlantic seaboard has caused this storm front, slowly moving in from Canada, to be swept just off the coast and will now miss us by about 50 miles." No one knows what the hell he's talking about, so who's going to argue with that? Last week, classes were cancelled and half the world was shut down a full day before the first flake ever fell. In addition, we didn't get nearly as much snow as many of the local weathermen were predicting for the area. (Although I do want to voice my appreciation for the guys who were out there busting their asses to plow the streets for us. They're actually the good guys with trucks, unlike their counterparts in tow trucks – they already know exactly where they can stick it). The guy can say whatever he wants, and chances are, not even his boss at the station is ever going to suggest that he make some changes and start calling it right.

Does anyone remember the supposedly huge blizzard that was supposed to hit around New Year's Eve? The only reason I do is because I completely altered all of my travelling and drinking plans for that night, in an attempt to avoid this supposedly catastrophic act of God. Little did I realize that all I really had to do was stay where I was. You see, apparently a strong high-pressure system mixed with the colder air to push the storm to the south or some crap like that. It's fool proof – what am I gonna call up the Weather Channel and say, "hey man, I was gonna get drunk and laid and you ruined it!" No, I'm going to sit back with the rest of the world and say, "wow, we're lucky that storm missed us, huh?"

Well, you know what I think? I think it's all a sham. I think that the weather people secretly in cahoots with the major supermarket chains in the area, and he just predicts insane snowfalls when business gets a little slow. As I've said before, who's going to argue with this? He can just fall back on the whole "Doppler was on the fritz" excuse. Which reminds me – what the hell is a Doppler, and I sure do hope they named it after the guy who invented it. Otherwise, the name sounds more like a toy that they sell to toddlers to help them learn to talk or potty train or something.

I mean, really, how tough can their job be, especially during the colder months? Here's a foolproof forecast for every day in the winter: "It's going to be pretty damn cold out there, so bundle up good. There's also a chance of snow, so keep your eyes open."

Finally, why does everyone feel compelled to rush a supermarket when they hear about a big snowstorm? I understand that there might be a possibility of school being cancelled and deciding not to head to the office that day, but it's not like threat of nuclear winter and we've got to stock our bomb cellars. I just can't believe that people – who you'd think would kind of get used to the idea of snow for a couple months from, say, November to April – can go completely nuts the way they did a few weeks back.

I think I have a good idea why though – because the weatherman tells them to do that. He picks up his fat check from Stop & Shop, and then he and the movie bagger guy head down to the new Cinemark with a couple of 40s and get sloshed. They laugh; we board up our windows and write our wills. That's just the way the world works, and I'm sick of it. I've had it with letting my life revolve around what a fat mess like Willard Scott says from a thousand miles away. I'm going to silently protest the weather forecasts by not allowing them to affect my life, by dressing warm of my own free will, and staying in when it snows outside. Just pray for me that I don't run out of bread and water. This very well could be my last column. Just pray, that's all I ask.

Dana Oppedisano is a Collegian Columnist.

THESE GUYS ARE SCORING FAST AND OFTEN, MARV. LOOK AT THAT HEAD FAKE! THESE GUYS ARE ON FIRE, BABY!!
NO QUESTION, AL. THESE GUYS ARE QUICK. THEY'RE BLOWING RIGHT PAST THE OTHER SIDE!!
CONGRESS
IT'S MARCH MADNESS!!

Eve's second album proves irresistible

By Kurt Polesky
Collegian Staff

EVE
Scorpion
Interscope Records

The old adage "You can't please all of the people all of the time," could very well be disproved with Eve's new album Scorpion. The no-longer blonde bombshell manages to toe the line between hardcore and popish hook happy rap with superb results. Whatever one looks for in hip-hop, they are likely to find something to their likening within Eve's confident and catchy rhymes and cutting edge beats.

On paper, Eve's sophomore album looks to pack a serious punch. With Dr. Dre, Swizz Beats, and Ruff Ryder mix masters Teflon and DJ. Withy Shock handling production, and guest appearances by fellow Rough Riders DMX, The Lox and Drag-On, the table is more than set for a feast of hip-hop's best. Luckily, the experience meets the lofty expectations.

Eve set a new standard of female rap with her 1999 debut album Let There Be Eve.The Rough Ryders First Lady. The beats were rough and catchy, and Eve herself had a definite masculine flair. She successfully stayed away from the overtly sexual themes of fellow rap-divas Lil Kim and Foxy Brown, and instead presented her own thuggish version of life on the street. The trend is both continued and strengthened on Scorpion, where Eve's confident and hard rhyming style explodes through your speakers, headphones or listening device of choice right off the bat on the album-opening "Cowboy." Her lyrical flow combined with catchy call and response chorus "Where My Niggaz At. Where My Thugs At? You know where we at!" sets the album's brash tone in its very first track. The Teflon-produced "Who's That Girl" follows with more Eve self-empowerment, "Why listen to that other shit, you got the best here," she proclaims on the track, a wise choice for the album's first single, with its radio friendly chorus and fast-paced, unique-sounding beat.

Like most current rap albums, Scorpion has a slew of guests and tracks "featuring" a fellow rapper or R&B'er. In this case, however, the guest spots serve to enhance rather than make up for the lead artist's rhyming skills. The best of the Ruff Ryder guest spots comes from DMX's on "Scream Double R," where the dirty duo proclaims "Industry, fuck it, in the streets keep it real." The fact that Eve's rhymes can easily stand next to DMX's rough rhymes and inventive wordplay is a testament to her ability. Some of the other Rough Ryder guest spots don't work quite as well, notably The Lox's on "Thug In The Street," which is typical boring Lox fare. Even so, the albums weaker moments are still far too good to be considered lackluster, and there is enough inventiveness to keep the album from ever getting stale.

Although there is nothing earth shatteringly creative on Eve's latest, there are enough surprises thrown the listener's way to keep them on their toes. Dre's sharp west side production along with a surprising guest appearance by Gwen Stephani makes "Got What You Need" (think "Independent Woman," just far more thugged out) an album highlight. Stefani supplies the background vocals over Dre's skilled production. The result: an ultra-tight track with hit written all over it. Even the album's skits serve a purpose rather than simply functioning as filler material. In the "No Scrubs"-flavored skit "Frontin" Eve tries her hand at stand up. The skit "3 Way" serves as a perfect prequel to "You Had Me, You Lost Me," a menacing break-up track with the uproarious chorus "You had me you lost me, and now you want me back, you fucked around and played around and now you want me back," in which Eve shows her rage toward a cheating ex-boyfriend. Near the album's end the pace is changed with the soulful sounding track "Life is So Hard" featuring Tenna Marie, and the reggae flavored "No No No" featuring Steven Marely. Still, there's more than enough typical hip-hop fare to please those who don't welcome much variety in their hip-hop.

What makes Eve a cut above the majority today's hip hoppers is that her talent is able to stand on its own without the crutch of relying on backneyed themes (sex, bling). Scorpion may not be a classic album that will forever change hip-hop, and though it doesn't do anything stylistically radical, it is a well-produced album with an excellent rhythmic flow and very few weak moments.

COURTESY RYAN VADUKUL

Eve's latest is sure to please.

Patterson pens another thriller

By Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

ROSES ARE RED
James Patterson
Little Brown & Company

Anyone who has an interest in modern fiction is aware of author James Patterson and the frequency with which he writes. In recent years, he has written one quality book after another, averaging two or three annually. Unfortunately, though, very few people outside of the literary sphere are familiar with him, with the possible exception of Kiss the Girls, his biggest best-seller that was given a film adaptation in 1997, starring Morgan Freeman (who also appears in its prequel, Along Came A Spider, in theatres next month).

James Patterson always manages to weave a compelling and straightforward mystery, and his latest, Roses Are Red, is no exception. It may, in fact, be his best work yet, offering his traditional page-turning suspense, but also an unusual, yet pleasing, amount of heart.

In his previous novels, the reader has only caught brief glimpses of characters' personal lives, but here Patterson successfully incorporates more depth to his creations while remembering not to bog down the story with extraneous and unnecessary details. He effectively meshes this with a pulse-pounding storyline that steers away from usual mystery novel clichés, packing a wallop of a punch with its unpredictability.

Renowned Forensic psychologist Alex Cross, Patterson's trademark protagonist for his "nursery-rhyme novels," now seeks a criminal genius calling himself The Mastermind, who has brilliantly engineered several bank hold-ups and sadistic murders in the Washington D.C area. The crimes couldn't come at a worse time for Cross, who is not only dealing with the after-effects of his fiancée being kidnapped (see Pop Goes the Weasel), but also with his daughter Janelle battling a brain tumor. As Cross' personal life spins further out of his control, so does his manhunt for The Mastermind. Soon, the fine line between home and work becomes hazy, and for the first time in his long career Cross begins to question if it's time to hang up his spurs for a more traditional life.

Patterson has shown Alex Cross' sensitive side before, but here he demonstrates more compassion than usual. In a particularly moving scene, Janelle laments about having part of her head shaved prior to brain surgery, only moments later to have Cross enter with a similar shaving. For once, Cross concentrates the undying strength he exhibits on the job on the uncertain future of his innocent daughter. For once, Cross is powerless to stop a villain, this time of a different sort, invading his personal life.

Cross's love life is not going well either. Even though his fiancée Christine has returned to work following her kidnapping and later rescue, she can no longer manage the newfound responsibility of raising Alex, Jr. In a painfully moving moment, she tells Cross that she can no longer see him or their son, and must move somewhere far away where she can escape the terror she feels daily in her present life, and start a new one. Again, Cross's heart has been broken, even though he will now have the added joy of raising his newborn son. Even though Cross captured the criminal that so changed Christine's life, this is one example where the felon

Turn to PATTERSON, page 6

Mo' money, mo' problems? Not so for the Beatnuts

By Esteban Argüello
Collegian Correspondent

THE BEATNUTS
Take It Or Squeeze It
Loud

Are you sick of hearing "Watch Out Now" on the radio? Well, Juju and Psycho Les have come out with twelve new songs to get tired of. The latest Beatnuts CD, Take it Or Squeeze It, is saturated with singles and radio friendly hits designed to get your ass shaking and their popularity up. The sudden move to put out more mainstream hits comes right after their near bankruptcy.

The Beatnuts have always been known for their underground, obscure beats. That's their true passion, but that doesn't pay the bills, especially when their lawyers are swiping their money right out of their hands. Since firing their attorneys and lawyers and signing to Loud Records, the Beatnuts have been working hard to feed their families (who haven't been living in the lap of luxury, despite the success of the last album).

Although they prefer just producing tracks, Les and Juju have written a new album to attract more clientele. The more their records sell, the more people look to them to get beats, and if they get enough clients, they can stick to solely producing. As Psycho Les put it, "Our albums are our calling cards to the industry." Hence the new CD is extra club, extra pop and extra catchy, so they can get the extra cash. To make a big push for popular acceptance, one would think the Beatnuts should feature big industry names on their tracks (as they did in their last record). Instead they have opted to feature obscure artists such as local NYC rappers such as Tony Touch, Greg Nice and Marly Metal. The only big name on this album is Method Man, featured on the "Se Acabo Remix." By balancing their more mainstream beats with lesser-known vocalists, they hope to remain true to their roots and aim not to upset their loyal fans who appreciate them for their underground style.

COURTESY JONATHAN MANNION

The club beats are balanced with some Latin rhythms that give the Beatnuts an appealing, authentic, different flavor. Their first single, "No Escapin' This," overlays a Latino flute loop over a catchy dance beat. The hypnotic Latin sounding woman in the background adds depth to their beats. The song has already received much radio play, and I've even heard Funkmaster Flex sample it. This song alone ought to give the album good sales.

Take It Or Squeeze It also offers some harder songs for those who like the west-coast gangster beats. "Who's Comin Wit Da Shit Na" offers a good west-coast beat with hard vocals, including my favorite line from Psycho Les, "Niggas wanna ban me like Dice Clay, but I grab my nuts and tell'em 'have a nice day!'" "Hood Thang" also offers a more sexual, harder song. These songs help get some variety in this light, radio-friendly album.

Overall the CD comes off as average. The Beatnuts don't take themselves too seriously and the album shows it. The vocals are often light, even funny at times, and the beats are bordering right between mainstream and underground. Although Take It Or Squeeze It may not be a concrete album, it still provides an overall good time, and ought to help the Beatnuts with their monetary problems and generate some much-needed sales. It's a record to play before going out to clubs or when having some guest in the dorm room. Something simple for the girls and boys to bounce their heads to. After all, I believe that's what The Beatnuts intended.

Columbia alum gives tips for surviving film biz

By Ryan Adair
The Columbia Chronicle (Columbia College)

(U WIRE) CHICAGO – Hollywood is known as the land of golden opportunity for many wide-eyed, opportunity-seeking filmmakers and actors.

Columbia College alumnus, Joshua Leisner, now an agent with the William Morris Agency, came back to his old college stomping grounds last week, to serve as a guest speaker for the seminar "Surviving Hollywood," giving prospective artists a first hand account of both the negative and positive aspects of living and working in the motion picture capital of the world.

"I want to fill in the blanks for these students," Leisner said. "I'm just hoping to add to what their teachers here are already telling them."

Leisner told the audience filled with aspiring actors, directors, screenwriters and animators, that moving to Los Angeles will be a life altering experience and that the city of angels is truly a different world in itself.

"Every story you've ever heard about L.A. is true, but it's not as fake and plastic as some believe," Leisner said. "However, money is there to be made, bought, exchanged and sold. Despite the negativity, the payoffs are still great."

Leisner provided detailed information for the students, ranging from the best section of the city in which to live, (the affordable West Side); to avoiding the pitfalls of potential drug abuse, stressing that drugs are a major factor of life in Los Angeles. Leisner also highlighted the three essentials for surviving daily life in L.A. Regardless of a career, a cell phone is a necessity, as is the Thomas Guide, a grid of the greater Los Angeles area and a reliable, functioning car is also a must.

Leisner also cautioned students that it may not be the best time to move to Hollywood, and begin a career in the motion picture industry. The pending Writer's Guild Strike is expected to commence sometime between May 1 and 31, with the Screen Actor's Guild to follow suit.

Leisner guaranteed the strikes are more than likely, which will halt all production on films, television and commercials indefinitely.

Even when the strike is resolved, it still may not make things any easier, in terms of landing that first job in the industry.

For students just starting out in the business, knowing the ins and outs of Hollywood is the key to ultimate survival, according to Leisner.

He suggested that all aspiring filmmakers and actors read the trade papers, including The Hollywood Reporter, Variety, and Backstage West. Also snagging an agent can make the difference between success and failure in Tinsel Town.

"Agents are the only ones in town who can actually go out and get you work," Leisner said. "Start researching now which agents handle what you want to go into."

Leisner, who graduated from Columbia in 1999, made the big move to Hollywood directly after completing his degree in entertainment management.

He worked briefly on the film "Duets" with Gwyneth Paltrow, then applied for an opening at the William Morris Agency, the nation's largest talent representation firm. "I got real lucky," he said.

Currently Leisner represents some of Hollywood's A-list stars, but also specializes in helping to put struggling actors on the map.

He stressed that while trying to break into the business is difficult, it is still okay to be persistent.

"When pursuing work in L.A., you need to strike a balance between being proactive and just short of annoying," he said.

Ashley Knight, an advisor from the Career Center for Arts and Media, organized the event and said the college is looking to bring more alumni back to Columbia, in order to give students a real perspective of cur-

Turn to COLUMBIA page 6

COURTESY DEPT. OF MUSIC AND DANCE

Hello, cello!
Matt Haimovitz, cello, will perform with Nadine Shank, piano, in the fourth piano series concert on Sunday, April 1, at 3 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall on the UMass campus

TV news briefs:
Seinfeld does stand up

By Anthony Marchegiano
The Breeze (James Madison U.)

(U-WIRE) HARRISONBURG, Va. – FINALLY HE RETURNS: On March 21 Jerry Seinfeld made his return to stand-up as he performed on CBS's "The Late Show with David Letterman." He was back in form 'observing' mad cow disease, lared (the guy who lost 100 pounds eating Subway sandwiches) and the newest thing in his life, his baby girl. Seinfeld made many jokes about parenthood and tried to convince Dave to have a baby, but Dave didn't take to the idea.

This was his first televised stand-up act since his farewell HBO special. Seinfeld has been randomly popping up at New York comedy clubs testing out new material.

He will perform next week in Oakland, Calif. doing a one-man show, which is going to be incorporated in a documentary he is producing. Overall, it was great to see the god of sitcoms back on the stand-up scene, but I wonder what could be next for him? Sticking to stand-up? Another sitcom?

Hopefully, he will just wait it out and take over Letterman's job in 10 years. Because really that's all there is left for him to do out there without screwing up the greatest legacy ever.

BREAKING THE BARRIER: What's missing from NBC's "Friends?" Well, they have lived in downtown New York over five years and they have yet to run into an African-American as a main character. Guess they have just been going to all the wrong places.

However, they finally find one in the city this May as "Bring it On"'s Gabrielle Union will guest star in several episodes as a love interest for Joey and Ross.

INDY RACING 90210: ABC Sports execs were thinking: Who would best round out our Indianapolis 500 broadcast team? Well who else but the former teen icon and current convicted drunk-driver Jason Priestley.

The former "Beverly Hills 90210" star has signed on to do the broadcast of the Indy 500. He is a life-long fan of auto racing, plus he will add some first-hand insight into the crashes as he wrecked his Porsche while driving under the influence.

SECOND HELPINGS: Ridley Scott plans on adding an hour of unused footage to "Hannibal" when it airs on CBS in 2003. The network intends to expand the film into a miniseries.

It should be interesting to see what has been left out, especially if the DVD doesn't show all these extra scenes when it is released.

NWO NO MORE: Turner broadcasting is pulling the plug on World Championship Wrestling. WCW has been on Turner's networks in some capacity since the 1970s. What will happen to the company and all its wrestlers?

Days after it got canned, Vince McMahon, owner of the WWF enterprise, pounced on the opportunity and purchased the disbanded league and all its athletes. So now what America is stuck with instead of two medium-sized wrestling leagues, is one giant league. Great! Grand! Wonderful!

TIMBERLAKE IN OZ: 'N Sync star Justin Timberlake is in talks to join the cast of OZ. Now settle down, I, too, got excited at first because I thought it was HBO's hit series "OZ," the one depicting what it is really like in prison.

I really would like to see the teeny bopper go into one of the jail cells and say, "Hi T-Bone, I'm Justin, your new cell mate. Wanna sing a song and get to know each other?" You can just imagine what would happen next.

Unfortunately that scene won't happen because its Fox's hip hop television adaptation of "The Wizard of Oz," titled "The O.Z." that Timberlake is joining.

■ patterson

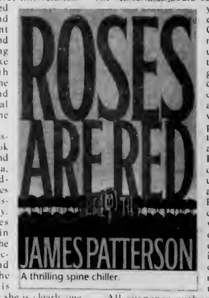
continued from page 5

was the victor.

When the FBI is called in to help with the case, Cross meets the sensuous Agent Cavalierre, and romance again starts to bloom. But for our tragic hero, this relationship, too, is filled with twists and turns. Both want to take it slow and keep their fling low-key. But like before with Christine, this time The Mastermind plays an integral role in tearing the two apart.

Noticeably missing from the book is the comical and crass Nana Mama, Cross's grandmother who serves as a beacon of wisdom and morality. While she makes an appearance in the first half of the novel, she is practically gone and forgotten in the second. This is unfortunate since she is clearly one of Patterson's most memorable characters, and part of what gives this series its power. If one hasn't read a Patterson thriller before her absence may not be as greatly felt, but for those who have, when she again materializes at the end the reader recalls her nonappearance, and finds it a minor flaw with the story.

The ending, though, is what sticks out in one's mind the most. Two shocking scenarios occur during the climax, making us question if Cross has indeed lost his skill at the job as he pondered early on himself. Is it more distressing that The Mastermind could be someone you least expect? Or is it more upsetting that the gifted detective could accuse the wrong person of the crimes at hand? Instead of offering us a solid answer, Patterson concludes with a cliffhanger, making us crave more as usual.



A thrilling spine chiller.

All suspense authors have a nickname: Agatha Christine was "The Dutchess of Death," and Stephen King is "The King of Horror." James Patterson, however, doesn't don such a title, even though he is equally deserving. Through Roses Are Red, the author proves just how lasting his mark on literature is, making him the Mastermind of Mystery for all concerned.

■ colombia

continued from page 5

rent industries and jobs.

"Leisner provided practical information, and I think he helped to demystify the golden image of Hollywood," Knight said.

"We find it very valuable for alumni members to come back and connect with students."

Leisner handed out his own business cards during the lecture and told students in attendance, that if they ever needed questions answered, he would be more than willing to oblige.

Kristine Borcz, a 20-year-old computer animation major, who is planning to make the eventual plunge to L. A., found Leisner's discussion, both informative and inspiring.

"It was very interesting and extremely helpful to hear his first hand accounts," she said.

"It's nice to get an outlook and see things from the point of view of someone who has already been there."

16th Annual MATHEMATICS COMPETITION

April 4, 2001 @ 7:15 in rooms 101-103 LGRT

corporate sponsors : Sun Life of Canada & Microsoft

Sun Life Financial™ Microsoft Research

FIRST PRIZE= $1600 cash
SECOND PRIZE= $1000 cash
THIRD PRIZE= $400 cash

2001

· Sign up in room 1623-D LGRT by noon April 4th and bring ID to competition

· The competition is open to all freshman and sophmore degree students on the Amherst Campus.

· Continuing education students and students who are closely related to members of the Math/Stat department are not eligible.

· For additional information and sample problems go to www.math.umass.edu

Say No To Nugs

STUDENT TRAVEL

London.....$211
Paris.....$286
Amsterdam.....$273
Tokyo.....$609

student airfares
BEDS ON A BUDGET
rail passes
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

Write for Arts & Living

MTV alum to speak

By Jason McFarley
The Observer (U. Notre Dame)

(U-WIRE) SOUTH BEND, Ind. – "The Real World" is nice, but Matt Smith would just as soon use live appearances – not television – to convey his message.

Not that television hasn't been good to Smith, a former star of MTV's "Real World" New Orleans cast. It's just that a stand-up chat like his talk Friday at the University of Notre Dame's Hesburgh Library Auditorium allows him to communicate the ... well, real story.

The inside scoop: He's a self-confessed in-your-face punk who, since leaving the popular show about seven strangers picked to live together, has used his MTV-initiated fame to parlay his way into lecture circuits and guest spots across the country.

Don't misunderstand. He's no sell-out; his faith is his topic of choice.

"I'm just the most obnoxious, irritating punk," Smith, a Georgia native, said Friday to an audience that filled the library auditorium to overflowing. "I'm so cocky about my faith because it's so real to me."

Really.

Smith's appearance was part of the No Greater Love project sponsored by Campus Ministries. The self-proclaimed national "spokes-pimp" for Life Teen, a U.S. Catholic youth organization, Smith told a rapt crowd Friday that his Catholic values have been a fundamental part of his life – pre- and post-"Real World."

"There is no greater love than when you are giving everything you have to God," he said, alluding to the appearance's theme. "It took me 21 years to realize that, and ever since I have my life has never been the same."

In a quasi-stand-up comedy routine that saw Smith inhale allergy medication with his microphone in sounding distance and dish on his ex-castmates, the former Georgia Tech University student mixed his antics with serious reflection on his faith.

One of six children in a Catholic family, Smith said he only became passionate about his faith as a college student, following his break-up with his longtime girlfriend.

Religion, especially Sunday Masses sponsored by Life Teen, provided him solace and gave Smith a different perspective on life.

"I began to realize that it was only when you're in synch with God's plan things really start to happen," he said. And things did begin to happen for Smith. Really.

Soon after his spiritual revival, Smith submitted an audition tape and was selected for "The Real World" – an experience he said brought new struggles to his faith daily. Faced not only with temptations from "Real World" groupies in the Big Easy, Smith said living with six housemates much different from him helped him delve deeper into his faith.

Not that followers saw much of Smith's Catholic character last season.

While romantic plots and bickering involving his roommates inevitably aired on MTV last summer, Smith said his portrayal as the "quiet one" was misleading. His daily Mass attendance and role as peacemaker in the house didn't lend itself to exciting television, but Smith takes offense at being pegged as reserved.

Really?

If the blue plaid pants, trademark wrap-around sunglasses and stacked-heel white sneakers weren't an indication, then audience members may have taken a clue from Smith's habit of sipping his mike and speaking into his glass of water.

"I'm not quiet. I'm a punk, and I'm loud," Smith argued. Apparently so were some of Smith's co-stars.

"Julie didn't cry all the time," he said. "She just cried most of the time. Melissa didn't talk about race all the time. She just talk about it most of the time."

The barbs were good-natured, and Smith also took aim at housemates Danny and Kelly, who he said "backed out" because they were really more irritible than they were portrayed on screen.

Smith also gave other hints that the grandfather of reality shows, approaching its 10th season, is plagued by editing that makes "The Real World" not so real after all. He described a scene involving a kiss between co-stars Jamie and Julie at the foot of a staircase. Smith said in reality the two were only talking with their faces close to each other, but through various camera angles and dubbed-in kissing sounds, MTV aired an allusion of a smooch between them.

"They [the crew and editors] can do anything. I've seen a sentence chopped up from three different scenes and spliced together," said Smith, who stays in contact with the cast through frequent appearances and promotions together.

While many ex-"Real Worlders" have used the show to kickstart their careers, Smith's work with the non-profit Life Teen takes him to middle and high schools and college campuses across the country.

He said he has no plans to end his work for the organization, and he urged his listeners Friday to find comfort in their faith.

"You can all just re-experience your faith and explore new depths of it. That's when you'll find happiness," he said. "In 'The Real World' or elsewhere."

Shemekia Copeland will perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall on Sunday, April 15

Eddie From Ohio will be playing the Iron Horse Sunday, April 22.

Holocaust-era music explored

By Mary Catherine Wellons
Cavalier Daily (U. Virginia)

(U-WIRE) CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. – On Saturday night, fourth-year College student Benjamin Levy's vision for the International Conference on "Music Suppressed by the Third Reich" culminated in a revival of an era of music not heard in more than 50 years.

Levy, a music major at the University of Virginia, organized the three-day International Conference as part of his distinguished music major project.

He drew his inspiration from studying World War II music under music Prof. Scott DeVeaux and later immersing himself in Executive Producer Michael Haas' Entartete Musik Series which features music banned during the Third Reich.

With College Dean Melvyn P. Leffler's help in establishing an account through the University's Development office, Levy raised $40,000 for the Conference. In addition, he raised $30,000 for last month's Andre Watts concert, organized through the Jewish Concert Series, which he founded during his second year.

"I wanted to study this music and share it with students, faculty and experts in the field," Levy said. "I wanted to go out with a hang my last year."

Over 600 people attended Saturday night's Gala Concert which included performances by the Hawthorne String Quartet, featuring Mark Ludwig, director and founder of the Terazin Chamber Music Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to reviving the music of composers who perished in the Holocaust.

"I have attended and participated in conferences around the world and this one is amongst the most memorable," Ludwig said. "I'm not only impressed with Benjamin, but proud."

The quartet played scenes from Hans Krasa's "Brundibar," an opera production performed more than 50 times at the Terazin concentration camp. Footage of the production later was used by the Nazis as propaganda throughout Germany.

In an encore performance, Ela Weissberger, one of two surviving "Brundibar" cast members, joined the University's Opera Workshop in a dramatic and emotional final scene.

At Terazin, Weissberger became familiar with the work of composers, musicians and artists who possessed a determination to continue their study and immersion in the arts in the face of severe conditions.

"I had the opportunity to meet and see fabulous musicians, and I have to thank them millions of times for what I am now," Weissberger said in a lecture series Saturday. "They gave up their lives for us kids."

Music department faculty praised Levy for his commitment to the conference, noting his determination to organize a world-class event at the University.

"Benjamin's contribution in creating this conference was really and truly exceptional," said Judith Shatin, Music Department Chairwoman. "It's unprecedented in the Jewish community."

"This conference benefited the entire University community and reached people from all over the world," Hillel President Shulamit Warren said.

Conference sponsors included the Music Department, Virginia Foundation for the Humanities, Kurt Weil Foundation for Music, Anti-Defamation League, Jefferson Literary and Debating Society and The Cavalier Daily.

Experience Community Health in Honduras May 23-June 19, 2001

Integrating clinical experience with an enhanced sense of cultural awareness, UConn's Community Health in Honduras Program is open to nursing students, public health students, practicing nurses, health care professionals and other students, seeking to expand their knowledge of health care practices in an international setting. This 4-week program will be under the guidance of UConn faculty. Students earn 4 academic credits; RNs can earn 6 CEUs.

Information:
860-486-5985, Pat Harkins

Online:
continuingstudies.uconn.edu

Brochure:
800-622-9908

University of Connecticut
College of Continuing Studies

RET REMEM INSURANCE MUTUAL FUNDS TRUST SERVICES TUITION FINANCING

Tax-deferred solutions from TIAA-CREF can help you reach your retirement goals faster.

Call us for a free tax-savings calculator

When you're investing for retirement, the adage "never put off until tomorrow what you can do today" doesn't apply to taxes.

TAX DEFERRAL MAKES A DIFFERENCE

$102,068
Tax-deferred tax and after taxes
$77,514
After taxes only

$100 per month for 30 years

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™ 1.800.842.2776 www.tiaa-cref.org

UMass continues domination

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team had another stellar weekend, bringing home a first place finish for the third consecutive title in the Easter Collegiate Athletic Conference Championships, scoring 208.050 and posting high scores at the individual competition.

The Minutemen traveled to Williamsburg, Virg. on a quest to earn the rights to a berth in the NCAA tourney in two weeks. Stepping into the gym with a week of practice, the Minutemen put their outstanding season behind them to put full effort into the aftermath.

With only three falls on Saturday, UMass topped rival Temple and William and Mary. The Owls, who competed against the Maroon and White twice this season, fell short by less than one point. W&M were just behind with a team finish of 206.500.

"I was really surprised about Temple's finish, just .8 behind," said head coach Ron Johnson.

Pat McFarlin was one strong link for UMass' performance on Saturday, finishing first on the pommel horse. Senior Andrew Leis and sophomore Justin Hammar had great meets also, finishing behind McFarlin on the pommel, but in the top five overall.

Their high scores earned them the right to compete in Sunday's individual competition. McFarlin took home top honors in the individuals on the pommel horse. Sunday was a sweep for the Minutemen on the horse rotation with Hammar behind McFarlin in second and Leis third.

"We needed to keep a calm, level head to do what we came to do. That was the key point," said McFarlin.

Seniors Eric Bacon and Brian McNulty tied with McFarlin at fourth on the floor exercise for Saturday's meet. The trio scored a 9.100 that gave them the ticket for another day at the gym, Sunday. McNulty took first and Bacon just behind in second. McFarlin finished fifth.

Senior Benjamin Kandel headed the rings in fourth and sophomore Darren Morace at fifth. The tables were turned on Sunday as Morace took the fourth spot on the rings and Kandel grabbed fifth.

Brett Nelligan and Morace made it to Sunday's individual competition on the vault. Nelligan earned a 9.15 on the vault, good enough for third behind Morace, who scored a 9.2.

The individual competition welcomed Ryan Roberts who came in ninth on the parallel bars with a score of 7.7. I.J. Hershey took second on the horizontal bar with an 8.7. McNulty also competed on the horizontal bar but took an eighth place finish.

With such a strong weekend, the Minutemen have earned their ticket to the NCAA tourney with an automatic bid. Temple and William and Mary may also have earned spots in the at-large seats.

If the Owls and the Tribe earn spots in the Ohio meet, this will be the first time in ECAC history that more than one team entered the tournament.

"We really wanted to win. We were hitting our routines," said Johnson.

The Minutemen will have two weeks of practice before they head to Columbus for the tournament. They will be in Boyden Gymnasium to work on routines and tighten weak spots.

"We'll try to do the same type of routines. Some guys will upgrade. We're looking to move in that direction," said Johnson.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Bryan McNulty was strong in the individual floor exercise for the Maroon and White last week. UMass secured a team spot in the NCAA tournament.

Women's lacrosse loses two over break

By Jesse Greenspan
Collegian Staff

Right now, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team is in desperate need of a win after dropping two games over spring break.

One of those games was to the New Hampshire Wildcats, 8-6 on March 18, while the other was six days later to No. 10 Syracuse, 15-8. With the losses, the Minutewomen fell to 0-4 on the young season, and helped their competition improve to 2-1 and 1-3, respectively.

To start off spring break, UMass traveled over to the Omni Turf Field on the Massachusetts Institute of Technology campus in order to challenge UNH. As it has all year, the Maroon and White fell behind early and was unable to recover.

In the first 10 minutes of the game, the Wildcats jumped out to a 3-0 lead behind goals from Jessie Groszkowski, Christine Anneberg and Sue Yund. Sophomore Jada Emery was able to close the gap to 3-1 at the 22:58 mark when she drilled a shot into the back of the New Hampshire cage for her first tally of the season. But UNH was able to answer with two more goals from Colleen Christopher and Yund to push the lead to 5-1.

With 3:38 left in the first frame, Lydia Robinson made it 5-2 with her fourth goal of the season, but the Wildcats quickly put it back up to four when Anneberg notched her second goal of the contest right before halftime.

The second half did not start off any better for UMass, as a Molly Cherington tally made it 7-2 with 27:41 remaining, and a late Minutewomen run would prove to be too little, too late.

Leading Maroon and White scorer Rachel Ingraffea did her best to get her team back into the game by picking up a hat trick in just over 20 minutes, but it would not be enough. UNH held Massachusetts scoreless over the last 10 minutes, and was able to survive with the 8-6 win.

For UMass, Leslie Pollock picked up her first goal of the year to close the gap to three late in the second half, and Cyndi Doyle collected 17 saves in the losing cause.

On March 24, Syracuse also got out to an early lead on its own campus, but it would be a mid-game run that really put the Minutewomen away for good.

Kim Wayne got the Orangewomen on the board first with a blast into the Maroon and White net, and helped her team to a 2-0 lead a few moments later by assisting teammate Lauren Brady. Ingraffea and Leigh-Ann Zimmer would trade goals over the next few minutes to keep the Syracuse lead at two, but then Hope Zelinger and Kara DePaula both netted UMass goals to tie the game with 17:32 left.

Before the game, Minutewomen coach Phil Barnes knew that his team would have to contain leading 'Cuse scorer Carrie Soults if it was going to have any chance of taking home the victory against the 10th best team in the country. Over the first 20 minutes, Massachusetts did an outstanding job of that, but over the end of the first half and the beginning of the second half, Soults exploded and helped her team take a 13-4 lead with a 10-1 run.

Soults finished the game with four goals, and by the time the Orangewoman run had ended, UMass was unable to recover.

Still, there were definitely a few bright spots for the Minutewomen. Ingraffea posted her second hat trick in as many games, and now has eight goals on the year, while Kelli Kurtz, Pollock and Angela McMahon all notched a single score.

In goal, Jen Nardi came back from an injury that forced her to miss the team's first three contests, and combined with Doyle to make 12 saves.

For Syracuse, Zimmer notched a hat trick of her own and Katrina Hable put two shots into the back of the UMass cage. Stacey Brown, Devon Baer, Jenna Szyluk and Jessica Trombley also notched goals for the Orangewomen.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Rachel Ingraffea scored hat tricks in both of UMass' games over spring vacation, but it was not enough to bring the Minutewomen a victory.

Boyle paves the way for UMass in triumph over Conn. College

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's water polo team thrashed Connecticut College last Saturday to improve to an overall record of 10-6. The final win came as part of the Collegiate Water Polo Association Tournament at which the team notched five perfect wins with no losses.

The CWPA was an ongoing tournament that included three home games at the Boyden Pool on March 17 against Connecticut College, Brown University and Harvard University respectively at the Boyden Gymnasium. The final two wins came against Harvard and Connecticut College in New London, CT on March 24.

Sophomore Lizzy Boyle led the charge for the Minutewomen with five impressive goals against Connecticut College.

"We're clicking on offense, and that's important because as strong as our defense is, we can't score goals without a good offense," Boyle said. "Our defense has always been strong, but in the past week we were really able to work on strengthening the offense."

LIZZY BOYLE

Boyle credited the offensive boost to the competition the team took on in California. During break, the Maroon and White dropped three games against different schools from the Golden State, all with pretty hefty deficits. Boyle said that the west coast offenses are much stronger than what they see closer to home, and the difficulty helped them become more tenacious.

"The teams out there are a lot better, and it's a different level of play," Boyle said. "[Against west coast teams] you can't just stay in the water. They made our offense do a better job of moving around faster and setting picks."

The heavy offensive blast led by Boyle was aided by the explosive combination of senior Erin Hillier and sophomore Catherine Getty. Each scored two goals.

"We've been functioning well as a team," said Getty. "We're getting a lot better, there's a lot more communication within the team which is very important."

Getty tributes her successful showing to an influential veteran staff that included Hillier. "I just hope to get better, learn the game better and learn from my teammates," she added.

The team is also very optimistic about the stability of the defense as well. "It's definitely our strong point," said Boyle. "I think it's gotten better, but it's really been consistent."

If the team is to stay on pace with its No. 18 national ranking, it will have to endure three long weeks on the road before the final return to Amherst on Wednesday, April 18 against Brown University.

The team has now surpassed the halfway point on the season, and is looking toward a road trip to Indianapolis Saturday, where it will compete in the two day Indiana Invitational. The Invitational will be the final test before the New England Championship Tournament, which begins on Saturday, April 7 at Harvard.

Following the New England Championships will be the Eastern Championships in Providence, RI and the NCAA Championships in Palo Alto, Calif.

Regardless of the rigorous schedule, the team's spirits are high. "The overall feeling of the team is on a higher level," Getty said. "We have a better team overall."

Sign up for the most important job in New York City.

Become a NYC Teaching Fellow now. Join a select group of talented professionals and graduates who will teach in New York City's under-performing classrooms this fall. No previous teaching experience required. You'll receive a salary while working toward a fully paid Master's Degree. Help us give all NYC students the quality of education they deserve. Apply now. Applications due April 7, 2001. Call 1-877-NYFELLO or visit www.nycteachingfellows.org.

NYC TEACHING FELLOWS

A program of the New York City Board of Education. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Plan Ahead For Next Year...

Excellent Location... ½ Mile From UMass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas

PUFFTON VILLAGE

Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday - Friday
(413) 549-0145

Tennis squads show well in Florida tests

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Despite being in the midst of the warm Florida sun and the white sandy beaches of Boca Raton, the Massachusetts women's tennis team was all business as it made its spring break trip last week. While the Minutewomen only captured two of their four matches, the players stepped up their level of play and returned having played some of their best tennis of the entire season.

The Maroon and White was not able to ease into the week with a cupcake opponent, as it was pitted on the first day against Lynn University, the No. 2 ranked team in Division II. The Fighting Knights were able to sweep the Minutewomen 9-0, but head coach Judy Dixon was very pleased with how they fared against such high-caliber competition.

"I was very happy with the way we played; we had pretty good doubles matches, and received great play from Lindsey Gillooly and Susan Hyams," Dixon said. Gillooly took her opponent to three sets, the only Minutewoman to do so, but Hyams battled to a tough 7-6, 6-4 finish.

"For Susan, it was really a breakthrough match, because early on in the season she was always worried about making a mistake, so she's been working on being more aggressive and has started to play with more confidence," the coach added.

The Minutewomen were able to then capture their next two showdowns as they breezed past Broward Community College and St. Thomas University on the next day of competition. The Maroon and White ran roughshod through its foes, beating BCC and St. Thomas 7-2 and 9-0, respectively.

Against Broward, the Maroon and White took five singles matches and two of three doubles matches. Freshman Francesca Mancini led the way, breezing to a 6-0, 6-1 victory. Helena Horak and Hyams also had convincing victories for UMass.

St. Thomas was not able to hang with the Minutewomen either, as they cruised, winning all six singles and all three doubles matches. The team could not have been more dominant, as Mancini was the only Minutewoman to even lose a game, as she took care of her adversary, 6-1, 6-1. Every other member of the team crushed her opponent, 6-0, 6-0.

The final match of the trip came against Florida Atlantic University. The team battled against the Owls, but ultimately fell 7-2 against a very talented FAU squad. However, Gillooly and Hyams continued to impress, as they garnered the two victories of the match for UMass.

With a 2-2 finish for the trip, the Minutewomen now stand at 10-6 on the campaign entering the beginning of Atlantic 10 play. However, Dixon reiterated that the goal of the trip was not to go down and have an undefeated spring break.

"Our goal was not to win matches, but to compete at the best level that we could," Dixon said. "We came back in top physical condition, and we came back having played very good matches."

Dixon mentioned how she was very proud of the way her team played against Lynn and FAU, especially considering almost all of those teams' players are on full scholarship and from other nations. Now, with the beginning of the team's Atlantic 10 schedule this weekend with Duquesne and Temple, Dixon feels that this trip will ultimately be very beneficial for her players.

"I can't say that I would have wanted the trip to go any other way," said Dixon. "I think we have come back ready to go, as we prepare for this weekend."

DAN SANTILLI/COLLEGIAN

Jafra Depontes played a key role as the Minutewomen went 2-2 in their trip to Florida over vacation.

By Elena Panesis
Collegian Staff

While most college students on spring break in Florida spent their days lounging in the sun, the Massachusetts men's tennis team played three top-notch schools in preparation for the upcoming Atlantic 10 outdoor matches. Lynn University, St. Thomas University and Florida Atlantic, three teams of extremely high caliber, have enjoyed playing their matches in the warm Florida sun throughout the season.

The Minutemen, on the other hand, traveled to gain outdoor experience, as they have been playing indoors since November. It is not surprising that the Maroon and White came up short in all three matches, losing to Lynn 7-2, St. Thomas 5-4 and Florida Atlantic 7-0. However, the team played extremely well under the circumstances and scored big in Coach Judy Dixon's mind.

"We played very well," said Dixon. "I was extremely pleased with their play from day one to five. We played the 40th ranked team in the country in our third match. Overall, I do not have anything negative to say about the spring break trip."

"We only had half a day of practice and then we played outdoors," she added. "Given the wind and conditions, we played well. Some of us went down there sick and we've come back healthier. Tuesday will be our last indoor practice and after that I'll do anything in my power to have us play outdoors, even if it's in the snow."

In terms of highlights, junior Todd Champeau defeated Toby Croke of Lynn 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 picking up the sole singles win for the Maroon and White. In the hard-fought St. Thomas match, Phil Rodrigues prevailed in three sets 6-7, 6-3, 6-1, and senior Bill Greener breezed past Donald DeSormeux 6-0, 6-1 in the No. 6 match.

"Lynn's a good team," Champeau said. "I played well that day and it was a close match coming down to the third set. I managed to pull it out and it really helped my confidence."

Dixon and crew worked under some windy conditions down in Boca Raton, which actually worked to the team's benefit in terms of preparation for New England weather. Also, it played the best of the best down in Florida and the experience will aid it in its quest for a bid in the NCAA tournament.

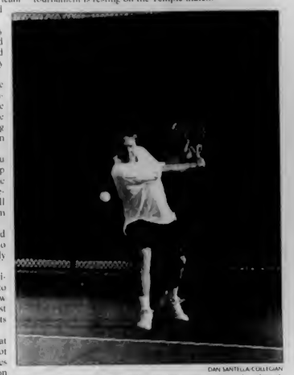
"When we go down to Florida, we play teams at the highest level," said Dixon. "The guys learn a lot about playing matches at this high level and it creates team building. We have seven kids that can play on every level. Everyone is healthy and much more match-tough to play outdoors."

The Minutemen have one more indoor match to take care of before they can embark on their Atlantic 10 outdoor season. Saturday, the UMass squad travels to Hanover, N.H. to take on Ivy League foe Dartmouth. In terms of importance, a win could help the team get closer to the East Regional ranking they so desperately crave.

"We play at Dartmouth Saturday and it's a pretty big match," said Champeau. "They were ranked in our region last year. If we beat them, we'll solidify our ranking for next year. They're an Ivy League school and a win would be a great opportunity for our program."

Another crucial match will take place on Saturday, April 7 when the Minutemen travel to West Point to take on Temple, an Atlantic 10 rival.

"We play both Temple and Army on that day," said Champeau. "They're both very good teams and they have the same style of players. Since our match against George Washington was cancelled, our seeding for the Atlantic 10 tournament is resting on the Temple match."



DAN SANTILLI/COLLEGIAN

Brent Davis and the men's tennis team spent spring break in Florida, showing well against some of the nation's top teams.

■ lappas

continued from page

over the past two seasons when the Minutemen had only one sellout.

Student interest has steadily dropped in the program, and the athletic department surely hopes that the signing of Lappas will help once again fill the Mullins Center seats.

However, it remains to be seen exactly how the majority of the students will react to the hiring.

"Nowadays, when changes are made, coaches usually try and have a fresh start," senior political science major Mike Melillo said. "Coach Lappas has been known for being too hands-on and that is why his teams have had a habit of falling apart in March. Hopefully, with a new start at a new university, he can change all that."

"It will be nice to see what coach Lappas can do coming out of a power conference (Big East)," sophomore history major Joey Giarusso added. "But he hasn't shown that he can win the big game. If that trend keeps up, then he will have a short-lived stay at this school."

One thing is for sure. With a new coach at the helm, there will certainly be a different feel around the court at the start of next season.

"[A Steve Lappas team] is unselfish, takes good shots, moves the ball, usually has a good field goal percentage and plays hard," Lappas said. "Everything else doesn't mean anything if you don't play hard."

For better or worse, a new era of UMass basketball begins next fall.

Jesse Greenspan is a Collegian Columnist.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Steve Lappas plans to bring a family atmosphere with him to Amherst with wife Harriet and children Peter and Kristen by his side.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

This will be Lappas' 14th season as a Div. I head basketball coach. He hopes to bring some of the success he enjoyed at Villanova to UMass.

■ softball

continued from page 12

"They looked like an entirely different team in the last few innings," Sortino said.

Holtz tossed a complete game and improved her record to 7-1. She scattered nine hits while striking out four.

*****

Massachusetts 9, La Salle 0

The hot bats continued into game two of the doubleheader for the Maroon and White. UMass scored three runs in the top of the second inning, more than enough for Jeffries, who pitched a near perfect one-hit shutout.

Wheeler and Cahalan led the offense. Both players had two hits and two RBI for the Minutewomen.

Overall, UMass pounded La Salle pitching for 22 hits during the doubleheader and outscored the Explorers 23-6.

*****

Massachusetts 7, La Salle 0

Massachusetts completed the sweep of La Salle on Sunday with yet another solid pitching performance; this time it was the Jen Hadley show, with the junior hurling a one-hit shutout, propelling the Maroon and White to their current 14-9 record (3-0 A-10).

Hadley had a perfect game broken up with two outs in the seventh inning. She struck out six and walked none while notching her 3rd win.

Robustelli went 2-for-4 with a double, while Wheeler went 1-for-3 hitting a home run. Holtz added two hits with a double and two RBI.

Sponsored by the Amherst Health Department

The only thing smokin' in Amherst is the atmosphere!

- See what you eat!
- See what you drink!
- See the entertainment!

You Are Here UMASS — See You There — DOWNTOWN AMHERST — North Pleasant

Experience Downtown Amherst and its Smoke-Free Establishments

Unplanned Pregnancy?
Call Someone Who Can Help
413-584-0441
- If you have an unplanned pregnancy, we're here to listen and help
- Free neutral options counseling 24 hours a day
- You can choose to parent or to select from loving adoptive families
- Allowable living expenses
- Ten years Adoption Experience

A FULL CIRCLE adoption
by Main Street, Northampton, MA 01060
a division of fullcircleadoptions.com

Unplanned Pregnancy?
CALL ALTERNATIVES
586-3000 Northampton
774-6010 Greenfield
- Information
- Options
- Counseling
- Support

All services free & confidential
28 Federal St., Greenfield
1 Round House Plaza, Northampton
Free Pregnancy Tests

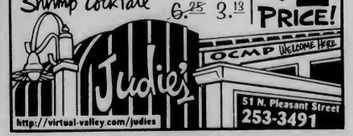
Henna Arts & Supplies

10% off with this coupon!
413-256-3756

Munchie Madness 3-6 PM MONDAY-FRIDAY

Nachos Especial 8.75 4.38
Potato Skins Supreme 8.50 4.25
Shrimp Cocktail 6.25 3.13

1/2 PRICE!



Judie's
OCMP WELCOME HERE
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

University of Massachusetts Boston

Exploring the Coastal Environment

May 29–June 28, 2001

This inquiry-based, hands-on program provides an introduction to maritime history, nautical science, oceanography, and coastal zone management. Highlights include a three-day research trip to Nantucket Island and a week-long voyage up the New England coast aboard the schooner Ernestina. Six undergraduate credits.

To learn more, contact:
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Corporate,Continuing and Distance Education
100 Morrissey Blvd
Boston MA 02125-3393

UMASS BOSTON

617.287.7913
www.conted.umb.edu

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Are you taking courses in Advertising/Marketing? Check out www.adyourideas.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting June 1st. 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Apartment Available to take over June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-9462

2 Bedroom in Brandywine take over lease from June to Sept. $900/month. Call Steve 549-4194

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

1994 GEO Tracker 4x4 beautiful green color soft top $1995 978-544-3783

1985 BMW 323 I 5spd excellent condition $3500. 549-1155

95 Volvo 850 Turbo B1K, Auto, leather, 6 disc Alpine changer. $14,500 or B/O. 413-527-2871

EMPLOYMENT

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be at Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment - end of June through July, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341 (800) 343-6132, bicycletrips.com

HAVE AN AMAZING SUMMER ADVENTURE! Prestigious coed camp in beautiful Massachusetts seeks caring, motivated college students & grads who love kids! GENERAL & SPECIALTY COUNSELORS needed. Join a dedicated, fun team. Competitive salaries+travel+room+board. (800) 762-2820

Bartenders, Wait-staff, Door people. New Irish Pub in No. Amherst, for this spring as well as summer and fall. Apply in person. 163 Sunderland Rd. No. Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

Part Time Survey Personnel Needed for PVTA Ridership Study - The Pioneer Valley Planning Commission (PVPC) will be conduction a ridership survey of all PVTA routes in Northampton on April 25 and April 28, 2001. Surveyors will be paid $9.50 to $10.50/hour to distribute/collect survey forms, answer questions, and collect ridership information. All shifts are available. Applications will be accepted until April 9, 2001. For applications call 413-781-6045 or apply in person at PVPC, 26 Central St., West Springfield MA 01089. PVPC is and EOE/AA employer.

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART - TIME Research Interviewers Evening and weekend shifts are available 20hrs/wk minimum. PVTA accessible. Excellent reading and speaking skills required. Some computer experience helpful. $7.50 to start with regular merit raises. For more information contact: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 paul_bebo@abtassoc.com Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

Underclassmen to take part in 45 minute survey. Also coordinator position. For details call 1-800-573-3309

Looking for a job in Amherst this summer? Full and part time jobs are available with Summer Conference Housing! Come and get an application and job description at the Conference Services Office, Room 918 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimun 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPENSQUARE.COM

Wanted 24 UMass WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

HOUSE WANTED

4 to 6 Bedroom house wanted, starting June 1, for rent. Ready to sign lease. Call Shayan @ 413-546-1082 or tom@65190

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office.

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS FOR SALE

2 Insync Tickets Foxboro Stadium. June 1, 413-283-5523

Your Ad Could Be RIGHT Here!! Call The Collegian Classifieds TODAY! 545-3500

Moving out? Selling things? Signing over your lease? Do it here! 545-3500

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1 - HSCN Bulletin Board
2 - CBS 3 Hartford
3 - CBS 4 Boston
4 - ABC/40 Springfield
5 - PBS/57 Springfield
6 - HSCN Movie Channel
7 - UPN/20 Hartford
8 - HSCN New Movie Channel
9 - NBC/30 New Britain
10 - Fox/61 Hartford
11 - PBS/24 Hartford
12 - ABC/22 Springfield
13 - Independent Channel
14 - UMATV (Residents Channel)
15 - WB/30 New Haven
16 - ESPN
17 - ESPN2
18 - UPN/TV (Student Channel)
19 - Weather Channel
20 - Days of Our Lives
21 - C-Span
22 - CNN
23 - CNN Headline News
24 - Lifestyle
25 - USA
26 - TBS
27 - TNT
28 - A&E
29 - Nick-At-Nite
30 - Discovery
31 - Noggin
32 - Cartoon Network
33 - Nick at Nite
34 - TV Land
35 - Comedy Central
36 - BET
37 - Univision
38 - Bloomberg Financial Network
39 - College TV Network
40 - MTV
41 - MTV2
42 - VH1
43 - The Learning Channel

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 27, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Nova "Survivor MD" (N)		Frontline "Organ Farm" (N)		CEO Exchange (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Liberty" (N) (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Liberty" (N) (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	About Joan	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "The Trial" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fighting Fitz	DAG	Frasier (N)	Three Sisters	Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	7th Heaven "Cutters"		Street Smarts	Blind Date	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "The Trial" (In Stereo)		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Change-Heart
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Fighting Fitz	DAG	Frasier (N)	Three Sisters	Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11 Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	'70s Show	Thus (N)	Dark Angel "Haven" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	22 News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fighting Fitz	DAG	Frasier (N)	Three Sisters	Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	4 World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Nova "Survivor MD" (N)		Frontline "Organ Farm" (N)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	16 News	ABC News	Spin City	Frasier	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Dharma-Greg	About Joan	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Frasier	Frasier	JAG "Liberty" (N) (In Stereo)		Angel "The Trial" (In Stereo)		Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld	Mad Abt. You
WTBS	46	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: Toronto Raptors at Miami Heat. (Live)				Inside NBA		"Cop Land" (2000)
A&E	69	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Born Bad"		Biography: Jeff Foxworthy		City Confidential (N)		Investigative Reports		Law & Order
CNN	10	23 Inside Politics	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire	Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	53	36 Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money	"Clue" (1985, Comedy) Madeline Kahn, Eileen Brennan.				Battlebots	Battlebots	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	68	Nature World-Mitsuaki Iwago		Nature World of Mitsuaki		Prosecutors-Justice		New Detectives "Cold Cases"		FBI Files "Driven to Kill"		Justice Files
ESPN	51	Sportscenter		College Basketball: NIT Semifinal – Teams to Be Announced.				College Basketball: NIT Semifinal – Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	59	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Dixie Carter"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"After Jimmy" (1988, Drama) Meredith Baxter, Brad Dourif.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	49	Direct Effect	Senseless	Celebrity	Cribs	MJ for a Day	TRL (In Stereo)	Real World	Real World	Andy Dick (N)	Undressed	TBA
NICK	52	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	Diff. Strokes	Facts of Life	3's Company	3's Company	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	66	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Believers"		Outer Limits "Last Supper"		"Alligator II: The Mutation" (1991, Horror) Joseph Bologna.				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	67	26 Route 66 – Main Street		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Trauma: Life in the ER		Superhuman Body: The Future		Superhuman Body: The Future		Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	65	ER "The Right Thing" (In Stereo)		Pretender (In Stereo)
USA	55	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Imposters"						Martin
HBO	60	(4:45) "The Remains of the Day"										Sopranos "Another Toothpick"
MAX	70	(5:15) "Cadillacman" (1990,										"Sea"
SHOW	61	ere "One Tru" (1994, Comedy) Marisa Tomei, Ian Bohen.								Resurrection Blvd. "Mascaras"		Queer as Folk

Quote of the Day

"I'll wake up one day and realize that all there is, all there ever was, is friendship."

–Joey Potter

Amherst Weather

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
High: 39 Low: 24	High: 45 Low: 27	High: 50 Low: 36

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

HI, THERE, COACH. WHAT'S UP?
I'M UP AT DANBURY, TRYING TO BUG JIMMY HOFFERT.
THE TAIL-BACK? I THOUGHT HE WAS A GOOD KID.
HE STILL IS. IT'S JUST A WEAPONS CHARGE. BUT HE AIN'T NO JOHNNIE COCHRAN TO DEFEND HIM.
JOHNNIE COCHRAN? HOW ARE WE SUPPOSED TO GET JOHNNIE COCHRAN?
I DON'T KNOW, BUT IT'S NOT OK. NO DEAL.
HAYES IS AD OFFERED HIM AN HONORARY DEGREE.
COULD YOU LET ME KNOW? I'M ON CALL BLOCK B.

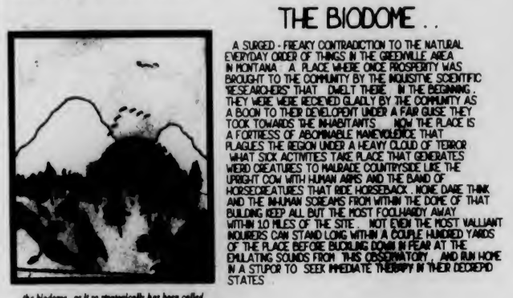
Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

BU, I TAKE IT BACK. YOU'RE NOTHING LIKE A CAT.
'BOUT TIME.
CATS HAVE GIVEN UP SO MUCH TO BE WITH MAN. ONCE THEY WERE PROUD PREDATORS, WITH KEEN INSTINCTS OF SURVIVAL.
TODAY, THEY'VE SOLD THEIR SOULS FOR A CAN OF NINE LIVES LIVER-N'-CHICKEN.
JUST ANOTHER REASON THEY'RE NOTHING LIKE ME.
THEY SOLD OUT WAY TOO CHEAP.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I LIKE TAKE-CHARGE MEN WHO JUST SAY, "C'MON, WE'RE GOING SOMEPLACE."
C'MON, WE'RE GOING TO THE BOWLING ALLEY!
THAT'S THE DUMBEST IDEA I'VE EVER HEARD.
I THINK I SEE HOW THIS WORKS.
www.dilbert.com

Jack Dogg By Xavier Rhodes



THE BIODOME . .
A SURGED - FREAKY CONTRADICTION TO THE NATURAL EVERYDAY ORDER OF THINGS IN THE GREENVILLE AREA IN MONTANA . A PLACE WHERE ONCE PROSPERITY WAS BROUGHT TO THE COMMUNITY BY THE INDUSTINE SCIENTIFIC RESEARCHERS THAT DWELT THERE . IN THE BEGINNING . THEY WERE WERE REDEEMED GLADLY BY THE COMMUNITY AS A BOON TO THEIR DEVELOPENT UNDER A FAIR GUISE THEY TOOK TOWARDS THE INHABITANTS . NOW THE PLACE IS A FORTRESS OF ABOMINABLE MANEVOLENCE THAT PLAGUES THE REGION UNDER A HEAVY CLOUD OF TERROR WHAT SICK ACTIVITIES TAKE PLACE THAT GENERATES WEIRD CREATURES TO MALRADE COUNTRYSIDE LIKE THE UPRIGHT COW WITH HUMAN ARMS AND THE BAND OF HORSECREATURES THAT RIDE HORSEBACK . MORE DARE THINK AND THE INHUMAN SCREAMS FROM WITHIN THE DOME OF THAT BUILDING KEEP ALL BUT THE MOST FOOLHARDY AWAY WITHIN 10 MILES OF THE SITE . NOT EVEN THE MOST VALLIANT MOURERS CAN STAND LONG WITHIN A COUPLE HUNDRED YARDS OF THE PLACE BEFORE BICOLINE DOWN IN FEAR AT THE EMULATING SOUNDS FROM THIS OBSERVATORY . AND RUN HOME IN A STUPOR TO SEEK IMEDIATE THERAPY IN THEIR DECREPID STATES the biodome , as it so strategically has been called , was once a place of progressiveness and peace . .

Buttercup Festival By Elliott G. Garbauskas

I'M MAKING AN OMELET.
WHAT'S IN IT?
ALL YOUR HOPES AND DREAMS.
DAMN.
CHECK IT OUT, I DREW YOUR PORTRAIT.
IT LOOKS LIKE MY TOASTER OVEN.
SO WHAT'S YOUR POINT?

Hell Hath No Fury By Pedro Gomes

Robots and Spacemen By Jason Tocci

SO, WHAT ARE YOUR ROOMMATES LIKE?
WELL, I'VE ONLY LIVED WITH THEM FOR ONE SEMESTER.
PINBALL'S A ROBOT... HE'S PRETTY QUIET. BUT I THINK THAT'S JUST BECAUSE NOBODY BOTHERS TO INSTALL HIS SOUNDCARD... AND CHRIS IS FROM WORCESTER, BUT I THINK HIS GRANDPARENTS ARE FROM ALPHA CENTAURI OR SOMETHING.
THAT'S NEAT. YOU GUYS GET ALONG PRETTY WELL?
YEAH, WELL, EXCEPT WHEN THEY'RE BEATING ME WITH STICKS OR THROWING ME OUT CLOSED WINDOWS. PRETTY MUCH, YEAH.

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You have a message to deliver today, and it is best for you to do it directly, yourself, rather than fading a go-between

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You'll be more responsive to those closest to you today. Where in the past you may have made demands, today you'll be willing to satisfy them

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You'll get good vibes today from someone who will have a great deal to offer you in the days and weeks to come

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – A chance encounter can turn into a major new opportunity today – but you must be willing to put a little more on the line than usual

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Avoid doing anything that could be considered a bit too trendy today. Stick to those things that time has proven effective in any situations

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Don't make the mistake of giving orders today, you'll find that others will resist to the bitter end. Try being more gentle and aggressive

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Once you know the facts, you're not likely to make that same mistake again. Today, you can be on your way to an exciting new conquest

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – That which seems least important as the day begins is likely to prove pivotal when all is said and done. Timing is the essence today

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You can have a much better time today than you had hoped, if only because someone who recently arrived on the scene is sure to be on your side

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You mustn't make the mistake of thinking that breaking the rules will put you ahead of the game. Shortcuts can set you back a long way

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It may be more difficult than usual today to please someone who is nevertheless on your side. Listen with an open mind to all criticism

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Share your thoughts with someone who can provide you with a little more direction and motivation today

MONKEY-BOX BY PBEJ

THE BATHROOM MAN WOULD ALWAYS TRY TO SCARE ME AT NIGHT WITH HIS "HEAT RAY," BUT I KNEW THAT IT WAS JUST A HAIR-DRYER.
© 2001
www.monkey-box.net

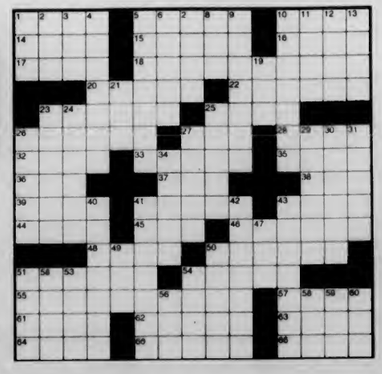
WE DELIVER DELI
Boar's Head Brand
SUGAR BOWLS
Claudia's Cafe
One East Pleasant St. (Amherst Carriage Shops)
549-5663
We accept OCMP

ACROSS
1 Germany's Helmut
5 Philanthropist Brooke
10 Monk's hood
14 Brainstorm
15 Type of wine
16 Sounds of laughter
17 Pisces to hibernate
18 Table item
20 Prevent
22 Puckered
23 Singer Don
25 Pishe part
26 Cores
27 Cushion
28 Tied
32 Creator of Perry
33 Wading bird
35 Wander around
36 Spurt st
37 Exist
38 Like valleys
39 Smooth-spoken
41 Catty
43 Jazzy Ellington
44 Frau's fellow
45 Pumpkin treat
46 First coat
48 Name in elevators
50 Platforms
51 Atmosphere component
54 Estole
55 Kind of ht
57 Holland export
61 Trout habitat
62 River embankment
63 Verne's captain
64 Potato buds
65 Beer ingredient
66 Nuggets or Expos

DOWN
1 Young goat
2 Praiseful poem
3 Rooster's mate
4 French explorer of N.A.
5 "— and Old Lace"
6 Divvy up
7 Slant
8 Neighbor of Que
9 Lull
10 Fast horse
11 Hardwoods
12 Shout of glee
13 Pie-crust ingredient
19 Barbarian
21 Compete
23 Become sour, as milk
24 Bakery goody
25 Ebbed
26 Whinny
27 Radium discoverer Curie
29 Kind of discount
30 Summons up
31 More modern
34 Indian royals
40 Accents
41 Tall and thin
42 Shoulder trim
43 Contrary opinion
47 Clear (of)
49 Perfect score
50 Hills and —
51 Gawk
52 Medical photo
53 Blouse part
54 Fluid rock
56 Flower visitor
58 Poor mark
59 Doctors' org.
60 Dad's partner

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

1-15-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate



Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Chicken Big Mamou (B, H, W)

Jamaican 3-Bean Stew (vegan) (B, H, W)

Squash Bake (vegetarian) (B, H, W)

Taco Bar (F)

Vegetable Taco (vegan) (F)

DINNER

Country BBQ Ribs (B, H, W)

Thai Seitan (vegan) (B, H, W)

Breaded Vegan Cutlet (vegan)

Baked Chicken (F)

Night Editor	Adam Martigneth
Photo Technician	Mark Holloway, Laina Erde
Copy Editor	David Troupes
Production Supervisor	Jess Grant
Production Staff	John Dicker, Riki Alcid

The men's gymnastics team kept rolling over break. Check it out inside.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Tuesday, March 27, 2001 | 12

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Lappas roars into Amherst

Athletic Director Bob Marcum hopes that new coach Steve Lappas will hear plenty of applause from the William D. Mullins center crowds in his first year with the Minutemen.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Coach leaves 'Nova to join Minutemen

As of yesterday morning, Steve Lappas has been officially hired as the head coach of the Massachusetts men's basketball team. Now what remains to be seen is if the former Villanova skipper can lead his new team to prominence while battling the high expectations that will surely be placed upon him.

"No one can put more pressure on me than me," Lappas said at Monday's 11 a.m. press conference, assuring the University that he would not feel the extreme pressure of living up to former UMass coach, John Calipari. "I got in this to achieve excellence and my plan is for this to go as far as I want it to go."

However, the pressures of getting back to the NCAA tournament will be great, and because of the Maroon and White's success in the mid-90's under Calipari, Lappas will be under the same microscope as former UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint.

JESSE GREENSPAN

Flint suffered under similar expectations of keeping the Minutemen in the upper echelon of college basketball, and a three-year absence from the tourney ended up costing him his job.

A similar drought for Lappas could end up being just as catastrophic.

"My goal is to be in the NCAA and NIT tournaments as often as I can," the newly hired coach said. "I have a lot of pride in player development and I will be working hard to make sure my players get better."

Lappas also made sure to include that it takes time to build a successful program, though, and he warned people that is hard to judge the development of a coach until at least a few years have past.

"Any time there is a change it is hard for the kids because there is an emotional bond you get with your coach," Lappas said. "You need your first recruiting class to become juniors in order to tell where you're at. At least that is always what I'll say hoping it will be quicker."

Many differences exist between Lappas and Flint, and the players will have to make an adjustment between two different styles. Flint was known as a player's coach and usually remained relatively calm and collected on the sidelines, while Lappas has been known as a yeller and screamer that can be tough on his team.

However, that is not to say that he failed to form any good relationships with his players at Villanova, and this was evidenced by the fact that the Wildcats' best player's (Michael Bradley) father attended the press conference in Amherst to show his support for Massachusetts' new leader.

"I still think I'm a player's coach. I'm tough, but I'm a player's coach and I'm the same way with my own kids," Lappas said about his 13-year old daughter Kristen and his 10-year old son Peter. "But I have a great relationship with them."

Former Minuteman coach Jack Leeman, who was the most successful man win-wise ever to take the reins in Amherst, seemed confident that the new coach would fit well into the UMass program.

"I think all coaches move their style to fit their players," Leeman said. "If he can coach at Villanova, then he can coach anywhere."

"The difference between him and Bruiser is that he might be able to bring in some different players," the former coach turned announcer added. "The difference between all coaches at this level is minimal, though. They all know their X's and O's, and the difference is talent. The guys that win at this level have the best talent."

One of the things that doomed Flint at UMass was the fact that attendance at the William D. Mullins Center went down almost every year he was here, and it especially dipped

Turn to LAPPAS, page 9

STEVE LAPPAS' RECORD

YEAR	SCHOOL	RECORD (Pct.)	POSTSEASON
2000-01	Villanova	18-13 (.581)	NIT (0-1)
1999-00	Villanova	20-13 (.606)	NIT (1-1)
1998-99	Villanova	21-11 (.656)	NCAA (0-1)
1997-98	Villanova	12-17 (.414)	-
1996-97	Villanova	24-10 (.706)	NCAA (1-1)
1995-96	Villanova	26-7 (.788)	NCAA (1-1)
1994-95	Villanova	25-8 (.758)	NCAA (0-1)
1993-94	Villanova	20-12 (.626)	NIT Champs (5-0)
1992-93	Villanova	8-19 (.296)	-
1991-92	Manhattan	25-9 (.735)	NIT (2-1)
1990-91	Manhattan	15-15 (.464)	-
1989-90	Manhattan	11-17 (.393)	-
1988-89	Manhattan	7-21 (.250)	-
13-YEAR CAREER		230-172 (.572)

*Lappas also served as assistant on Villanova 84-85 National Championship team

Softball goes perfect over break; Sortino gets 700th

By Jim Pignatiello
Collegian Staff

Was your Spring Break memorable? The members of the Massachusetts softball team will never forget theirs. All the Minutewomen accomplished was a notch a victory over the No. 22 ranked team in the nation, compile a 7-0 record, and get their head coach her 700th win.

UMass began the break in Tallahassee, Fla. to participate in the annual Tallahassee Democrat Tournament. The Maroon and White went South looking to improve on a 7-9 record and came away with confidence and four wins.

"The thing that has changed the most is our presence on the field and our ability to focus," coach Elaine Sortino said.

Massachusetts 1, Michigan 0

UMass opened play at the tournament with a victory over the No. 22 Lady Wolverines. Sophomore hurler Kaila Holtz set the tone for UMass' spring break as she shut out the Wolverines holding them to a miniscule three hits. Holtz struck out four while walking just one, earning her third straight victory.

"Our pitchers have come through," Elaine Sortino said. "They've really shut down [our opponents] offenses."

Sophomore shortstop Emily Robustelli scored the only run of the game, crossing home on a wild pitch by Michigan's Marie Bardam in the first inning.

Sophomore first baseman Brandi Cross led the offense going 2-for-3, while junior second baseman Ashley Bakken added a 1-for-1 performance with a walk.

*****

Massachusetts 4, Troy St. 3

There was no letdown for UMass after coming off a big win against a ranked team. The Minutewoman jumped right out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when junior centerfielder Teri Rooney scored from third on a double steal.

The Trojans bounced back, however, scoring three runs in the fifth inning off a home-run, a double and a single. UMass hadn't come from behind yet this season, but nothing was stopping the Minutewomen this week, everything was working for them.

"Between the good teams and the great teams, where you really see the difference is between the ears," Sortino said.

Intelligence and resiliency are two things the Maroon and White established against Troy St.

A two-run single by junior third baseman Cherra Wheeler scored sophomore right fielder Anna Perey and freshman pinch runner Nicole Wilson in the sixth inning to tie the game up at three apiece. Then, with the bases loaded, Robustelli roped a single to right to score Bakken and put the Minutewomen on top for good.

"It was the first time in this young season we were able to do that," said Elaine Sortino.

Junior right-hander Jen Hadley allowed three runs, two unearned, off six hits during her seven innings on the mound to earn her second win of the season.

*****

Massachusetts 6, Maryland 0

Senior hurler Carrie Jeffries took the mound against the Lady Terrapins and continued the Maroon and White's pitching dominance.

After three scoreless innings, freshman catcher Jamie Cahalan smacked a double and knocked in two runs. UMass added two more runs in the sixth when Rooney knocked in a run and then successfully completed a double steal, scoring Wheeler from third.

The Minutewomen scored their final two runs in the seventh when Rachael Parziale scored on an error and Anna Perey knocked a runner in with a single.

Jeffries struck out five in the complete game shutout while evening her record to 3-3.

*****

Massachusetts 3, Connecticut 0

Even the increasingly colder weather couldn't stifle the Minutewomen's momentum, especially when faced with the school's biggest rival.

"It was cold, raw, bitter," said Elaine Sortino. "I was holding the lineup card and I was shaking."

UMass scored all three runs off the Huskies in the first two innings off a two-run single to deep right by Wheeler and a single by Robustelli.

Holtz proved untouchable once again on the mound, two-hitting the Huskies en route to a complete game shutout and her fourth straight victory.

Perey, Robustelli and Wheeler all punched out two hits to lead the Minutewoman offense to victory.

With three big wins under UMass' belt and all the momentum pointing toward it, coach Sortino's squad was looking forward to its final two games in Tallahassee against two very good teams, Florida St. and Florida A&M.

Unfortunately, the tournament was cut short when the final two games were cancelled due to rain.

"I can't even tell you how disappointed we were," Sortino said. "We had been playing so well."

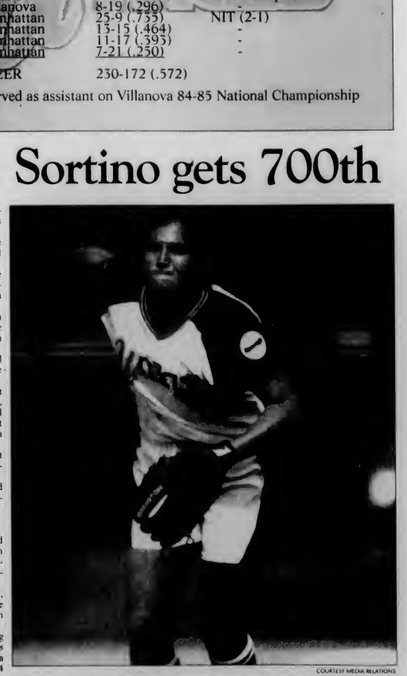
*****

Massachusetts 14, La Salle 6

With nearly a full week off, UMass could have had trouble regaining its momentum from the weekend before, but it had a mission to accomplish in Philadelphia, Pa. – Sortino's 700th win.

With a 3-3 score in the top of the fifth, the Maroon and White broke the game wide open with five runs behind RBI from Bakken, Tomoguchi and Robustelli.

La Salle staged a mini-comeback, scoring three runs in the next two innings, but was stuffed by a six run final inning, led by a two-run double by Cross, who went 3-for-4 in the game with three RBI.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior co-captain Jen Hadley went 2-0 over spring break and came within a hair of pitching a perfect game in UMass' 7-0 win over LaSalle. The Minutewomen went 7-0 while the campus was at rest.

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 9

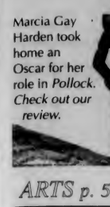
The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 103 | www.dailycollegian.com | Wednesday, March 28, 2001



Marcia Gay Harden took home an Oscar for her role in Pollock. Check out our review.

ARTS p. 5

Who dunnit? Doubleday or Cartwright? For the answer, check out sports.

SPORTS p. 12

Candidates fight for right to lead SGA forward

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

Whether you were tuning in to here candidates view points on referendum questions or the possibility of FBI agents placing micro-hips into students, you received it all with the help of this years Presidential candidates at last night's debates.

The Student Government Association Presidential and Trustee debates looked at each candidates view points on campus-wide issues such as budgets, safety and this election ballot's referendum questions.

Gabriel Tavares, John Sheehan, Kerry Mulcahy, Michel Whitehouse and Tony Witman, all running for SGA President expressed their concerns during the first forty-five minutes of the debates.

Candidates for student Trustee Jon Laubinger, Jeff Bazydlo, Laura Pickett and Chris Rue expressed their issues during the following half of the debates.

Issues surrounding Parking Services was one topic that was debated heavily. Many possible solutions to making it a more successful aspect of the University of Massachusetts were discussed.

Whitehouse said that he would like to make students aware if their car were going to be towed. Sheehan proposed that, if elected, he would implement an entirely new plan, taking out specific lots, and making them area based, thus ensuring that students would never be sold a parking ticked for a lot with unavailable space.

SCOTT ELDRIDGE/COLLEGIAN

SGA presidential candidates (from left to right) Gabriel Tavares, John Sheehan, "Big" Tony, Kerry Mulcahy and Michael Whitehouse at last night's UVC debates.

The issue of the ALANA [African, Latino, Asian, Native American] referendum question was one aspect looked into by all candidates, as controversy over its placement on the ballot was an issue during the Senate election's last month.

All candidates appeared in agreement that the ALANA appointed seats were a necessary aspect of the SGA and it's Senate.

"We need these groups to exist on our campus and we need to keep students aware of situations involving all students," Bazydlo said.

Presidential candidate Tavares expressed similar feelings on the issues of the ALANA referendum. He explained that they are a vital aspect of the SGA and University as the ALANA number of students in attendance at UMass has declined over the past few years.

Distance learning was also a topic brought to the attention of the candidates, as varying opinions rang throughout the room. Benefits, as well as concerns were expressed as to what it would mean in terms of professors on campus, as well as the opportunities it may give to students abroad.

Comedy was also provided throughout the evening as Presidential candidate, "Big Tony," commented on a lighter issues, like secret FBI chips, he felt pressing at the University. The evening's low point occurred when an unexpected fan ran into the UVC studio in support of Tony.

With elections beginning today, and continuing through Thursday, the race to the finish is a mystery. Election booths will be located at all the Dinning Hall locations around campus, as well as in the Campus Center.

Presidential and Trustee candidate break down

ALL PHOTOS BY SCOTT ELDRIDGE

Kerry Mulcahy | Jeff Bazydlo

Student Government Association presidential candidate, Kerry Mulcahy, brings her strong background in student affairs and modest approach to the race.

"I am the only candidate who didn't coming into this with a political group," Mulcahy said. "For the last three years, I've just been going around, kind of being myself."

Mulcahy is currently the Area Governor for Southwest, where she has been working to improve dining services and student life in general. Among her projects are the restoration of the Hampden building to a center for student activity and the painting of the Southwest tunnel.

"The Southwest tunnel is being painted for the first time in 30 years," said Mulcahy at the presidential debates put on by Union Video Center last night.

Mulcahy places building maintenance among her list of top priorities if she were elected SGA President. She explained that she has learned much about building repair and the excessive amount of money owed by the University in deferred maintenance costs. She also placed importance upon dining services and parking services – both issues which she has worked on in the past.

Like many of the other candidates, Mulcahy feels her leadership and prior experience in student government set her apart. In addition to area government, Mulcahy has been involved in House Council as Treasurer and Vice-President and the SGA Senate itself as an at-large Southwest representative.

"I think I have the most experience," Mulcahy said. "My leadership style suits the position. I'm a team-player."

Mulcahy believes that she would bring a relentless dedication to student's needs to the SGA Presidency – a dedication outside of political boundaries. She used her running mate, Jeff Bazydlo, as an example. Mulcahy explained how she and Jeff have had different experiences at the University, and even some different political philosophies, but that both are dedicated to helping student's needs.

Mulcahy thinks that the biggest improvement for the SGA needs to be communication – both within the organization itself and to the student body at large.

"Communications-wise it was a hard year for me as an Area Governor," said Mulcahy. The statement was made in light of the fact that the SGA and the satellite area governments were often not on the same page. Both the Orchard Hill and Northeast area governments were frozen by the SGA last semester.

Mulcahy supports the appointed seats for the Asian, Latino, Native American, African Caucus, which will be a referendum question on today and tomorrow's election ballots.

Mulcahy has expressed a willingness to work with anyone who is interested in helping students. This attitude is perhaps best seen in her opinion on the Judiciary's ruling to dissolve last fall's Senate.

"I think we should have kept the Senate," said Mulcahy. "We had some hard working people there and they should have been allowed to stay."

- Adam Martignetti

Jeff Bazydlo has made it his mission to work tirelessly for students if elected to be the next Student Trustee. Bazydlo outlined a personal plan of action whereby he would visit a

Turn to MULCAHY, page 2

John Sheehan | Jon Laubinger

An advocate of lowering the laundry machines fee in dorms, a mission to implement a new parking services plan and an advocate of the ALANA [African, Latino, Asian, Native American] referendum question give a small taste of what Presidential candidate John Sheehan has to offer.

Sheehan, currently the Orchard Hill Governor, expressed his feels on the Student Government Association current position on campus. Sheehan explained that he felt that the petty inside politics needed to be put aside, and that he would rise above that to focus on what's best for students.

"Last semester was a definite draw back for the Senate and SGA as a whole," Sheehan said. "Right now we need people to rise above it all and take initiative, and that's what I plan to do."

One issues being expressed by many candidates is the idea of fixing problems within parking services at the University of Massachusetts. Sheehan and running mate for Trustee Jon Laubinger, expressed their concerns over the parking situation at UMass, as well as offered up a solution.

"Like many people who want to fix parking services, we have a plan that will change parking services entirely," Sheehan, said. "We devised a plan that would separate parking lots to specific areas, not by stickers."

Sheehan went on to explain that by eliminating the various lots on campus, and making main parking lots would eliminate the issue of over-selling parking spaces, and would insure those purchasing parking passes a space on a daily basis.

The ALANA referendum question is also one aspect that Sheehan expressed his opinion on. He explained that he felt it vital that the ALANA seats remain present within the SGA Senate.

"We need to keep on implementing diversity on campus," Sheehan said. "Were all in the same school and it's about working together. The Senate must rise above that and I'm adamant that those seats stay in the Senate."

Sheehan furthered by stating that the SGA is the only undergraduate voice and the importance of that at UMass.

"The SGA is the only body of students that represents the voice of the undergraduate student body on this campus, and we need people involved in that," Sheehan said.

Aside from referendum questions and parking services, Sheehan expressed his thoughts on the laundry situation in the resident halls on campus.

"We're college students, and the fact that we have to pay $1.25 to do laundry in faulty machines is ridiculous," Sheehan said. Sheehan expressed that he has made changes on campus and would continue to do so if elected as President.

"When all the lounges in Orchard Hill were locked, I unlocked them. When Orchard Hill developed a parking situation, we fixed it," Sheehan said. "Things need to be done on this campus and we need doers to get them accomplished, and that is what I am."

Kristin Shrewsbury

Jon Laubinger places parking, laundry services in residential halls and the University meal plan on the top of his concerns for the Student Trustee position. Loginger stressed concrete solutions to these problems rather than simply talking about affecting change, in general.

Turn to SHEEHAN, page 2

Gabriel Tavares | Christopher Rue

Increases in Resident Advisors payroll, changing from a three-credit system to a four-credit system, and school spirit are just a few items on the top of Presidential Candidate Gabriel Tavares mind.

Tavares explained that he felt that the University of Massachusetts campus seemed to be dead and in need of school spirit.

"The Student Government Association needs to play a more active roll on campus," Tavares said. "I'd like to see more events bringing students together so that they know what the SGA is as well as have the opportunity to check out Registered Student Organizations on Campus."

Tavares, who recently resigned as Chief Justice of the SGA, said that his qualifications would make him a more than capable president.

"I know so much more than any of the other candidates, and I'm not saying this to be egotistical, it's just that I've had experience and I know how this University works," Tavares said. "I can't think of anyone other than Seth [Avakian] who loves this school as much as I do."

Tavares who is running side by side with Trustee candidate Chris Rue both expressed that they are looking to fix issues revolving around the ALANA referendum question.

When asked about the ALANA [African, Latino, Asian, Native American] referendum question on the up and coming ballot, Tavares responded in full support. He expressed his concerns over the declining numbers of ALANA students at UMass.

"The ALANA population is declining on this campus, it's numbers are always higher during the first semester, and drastically changes by the second semester," Tavares said. "It's a sociological fact that ALANA students have a higher drop out rate, however this needs to change and those seats are very important."

Tavares is also interested in changing the credit system used here at UMass. He expressed his concern over the fact that students are not graduating on time and,he feels that it is a direct result of UMass's three-credit system.

"I would like to change our three-credit system to a four-credit system when elected," Tavares said. "A four-credit system would free of time, and benefit both professors as well as students."

As Tavares expresses both his plans for the future, he also commented on last semester's removal of the Senate and it's affects on the SGA as a whole.

"The removal of the elections insured that future elections would be run cleanly and it ultimately makes our process better," Tavares said. "It will now sit as a safety guide for the SGA's electoral process and ensure an equal vote for students on this campus."

Tavares continued to explain that he and Rue are looking to improve student's ability to access resources on campus. Tavares explained that he felt that the SGA is not making itself as much of a resource for students as it could be, and he and Rue would like to change this.

"Chris and I are looking to make this campus and the SGA more of a resource for students so that they can have the opportunities to get involved," Tavares said.

- Kristin Shrewsbury

Calmness between the Student Government Association

Turn to TAVARES, page 2

Michael Whitehouse | Laura Prickett

Chair of University Policy, Michael Whitehouse, plans to address parking services, chicken fingers and the restructuring of student government if elected the next President of the Student Government Association.

In an interview before yesterday's candidate debates, Whitehouse outlined a plan to call students before having their cars towed, put chicken fingers into dining halls every night and make the SGA more student friendly.

Whitehouse said that he had already been working with Parking Services to make sure students are informed before their cars are ticketed or towed. He expressed a desire to increase communication between the President and Senate branches of the SGA and to give each of the President's seven secretaries two assistants. Whitehouse believes these assistants will help the secretaries deal with large campus issues like diversity or housing or parking.

Whitehouse said he has been working to put lights and sidewalks on East Pleasant St., the road which runs behind the back of Orchard Hill to the yellow lot and to the Sylvan Residential Area.

"I have already talk to [Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs] Javier Cevallos, who has been in touch with the town liaison about it," said Whitehouse. "It's a town issue even though the street runs in between University property."

Whitehouse addressed the long-standing issue of a possible ATM in Southwest by saying that the key to its installation is demand.

"I plan to start a petition in Southwest and get 4,000 or 5,000 signatures," said Whitehouse. "We need to make the banks want to put an ATM there because there is so much demand."

Whitehouse emphasized that his experience of the Chair of University Policy separates him from his fellow presidential candidates.

"I'm the only one who is currently working on the Senate's behalf with the central administration," said Whitehouse, "opposed to an Area Governor who works with local administration." Presidential candidates Kerry Mulcahy and John Sheehan are both Area Governors, of Southwest and Orchard Hill respectively.

A professional working atmosphere in the SGA is also high on Whitehouse's priority list. Whitehouse said that the President should set an example by his actions for the rest of the SGA. He believes that the previous administration was somewhat lacking in this area.

"I've seen Jeff Howe about four times in the SGA office and I've never seen him working. When he was in the office, it was a place to download MP3s or play Snood," said Whitehouse. "I think a lot of the SGA's problems last semester came from a lack of leadership.

As for the controversial referendum question . . which would allow the Asian, Latino, Native American, African Caucus to mainsain its appointed seats in the Senate, Whitehouse stressed the importance of keeping an ALANA voice in the Senate regardless of the vote's outcome.

"I'm glad it's coming to a referendum so students can finally decide whether they want the seats or nor," said Whitehouse. "If it passes, then the Caucus gets to keep its seats. And if it fails, then I will work with the Secretary of

Turn to WHITEHOUSE page 2

Cultural Events Calendar

ACTIVISM
BOSTON – The Jewish Community Relations Council of Greater Boston is sponsoring Jewish Community Advocacy Day on Wednesday, March 21 from 8:45 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. at the Statehouse. Contact Amy Dain at (617) 457-8669 for more information.

CONTESTS
DEERFIELD – "Bright Spots." Create and submit 30 or 60 second video shorts promoting nonviolence and peacemaking. $2,000 in prizes will be awarded to groups and individuals in several categories. For more information and entry forms, see www.crocker.com/~traptock or call the Traptock Peace Center at (413) 773-7427.

SOCIAL EVENTS
AMHERST – "An Evening of Songs and Stories." Rabbi David Zeller, a pioneer in transpersonal psychology and Jewish spirituality and an internationally known teacher, counselor, singer and writer, will lead this event from 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday, March 26, at the Jewish Community of Amherst, 742 Main Street. Tickets are on a sliding scale, from $10 to $20. For more information, call 259-1740.

FILM/VIDEO SCREENINGS
UMASS – A multicultural film festival, "Border Crossing: Cinema and Video at Century's Turn," will be held on dates from Feb. 16 to May 10. The series highlights the fluidity and permanence of artistic, technical, geographic, cultural, political and personal borders and includes film and vide screenings and panel presentations. On April 5 at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 231 will be "Hamburger and Dolma: Cross Cultural Identities" presented by the director Caroline Babayan. Five Armenian women's stories are interwoven to shape a collective narrative about the intergenerational transmission of trauma, the complexity of identity and the abiding power of family and friendship. For more information, call Film Studies at 545-3659.

RELIGIOUS
AMHERST – Shabbat services are held on Fridays at 6 p.m. followed by Shabbat dinner at 7:15 p.m. in Hillel House.

LECTURE/DISCUSSION
UMASS – The Everywoman's Center and the People's Market present Dr. Stella Volpe's lecture entitled "How to Save Your Own Life," on simple ways to prevent osteoporosis. Wednesday, March 14 at 12:30-1:30 p.m. in the Duke's Room (near Earthfoods), UMass Student Union. For more information contact the Everywoman's Center at 545-0883.
AMHERST – The Jewish Community of Amherst presents "Judaism and Controversial Subjects: The Death Penalty," at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community of Amherst.
AMHERST – Jean Trounstine, a teacher of theatre in a women's prison, will be sharing her insights and reading from her book Shakespeare behind Bars: The Power of Drama in a Women's Prison on Thursday, March 15 at 7 p.m. at Food for Thought Books. For more information, contact Joan Barberich at 253-5432.
UMASS – Lisa Duggan, Associate Professor of American Studies at NYU, will speak on "The New Homonormativity: Gay Conservatives and the Sexual Politics of Neoliberalism," Thursday, March 29 at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 904-908. For more information, call 545-4824.
SMITH COLLEGE – "The Future of Feminist Scholarship? A Glimpse at the Third World. Work in Progress." This lecture will be given by Kum-Kum Bhavnani, Senior Editor of Meridians and Visiting Professor of Women's Studies at Smith College, on Monday, April 16 at 4:15 p.m. in Seelye 207. Free.
SOUTH HADLEY – Glyne Griffith, Assistant Professor of Carribean and cultural studies and the Harlem Renaissance at Bucknell University, will lecture on "Reading in the Dark: Race, Literature and the Discourse of Blackness." Thursday, March 15 at 4:30 p.m., Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College.
SMITH COLLEGE – Abigail Stewart of the University of Michigan will speak on "Identity and Consciousness in Women's Political Activism." 4:30 p.m.

CONFERENCE
HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "From Abortion Rights to Social Justice: Building the Movement for Reproductive Freedom," an annual conference for student and community activists, will be held from March 30 to April 1. Free housing, babysitting, sign language interpreters, and meals are available by advance registration. The conference is free, but registration in advance needed. For more information, call 559-5416.

THEATER/DANCE/SPOKEN WORD
UMASS – Slam poet Regie Cabico will perform at the March Queer Cafe, on Thursday, March 15 from 7-9 p.m. in the Graduate Student Lounge, in the Campus Center.
UMASS & SMITH COLLEGE – New WORLD Theater's Future Aesthetics Project presents the intersections between theater and spoken word, performance poetry, hip-hop and youth culture. The final performance, featuring Caridad de la Luz, will be held at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery at UMass on April 5. Free admission to all events.
UMASS – "Stop Kiss" traces the experiences of Callie and Sarah, two young women who are dealing with all the usual young adult issues as well as falling in love with each other. The show explores the theme of honesty, and the hostility of a homophobic society to such honesty. The show will take place at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater on April 5 through 7, and April 10 through 13. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

UMASS – "Nuyorican Stories" will be performed with sidesplitting humor by the members of Culture Clash, who blend poetry, dance, music and visual arts. The show will be performed at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on Thursday, April 19. For tickets, which range from $5 to $10, call the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.
UMASS – "I Remember Mapa," a comical one-man show starring Alec Mapa, will be performed one night only at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on May 10. Based on his true-life experiences, the piece chronicles Mapa's colorful adventures through rise, fall and rebirth as a gay Filipino American actor in the entertainment industry. For tickets, which range from $5 to $10, call the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

MUSIC PERFORMANCE
UMASS – The Magic Triangle Jazz Concert Series presents Sam Rivers, tenor and soprano saxophone, flute, piano and voice. Benzaquen Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Call 545-2876 for more information.
UMASS – "AEROS" features gold medal-winning gymnasts from the Romanian Gymnastics Federation, directed by Daniel Ezralow, David Parsons and Moses Pendleton in collaboration with "Stomp" creators Luke Cresswell and Steve McNicholas. This unusual performance troupe will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Hall on Wednesday, March 14.

This calendar, which previews local events of interest to under-represented groups on campus and in the community, runs on Wednesdays. Submit notices of events to Tanya Mannes, Diversity Editor. Standard entry forms are available in the Collegian office.

■ Mulcahy

continued from page 1

particular residence hall on campus weekly, go door to door and ask people about "little problems" that affect dorm life. He explained that these "little problems" are a lot easier, and in some cases a lot more pertinent to student life, to fix than larger campus issues on campus like parking.

"This is not a 9:00 to 5:00 job," said Bazydlo. "I don't go home at 5 p.m. and say I'm done for the day. I keep working."

Both in last night's Union Video Center Trustee debates and in his interview, Bazydlo used the example of circuitry in Northeast to demonstrate such a "little problem" that needs fixing. He recently discovered that the circuitry in Northeast is old and that residents there do not have access to lights in there room.

Bazydlo also put dining services and parking services on his list of issues that he would address as the next Trustee.

"Privatization isn't the easy solution," said Bazydlo. He explained how he had been responsible for increasing the number of guest passes from two to six and how he hopes that by the end of his term, there will be a general satisfaction with dining services.

Bazydlo believes his experience, not only in the SGA, but in other organizations as well, makes him the best candidate to represent all students to the Board of Trustees Bazydlo is the Business Manager for UVC, the Vice President of Finances for the Inter-fraternity Council and the Chair of Intramural Sports for his fraternity house.

Bazydlo is set to bring a very hands-on approach to the Trustee position, which would involve not only advocating change, but sitting down with administrators and seeing how to bring about that change.

"Right now, it's a yell at the top of your lungs until something is changed approach," said Bazydlo. "That's not how things should be done."

He explained how he, as Trustee, would go to administrators who could affect change, make certain proposals for change and then work to reconcile the differences between the two sides.

"When I leave, I want to be known as the guy who never stopped working," said Bazydlo.

Citing the personal politics and bickering that affected the SGA last semester, Bazydlo said that this is not an image the group should present to the students.

"Of course nothing is going to get done when you throw out the Senate," said Bazydlo. "[Last semester] really ruined the reputation of the SGA."

Bazydlo also came out in favor of the Asian, Latino, Native American African Caucus seats. He believes that this group of students needs to have their voice heard.

"As a member of the Greek community, I now understand, where our Senate seats will go from 30 to two, what it's like to not have your voice heard," said Bazydlo. "I might not have told you that a year ago, but these students need to have their voice heard."

- Adam Martignetti

■ Sheehan

continued from page 1

For example, he explained he and his presidential running mate, John Sheehan's, plan to bring area-specific parking to all of campus. This plan, already implemented in Orchard Hill, would assign parking spaces to students based upon their place of residence rather than the current color system. Laubinger said that this system will solve the parking shortage and prevent students from having to pay upward of $90 to retrieve their towed cars.

Laubinger believes that student's on a University meal plan should be able to use their swipes for whomever they want and that student should have unlimited guest meals. He is also advocating the formation of a Housing Appeals Board. This independent board would be in charge of hearing complaints made against residence life by students and also appeals of fired resident assistants. Laubinger claimed that the current system for handling residence life complaints though Housing Services is inherently unfair and biased.

Running as the everyman candidate, Laubinger said hat he is in a unique position to understand what University students need.

"My combination of experience and closeness to the students sets me apart," said Laubinger. "I am still living in dorms, still involved with regular students. I have my hand on the pulse of UMass students."

Laubinger spent a year and a half as Attorney General and believes that experience has given him insight into the inner workings of the SGA. However, he still thinks that he is not so involved in the political machine to be blinded to the rest of campus.

"My point of view isn't jaded," he explained.

Laubinger has also insisted that last semester's personal egos and infighting must not hinder the governing body from performing its true purpose: that is, serving the students. He believes that too often students focus on the negative aspects of the SGA and ignore what good it does.

During last night's Union Video Production Trustee debates, Laubinger explained how he has talked to many students on campus, who do know how important the SGA is and who do have hope that it can affect change. He said that his responsibility, as Trustee, would be to give them something concrete to be hopeful about. Only then can the SGA repair its tarnished reputation, according to him.

As for the Asian, Latino, Native American, African Caucus seats on today's ballot as a referendum question, Laubinger has played a firsthand role in seeing that these positions are ensured for ALANA community members.

"I proved that the ALANA Caucus seats were constitutional," said Laubinger. "I defended them in front of the Judiciary and I won. I feel people should vote in favor of the seats."

- Adam Martignetti

■ Tavares

continued from page 1

and the Administration is just one step that student Trustee candidate Chris Rue would like to add to the SGA.

Rue prides himself on his people skills and expressed his feelings on the fact that in order for the SGA to be successful students need to feel comfortable in voicing their own opinions.

"I want to bring the issues at hand to peoples attention on a simple leave and leave them understanding what's going in a humane manor," Rue said. "I want students feel comfortable and not be afraid to express who they are or their opinions on issues involving this campus."

When asked about last semesters Senate elections being ruled unconstitutional, Rue responded by stating that he felt that it opened up more voice, but in the same time took away something people worked hard for.

"It's hard to get rid of students who worked hard to be apart of something, but I guess it makes it better for the whole spectrum in the end," Rue said.

Rue has focused much of his attention on the overall communication process between students, administrators and professors on campus. He explained that issues students face, at the University of Massachusetts are those we face in the real world, and students need to realize that.

The issue of the ALANA [African, Latino, Asian, Native American] referendum question was also a concern of Rue's, being a member himself he expressed the personal importance of ALANA at UMass.

"We need to establish better support programs for students on campus," Rue said. "I'm a member of ALANA and I have felt uncomfortable here at UMass, and I want students to be able to get comfortable here and express themselves with equal representation and equality."

Other issues addressed by Rue and Tavares was their personal feelings that the University has looked too much into professor's job as a researcher than that as a professor. They expressed the fact that there is a lacking teacher student relations and it's affecting this campus.

"I would like to see more open houses and have the administration and professors take off their suits and ties and get to communicate with the students," Rue said. "However it works both ways and it is important to making any environment work. We need to explain issues and bring them forth to make people aware."

Communication, being able to express ones opinions and equality on campus are just a few topics Rue plans to focus on if elected student Trustee. He further added that if change is going to happen it's going to start with people talking and communicating with one another on a humane level, not that of politics.

-Kristin Shrewsbury

■ Whitehouse

continued from page 1

Diversity to increase ALANA recruitment.

"Their voices are important to be heard," said Whitehouse. "We will need to find ALANA students, get them interested and then get them to run."

– Adam Martignetti

A new comer to the Student Government Association arena of candidates, Laura Prickett has already taken action in an effort to fix what she feels is the main problem on campus; communication.

Prickett, an advocate for group-to-group communication, and better security on campus expressed many of her issues that she would like to change if elected as student Trustee. She explained that she felt that a majority of issues that cause problems within the SGA as well as their relationship with various groups on campus is due to their lack of communication.

"There is a lack of communication between the SGA, Registered Student Organizations and the Administration. Leaving it difficult to work with one another," Prickett said. "If we could establish this we could make beneficial changes on this campus."

When Pickett was asked about her feelings on the safety of those on campus in last nights debates she explained that she felt that changes could be made to the safety of many students on campus.

"I would like to work with security and the escort service," Pickett said. "I think that even though we have new call boxes they are placed in inconvenient places, and we could make them more accessible for students if looked at appropriately."

Pickett also referred to this years Task Force review and stating that she felt that one major change she would like to tackle would be that of keeping students on campus.

make people interested in a school that they can be proud of."

Change was something Pickett also talked about in respects to the position of the student Trustee. She explained that there were technological advances promised, such as an upgrade of register equipment in the textbook annex that never came through.

"I had to wait for 12 registers to use one phone line to contact each persons credit card carrier when buying books," Pickett said. "It was one item that could have been fixed easily, but was neglected and as a student I felt cheated."

Pickett expressed the need for all areas of faculty as well as students to be aware of campus wide changes that may occur at the University as well.

In response to the ALANA [African, Latino, Asian, Native American] referendum question, Pickett expressed that she felt it was important that they be apart of the SGA Senate. However she felt that it was wrong for students to be focusing on the word "quota," but that of representation instead.

- Kristin Shrewsbury

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts: operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Troupes Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Esther Danzig Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Sliniawki Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Gargarita Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

25TH ANNIVERSARY
The New England Center FOR CHILDREN
Entry-Level Childcare/ Teacher Positions
The Center is a recipient of the U.S. Department of Education's National Award for Model Professional Development. We are a state-of-the-art residential school and treatment center for children and adults with autism, developmental disabilities and behavior disorders. The Center attracts students and scholars from around the world for our programs, research and training opportunities.
We have entry-level Childcare/Teacher positions for talented Bachelor-level candidates who are willing to work hard for the experience of a lifetime while we pay for almost your entire Master's Degree!
Interested candidates should mail their resume to Attn: Scott Barnes, Dir. of Staff Development, The New England Center for Children, 33 Turnpike Road, Southboro, MA 01772. For a quicker response, send your resume by fax: 508-485-3421 or email: sbarnes@necc.org. EOE/AA
Visit our Web Site at http://www.NECC.org

SMOOTHE LEWIS
LIVE AT THE PUB!
10-1
Jammin' to techno funk originals including your favorite Rolling Stones, Greatful Dead and Phish covers and much more!
18 + welcome
The Pub
21 + to drink

DON'T GET SCREWED!!!
Off-Campus Residents!
Do your parties get busted?
Can You Buy a keg without talking to a Cop?
Does your Apt. Have enough Visitor Parking?
Can you catch a Bus in the Summer?
Here's the solution:
Vote
Andrew Spagnoli
Commuter Area Governor.
I will fight for your rights!
Write in Meir Hamilton for Lt. Gov.
Voting is Wednesday 3/28, and Thursday 3/29 at the campus Ctr.

THE COLLEGIAN SPRING BREAK PHOTO CONTEST DEADLINE has been extended to FRIDAY
April 6th
Photos must be 8x10 or smaller, unmatted and unframed drop your submissions to the Collegian photo Department, located in the basement of the campus center
Photos must be in an envelope, accompanied by a submission form
Submission Form:
name: _____ phone #: _____
e-mail: _____ type of photo (circle one): black & white color
major & year: _____
description of photo (1-2 sentences): _____
Requirements:
-Drop off at the Collegian Photo Dept (The Collegian offices are located in the Campus Center Basement, opposite the ATMs and directly across from WMUA. Ask for the newsroom.)
-Photos must be 8x10" or smaller, unframed and unmatted
-Photos must be in an evelope with this submission form
Any questions?? Email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

europe ON A budget SEMINAR
Learn everything you need to know about traveling to Europe on a budget. Our free seminar covers:
• Discount Airfares • How to Get Around • Budget Accommodations • What You Need to Know Before You Go • Planning Your Itinerary • Tours • Travel Safety
Enter to win a trip to Europe
Other giveaways include: rail passes, travel gear, travel books and more!!
Coming soon to YOUR campus.
Contact Council Travel for details!
Campus Center Rm 905
7 - 9 pm
Wednesday, March 28th
Council Travel www.counciltravel.com

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN New England's Largest College Daily & THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
THE DAILY COLLEGIAN AND THE HANGAR
Present
DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM NIGHT
DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM NIGHT
THIS SATURDAY MARCH 31ST
FROM 9P.M.-11P.M.
THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
At the Hangar Pub & Grill
55 University Drive.
• Door Prizes will be Given Away Throughout the Night
• As Always $ 2 Coors Light
• GRAND PRIZE: Diamond Pic Portable Music Player
SPONSORED IN PART BY: Black Sheep, Judies, Zanna, & ABC.

YOUR ALL-TERRAIN VEHICLE
Slightly different music, because you're slightly different.
AT THE DRIVE-IN Relationship Of Command 9.99
AMERICAN HI-FI American Hi-Fi 11.99
NEW! SALIVA Every Six Seconds 11.99
MATTHEW GOOD BAND Beautiful Midnight 11.99
ALIEN ANT FARM Anthology 11.99
NEW! MODERN ENGLISH Life In The Gloamhouse / The Best Of Modern English 13.99
A PUNK TRIBUTE TO METALLICA Various Artists 13.99
GET OVER IT Soundtrack 15.99
MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore
For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Sale ends April 7, 2001. Cassettes available on select titles.
Join Replay. The club that rewards your love of entertainment. Ask associate for details.
MediaPlay.com Selection, pricing and special offers may vary by store and online.
We Buy & Sell Used CDs! Check out our great selection.

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Elections up for debate
Met with little reaction

Today we write to address two problems.

Last night, our news editor, Adam Martignetti, participated in the Student Government Association debate. Participants included candidates for the office the president and trustee. Last night's debate took place in the office of UVC, our campus television station, and was shown on the campus cable network.

How unfortunate.

The candidates answered the questions posed to them, uncomfortably looking at the camera wondering if their hair was out of place or if their ties were tight enough, while the cameras picked up their nervous answers. But those answers went nowhere – traveling down the cameras' cables directly into the campus cable matrix, students instead tuned in to the newest episode of a reality show, the newest videos on MTV2 or simply watched sports.

But they most certainly didn't excitedly tune in to their SGA debates. Like so many things that surround the organization, something that the SGA is involved in has gone bad.

How truly unfortunate.

No longer can SGA debates be allowed to happen in the small studio in the Student Union basement, and no longer can the only questions asked be asked by members of the UMass student press corp. Instead, the debate must be opened up so that all students can participate should they want to.

The SGA has long talked about increasing student involvement in their archaic political positioning, but rarely do they follow through. Perhaps a good place to start is doing more than allowing themselves to be taped.

Rather, the SGA debates should be a big deal and more importantly, an open deal. Instead of those cramped studios, the SGA debates should take place in the Student Union Ballroom and all students should have the opportunity to ask the questions that they have always wanted answered.

Why Is It that the only news about the SGA involves the constant in fighting (and no, we don't think it's because all of the SGA progress isn't being covered)?

Will my organization be funded and if not, what can be done to make sure it is?

Where are meetings held and will they open to all students?

Any questions posed by students in a debate format will not only keep candidates on their proverbial toes. That can never hurt, but most of all, it encourages involvement by students who might not otherwise care.

Rather than keeping the student political institutions trapped in some sort of Ivory Tower where the only access is at the end of a remote control, give students the microphone and let them ask the questions.

The more students that are allowed to participate in the SGA, instead of just being at the mercy of that same group, the more students might care about their student government, and on this campus, that could never hurt.

At the same time, we do encourage all students to vote in today's elections. Not only do you have the opportunity to impact one of the most important political groups on campus, MASSPirg, you have the chance to impact your leadership for the next year. And while we will not endorse anybody this year, we're fairly sure that it can't possibly get any worse than it did this past year.

An Open Letter to President Bulger

Dear President Bulger:

Over the years you have repeatedly drawn attention to the value of liberal education and, as an intimately related point, the necessity of rigorous standards. On no less than three occasion I've heard you speak eloquently on the importance of classical education. Indeed, last year in these very pages I praised a speech you gave at the University on "Freedom and Education in the Classical World." There, like you have so often in the past, you insisted that the "classics" are central to education and that education Is central to freedom. Now I can only suppose that you think education is central to freedom, as democracy depends upon certain furnishings of mind from its citizens that are only brought forth by way of education. On just this point, you've insisted that a classical education - a liberal education - made all the difference in your life. The first time I heard you say this, I was happy to have you as president - ecstatic! The second time I was convinced that you were actually going to provoke a debate on the meaning of education. Now it strikes me as mere rhetoric, not the noble and sublime rhetoric of your classical heroes - no Cicero here - but the cheap rhetoric of modern life in which these students are already awash. They deserve more.

It's understandable that things haven't changed overnight, and many of us who were once excited by your talk of liberal education and rigorous standards still hope that it will become a reality. We don't expect you to change things at the stroke of a pen. What we do expect, however, if this is as important as you continually suggest, is that you put it on the agenda. Perhaps you're working behind the scenes. Well, you should come out; you once wielded power effectively as president of the Senate. You're president of the University; use your podium as a bully-pulpit. Make your case explicitly and make it to the students. There are students out there who are craving a real education and are convinced that UMass has failed them.

GEORGE THOMAS

A quick look at the general education requirements suggests that students do have to take a number of courses across a range of subjects. The requirements have the faint echo of liberal education, but a closer look casts serious doubt. There are two serious problems with the requirements. First, they're so broad that students can skip anything that's too hard. Students have to take a course in literature, but they're not required to read Shakespeare, Tolstoy, Dostoevsky and Mark Twain. They have to take a writing requirement, but they most certainly don't have to learn how to write even moderately lucid prose. And while they take history and social science, they're not required to read Plato, Aristotle, Sophocles, or, if we may jump a head, Alexis de Tocqueville, The Federalist Papers, or Abraham Lincoln. Here we have some of the great minds in our history and our students aren't even asked to having a passing acquaintance with them. It gets worse. Many of the classes offered as general education requirements are absurdly easy. My students tell me such classes don't even began to compare to, say, an AP high school course.

Let me take just a few examples. In one course, World Politics, a multiple choice exam (multiple choice in college!) asked students which of the four following had nothing to do with international relations – (a) The United States, (b) The United Nations, (c) Rolling Stone, or (d) The International Charter of Human Rights. Yes, in the age of globalization, where the exportation of culture might be the hottest thing going. Rolling Stone might be a good answer and, I'm afraid to say, a student that reasoned in this manner would be doing far more thinking than the exam actually demands of them. Still, even an idiot off the street, without ever attending a single lecture or cracking one of those very difficult 101 textbooks, would guess (c) nine out of ten times. Or, if you prefer writing (as I do), how about a policy on papers that explicitly tells students that an A paper presents a reasonably logical argument with an ok grasp of the material, while a C paper is described as incoherent and full of grammatical mistakes (presumably one can't get lower than a C). Consider it – we pass a student who doesn't have a clue and call that average, which is just what we're making these students. Actually, that's too much. We're making the A students average and the C students rampantly mediocre.

Perhaps we don't want real education, perhaps we want simple vocational training - that's fine. But let's be honest about it and call it that; let's not tell students – and their parents – that we're in the business of giving them a college education, because we're not. If, though, you truly believe that education is central to freedom, it's even worse. For we aren't giving students the qualities of mind or character that democracy depends upon. As Alexis de Tocqueville said, "It seems that if despotism came to be established in the democratic nations of our day... it would degrade men without tormenting them." That seems all too apt, particularly as Tocqueville's fear stemmed from democracy's occasional contempt for standards, as the very nature of holding people to standards implicitly rejects simple notions of equality. That seems to be at the root of our own refusal to make students live up high standards and, thereby, degrades them insofar as it promotes their mediocrity. A friend once told Clover Adams (Mrs. Henry Adams) that Henry James' highly polished prose read as if he had bitten off more than he could chew. Clover Adams, always the wit, quipped that as a matter of fact she thought James chewed (and chewed) rather more than he had bitten off. I'm afraid, Mr. President, that you chew and chew, without taking a single bite. And so UMass continues to crank out student after student who haven't the faintest clue who Henry James and Henry Adams are.

George Thomas is a UMass graduate student.

It all came to an end on that day

BRYAN MCALLISTER

There are some dates which, in the immortal words of Franklin Roosevelt, "will live in infamy." He was speaking of December 7, 1941 – Pearl Harbor. But there is also Nov. 22, 1963 – President Kennedy's assassination. And Dec. 1, 1978 – My birthday. Some dates you just remember more than others. They take that timeless place in history, that place between memory and desire, that place where time stands still – and that place that makes you want to rip off clichéd phrases by famous people. I have a dream, and in that dream...

This past weekend, March 23-25, is one such historical milestone. This one, like Pearl Harbor and President Kennedy (and my birthday) was tragic, a series of events reaped in pathos and malaise. This was the weekend, of course, when the Death of Civilization As We Know It occurred.

You probably have no idea what I'm talking about. Screw it, I don't even know what I'm talking about. Maybe it's not as dramatic as that, Civilization, as we know it, will probably continue. Only now, it will REALLY suck.

I'm going to outline the series of events that led to my conclusion. These events are not in chronological order and, in fact, some of them may have never happened at all. But, together, they combine to show how art – the refreshing liquid of our existence – is being destroyed and lost.

1) The Oscars – Please show me anyone who actually thought Gladiator deserved to win Best Picture. I mean, this had to be the dumbest selection by the Academy since well, Julia Roberts won Best Actress and Russell Crowe won Best Actor. When did the Oscars turn into the People's Choice Awards? Gladiator was a good movie, yes, but it was also a cheap rip-off of Braveheart, and it's very disturbing that Mel Gibson wasn't even nominated for Best Actor, and yet Russell Crowe wins the Oscar for it. I'm not saying Gibson should have been nominated, I'm just saying it proves that Crowe shouldn't have. Anyway, no one I've talked to thinks this was a great film. No one. How could they pass up the beautiful Crouching Tiger or the timely Traffic?

2) The Guy Who Created Slim Jims Died – That's right, I'm not lying. The brilliant man who created Slim Jims just recently passed away. I think the most shocking thing about it is that the guy's name is Sam, yet he didn't name his creation "Slim Sams." That's pretty humbling. Anyway, Slim Jims. I would guess, will still continue to be offered, except that now they will be called "Really Tiny Jims."

3) Bozo the Clown Got Canceled – What kind of sick world do we live in when the greatest clown ever, and a staple of kids television for over 40 years, gets canceled from TV? The last locally-produced "Bozo the Clown" show just got canceled in Chicago, meaning Bozo is officially off the air for good. It's ridiculous. I grew up on Bozo. Besides Krusty, there is no better clown ever. He's an ICON. I'm still waiting for the MTV presentation of "Bozo – An Icon," to follow up on their dumb-ass Janet Jackson tribute (N'Sync would of course compose a new song to honor Bozo, called "Bo-Bo-Bozo").

4) The Death of William Hanna – In perhaps the most tragic of events over the weekend, William Hanna, the cartoon genius behind the production company Hanna-Barbera, died at the age of 90. Just read the list of shows and characters he created: "Scooby Doo," "The Flintstones," "The Jetsons," "Tom and Jerry," "Yogi Bear." This man created your childhood! I think in 10 or 15 years, his name will be up there with Shakespeare and Hemingway and Brendan Fraser. Hanna not only created the above masterpieces, but I will always remember him for the litler-known characters – you probably remember them if you ever watched the USA channel on Saturday mornings. Characters like Snagglepuss and Huckleburry Hound and Quick Draw McGraw. And perhaps the greatest character of all – Captain Caveman! Do you remember this? Actually, I don't really, but I remember loving it. All I remember is a caveman coming out of a cave and shouting "Captain Caaaaaaaveman!" and he was a superhero of sorts (I think he had a magic club).

If only he was here to save Civilization now.

Bryan McAllister is a Collegian columnist.

Cadbury Eggs revelation

ADAM MARTIGNETTI

I'd like to say that a thousand things raced through my mind as I stood there in line, waiting. My mind, however, was off sometime in the immediate future, living an event that had yet to happen. On days when your "to do" list seems interminable, this kind of unconscious being seems common. My mind labored over the rest of what I had to do that afternoon without really paying much attention to what I was doing then.

And the whole thing was probably my fault anyway. I went into the downtown Amherst CVS that afternoon to get toothpaste and a card. Just toothpaste and a card. I should have been in and out in ten minutes. The toothpaste proved fairly straightforward and whichever brand I chose (dental hygiene notwithstanding, I honestly don't remember), I'm sure it was on sale. The card, on the other hand, took me a bit longer. As does anything involving emotional attachment, it took time – a long time, in fact – to sift through the choices and select what I thought to be the best choice. Okay, so maybe I also stopped to pick up a copy of the latest entertainment magazine or to peruse the front page of the New York Times, but these distractions were not so long to warrant my impending fate.

By the time I had my two items decided upon and in hand, the lines at the front of the store were long and not moving anytime soon. Of course they would be on a day when you are in a hurry. My heart sank and I prepared to wait. This is how I came to be standing in line with a thousand things racing through my mind, with my mind living in some alternative world without CVS lines.

I stood in the first line for five, maybe 10 minutes without moving. It seems that the kindly, elderly cashier was having a problem determining whether the customer had bought six or seven of whatever odd, usually impractical item happened to be on sale that day. And once the exact figure had been determined, she was then having a problem getting those six or seven bulky items into a single plastic bag.

So, doing what any self-respecting person of common sense would do, I switched lines. From my experience, this tactic is usually a bad idea. Upon switching lines, the line that you were just in usually moves along quite quickly while your new line becomes mired in a perpetual rut. This time was no exception to that rule – something to do with a rebate, I believe.

Resigned to the fact that I wasn't going anywhere anytime soon, I stayed in the second line and watched an absolutely beautiful set of events unfold.

In front of me in line were a mother and her eight-year-old son (I'm guessting-mating his age). Although I wasn't paying either much attention, I overheard their conversation come around to money. Like a lot of eight-year-olds, the little boy was requesting some money and the responsibility to use it, trying to assert himself as mature. And like a lot of mothers, she responded with a dismissive "we'll see." I think she too was becoming impatient with the long wait.

Moments later, a young Russian boy (whose name, I would later learn, was Sasha) approached the eight-year-old. In his hand, Sasha, who was perhaps three or four years old, carried a Cadbury Egg, which he was trying to give to the other boy for no apparent reason. The boy smiled genuinely at young Sasha's attempts, while the mother carried a more disapproving look. "No, that's not his. He can't take it," the mother said, as if the younger boy could possibly understand such cruel, apathetic, adult sympathies. Sasha was persistent though, and eventually forced the egg into the other boy's hand. Perhaps sensing his mother's condescending look, the eight-year-old quickly returned it to Sasha, at which point Sasha's mother hurried to the situation.

As mothers are wont to do, especially those who have recently lost track of their young children, Sasha's mom suspected something bad had happened. "Did he take that from him?" Sasha's mother asked the other adult worriedly. "No, I think he was just trying to give it to him," came the response. Sasha (the one word I understood of the impending conversation) then stood nobly, but blankly, as his mother explained to him in Russian, I'm sure, why he should not give the other boy the piece of candy. "It's not his," I imagine she said.

Then, the most remarkable thing happened. Before rejoining his mother in the film drop-off line a few feet away, Sasha nonchalantly dropped the Cadbury Egg into the other boy's coat pocket. Somewhat stunned, the boy tried to muster a response – verbal or otherwise – but Sasha had already jolted on his merry way – his good deed accomplished. Of course, the mother, ignoring the magnanimity of the situation, responded with expected maternal wisdom, "Just take it and then put it back." The boy, though, demonstrated a perception well beyond his years. Rather than obeying his mother's dictum immediately, the boy responded, "I'm going to put it back mom. I just don't want him to see it."

And that's exactly what he did. He waited until just the right moment, and scurried over to the huge First National Cadbury Egg Depository and put the candy back – just so his new friend would not see its rejection.

I'm not sure why I write about this now other than the moment struck me – its pure simplicity. Sure, I could make some grandiose point about the possibility for everyone to get along, the ability of these two children to look past barriers (cultural, age or otherwise) and to become friendly; I could make some point about generosity and kindness and caring for another's feelings. I could echo American Beauty – tell you to take time out of tdo often busy days and "look closer" at some of life's smaller, but more beautiful moments. What struck me though about the two boys and their brief interaction was just the magnitude of the human spirit and its potential for true good.

For once, I was glad that I got stuck in line. When I did finally make it to the register, I triumphantly put my two items down, better for having endured the wait. The cashier asked me if that was all, I paused for a moment and said, "Actually, I think I'll have one of those Cadbury Eggs too."

Adam Martignetti is a Collegian staff member.

Our stifled patients

BILL TARKIN

A body cursed with disease is a relieved body indeed when medicine alleviates the painful symptoms of that disease. The soothing relief offered by narcotics such as the drug marijuana is cherished by miserable patients worldwide.

However, although clinicians, researchers, and pharmacists have long trumpeted the medicinal benefits of marijuana use, the United States federal government has prohibited the sale or possession of cannabis for the past sixty years.

Since 1937, ailing patients – aware of marijuana's healing properties – have been forced to defy the law and scour dangerous underground markets to alleviate the pain of their symptoms. However, the federal judiciary may soon end this hazardous practice by granting individual states the freedom to legalize the sale of medicinal marijuana within their borders.

On Wednesday, the Supreme Court will hear the U.S. Justice Department's [DOJ] appeal of a ruling that would allow California marijuana clubs to resume service for patients who can prove that cannabis is a medical necessity.

In 1996, California became the first state to legalize the use of medicinal marijuana with the passage of Proposition 215. Soon after the proposition became law, clubs such as the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative began offering the drug to needy patients.

However, zealous federal officials, determined to uphold the Drug Enforcement Agency's [DEA] "zero-tolerance" policy toward illegal drugs, attempted to close the California clubs. In 1998, they won an injunction from US District Judge Charles Breyer in San Francisco prohibiting the Oakland group and other similar medicinal marijuana clubs from distributing the drug.

Undeterred by the ruling, the club brought complaint to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, which suggested last year that Breyer should amend the injunction to allow the clubs to resume service for those who can prove that cannabis was a medical necessity.

However, the court's ruling was merely symbolic. Last summer the Supreme Court upheld Breyer's original injunction by a 7-1 vote, pending further review of the case.

If the court reverses its opinion and rules against the DOJ, then states such as California, Hawaii and Maine, whose legislatures have approved laws legalizing medicinal marijuana, may authorize physicians to freely distribute the drug to deserving patients. So far, 26 states and the District of Columbia have existing laws and resolutions establishing therapeutic research programs, allowing doctors to prescribe marijuana or asking the federal government to lift the ban on medical use. In 10 states, similar laws have either been repealed or have expired, while 15 states have never had medicinal marijuana laws.

While the 10th Amendment to the US Constitution delegates to the states powers not explicitly reserved for the federal government, Congress has passed two acts of legislation strictly prohibiting the public consumption of marijuana.

In 1937, the Marijuana Tax Act established federal prohibition of the drug. Although the American Medical Association testified against the Act, realizing that it would ultimately prevent the medicinal use of marijuana, Congress continued to censor its distribution.

The Controlled Substance Act of 1970 established five categories or schedules into which all illicit and prescription drugs are placed. Marijuana is placed in Schedule I, which defines the substance as having a high potential for abuse with no currently accepted medical use in treatment in the United States. Physicians who offer their patients marijuana face penalties by the DEA, including the loss of their federal license to distribute illegal substances.

But despite the drug's prohibition by the federal government, the Massachusetts Joint Committee on Health Care is currently considering legislation that would legalize marijuana use for medicinal purposes on the state level.

On Monday, patients with asthma and multiple sclerosis urged the committee to approve a bill that would legalize the drug for patients who have a doctor's permission. They claimed that marijuana consumption could alleviate the symptoms associated with cancer chemotherapy, AIDS-related wasting, Multiple Sclerosis, Epilepsy, and Glaucoma.

Hopefully, both the Supreme Court and the Massachusetts State Legislature will listen to the pleas of Americans such as those offered on Beacon Hill this past Monday. To prohibit the medical consumption of marijuana encroaches on all three rights ensured by the Declaration of Independence, our nation's founding document.

Instead of catering to the unfounded fears of a few ideological conservatives, the Supreme Court should liberate California, Massachusetts and the rest of states within the union to provide legitimate patients with safely regimented access to the medicine they so desperately require.

After all, as Massachusetts resident Marcy Duda told the committee, "Demerol, Percocet, they made me useless. But after smoking a little pot, I can get up 10 minutes later and function."

If given the possibility, shouldn't all our patients be able to function?

Bill Larkin is a Collegian Columnist.

Hang in there

SIMON PONGRATZ

With the passing of the two-month anniversary of George W. Bush's ascension to the Presidency, it seems adequate to reflect on what has happened up till now. So far, it looks like everything is progressing smoothly for the corporation administration. Bush got whom he wanted on his cabinet, and his plans to ruin the pristine Alaska Wildlife Refuge seem to be moving along without a hitch.

The most distressing decision that Dubya might be allowed to make is one that has thankfully not yet arisen, namely his ability to select the justices of the Supreme Court. The court's regretful election decision to stop the recount (Bush vs. Gore), made all the more suspect by their stipulation that the decision should never be used as a precedent for any other, has shown that the justices are inclined to let their personal feelings get in the way of their ability to be above partisan politics.

In decision after decision, the current Justices have frequently disregarded individual rights, at our expense and as a result eroding our rights. In very extreme cases, such as the recent Indianapolis v. Edmond, the more moderate Justices (liberal is too generous) have, with the support of certain conservatives, allowed common sense to prevail by protecting Constitutional rights. The above case, decided on Dec. 8, 2000, stated that the police practice of randomly setting up road checkpoints to search for drugs is unconstitutional. Even here, Chief Justice Rehnquist and his conservative cronies, Thomas and Scalia, dissented.

As I said, to call any of the current Justices 'liberal' is being generous. Even Clinton appointees Ginsburg and Breyer have shown themselves to be far from the traditions of Thurgood Marshall or William Brennan, as is evident in their defense of capital punishment, restrictions on the use of habeas corpus and the right of parade organizers to exclude gay marchers from Boston's St. Patrick's Day Parade.

While Clinton's appointees have shown themselves to be moderate at best, the Reagan/Bush Justices are anything but. Chief Justice Rehnquist has presided over a court that has "made a series of decisions that weakened Roe v. Wade, brought back the death penalty, reduced the rights of detainees against police powers, prevented doctors in federally supported family planning clinics from giving women information on abortions, and said that poor people could be forced to pay for public education (education was not a "fundamental right")." Perhaps the most conservative of them all, Clarence Thomas, was Bush's replacement for the old, ailing Marshall. With his appointment, the court was made thoroughly conservative.

In the name of law and order, of cleaning up society, Justices Rehnquist, Scalia, and Thomas have consistently voted to expand federal and corporate power at the expense of individuals. This despite the conservative claim that they're for smaller government and individual rights. The above-mentioned Indianapolis v. Edmond is only one example. Others include – Ferguson vs. Charleston, in which they disagreed that hospitals should be barred from secretly giving drug tests to pregnant mothers and then forcing them to go into rehab with the threat of jail time. Circuit City Stores, inc. vs. Adams, in which the three were joined by Justices O'Connor and Kennedy in stating that businesses could force employees to settle disputes by arbitration, effectively eliminating employees' right to sue. Recently, the court decided that businesses are not bound to uphold workplace ergonomics standards.

In the current campaign finance battle, the court has the potential to do all sorts of damage. Conservative lawmakers and pundits are already hoping that they can attach a constitutionality problem to McCain and Finegold's bill with the ridiculous argument that it limits free speech. Far from being an exercise of First Amendment rights, the soft money contributions that the bill hopes to ban or at least limit are simply corporations prostituting their interests. Fortunately in this case, a glance into history shows that the court has not always supported our First Amendment rights, as in the case of Walter Schneck. Schneck was convicted and sentenced to six months in jail for distributing anti-draft leaflets during World War I, calling conscription a violation of the Thirteenth Amendment right against "involuntary servitude." Despite the clear wording of the First Amendment, Schneck's Supreme Court appeal was rejected and he remained in jail. Hopefully, the court will also reject Tom DeLay's argument that the McCain/Finegold bill limits free speech.

Finally, the point. Some have said that as many as five Justices may retire during Bush's tenure. If that happens, he will follow in the footsteps of his father and Ronald Reagan by packing the court with conservative Justices who will rule in the tradition of Rehnquist. Granted, given Bush's pledge to be a uniter, he may attempt to appease those on the Left who will be guarding against such action by nominating a few borderline conservatives. They will, however, be so far from the left so as to make Ginsburg and Breyer look very, very liberal.

This summer, the court is set to hear the case of an Oregon man who was arrested after police, without a search warrant, used a thermal scanner to determine that he was growing Marijuana in his basement. Judging from past decisions, the conservative court's opinion would almost certainly side with police and the state. That's a dangerous precedent. While there is little to no support on today's Court for you or me, common sense occasionally prevails and the moderates make a good decision. Justices like Ginsburg, Brever, and Souter should hold on to their positions for another four years, and hopefully the prodigal son won't be able to fool the electorate and manipulate the Court again in 2004. So hang in there – there's a light at the end of the tunnel... somewhere.

Information from The Twentieth Century by Howard Zinn and Megal.aw.com was used in this column.

Simon Pongratz is a Collegian Columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

TELL ME WHAT YOU NEED SON— WHAT FLOATS YOUR BOAT?
A BOND MAN!
I WANT TO GET OUT OF HERE! PLUS I NEED COUNSEL TO MAKE THESE BOOKS CHARGES GO AWAY!
WELL, SHOULD YOU AGREE TO ATTEND HARVARD, WE NATURALLY WOULD HIRE THE FINEST...
I WANT JOHNNIE COCHRAN.
AND I WANT JULIA ROBERTS WORK WITH ME, SON.
HAVE A NICE SEASON.

Letters to the Editor
Elsberg out of line

To the Editor:

Although it is a nice idea to travel to Israel on your own, many cannot afford all the costs involved. Elsberg is lucky to have the resources to make such a trip. The Birthright program allows low-income Jews, like myself, to see a country that is necessarily tied to my religious identity.

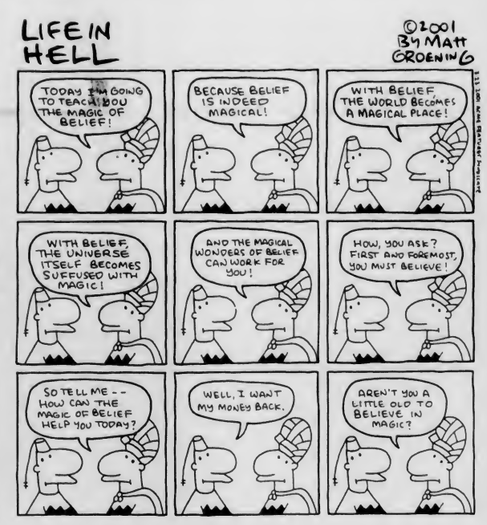
The claim that the ideology behind the Birthright program is racist is completely without justification. There is something very important behind the idea of democratic Jewish state – one of the main purposes behind the formation of Israel is to provide a haven for a people who are themselves subject to racial actions. As a student who had participated in Birthright during January, let me inform you that the principles behind this program is to allow Jewish youth to better understand the history of their people, to learn about their unique religion, and to foster a sense of solidarity. Nowhere is it suggested that Jews have a superior right to Israel than any other. Anyone in this country has nothing to gain from religious affiliation.

All this aside, your bizarre claim that participating in the Birthright program is not merely getting a seat on the bus-it is supporting a system that takes away seats from someone else" is a nonsensical analogy. Let me be the first to assure Elsberg that my acceptance of the Birthright gift is in no way parallel to making Rosa Parks move to the back of the bus. The return of any Jew to Israel is not akin to some act of racial segregation! The statement that the Birthright program "supports an ideology of Jewish ethnic superiority" demonstrates the lack of research and understanding that the author has not only about this program, but about the state of Israel and it's people.

I suggest that you do some research next time. It is important for Journalists to realize that they should not denounce what they do not understand. A good start would be going to the Birthright Israel website, talking to student who participated in this program, or paying attention to the news.

Matt Coler
Senior, Philosophy

LIFE IN HELL ©2001 BY MATT GROENING



TODAY I'M GOING TO TEACH YOU THE MAGIC OF BELIEF!
BECAUSE BELIEF IS INDEED MAGICAL!
WITH BELIEF, THE WORLD BECOMES A MAGICAL PLACE!
WITH BELIEF, THE UNIVERSE ITSELF BECOMES SUFFUSED WITH MAGIC!
AND THE MAGICAL WONDERS OF BELIEF CAN WORK FOR YOU!
HOW, YOU ASK? FIRST AND FOREMOST, YOU MUST BELIEVE!
SO TELL ME -- HOW CAN THE MAGIC OF BELIEF HELP YOU TODAY?
WELL, I WANT MY MONEY BACK.
AREN'T YOU A LITTLE OLD TO BELIEVE IN MAGIC?

The sad state of rote journalism

SAM WILKINSON

The sun's setting quietly, burning the sky. The piece-slice of light that cats like to sleep in during the day is getting smaller and most of the window is already gone black with the missing light. The heated promise is diminished and when the light goes out, I'll short order chef it before I'll write again.

That's my journalism, the world I now see before me, less than a year and a half before I graduate. I took one journalism class during my whole life in this silly business (which is going on five years in collegiate journalism at the end of May) and it didn't enlighten me any more than working here and back home ever did.

Here's what I learned: the boring kids who don't argue in class are the ones who are going to make it somewhere in this great big world of newspaper journalism. The guys and gals who accept mediocrity as acceptable because they're rewarded for their ability to do it are going to be the successful ones.

Journalism classes teach rote repetition. "An _____ (event) happened at _____ (time). At the _____ (event), _____ (some kind of news) happened, shocking _____ (somebody)." Repeat that for forty more lines, eleven more inches or three more columns and I'll make my 24 large for the rest of my life at Hometown Newspaper U.S.A. and somebody will think I'm just the cat's pajamas because I can barf up their news event from the night before. Don't be honest, don't be truthful, don't be sincere, and god forbid it all, don't be critical.

This isn't the life for a critical cat like myself, I can assure you of that.

Yet it's what I'm taught is the paragon to pursue, the ability to blindly and simply repeat what is said in simple words and simple sentences written so that Dad doesn't spit his cereal milk all over whatever publication I'm working for when he reads it in the morning. Cynicism reigns supreme, I suppose, but why is simplistic upchuck considered the industry standard by which all are judged? Let's be honest – that is the standard. What have I learned from my journalistic counterparts who take the classes? That I need to calm down, keep it simple, quit my screaming, stay diverse and above all, don't be critical.

Like some sort of scary mantra – don't be critical, don't be critical, don't be critical – repeated ad nauseum like Nazis at a Hitler speech. Woah, let me stop before the journalism majors, some of whom my close friends, get the wrong idea: those students are going to be the ones who are truly successful. They're going to get somewhere in this world of journalism. They're going to be on your front page.

But they're being taught because their professors have been taught because the editors in this world have been taught to look for something that's easy on the stomach like cold water on a hot day.

This isn't an indictment of those individuals – this is an indictment of our journalistic culture. Objectivity is a possibility (don't tell the left-leaning journalists out there who think it's a ridiculous ideal), but why is it even pursued? It isn't true that it isn't worth a damn thing – those that try their hardest to be the most objective end as the most depressed, on the edge, hard-drinking of all the journalists, if for no other reason because objectivity reveals truths about the news that none of us are allowed to write. Once somebody see all the sides in a given issue, one can see just how much everybody's cheating everybody else.

Personal observation – the SGA isn't a hole in the ground because one side's cheating everybody else, they're a hole in the ground because they'd draw the blade across the throats of anybody to get ahead. That's what I've seen during my time at UMass – I've written ahout it to excess, too. None of you giving a flying hootie hoo about your student government, and everybody in the SGA thinks I hate them. That isn't the point though – the point is that I really could never write that the SGA is a completely self-congratulatory body that frequently shoots itself in the foot because that isn't objective.

In the interests of objectivity, I quit covering the SGA.

There's no point being a news reporter if one can't report on the news, and if nobody wants to comment, there is no news. What sort of ridiculous world is that, oh Lord of Journalism? Is our responsibility to report or is our responsibility to let other people use us to report? I fear the answer that most will give is the latter, thus endorsing what most media critics already say (regardless of where on the spectrum they're coming from) – that journalists are being trained to be nothing more than public relations in a different way.

Sad, sad, sad, so sad it makes a man want to cry.

Just makes me want to quit though, because why should I spend time learning how to do something that will only ever benefit somebody else? There's no satisfaction in journalism anymore – the edgy biting work done by the Hunter Thompsons and the Bob Woodwards? It's over. Now is the time of the precision puke, the skill to simply repeat what happened and get a pat on the back for it. That's too bad really – it sells journalism, as you folks like to say, wicked short of where we could he as an institution. We could report in a critical way, in a critical fashion, in some sort of desperate attempt to seize the muddle ground as a basis for our critique.

But we don't. We just run scared, afraid that we might not be objective enough. The more we fear our objectivity, the more the light bleeds from the room, the more the honesty disappears from our newspapered lives. Without the ability to open newspaper style up, the doors swing slowly shut.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Arts Editor •
David Troupes
collegianarts@yahoo.com

COURTESY NEW WORLD THEATRE

Spring welcomes Caridad

Caridad de la luz will perform in conjunction with New WORLD theatre on April 5th, 2001.

From garage sale to gorgeous

Solutions to transform your furniture finds

by maggie lyons

THIS WEEK'S Something from Nothing: Furniture Fixups

Last week I carted my best friend off to Ohio State for his first term as a transfer student. It was a long and grueling process, including shopping for the bare necessities (fondue pot, useless containers he will never fill, 8 tubes of toothpaste to last him all of three months – you know the deal). Our last challenge was to find a table and chairs to fit in his tiny but pricey studio apartment. An easy task you would think, but in no time we were perusing the last department store, scorched for a soda and cranky as hell from mall mania. As we sauntered towards the car, I suggested thrift shops, knowing he would squeal at the thought of buying something second hand. This way, I argued, he could keep the bank from biting his ankles, find a good quality piece of furniture, and make it look like it was made just for him. With my sharp eye for junk and his high-class style, we could make a celeb-style setting for under fifty bills. And with the secrets I am about to reveal, so can you!

Finders Keepers

Shop every garage sale, house sale, thrift shop, good will outlet and alley you can for cheepies or freebies. Don't be shy about chucking a table or chair that was left in the alley into the back of your truck – one man's trash is another man's treasure. Never forget that. Antique stores are worth a try too – but you might find that prices are higher because you are dealing with professional dealers. If you want to be a real trooper, hit up the alleys and house sales on weekends, before noon, to get to the stash before the whole world does.

Look for wood pieces that are in relatively good condition. What you want to leave behind are flaws in the actual makeup of the piece (broken rungs to a chair, uneven legs of a table) – although some moderate handy work can be done and flaws do add character. Things like ring stains, chips and divots in the wood are okay because you can paint over blemishes of that sort.

When you are shopping, use common sense. Don't buy a table if one leg is attached with duct tape. Don't buy a chair if it looks like your five-year-old sister would bust it if she put her tiny little tushy on it. And never under estimate the power of bargaining. No price is final when you are buying second hand. We don't want to start any fistfights, but it's always worth a try to get something a couple bucks cheaper.

Don't stress yourself out trying to find an entire set that matches. Mismatch is cool – and a lot easier to come by. You might want to keep in mind, however, whether or not the chairs will fit the table and vice versa. You don't want your knees to bang the table every time you sit down, and you don't want to feel like Mickey Mouse eating at Paul Bunyan's dinner table.

Now Work It

Now that you have picked out a couple cool chairs and a sturdy table you can start the masquerade. Keep in mind while you transform your treasures that you are in college. Now is the time to experiment and get funky. You can buy cherry wood armoires and crystal vases when you get married, but for now, when you are young – look it! Flip through magazines for trendy patterns or images and colors that you like together. Clash is good, retro is cool and tacky and trashy are finally IN!! (as long as you don't go to extremes – no mullets necessary)

Note to self: a coat of paint goes a long way. You will be surprised how new something looks with a fresh coat of paint. Pick out colors that you like, be adventurous and risk. When you paint, get a good-sized brush and take the mess outside. Paint does not come off – of anything. Use interior paint, exterior has special chemicals in it to protect against weathering and to seal well. You don't want those in your house. As a rule, always paint the hard parts first (ex. the insides of legs).

After your paint dries, embellish your table and chairs with your own personal style. Cutouts from comic books or magazines can be decoupaged using a foam brush and decoupage medium. Just about anything that can be photocopied can be decoupaged – photos, postcards, picture books, dried flowers or leaves. You can hand paint designs right onto the furniture or cut stencils with an exacto knife out of file folders and sponge paint images all over.

To paint plaid patterns, pick up a couple small sized paint rollers. Then either cut out notches with a utility knife or wrap fat rubber bands around to create sections. Designate a color to each roller (brightest and darkest colors first – let dry for a strict scheme, or keep on rolling and let the colors blend). Roll lines of colors vertically and horizontally across to create a straight shooter plaid.

I could go on forever, but this part is what makes the stuff yours. Be as creative as you can. Do each one differently or match with a common motif. Designate one chair to each roommate and let them go at it. Or, have everyone pick names out of a hat and make chairs for each other. Pick a theme like where you're from, what your major is, what your interests are or what the first letter of your name is. Then when you bring them to the table, everyone is represented, and you have personalized chairs!

Don't forget to keep these for your style file! And keep the emails comin'! I love hearing your ideas, answering your questions, and getting pointers! Write me at Muggo81@aol.com.*

In case you think incest is funny...

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

SAY IT ISN'T SO!
With Chris Klein, Heather Graham, Sally Field and Orlando Jones
Directed by James B. Rogers
Playing at CineMark Theaters in Hadley

The Farrelly Brothers continued their quest to be the worlds most disgusting pair of human beings with the release of Say it Isn't So last Friday. The commonly called "gross-out humor" that the brothers were once so cherished for making fashionable has finally run dry.

Of the millions of problems with Say it Isn't So, it's really hard to choose a good place to begin a critique. Most importantly predominant is the film's extreme inability to produce anything resembling a plausible plot. The film tells the story of Gilly Noble (Chris Klein), a resident of Beaver, Oregon who falls in love with the haircutting beauty Jo Wingfield (Heather Graham). Months after Noble asks Wingfield to be his wife, he finds out that his long lost parents are his future in-laws, making Jo his sister. He later finds out that this was a hoax set up by the stereotypical comedic "bad guy," and must save the day to get his girl back. Only Peter and Bobby Farrelly could come to a considerably sane decision that making a film about incest is not only funny, but also a good idea. Peter and Bobby were wrong.

The disastrous story leaves it desperately sinking to any level for a laugh. Every single gag in the film is more revolting than the next. The cascade of incest jokes simply does not end. Noble is constantly called sick, a pervert, and a sex-offender. His father (who is confined to a wheelchair after suffering a stroke) says, "Hey Gilly, you know what the bible says about [expletive]ing your sister? Don't!" through a voice box.

Sadly, the funniest part about the entire film is listening to Gilly's father, played by Richard Jenkins, try to talk (vulgarly) through his voice box. The Farrelly's have some absurd fascination with the handicapped, constantly using them as a joke. In Dumb and Dumber the lead characters sold a dead bird to a blind kid. In Something About Mary, the mentally challenged were made fun of. In Me, Myself and Irene the lead character had multiple personality disorder. For a while it seems funny, but then the proper consciousness engraves itself in your conscience reminding you that it's not cool to make fun of disabled people.

Somewhere between seeing Chris Klein get his ear cut off, and watching him find his entire arm caught in a cow's ass, a realization sets in that you're not getting your eight bucks back; ever!

The perfect example of its submergence below the gutter is Orlando Jones; that guy on the 7-up commercials. The person who said it was okay for Orlando Jones to make films needs to be deported to a foreign country where video cameras are illegal. You would think after The Replacements, Double Take, and From Dusk Till Dawn 3: The Hangman's Daughter, the supposed professionals in Hollywood would stop paying that guy to grace the silver screen with his breathtaking presence. But they don't. Instead we get Orlando Jones as Dig McCaffey, a professional pilot who is missing both of his legs, and totes around business cards that say, "Dig McCaffey: I'll fly up your ass if the price is right." Ugh!

Somehow, Sally Field ended up among the cast of misfits as Heather Graham's money hungry mother. Field who gave stellar maternal performances in Forrest Gump, and Not Without My Daughter is completely worthless in a role that even she couldn't make enjoyable.

Aside from the awful plot, the acting is so terrible it stimulates tears. Chris Klein has been playing the exact same moronic high school kid in every film he's appeared in for over two years now. It was excellent in Election, it was memorable in American Pie, but including last year's Here on Earth, this is the fourth time he's portrayed the same person. It's no longer enjoyable. He's about one film away from being as over used as Ernest. Get a new act back.

The talent less Heather Graham who consistently decreases the quality of every film she appears in by ten-fold, needs to thank the Gods of good looks, otherwise she'd be unemployed. Though Graham is outstandingly gorgeous in the film, they let her speak. That's what kills her. Her idiotic babbling isn't believable for one second, and it creates a wonder about whether she has the physical capability to read her lines, or if she has to watch seven hours of "Sesame Street" per day to understand the words in the script.

Though the film is an absolute disgrace, it has some laugh out loud scenes. No matter how bad the film, the Farrellys will never fail to deliver at least a few cheap gags, guaranteed to hinder a chuckle. What is apparent is that the Farrellys overused routine has pushed them into the last second of their fifteen minutes of fame. The utterly despicable Say it Isn't So is the final indication that the brothers either have to grow up or go away. It really isn't funny anymore.

Heartbreakers is lighthearted fun

By Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

Heartbreakers
Playing at CineMark 12 in Hadley

When Heartbreakers originally went before a movie studio executive, it couldn't have sounded very promising. The plot revolved around mother and daughter con artists who scammed their way to riches, but end up falling in love with their prey. At the utmost, it resembled a modern, feminized update of the timeless comedy Dirty, Rotten Scoundrels. Yet when Sigourney Weaver, Jennifer Love Hewitt and Gene Hackman attached themselves to the project, it immediately caught Hollywood's attention that this was no film-flam of a film. Each actor targeted a specific demographic, whether its Weaver's middle agers or Hackman's geriatrics. In Hollywood, big names like those more often than not mean big bucks. (Oh, and having Hewitt in it helps box office sales too.)

The story progresses quickly, sometimes too quickly, but keeps a witty and dry comical edge, even though it is sometimes overwhelmed in pure sappy romance. Right away we bear witness to Weaver's character marrying car "salesman" Dean Cummano (Ray Liotta, who despite his strength at comedy is still hard to watch after seeing him in Hannibal).

As the reception ends and the newlyweds rush to their luxurious honeymoon suite to consummate their marriage, there's the understated visual gag of Liotta huffing and puffing, bowlegged, as he carries his bride down a hotel hallway that seems to last forever. Moments later, when Weaver fakes sleeping to avoid the inevitable marital duty, Liotta contemplates pouring the champagne's ice bucket on his bride, but pours it down his own pants instead. But it's when the sexually-frustrated Cummano returns to work that the "con is on," as his secretary, played by Hewitt, gets the groom in a very unfavorable position, only moments later to have Weaver walk in, "I thought I told you to wear the blue dress," mother tells daughter, and, suffice it to say, the ladies make off with a handsome settlement.

It's when they arrive in Palm Beach that Hewitt wants to go out on her own, be a one-woman show, but mother insists they do one more con together, this time on the Big Tobacco curmudgeon William B. Tensy. (Gene Hackman). Hewitt, though, still sets her sites on the unsuspecting lack (Jason Lee of Chasing Amy and Almost Famous), owner of a thriving bar-and-grill. Before long, Hewitt is breaking the con-artist's credo; never fall in love with your con.

Lee is a delightful addition to the film, because much like his View Askew buddies Matt Damon and Ben Affleck, he possesses a great amount of talent. While he does the romantic male lead justice, the overall inclusion of a love story here feels out of place, a con to the audience, if you will. At first what seems like a clever subplot, it escalates into a sappy romance that makes the movie twenty minutes longer than necessary, despite the chemistry that is evident between the talented Lee and the gorgeous Hewitt.

Much more suitable for this film is the fake relationship between Weaver and Hackman. Hackman, who has done comedy before, most recently in The Bird Cage, is a laugh riot here. In one scene, where he and Weaver exchange a kiss, smoke fumes billow from their conjoined mouths. Later, when he arrives at Weaver's hotel room to pop the question, in one fluid movement, he rips away at his clothes, revealing his sagging belly in a white undershirt and his ill-fitting boxer shorts. The character's confidence in his less than enviable physique is a strong indication of Hackman's knack to do a brief vignette effectively. And then there's Hewitt.

Hewitt's inclusion in the movie was a wise one, as she is one of Hollywood's most beautiful assets. As a voluptuous vixen, she fits the role fine. She made the transition from the deceased horror movie genre to the romantic comedy with much more ease than some of her fellow actors did. And while Heartbreakers isn't a suitable test of her acting ability, she performs the role with dedication.

For his second full-length feature, director David Mirkin (Romy & Michele's High School Reunion) does a worthy job. There are moments, though, when the film goes on slightly too long, gets a little too sentimental, and relies on gags seen before. But overall, the ensemble works well together even with the above factors. Weaver, Hewitt and Hackman (and let's not forget Lee) make a terrific team, as it is evident they are all having fun in the roles.

Heartbreakers is a fun and enjoyable movie that neither stoops so low to garner laughs or, much like the female leads in the film, tries to be something it's not. In truth, it's a lighthearted and amusing treat at the movies.

Pollock a true joy

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

POLLOCK
directed by Ed Harris
With Ed Harris, and Marcia Gay Harden
Playing at the Academy of Music, Northampton

There's nothing so mesmerizing as a well-told story, and in recent memory there hasn't been a story told nearly so well as that told by Pollock. Ed Harris stars as Jackson Pollock, the mid-twentieth century abstract impressionist who worked his way to the forefront of modern art while struggling with alcoholism and emotional volatility.

Harris's portrayal of the artist is utterly convincing; the authenticity of the performance is harder to determine, especially for an audience removed by a generation from the man's first celebrity, but in terms of character presentation, emotional intensity and sincerity, and attention to changes in temperament over a matter of years, Harris's performance is faultless. No other role has allowed him an opportunity to work at such a level, such an extension of his abilities, and he simply shines.

Although to say "shines" is perhaps misleading, for Harris's performance does such perfect justice to the fragility of Pollock's life, and the tragedy of his death, that some scenes can be painful to watch. The film is unapologetic of Pollock's character, seeking neither to excuse it nor dismiss it; there is no dissection of his psychology, no attempt made to relate his art to his personal life or to essentialize his work into a form called upon by contemporary art criticism. His story is told, the man made familiar to us, and whatever revelations we choose to take away from that will be ours, not the film's, and that faith in its own solidity is incredibly refreshing.

Thankfully, the film also makes no attempt to educate the audience about modern art – we are presented with enough context to establish that Pollock is rapidly moving beyond his peers in the development of painting away from object-oriented representationism and towards a reflexive commentary on its own creation and the act of internalizing art, but the audience need not know or understand anything of modern art to understand the ferocity with which Pollock approached his own. This is a character-driven story, entirely, and except for the occasional extended shot of a painting, the emphasis is on Pollock himself and the emotional process of creation. A frequently-employed angle has the camera looking up from a canvas spread across the floor, watching Pollock paint toward the lens, and the message is clear; it's not what he was painting, but how and why (although outside of the film, of course, what he was painting was enormously important and influential).

Matching the solidity of Harris's characterization of Pollock is Marcia Gay Harden's portrayal of Lee Krasner, Pollock's wife and an important painter in her own right. Her devotion to Pollock, her faith in him as a revolutionary painter and as a person worth knowing and loving, despite his drinking and (later) infidelity, takes its inevitable toll on her sanity, and her devotion to her own work, and Harden's stellar (and now Oscar-winning) performance relates every last detail of her self-sacrifice.

Pollock's only faults emerge when looked upon not as a narrative, but as a biography/history piece; it makes little mention of Krasner's considerable talent and misapplies certain traits of the supporting characters for the sake of narrative coherence. These sorts of problems are bound to plague any film telling a true story and limited in time and scope by the normal considerations of moviemaking, and in light of all that the film succeeds at they are easily forgiven here.

Ed Harris as the singular Pollock.

COURTESY TAPOUS.COM

Going up.

As you begin your ascent to the top, remember, it's what you learn along the way that counts. At Ernst & Young, you can have endless learning opportunities working with leading companies in leading industries. So when you get to your destination, you'll belong there. Ride with us.

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2001

ey.com/us/careers

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

©2001 Ernst & Young LLP

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Jeff Altieri has provided the Minutemen with some much-needed power at the plate. Despite his efforts the Maroon and White are still off to its slowest start in the recent years.

■ baseball

continued from page 12

team with four homeruns and 16 RBI.

On the mound, Patrick Sperone has set the tone for the Huskies. The junior righthander out of Sicklerville, N.J. holds a 3-1 record and holds a miniscule 3.27 ERA.

The Maroon and White is coming off its best pitching performance of the young season, with senior Nick Skirkanich baffling the Explorer hitters, holding them to four hits and one run over his seven innings of work.

Game time today is set for 3 p.m. in Storrs, Conn. Depending on field conditions at Storrs, the game has a possibility of being played at Norwich University.

Injury bug bites baseball's stars

JUSTIN PEARSON

With the 2001 Major League Baseball season less than a week away it is becoming painfully obvious that many of the games biggest stars will start the season with their names on the disabled list rather than the lineup card.

Heading up this list is a pair of American League East shortstops. New York Yankee Derek Jeter and Nomar Garciaparra of the Boston Red Sox. Jeter has played in just five major league games this spring, picking up only three hits, because of a strained right quadriceps muscle. Despite homering for the Yankees in a minor league game on Tuesday it appears that manager Joe Torre will play it safe and open the defending World Series champions campaign without the influential shortstop. Phenom Alfonso Soriano will likely start the season as the Yankees starting shortstop with veteran Luis Sojo filling in at second.

Suffering from a slightly more serious injury is Garciaparra. Nomar is suffering the after effects of a split wrist tendon caused when he was hit by a pitch by Al Reyes of the Baltimore Orioles back in September of 1999. The injury, which forced Garciaparra to miss Game 1 of the American League Divisional Series against Cleveland in 1999, did not seem to affect him last season as he won his second consecutive AL batting crown with a .372 average. But early in spring training, Garciaparra began to feel renewed pain in his throwing wrist. After weeks of stalling and looking for alternative remedies it appears that surgery will be required, keeping the Red Sox star out for at least the first two months of the season. Manager Jimy Williams is likely to fill the hole left by Garciaparra's absence by platooning Lou Merloni, Mike Lansing and Craig Grebeck or trying to swing a deal for a more capable back up. Garciaparra's surgery is likely to occur next week in either Los Angeles or Boston.

Over in the National League the picture is not much brighter for host of high-priced talent. On the mound the defending East Division champion Atlanta Braves will open the season without starter John Smoltz while Kevin Brown of the Los Angeles Dodgers could have his first start of the season pushed back a couple of days.

Smoltz, the 1996 NL Cy Young Award Winner who missed all of last season due to reconstructive elbow surgery, will miss at least two starts before joining the Atlanta rotation. Left-hander Odalis Perez who also missed all of 2000 following reconstructive elbow surgery will fill his spot in the rotation. With proven winners like Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine and Kevin Millwood healthy and ready to go the Braves hope to limit the damage caused by the loss of Smoltz.

While Atlanta can handle Smoltz's absence, it is unclear whether or not the Dodgers can deal with losing their ace, right-hander Brown. Last week Brown sprained his right Achilles tendon in a game against the Mets and could miss the first couple weeks of the season. He will be reevaluated on Wednesday following a throwing session with an MRI to follow on Friday. These two tests will determine whether it will be Brown or Chan Ho Park who toe the rubber in the Dodgers season opener against Milwaukee on April 2.

Rounding out the big name injuries is Cincinatti Reds center fielder Ken Griffey, Jr. Junior pulled his left hamstring while rounding third base in an exhibition game against the New York Mets in Sarasota, Fla. Griffey, who was carried off the field following the injury, hurt the same muscle last season and did not play after partially tearing it on Sept. 11. While he reported some discomfort in the leg when camp opened last month, Griffey claimed that it had gotten better in the last two weeks.

Whatever happens with these five stars when they get back and how their respective teams play until they get back will go a long way in determining who is in playoff contention come October.

Justin Pearson is a Collegian columnist.

WRITE FOR SPORTS

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
549-RENT
OOPS!
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route)

No more shower sandals
•IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY TO LOOK FOR AN APARTMENT•
Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879
Come check us out at
www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

National buying power means you save more!
SUPER SALE
March 29 Thurs 12-8 | March 30 Fri 9:30-8 | March 31 Sat 9:30-6 | April 1 Sun. 12-5 | April 2 Mon. 9:30-8
Bikes on Sale!
5 days only
Our best deals of the season on Mountain, Road, Hybrid and BMX bikes.
250 Bikes Assembled & Ready to Ride!
Super SAVINGS!
For 4 days only on bikes, pumps, tubes, helmets, gloves, shorts, bags, racks, locks, computers and more...
ALL ON SALE
Trek • Cannondale • Giant and more
BIKES ON SALE
Our best deals of the season on mountain, Road, Hybrid & BMX Bikes
NORTHAMPTON BICYCLE
319 Pleasant St., Northampton
586-3810 • http://www.northamptonbicycle.com

KUSHE-O Benvenuti
Health Reach International
Are you an International student? Did you know ...???
Health Reach International (HRI) is a program to help International students, scholars and their families to stay healthy while facilitating easier access to the health services offered at UMass
We Can Help You By:
• Providing information to help you stay healthy
• Organizing workshops on health related topics
• Answering questions about the services and health insurance available through University Health Services
• Helping you find answers to your health related questions and concerns
• Referring you to the appropriate services or UHS staff that may be appropriate
• Networking and collaborating with other organizations to address the concerns of international students
• Continuously assessing the needs of students and facilitating relevant interventions
If you have any questions, please call us at 577-5168 or visit us during our office hours on Mondays and Tuesdays 3pm-5pm Room #248.
Buwah, Bisyeh | MIRE SE VINI | Bien venidos
स्वागतम Willkonmen Bienvenue

Best! 2000 UMASS
By The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Plan Ahead for Next Year
Excellent Location...1/2 Mile From Umass
Spacious Apartments - 1, 2 and 3 Bedroom Townhouse
All Rents Include Heat, Hot Water and Cooking Gas
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Office Hours: 8 am to 4:30 pm Monday-Friday
(413) 549-0145

Atlantis
Behind Antonio's Pizza In Amherst
NO COVER $2 COVER AFTER 11 PM
WED: Funk, Soul, & Reggae"
FREE Nachos 10-11 pm
THURS: Big Phil - Hip=Hop, R&B
FRI: "House on the Rocks" with DJs Bon Bons & Salty
SAT: Hip-Hop and Reggae with DJ Trendz
"Ladies Night" - Ladies get in FREE
SUN: Open Mic - Open Turntable

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS BOSTON
Travel to Learn this Summer!
These programs provide a dynamic learning experience—a lively blend of classroom and field activities resulting in a true appreciation of the host country.
Field School in Prehistoric Archaeology in Belize
Haiti Today: Culture and Politics
Ireland Today: Politics and Society
Spanish Language and Culture in Mexico
Vietnam Today: Culture, History and Politics
For more information, contact
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Corporate, Continuing, and Distance Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
UMASS BOSTON
call us 617.287.7913
visit us www.conted.umb.edu

LIVE MUSIC
MCMURPHY'S Welcomes
The Guitar Duoes
Every Wednesday
NO COVER!
Positive ID Required

STUDENT TRAVEL
London.....$211
Paris.....$286
Amsterdam.....$273
Tokyo.....$609
student airfares
BEDS ON A BUDGET
rail passes
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

Who is baseball's true founder?

MATT BRADY

This is the first installment of a five-part series entitled, "Magnates of Baseball."

As every baseball fan was taught early in their education of the sport, Abner Doubleday invented the game of baseball in the pastures of Cooperstown, N.Y. in 1839. His name has been etched in the annals of time, and is recognized as the founder of the "national pastime."

Doubleday was a great Civil War general, and was a hero on the battlefield. But his baseball legend is false. The summer that he supposedly invented baseball, he was at West Point, truly. In fact, some doubt that he even had seen a game of organized ball.

The general's legend arose when A.G. Spalding, the sporting goods magnate, sought to find the origin of baseball to prove It was purely American. His search turned up the Doubleday story, which has since proven untrue.

The truth is, baseball was never really invented – it more or less evolved from the British games of cricket and rounders.

But one man did make baseball a purely American game – Alexander Joy Cartwright.

Unlike Doubleday, there is little to no fanfare when and if Cartwright's name comes up. Regardless, it was he who came up with the majority of the rules that still govern the great game today.

While a member of the New York Knickerbockers Baseball Club in 1845, Cartwright developed the major bases of the rules of baseball.

It was he that invented the strikeout. Before his time, batters, or strikers, were allowed as many attempts as they needed to hit the ball. Cartwright gave hiters three strikes in which to hit. He also inserted the rule that if the catcher dropped the third strike, the hitter could run to first base.

The innovator also created the diamond-shaped infield, drew out foul lines and stated that runners were out when they were tagged or "pegged" with the ball.

Suddenly, the games of children were now harder, faster paced and most importantly, more American.

As his newfound game began to catch on, Cartwright made three more lasting contributions to the rules of the game. He first set that the winner was the team to first score 21 aces, or runs – then amended that to the team that was ahead after nine innings. He set the number of men who could play on a side at nine, and placed the bases 90 feet apart.

Cartwright and his Knickerbocker teammates honed their skills on the Elysian Fields across the river from Brooklyn, in Hoboken, N.J. The team held practices twice a week, and by 1846, they were ready to set up an organized game.

On June 19 of that year, the first organized game of baseball was held on the fields of Hoboken, as the Knickerbockers hosted a group of cricketers to play the newfound American game. The cricketers downed the hometown squad 23-1.

But regardless of the result, baseball caught on quickly in New York and teams began springing up across the city. People from all walks of life began to play the game, and every line of work organized their own teams in order to compete with fellow working men.

But Cartwright's mission was not over. Rather than be satisfied with his game's growing popularity, he dedicated his life to making sure that it caught on everywhere. Travelling from state to state, he brought baseball to places all across the country before finally settling for retirement in Hawaii, where he became a merchant.

Throughout the 1850's, the former volunteer fireman saw the game that he shaped become one of the most popular games in American culture. And with the onset of the Civil War, baseball was spread from Blue to Gray, from soldiers to civilians and vice versa. Whenever a group of soldiers had a spare moment, they would doubtlessly try to set up a makeshift baseball field in order to forget the horrors that plagued them in a game of a more serious nature – the war.

In the following years, baseball became big business and the National League was established. By the time Cartwright had passed on in Honolulu in 1892, Cap Anson and Cy Young were staples of the game, known in thousands of households throughout the nation. The boys' game, which Cartwright was instrumental in the development of, had become a national pastime.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY BASEBALL HALL OF FAME

Many baseball historians credit Abner Doubleday as being the founder of baseball, but some feel as though Alexander Joy Cartwright (above) is its father.

Looking to further your education and then get a job that makes a difference in the world?
Visit the UMass School of Public Health and Health Sciences' Exhibit Booth at the 4th Annual Student Poster Session
Learn about the UMass graduate programs in Biostatistics, Epidemiology, Community Health Education, Health Policy and Management, Environmental Health Sciences, Communication Disorders, Exercise Science, Nutrition
Thursday, March 29, 2001
4:00 pm
163 Campus Center
For more information, call Cindy Hardy at 545-1669; chardy@schoolph.umass.edu

CAMPUS SUMMER JOB
FULL-TIME
ROBSHAM VISITORS CENTER
The Robsham Visitors Center has a full time summer job opportunity for an undergraduate student. Minimum qualifications include active status, completed at least two consecutive semesters, knowledgeable about campus programs, services and building locations.
Title: Student Greeter and Information Specialist
Hourly rate: $8 minimum (approx. $3500)
Period: June 4 - August 31
Hours: 9:00am-4:30pm (weekdays)
For further information, call 545-3480 or e-mail helgerson@admin.umass.edu
Resume and interview required

©1999
Is dating part of God's plan for me?
What is Christian dating? How far can I go?
What is the role of parents in dating?
When is dating not appropriate?
Is there an alternative to dating?
What should I look for in a mate?
Does dating help build strong marriages?
So Many Questions . . .
Where Can I find the Answers?
Guarded Hearts Seminar
Friday, March 30. Registration 5:30 PM Session 1@ 6:30 PM. Session 2@ 7:45 P.M.
Saturday, March 31 10:00 AM to Noon, and 2:00 to 6:30 P.M.
Free Vegetarian Lunch Buffet, or bring a sack lunch.
Northampton Seventh-day Adventist Church,
35 N. Main Street, Florence, MA Pastor Gary Wagner, presenter
Free Admission. A freewill offering will be accepted. Bring writing materials.
Sponsored by A.C.T.S.

General Electric
Monster.com
Red Herring
RED HERRING monster.com Work Life Possibilities
Q: What do these companies have in common?
A: Former Collegian Advertisment Managers.
THE COLLEGIAN IS NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
CALL 545-3500 OR STOP BY OUR OFFICE, ROOM 113 IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT, FOR MORE INFORMATION.
APPLICANTION DEADLINE IS MARCH 30TH

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Moving Off Campus? Come to Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center's Apartment Complex Fair on Thursday, April 5 from 10am to 3pm on the Campus Center Concourse.

Are you taking courses in Advertising/Marketing? Check out www.adyourideas.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease starting June 1st. 2 Bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-1988

Apartment Available to take over June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Call 549-9462

Summer Sublet with lease option. Puffton 3 bedroom, 2 bathroom. Renovated + furnished. Central locale. Call 548-3915

2 Bedroom in Brandywine take over lease from June to Sept. $900/month. Call Steve 549-4194

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1,2 and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas heat, hardwood floors. Feb. showings for June and Sept, No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Condos 3 bedrooms. Gas heat, hardwood floors, study area in basement. On bus route. Feb showings for June and Sept. No fees. 253-7879 www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Brandywine Apts. 2 bed. apt. available now. 1&2 bed apts. 1 yr leases beginning June, July, Aug. & Sept. 1/2 mile from campus. Don't miss out! www.brandywine-apts. com or 549-0600.

AUTO FOR SALE

1994 GEO Tracker 4x4 beautiful green color soft top $1995 978-544-3783

1985 BMW 323 I 5spd excellent condition $3500. 549-1155

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise Line entry level positions available. Great benefits. 941-329-6434 www.cruisecareers.com

EMPLOYMENT

Live in Babysitter needed for two girls this summer in Welfleet on Cape Cod. Salary, room, and board. Please call 508-349-6392 (no calls 3/25-4/1)

Counselors Wanted Co-ed Jewish overnight camp in Maine offers competitive salary plus room and board. All positions available! For more information, contact Ava or Meridith at 617-244-5124 or via email at info@kingswood.org

$10/hr GUARANTEED Work on campus F/T or P/T for as little as 5-10 hrs/wk or as many as 40 hrs/ wk. Be your own boss. Create your own schedule. Limited positions. Call 1-800-808-7442 x 80

CAMPUS SUMMER JOB Full-time opportunity, Visitors Center, June-August. Competitive hourly rate. Call 5-3480 for information. See also display ad.

Wanted 24 UMass Underclassmen to take part in 45 minute survey. Also coordinator position. For details call 1-800-573-3309

EMPLOYMENT

Part Time Survey Personnel Needed for PVTA Ridership Study - The Pioneer Valley Planning Commission (PVPC) will be conduction a ridership survey of all PVTA routes in Northampton on April 25 and April 28, 2001. Surveyors will be paid $9.50 to $10.50/hour to distribute/collect survey forms, answer questions, and collect ridership information. All shifts are available. Applications will be accepted until April 9, 2001. For applications call 413-781-6045 or apply in person at PVPC, 26 Central St., West Springfield MA 01089. PVPC is and EOE/AA employer.

Looking for a job in Amherst this summer? Full and part time jobs are available with Summer Conference Housing! Come and get an application and job description at the Conference Services Office, Room 918 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART - TIME Research Interviewers Evening and weekend shifts are available 20hrs/wk minimum. PVTA accessible. Excellent reading and speaking skills required. Some computer experience helpful. $7.50 to start with regular merit raises. For more information contact: Abt Associates, Inc. Paul Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 paul_bebo@abtassoc.com Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

APARTMENT LEASING AGENT Take this opportunity to have fun while earning extra income! Upbeat, friendly personality with good communication skills ideal. Join the staff at 'SUGARLOAF ESTATES', a beautiful 300-unit community located in Sunderland. National Co. will train and offers exc. wages, minimum 15-20hours per week and full time summer employment. To apply contact AMY COTE. 1-800-545-1303 ext. 334 or e-mail resume or letter of interest AMY_COTE@ASPENSQUARE.COM

EMPLOYMENT

WATNED: Native Speakers of American English for listening experiments $8/hr ph545-6837

Summer Jobs & Internships available at resident camp for girls in Connecticut. Lifeguards, counselors, unit directors & horseback riding instructors needed. Call 800-842-1143

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

Brother Wdprocessor used but good. Name your price. 549-6077

HOUSE FOR RENT

5 Bedroom House 2 bathroom, large yard. Min minutes from UMass. 549-4270

HOUSE WANTED

4 to 6 Bedroom house wanted, starting June 1, for rent. Ready to sign lease. Call Shayan @ 413-546-1082 or tom@65190

MISCELLANEOUS

Publish Your Work For $1,295 Textbooks, Novels, and More Call FirstPublish, Inc. at 888-707-7634 Or visit www.firstpublish.com

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in Large 4 bedroom house. Female preferred 549-5975

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Salem Place Private room/bath furnished, bright, spacious. Call 253-5057

TAKE OVER OUR LEASE

2 Bedroom in Brandywine Starting June 1st. Call for info 549-4483

Sunderland. 2bedroom apartment. Avail. June-August, with option for following year. $300+/month per person. Very spacious-great deal! Call Bryan 413-665-7922

TICKETS FOR SALE

2 Insync Tickets Foxboro Stadium. June 1, 413-283-5523

TRAVEL

FLY SUMMER 4 WINTER $$! Europe $298 rt (+tx) Lon, Fra, Mad, Ams, Par, & more. 4STANDBY.COM or call 800-326-2009

NEED TO ADVERTISE?

DON'T HESITATE... CALL NOW!

545-3500

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

WE ADVERTISE TO THOUSAND!!!

WE NO LONGER RUN FYI'S. PLEASE SEND ALL BRIEFS TO JESSICA MAY, 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 - HSCN Bulletin Board
3 - CBS Boston
4 - CBS 4 Boston
5 - ABC-38 Springfield
6 - FBC 57 Springfield
7 - WGBH Boston Channel
8 - UHF-20 Hartford
9 - HSCN Info Slide Channel
10 - NBC-30 New Britain
11 - Fox-61 Hartford
12 - FBC-24 Hartford
13 - NBC-22 Springfield
14 - International Channel
15 - UNIAY (Academic Channel)
16 - WTNH New Haven
17 - UPN
18 - CSPAN2
19 - UNIAY (Academic Channel)
20 - Weather Channel
21 - Guide to Guide
22 - CSpan
23 - CSpan 2
24 - CNN Headline News
25 - Internet
26 - CNN
27 - USA
28 - TBS
29 - TNT
30 - E!
31 - Sci-Fi
32 - Discovery
33 - Nickelodeon
34 - Cartoon Network
35 - Nick at Nite
36 - TV Land
37 - Comedy Central
38 - SNY
39 - Univision
40 - Bloomberg Financial Network
41 - College TV Network
42 - MTV
43 - VH1
44 - The Learning Channel

WEDNESDAY EVENING C - Campus MARCH 28, 2001

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Lost Treasures-Ancient World		Live From Lincoln Center "Puccini's La Boheme From the New York City Opera" (N)				News	Late Show
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Raymond	Best Friends					News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Raymond	Best Friends					News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	My Wife-Kids	Drew Carey	The Job (N)	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Sabrina-Witch	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Jack & Jill "Big Full of Love"		News		Friends	Sudden-Susan
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Exceptions" (In Stereo)		West Wing "Shibboleth"		Law & Order "High & Low"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		7th Heaven (In Stereo)	Street Smarts	Blind Date		Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Jack & Jill "Big Full of Love"		News	Arrest & Trial	Blind Date	Chicago Heart
WVIT	9	10 News	NBC News	Extra (N)		Ed "Exceptions" (In Stereo)		West Wing "Shibboleth"		Law & Order "High & Low"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11 Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	'70s Show		Grounded-Life	Boot Camp (N)	News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	22 News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Exceptions" (In Stereo)		West Wing "Shibboleth"		Law & Order "High & Low"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6 World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Live From Lincoln Center "Puccini's La Boheme From the New York City Opera" (N) (In Stereo)						Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29 News	ABC News	Spin City	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	My Wife-Kids	Drew Carey	The Job (N)	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Frasier	Frasier	7 Days "Kansas" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Ent. Tonight	Arrest & Trial	Seinfeld	Mad Abt. You
WTBS	69	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	War Games (N)				War Games
A&E	43	Night Court	Newsradio	Law & Order "Forgiveness"		Biography: Johnny Cash		American Justice: Murder		Investigative Reports		Law & Order "Girlfriends"
CNN	20	22 Inside Politics	Moneyline Newshour (N)	Crossfire		Wolf Blitzer	The Point	Larry King Live		CNN Tonight	Spin Room	Sports	Moneyline
COM	34	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show		"The Hand in Washington" (1968) (In Stereo) Unrated				South Park	South Park	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	60	Wild Discovery: Weird		Wild Discovery: Life		Treasures of the Earth				Blackbeard's Treasure		Deadline Discovery (N)	Justice Files "Informers"
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		College Basketball Awards (Live)				High School Basketball: McDonald's All-American. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	29	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)						Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33	Direct Effect	Senseless	Celebrity	Cribs	VJ for a Day	TRL (In Stereo)			Say What Karaoke	Fear (In Stereo)	Undressed	TBA
NICK	35	Pinky & Brain	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Brady Bunch	DW. Strokes	Facts of Life	It's Company	It's Company	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	45	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Babylon 5 "Survivors"		Outer Limits "Living Hell"						Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	42	24 Daytona Motorcycle Madness		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Cities on the Sea		Superhuman Body: The Future		Superhuman Body: The Future		Cities on the Sea
TNT	65	ER "Baby Shower" (In Stereo)		Pretender "Someone to Trust"		NBA Basketball: Orlando Magic at Philadelphia 76ers. (In Stereo Live)						NBA Basketball: Kings at Lakers
USA	59	Walker, Texas Ranger "Tribs"		JAG "Dungeree Justice"		Nash Bridges "Hot Prowler"						Martin
HBO	50	(5:15) "In the Mood" (1987)		[illegible] "A Promise to Love Story" (1995) (Alison Sealfon, Kyle		Sex and City		Arliss		Sopranos "Another Toothpick"		On the Record (N)
MAX	60	8:15 "Forbidden Fear of Fire" (1997)		[illegible] "Fire Island" (1995, Comedy)								Passion Cove
SHOW	61	6:15 "Teaching Mrs. Tingle" (1999)		[illegible]						Extras: Spider	Soul Food (In Stereo)	Resurrection	Planet Ab.

Quote of the Day

"It is the unconquerable soul of man, and not the nature of the weapon he uses, that ensures victory"

–General George S. Patton

Amherst Weather

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 43 LOW: 27	HIGH: 54 LOW: 36	HIGH: 45 LOW: 40

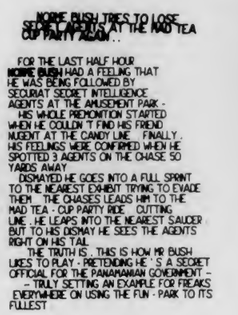
Frosh By Megan Orosz

Dude, Check out the bike on that bus
So? That's no big deal
Most of the PVTA buses can carry bikes.
That's pretty cool I guess.
Too bad that bus doesn't have a bike rack.
Ooooh. Good call dude.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I HOPE SHE'S HOME
BEEP BOOP BEEP
IF YOU'D LIKE TO TAKE ME TO PARIS, PRESS ONE. IF YOU ARE INVITING ME TO A LOUSY MOVIE, PRESS TWO.
I'VE GOT A BAD FEELING ABOUT THIS
BEEP
www.dilbert.com scottadams@aol.com

Jack Dogg By Xavier Rhodes



MORE BUSH TRIES TO LOSE SECRET AGENTS AT THE MAD TEA CUP PARTY AGAIN...
FOR THE LAST HALF HOUR MORE BUSH HAD A FEELING THAT HE WAS BEING FOLLOWED BY SECURITY SECRET INTELLIGENCE AGENTS AT THE AMUSEMENT PARK - HIS WHOLE PREMONITION STARTED WHEN HE COULDN'T FIND HIS FRIEND NUGENT AT THE CANDY LINE. FINALLY, HIS FEELINGS WERE CONFIRMED WHEN HE SPOTTED 3 AGENTS ON THE CHASE, 50 YARDS AWAY. DISMAYED HE GOES INTO A FULL SPRINT TO THE NEAREST EXHIBIT TRYING TO EVADE THEM. THE CHASERS LEADS HIM TO THE MAD TEA - CUP PARTY RIDE. CUTTING LINE, HE LEAPS INTO THE NEAREST SAUCER BUT TO HIS DISMAY HE SEES THE AGENTS RIGHT ON HIS TAIL.
THE TRUTH IS, THIS IS HOW MR BUSH LIKES TO PLAY - PRETENDING HE IS A SECRET OFFICIAL FOR THE PANAMANIAN GOVERNMENT - - TRULY SETTING AN EXAMPLE FOR FREAKS EVERYWHERE ON USING THE FUN - PARK TO ITS FULLEST

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

YOU REALIZE I'M GOING TO DESTROY YOU, EILEEN.
CRUSH YOU. WIPE THE FLOOR WITH YOU.
HA! I WIN AGAIN!
IF YOU BREATHE WORD ONE OF THIS AT SCHOOL.
BEST OF 2037

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

HOW WAS YOUR AFTERNOON OVER AT EILEEN JACOBSON'S?
AWFUL. MISERABLE. AGONIZING.
SHE AND HER STUPID GAMESTATION-2 MADE A FOOL OF ME, MOTHER! I LOST 850 SPACE DUELS IN A ROW! ME?
I'VE NEVER HAD A MORE WRETCHED TIME IN MY WHOLE LIFE.
I'M SORRY TO HEAR THAT.
IS IT OK IF I GO AGAIN TOMORROW?

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 20-April 19) – Now is not the time to do things in a manner that could be misinterpreted. Be straightforward, direct and honest in all your dealings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You know how best to promote yourself at this time, but it may be necessary to take a back seat temporarily. Wait your turn!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You may have to leave a certain part of your past behind today in order to embrace a new opportunity that has come up quite unexpectedly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You may not be as forthright and direct as you are wont to be, but later in the day you'll have a good reason to get more directly involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You're going to have to be more direct and clear with others today in asking for what you want. Keeping things secret can only harm you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Don't waste your time today! Once you get started – as early as possible! – you'll want to keep moving continually until you reach your goal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) –Even the most routine news can affect you in a profound manner today. It's all in the way you look at the world around you. Open your eyes!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Expect the unexpected today – at least during afternoon hours when your ability to second-guess those around you in at a low point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Reconsider your current motives and you'll discover that something has been missing for some time. Today, you can fill in the blanks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – This is a good day for you to conduct a test of your own emotions. You are likely to discover that you're ready to take that leap.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may have to work harder today to understand both friends and family members. The fact is that you may be a little out of touch right now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – One particular issue may demand a special forum today – and you are likely to be the one responsible for getting all parties together at once.

MONKEY-BOX BY PHIL J

FOR THIRTY DAYS AND THIRTY NIGHTS PHIL WAITED. IT WAS A STUPID IDEA BECAUSE WOLVES CAME AND ATE HIM.

© 2001 www.monkey-box.net

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY

Great Beer Great Food Great Service

Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.

Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!

Thurs. Flying Lessons Funky Groove Rock $2 cover

Sat. Mentos & the New Horizon Reggae $3 cover

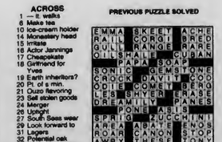
Sun. Funk and Monk Jam no Cover

94 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst 413-253-4400

WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM

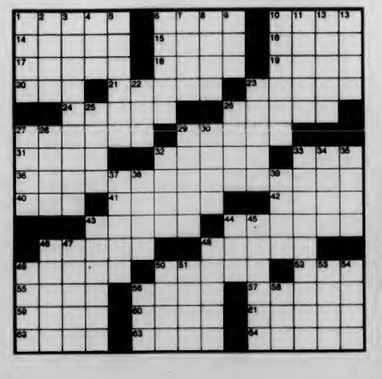
ACROSS
1 — B. walks
6 Make ten
10 Ice-cream holder
14 Monastery head
15 Irritate
16 Actor Jennings
17 Chesapeake
18 Girlfriend for Yves
19 Earth inheritors?
20 Pi of a min.
21 Ouzo flavoring
23 Sell stolen goods
24 Merger
26 Uptight
27 South Seas wear
29 Look forward to
31 Lagers
32 Potential oak
33 Kind of neckline
36 Aloof refusal to speak
40 Hog's home
41 Soma reeds
42 Egress
43 Pronounces indistinctly
44 Fleet
46 Jewelry fastener
48 Move quickly
49 Plunder
50 Goodbye, in Cannes
52 Bartender's supply
55 Really soothing
57 Degree holder
58 Light parody
59 Berry spreads
60 Polar state
61 Spew
62 Maj.'s helper
63 Pond denizen
64 Portions of medicine

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED



1-12-01 © 2001 Universal Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Smoked meats
2 NYC theater award
3 Vaguely
4 Enemy
5 Back problem
6 Gray matter
7 Blonde's problem
8 Peace Nobelist Wiesel
9 Tire
10 Construction material
11 Portents
12 Reunion attendee
13 Ms. Sommer
22 Egg drink
23 Boxing rules
25 Face part
26 Fictional plantation
27 Get smart with
28 Got down
29 Country measures
30 Adversities
32 Pitch
33 Misery
34 Geraint's love
35 Ms. Kett of old comics
37 Loud
38 Range city
39 Written reminder
43 Least prompt
44 Fighter pilot
45 Woke up
46 Soft drinks
47 Weaving machines
48 One — partial
49 — California
50 Cartoonist Peter
51 Statistics
53 Hold one's own
54 Newts
56 B-movie pistol
58 In favor of



Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Teriyaki Beef

Southern 6-Bean Stew (vegan) (B, H, W)

Tofu with Snow Peas (vegan)

DINNER

Fried Shrimp

Native American Stew (vegan) (B, H, W)

Ratatouille Polenta Pie (vegan)

Editors' Staff

Night Editor — Bryan Smith
Photo Technician — Scott Eldridge
Copy Editor — Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor — Kara Stokes
Production Staff — Alan Basque, Augusto Landaura

Inside: Injuries plague baseball's marquee players

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Wednesday, March 28, 2001 | 12

Sports Editor •
Bryan Smith
collegian_sports@yahoo.com

Sortino notches milestone win

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Assistant coach Danielle Henderson (left) was in integral part of the successes of Elaine Sortino. In her four years as a MinutewomanHenderson picked up 108 of the 22-year head coaches victories on the mound..

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

Sortino reflects on 700th

When one thinks of Massachusetts softball, the first person that comes to mind is coach Elaine Sortino. The name is permanently linked with the excellent softball tradition in Amherst.

With all the milestones that UMass softball has achieved in the past, their coach can now add one to her list.

On March 24, in her 22-year at the University, the UMass skipper achieved the inevitable. With a 14-6 win in the first game of a doubleheader over Atlantic 10 foe, La Salle, Sortino captured the 700th victory of her career.

"It's very special to me," Sortino said after her team swept three games over the Explorers this past weekend.

With a clean three game sweep, Sortino now owns 702 of the 768 wins in UMass softball history.

"The thing that is most important is the kids you share it with," she said. "That's what it's all about, not some number."

While Sortino was modest when reflecting on the amazing achievement she has made, her players were extremely excited for their head coach.

"I'm so happy because she puts in so much time, effort and focus than anyone I have seen," junior pitcher Jen Hadley said. "We are all so proud to be on the team that got her the win."

Sortino was very happy that this team was able to get her the win as well.

"I love this team and I'm very glad that they were apart of it," she said.

A team member that Sortino was happy to experience the milestone with is assistant coach Danielle Henderson.

Henderson, the best softball player and arguably the greatest athlete ever come through the Amherst campus, played four amazing years for Sortino.

While pitching on the mound for four years, the 2000 Olympic Gold Medal-winner compiled 108 wins for Sortino. Who knows when Sortino would have gotten her 700th, if Henderson had not been around?

***

A-10 nods go to junior tandem

Yesterday, the A-10 office announced that the junior tandem of Ashley Bakken and Jen Hadley received A-10 Player of the Week and Pitcher of the Week honors, respectively.

Second baseman, Bakken went 6-9 over the weekend and came up a home run shy of hitting for the cycle in the first game against La Salle. Bakken has showed consistency all season long – compiling a .302 batting average this season.

Hadley, who has been having a productive all year but has not seen the results, improved her record to 5-5 when she shutout the Explorers in the third game. She came close to getting a perfect game but it was broken up with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Hadley was made aware of the award by the Collegian and she was incredibly surprised.

"Oh wow that's awesome. I did not even know," said an in shock Hadley. "It's my first time and nobody told me."

Hadley has a 3.72 ERA this season – however she has faced some very tough opponents.

"We were playing Top-10 teams and my pitching has not been up to par," Hadley said.

A native of ESPN SportsCenter home, Bristol Conn., Hadley has tried to take on a new approach to her pitching after the slow start.

"My coach thinks I'm too nice of a pitcher," she said. "I need to attack the batters and be more mentally tough.

"I am starting to move the ball more in the strike zone and throw a little harder," she added.

***

Looking ahead

After a 7-9 start, the team has gradually picked up its play in recent weeks. The Minutewomen get a chance to show the home fans this week how good they are, as they take their 14-9 record into a double header with the Vermont on Thursday. Following the two games with the Catamounts, UMass will play three games against A-10 rival St. Josephs this weekend. The Minutewomen have beaten the likes of Wisconsin, Michigan, Maryland and rival UConn in the past few games, so the team comes with high confidence.

"We would love the support of our fans," Hadley said. "The games are more exciting when our fans are there to watch it."

Vermont has had a mediocre season thus far compiling, a 5-8 record and a more disappointing 0-3 in the America East. UMass should have an advantage over UVM, considering they have played some stronger opponents this season.

The weather forecast for Thursday's game is right now set for 48 degrees with a chance of rain. UMass has been playing in sunny states so far this season – however the team feels that the weather will not be a factor.

"We are used to the weather," Hadley said. "Like Elaine says, 'we need not to think about the weather, we need to focus on the task at hand – winning the game.'"

Struggling UMass to battle rival Huskies

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

Red Sox and Yankees. Bruins and Canadiens. For students at the University of Massachusetts, the next logical progression is certainly UMass and UConn.

Today, the baseball team (3-8, 2-1 Atlantic 10) faces off against the hated Huskies. The arch-rivals stand at 6-13, but have won three of their last four and have been playing games for two weeks longer than the Maroon and White, and could pose a challenge to a Minuteman team that has only been playing outdoors for about a month.

"It's pretty big," first baseman Jeff Altieri said. "I'm only a sophomore, and I already can tell how big the rivalry is. Last year, it was a pretty intense game. I would guess it would be that way this year too. We're all pumped up for it."

The Minutemen have been playing well despite their 3-8 record, taking two of three from A-10 member LaSalle last weekend. UMass lost a heartbreaker to the Explorers in the first game of the weekend, 9-8, before turning up the heat in dropping LaSalle by a combined score of 25-9.

Altieri led the way for the Maroon and White on the weekend, going 6-for-10 with three doubles, a homerun and eight runs scored. Gavin Clark added two longballs in the LaSalle series.

"We've developed a lot more this past weekend than when we went Oklahoma," Altieri added. "It was tough for us to go down there and play them having not played on a field yet. Since then, we've played really well, especially against LaSalle. We're playing much more as a team than when we started."

The Minutemen had their first home game of the season cancelled yesterday, when they had been slated to face off against the University of Hartford. The game will be made up on May 7.

"It's definitely disappointing [having our first home game cancelled] because we've played all of our games away, but we expected we wouldn't be able to play," Altieri said. "It's really going to be nice when we play our first game at home."

The Minutemen had some trouble earlier in the season finding the chemistry on the diamond that their opponents possessed, mainly because of their relative youth. UMass and UConn are both relatively young teams, sporting only six and five seniors, respectively.

"We're fairly young, with most of us being juniors and sophomores," said Altieri, who is coming off a freshman season in which he hit .308 with three homeruns. "A lot of us have played together, though, so I think it's definitely coming together really well for us and we're going to have a good season."

The Huskies are led on offense by junior speedsters Mike Scott and Ion Gorrie and by slugging, junior outfielder Cy Hess. Scott is hitting .378 with three steals, while Gorrie, a product of Northboro Mass., is swatting the ball at a .371 clip with six swipes. Hess, on the other hand, is only hitting .246 for the season, but leads the

Turn to BASEBALL, page 8

Women's lax hopes home turf spells 'W'

By Justin Pearson
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's lacrosse team will unexpectedly hold its home opener tomorrow when it takes on the University of Vermont at Garber Field. The game was originally scheduled to be played at Centennial Field on the campus of UVM but was switched to Amherst yesterday due to adverse weather conditions in Burlington, Vt.

For the Minutewomen, the change of venue will be greeted with open arms. After starting the season winless in its first four contests, all of which were played on the road, the Maroon and White will be looking for their own home field advantage to knock off the visiting Catamounts.

In order to pick up their first win of the season the Minutewomen will need to get strong play from their two goalies, senior Jen Nardi and sophomore Cyndi Doyle. Nardi saw her first action of the season on Saturday at Syracuse after recovering from off-season shoulder surgery. She played 30 minutes against the Orangewomen making five saves on 11 shots.

"Jen's still recovering and we just have to be cautious," said UMass coach Phil Barnes. "It was good to get her some playing time and see some shots [against Syracuse] but we have to be cautious.

In Nardi's absence Doyle has filled in admirably for the Maroon and White. The Vermont native comes into today's contest averaging 11 saves per game with a .343 save percentage.

At the other end of the field the Minutewomen will look to senior Rachel Ingraffea to continue her recent form. Over Spring Break, Ingraffea tallied a hat trick against both Syracuse and the University of New Hampshire to push her team-leading goal tally to eight. Ingraffea has already eclipsed her previous season best goal scoring mark of seven, set last season.

"Rachel has been playing some fantastic lacrosse," said Barnes. "This is the best I've ever seen her play at UMass, she's really been on top of her game."

Along with Ingraffea, the Minutewomen will look to senior Fay Naber and sophomore Lydia Robinson to provide the scoring. The pair rank second and third respectively on the team in scoring despite scoring just one goal between them over Break. If UMass is to stand any chance of defeating the Catamounts this afternoon these two will need to step up and perform.

If recent history is any indicator than the Minutewomen will have little trouble in dispatching UVM. Two years ago UMass cruised to a 16-2 victory and then went one better last season with a 17-2 demolition of the Catamounts at Garber Field.

However, Vermont has one thing that the Minutewomen do not this season, a victory. After dropping their first two contests of the season by a combined score of 34-7, the Catamounts rebounded to beat Central Connecticut 13-12 in three overtimes on Sunday for their first win of the season. Courtney LaMere scored seven of Vermont's 13 goals and added an assist in the victory.

While the Catamounts have struggled against weaker teams like Holy Cross and Fairfield this season, the Minutewomen have been taking on some of the best teams in America. Two of UMass' four defeats this season came at the hands of nationally ranked teams. While these matches have not yet yielded any victories, Coach Barnes believes that these games will pay off for the Minutewomen as the season goes on.

"The experiences that we've gained from playing some of the best teams in the nation will contribute to our success tomorrow and this season. We're getting better; our transition game has improved dramatically, we just need to take more shots."

The final key to victory for UMass will be to get ahead early and hold that lead. In each of their last three, the Minutewomen have fallen behind early and been unable to dig out of that hole. If the Maroon and White can make the Catamounts play catch up as opposed to having to do so themselves, the possibility for a happy home debut is increased.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior captain Fay Naber and the women's lacrosse team will look to earn its first win of the season this afternoon at Richard F. Garber Field when it goes to battle with the Catamounts of Vermont.

Turn to arts and sink your teeth into our special feature on Jane Austen film adaptations. ARTS p. 5

The Massachusetts Daily
COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 104 | www.dailycollegian.com | Thursday, March 29, 2001

The Men's lacrosse team looks to defeat number 15 Penn State at Garber Field on Saturday. SPORTS p. 14

String of auto thefts keep police busy

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

A string of auto thefts left their mark on a series of student cars on Monday and kept the University of Massachusetts Police Department thoroughly busy for the beginning of the week.

The first incident occurred in Lot 11 when two vehicles were broken into at 1:12 a.m. The passenger side window was found broken in one car but nothing was removed from the vehicle. The other car experienced damage to the driver's side window and the stereo faceplate was removed. There are no suspects in either case.

Shortly after at 8:18 a.m. on the same day, another vehicle was broken into in lot 11 and another window was smashed. The stereo within the car was stolen as well as an am/fm stereo player.

Twenty minutes later a forth car was robbed in lot 22 and a stereo was stolen from that vehicle.

"These cases are still open. When you see something with a similar mo like a string of smashed windows you have a tendency to think that it is the same person or group of people," Jim Lyons spokesman for the UMPD explained. "But, until you can compile more evidence you cannot say for sure if these cases are connected.

Also on Monday, 20-year-old Yones Rahmati of Holyoke was arrested in Crabtree Dormitory. He had a restraining order taken out on him that demanded that he stay away from campus, so when he was spotted he was immediately arrested.

An officer discovered a counterfeit ten-dollar bill in the parking lot outside of Dickinson Hall. The officer noted that the money looked suspicious and took it to a bank to be looked into. The counterfeit money will be sent to the Secret Service and destroyed. There is no way of telling whether or not this money was part of a larger batch of counterfeit bills.

There was a report of property damage when a dump truck and a van collided on Governors Dr. there were no reports of any injuries. The physical plant was called in to clean up both glass and anti-freeze that spilled at the accident scene. One of the vehicles was towed due to extensive damage.

An employee in the Campus Center called the police on March 20 to report that she had experienced harassment from someone that worked in Morill. It was later determined that the individual was "blowing kisses" at the Campus Center worker. The incident is still under investigation.

There was a verbal altercation that occurred between two employees in Lederle Research Low rise when one individual reported being threatened by another individual. The incident was referred to the management.

Officers were called to the Campus Center Parking Garage after an individual refused to pay his parking charges. Police explained to the individual that he could not remove his car from the garage if his charges were not paid and the matter was resolved.

The department received a call from a concerned parent on Monday who was worried because her daughter did not return home from a scheduled trip. Police located the woman in Northampton.

Big candidate--little chance

By Jaret Barr and Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

JARET BARR/COLLEGIAN

"Big" Tony Witman has an esoteric taste for campaign posters.

Sitting at a table in Worcester dining hall, Anthony "Big Tony" Witman sees the long road ahead. He's eating a gravy covered steak, and there's a red-haired man sitting behind him with beady eyes, looking over Tony's shoulder as he mixes bizarre campaign promises with genuine reflection.

"They don't take me serious," he says.

But a serious candidate for Student Government President he is. In dirty jeans, thick gloves and an white apron, "Big" Tony will tell anyone who comes his way what he wants.

"I want to be SGA President. I want to make a difference to the students."

While candidates are pounding the pavement looking to secure last minute votes, handing out chop-chops (those little pieces of paper that collect around the bottoms of dining hall tables), "Big" Tony is washing dishes in Worcester Dining Hall. He worries not about what message the others have, or what anyone before him has done; he only worries about the future...the future of the University of Massachusetts and its students.

"I am the working man. I am every student. I am willing to die for the sins of the UMass students." He says these things with a slim grin, half-seriously, as if he knows how ridiculous his Christ-like comparison is. But it doesn't stop him. "I think the SGA is an illusion of democracy and if once elected I find out that they want to bicker, and waste the students time and money, I will abolish the SGA."

The grin is gone – replaced by a devilish look – and his threat seems genuine. But then he speaks of tearing into the walls to find the cameras again, and the microchips, and he laughs. That is one of the reasons that current SGA members don't take him seriously.

"(I) feel it makes more of a mockery of the SGA," said Associate Speaker of the Senate Michael McCarthy. "It overshadows the people trying to do good for the students."

This is an oft-repeated argument about Witman's campaign. Members of the SGA seem angered that someone would attempt to make a mockery of an organization that at least one other set of candidates, John Sheehan and Jon Laubinger, has admitted was as much.

But to SGA Speaker Jim Eltringham, grizzled from a year in which he was asked to step down for the same reason that Tony sees as the SGA's problem (internal politics), a candidate like Tony is both expected and disheartening.

"It's cyclical," Eltringham says, mailing tubes in hand, phone ringing in his pocket. He's campaigning for Kerry Mulcahy and Jeff "Buzz" Bazydlo. They're looking to him for his expertise in campus elections.

"This happens from year to year. A few years ago, somebody campaigned in a Humvee with a loud stereo. He finished five out of six," Eltringham said. "My first year running, there were 10 candidates for the Presidency."

Eltringham said that "turmoil follows calm following turmoil," describing the SGA as being like every RSO for that very nature. For Eltringham, student government lives on. Well, in its own way. He doesn't say it, but through it all, he maintains a hope for the student government if not for his personal legacy. Which is why, while he admits that if Tony is elected the SGA will have to take a serious look at itself, he is at the same time disheartened by the candidacy.

"To have someone not take this seriously takes away from the whole election process...no one knows what he is truly about." But Eltringham seems confused, like he doesn't know what's happening in campus politics anymore, and he later expresses grave concern that early rumors have his candidates getting crushed in voting. He can't understand why; his candidates, traditional as they might be, have good plans and good ideas. What does Tony have?

To understand what exactly "Big Tony" is about, one must talk to him. It is only then that you can see the proverbial method behind his madness. The madness that led Tony to claim that the IRI is implanting chips into student bodies, a claim that led observers to believe he is wasting student time.

"His comments were completely unnecessary and uncalled for," said WMLA SGA Correspondent, and debate panelist Aubrey Vachon.

"Big" Tony pauses when asked about that. "I am not wasting anybody's time. I am running for President because I am sick and tired of the bickering, that the SGA doesn't do anything for any of us. They just like to listen to themselves speak." Its that kind of rhetoric that has won "Big Tony" a growing group of supporters.

"Big Tony's" supporters were out in force yesterday. One of Tony's campaign workers climbed on top of the Worcester Dining Hall and yelled support for his candidate. They put up their signs; they pulled down their pants. The WWII style propaganda posters are up with messages like "Big Tony wants you" and "Elect a president that won't eat your baby." It's all part of his platform, a platform that Tony takes seriously. The message, to them, is secondary. They have strange takes on popular issues, like the idea that Parking Services is not evil, just misguided, and what they really need is for the students to simply "love them."

Justin Cardullo, a seasoned SGA veteran eating quietly beside Tony, looks up. He's Tony's campaign manager. Tony claims to have more than 10 of them, saying anybody who works for his campaign is a manager. Cardullo's quiet.

"This isn't about the SGA. This is about the student body of UMass; it's about taking a public office and representing a constituency," Cardullo says. A man in a black t-shirt comes up behind the two and says that he brought in his votes. Then he starts talking about the "men in the black coats."

"Big" Tony laughs with a laugh. He knows this isn't what will get him elected, and isn't making him friends in the SGA.

"He makes me laugh," Laura Prickett, candidate for Student Trustee told the Collegian. "I think he should be the advisor of humor on campus."

But "Big" Tony shrugs it off. "I'm running to win."

Fellow candidate Jeff "Buzz" Bazydlo is troubled by some of Tony's methods. "I think we should all be following the same rules, and we aren't. He thinks what he says is funny. Amusing, yes, somewhat, but not a necessity. It doesn't legitimize his campaign."

Bazydlo is referring to alleged improprieties in the Tony campaign. He supposedly didn't get his eclectic collection of posters approved (although Chancellor of Election Sam Blaziak claims that few candidates did) and his supporters have been accused of committing any number of election no-no's. Not only was it inappropriate for his supporter to be on the roof of Worcester (he was closer to the voting booth than the required 50 feet) but one of his people ran into the Presidential Debate and interrupted.

"They're small violations and they shouldn't stop the elections," Blaziak said. "And anyway, nobody's filed a single formal complaint."

But he stops. The rail-thin Louisiana native later admits that if there were a complaint, he doesn't know if an elected Tony would survive it. He won't speculate though and mentions that, from what he's heard, not many are afraid of Tony's campaign.

Yet Bazydlo's concerned voice echoes: "I think we should all be following the same rules." Without saying it, there seems to be a feeling that Tony's rule-breaking is non-traditional, that he's violating unstated rules he didn't agree to in the first place.

A traditional campaign is not something anything should expect to see from "Big" Tony

Turn to "BIG" TONY, page 3

MassPIRG's clear principles continue

By Jennifer Eastwood
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) is a grassroots organization that conducts research, provides education, and politically lobbies for environmental and health issues that affect United States residents, particularly those in Massachusetts. Recently, funding sources for the University of Massachusetts' branch have come under scrutiny as students finish voting in today's Student Government Association (SGA) election.

Students in the Five College area originally founded MassPIRG in 1972. Since then, the UMass chapter has remained the largest branch out of the 26 participating schools across the state.

According to Sophomore Bill Powers, a psychology major and one of the five Board Representatives from UMass on the MassPIRG State Board, colleges students were concerned with the amount of input they had in their communities, leading them to develop a public interest group that would address student's concerns.

"Our environment is being degraded, consumers get ripped-off, and our government is unresponsive to ordinary citizens. MassPIRG has been successful in addressing these problems," read the official website for the university's MassPIRG chapter.

Powers cited MassPIRG's national campaign of last semester as a prime example of what the group is capable of accomplishing, noting that with the help of roughly twenty other state PIRG's they were able to protect 58.5 million acres of National Forests.

> "Our environment is being degraded, consumers get ripped-off, and our government is unresponsive to ordinary citizens."

The group gathered public support comments and lobbied local politicians, urging them to support laws that would keep companies from clear-cutting the nation's forests.

"Eventually, at the end of the term, President Clinton signed an executive order to protect the forest, which is now unfortunately being threatened with the current administration," Powers said. "That was our last national victory."

He also pointed out the MassPIRG was responsible for statewide acts as well, adding that their group helped in passing the Children and Family Protection Act of 2000 and the Bottle Bill of 1982.

"The Children and Family Protection Act banned pesticides that were proven harmful [to humans] from being used in schools," commented Powers. "It also made it the law to let people know when schools were being sprayed with pesticides."

MassPIRG gathered over 120,000 signatures of those in favor of such an act, thus pressuring state legislation to take action.

Using similar tactics during the inception of the Bottle Bill, Mass PIRG looked at the legislation as a great break through in protecting the environment. The hill was responsible for creating the five-cent deposit to those who return recyclable bottles in Massachusetts, thus enticing more people to recycle.

"Interestingly, before the [Bottle] bill was passed, a mandatory fee funded MassPIRG," Powers explained, "Six hours after this hill was passed, the legislation made the mandatory fee illegal, and that is why we use the waivable fee now."

Currently, because of this waivable fee, members of MassPIRG have turned their attentions towards campaigning during the current SGA election.

Every two years, students are asked to vote on a referendum question on whether or not they agree with having a $7.00 waivable fee appear on their tuition bill. According to MassPIRG officials, all of the group's funding derives from this fee because of current SGA rules.

MassPIRG is a Registered Student Organization (RSO), and SGA usually provides a certain amount of funding to all RSOs. However, SGA cannot distribute funding to any RSO that participates in political lobbying, which MassPIRG does. This leaves the $7.00 fee as their only income.

"The question we get a lot is why do we put ourselves out every two years to be attacked,"

Turn to MASSPIRG, page 2

■ MassPIRG

continued from page 1

Powers stated. "The answer is because it is a reaffirmation vote. It's the democratic way to show we're a public interest group."

He added that the last semester MassPIRG's waivable fee was up for a vote, about 2,500 students voted in the SGA election. This was about a 1,000 more students than on years when it was not. Furthermore, in the past an average of 80% of those students voted to keep the fee option.

"This shows that students on campus do support us, and our student opposition is always the vocal minority," remarked Powers.

A vote to get rid of the optional fee would disable MassPIRG altogether. MassPIRG members agree that those who would not support the waivable fee would most likely not support MassPIRG's issues.

Sophomore Laura Kyser, journalism major and a MassPIRG Board Representative, noted, "I totally respect it they [those opposed to keeping the waivable fee] don't agree with us, but I don't understand why they'd want to get rid of a student organization."

She also pointed out her confusion as to why students would have a problem with a fee that is optional. "If you don't want to pay it, you don't have to," she said.

In addition to making signs, phone banking, and getting student signatures on petitions in order to spread their message about the referendum question, MassPIRG students run five campaigns.

The first campaign takes place on a national scale. MassPIRG members ask students to join in a labor and investment boycott of the British Petroleum (BP) Company called the Eagle Pledge.

Freshman pre-psychology major, Adrienne Girard, told how this campaign is run to keep BP from drilling in the Artic National Refuge, located on the north coast of Alaska.

This multi-million acre area is home to rare porcupine caribou and musk oxen, is where birds from all over the continent migrate, and is the only place in the United Sates where Polar Bears live.

"If that's not reason enough not to drill or make oil lines there," Powers added, "it's also home to the Gwich'in, an indigenous people who have lived in that area for over 20,000 years."

MassPIRG hopes that this labor boycott will place enough pressure on BP, so they will not drill on that land. Their goal is to get 4000 Eagle Pledges by the end of the semester.

Girard also related this topic back to those students against keeping MassPIRG's waivable fee. Signs placed around the campus said voting to keep MassPIRG's waivable fee option would result in higher gas prices in the state.

"They [those making the signs] think by stopping drilling in the Artic National Refuge, oil prices will rise even higher," she said, "but according to a national survey, there's only 6 months worth of fuel in that area anyway."

Sophomore Jesse DeAngelis, a history major, explained some people fear our nation's security when it comes to oil.

"They don't want to get oil from other countries," he said. However, because the oil supply in Alaska is so small, DeAngelis argued that the US would end up going to other countries for their oil in the end anyway.

Powers said only BP would profit from the drilling, adding, "People think this is a quick fix to the problem, and it's really not. It's just an empty promise, instead of coming up with a real solution, like using less oil everyday."

The second campaign is geared towards making the UMass campus more energy efficient.

Acting as the Coordinator of the Energy Efficiency Campaign, Powers asked students to think of the windows in their dorms.

"People open them in the winter because it's so hot in their rooms, but that's a waste of energy," he said, arguing if buildings were made more energy efficient, the dorm rooms would not become so stuffy, and students would not allow energy to escape.

The national Environmental Protection Agency has created a set of national standards to follow to obtain energy efficiency called Energy Starr. Powers indicated hundreds of colleges have already begun to use this standard. MassPIRG's current goal is to get UMass to use Energy Starr's standards as well.

"When old buildings are renovated or new buildings built, these standards should be used," Powers commented, "It's a process over time."

A few weeks ago, SGA passed a resolution (the group's official opinion on matters at UMass) in support of this idea.

"Basically we've been stalled on this work because of elections," Powers said, "After [the elections], we're going to take steps to see how much money it will take to convert and how much the university would save in the long run."

In the third campaign, MassPIRG works nationally with other student campaigns against hunger and homelessness. DeAngelis explained about the Annual Hunger Cleanup, which will be held on April 7th in Amherst Center.

"We hope to raise $3000 for local organizations, like food shelters," DeAngelis said.

Students will obtain sponsors and then do community service for a few hours, such as repairing a school playground or floor in a battered women's shelter.

"We're also going into high schools to talk to kids on how one can become homeless; it's not just lazy people," DeAngelis commented, "We're creating awareness with community service."

He also told how MassPIRG members lobby local legislators to bring attention to the problem of homelessness and the fact that legal immigrants residing in Massachusetts are not eligible for food stamps.

Commenting on MassPIRG's fourth campaign, Alex Gould began, "We spend more money on health care in US than any other country, yet there are millions who don't have health care."

To be exact, the US is globally ranked 37th in health care quality, even with all the money spent on current programs.

"We have the most inefficient health care system," Gould continued. "Our [MassPIRG's] long-term goal is to have health care guaranteed to people from birth to death."

He explained how the numbers of accountants in insurance companies have increased over the years to where there are ten times more of them than registered nurses. Moreover, the leading cause of bankruptcy in US is paying for health care needs.

"We're fighting for health care money funded by tobacco settlements for patients," Gould stated.

Working as the Health Care Coordinator, Kyser reported that using the money from the taxes on tobacco on health care programs would help lower the cost of prescription drugs by as much as 15 percent.

"We are focusing now on a group power bill, in which prescription drugs will be bought in bulk for cheaper prices and sold for 14 percent lower than now," she said.

Kyser also related a story that she was told by her mother, a nurse's aid. Apparently, an elder, diabetic woman was on a prescription drug that cost $80 to refill. This woman was unable to pay for further medication, yet she needed the medication to survive.

A nurse watching over her actually took the same type of pills this woman needed from other patients in the hospital and gave them to her each day in order to keep the old woman alive.

"Stories like this are ridiculous," Kyser adamantly said, "Instead of turning to our doctors, we turn to our insurance agencies, which are really just a bunch of accountants."

Kyser and Gould claim that if bills were past for health care, everyone's bills would go down.

"The only people who benefit from these high prices are the CEOs and the top of the HMO companies," said Kyser.

A recent referendum question was showed that the majority of people in Massachusetts want a single payer health care system over a universal HMO system.

To create awareness on this issue, MassPIRG members lobby politicians and host workshops in which people left without health care relay their stories.

Gould finally added that MassPIRG proposes to make health care their primary campaign next year.

Mass PIRG's fifth campaign is Water Watch, which incorporates education, hands on clean up, and monitoring of current waters levels.

DeAngelis reported that Massachusetts has the second most polluted bodies of water next to New Jersey, and through education programs, MassPIRG members go to local elementary and high schools to let kids know about their water.

Elizabeth Fenzel, a member of AmeriCorps (a government program dedicated to water safety and working with MassPIRG), noted that the two groups hold three river clean ups a semester, where roughly 50 people from colleges and the community participate.

"This motivates people," Fenzel said, "We have statistics [about water pollution], but at the same time we are disconnected between the natural world and everyday life. When people go out there, get dirty, and clean the stream banks, then they see."

AmeriCorps and MassPIRG also monitor local bodies of water. For example, with the Tri-lake association in Belchertown, they assess the health of the local lakes and then come up with strategies to clean them or maintain their cleanliness.

"We have swimable, fishable lakes here," commented Fenzel, "65 percent of all Massachusetts lakes are too polluted to swim or fish in, so ours are really very clean."

However, Fenzel also noted that without an emphasis on keeping them clean, these lakes could easily become polluted.

In addition to these campaigns, MassPIRG also conducts research to better understand the needs of the UMass community. The most recent report published dealt with student debt from school loans.

"Despite the fact that students are going deeper and deeper it to debt each year to pay for college, nearly eight out of 10 students don't have a clear understanding of the implications of the debt they take on," DeAngelis said.

According to the report, 78 percent of the students underestimate the long-term costs for college.

In order to help students pay for college without Increasing their debt, MassPIRG believes more grant aid should be available, providing cheaper loans to students and maintaining flexible repayment options.

In light of today's election, referendum question number two essentially comes down to whether or not students are satisfied with MassPIRG's accomplishments thus far. The existence of a student organization that has a substantial and focused mandate of action is perhaps an oasis of legitimacy for those of us who are all too weary of most student politics.

A conservative use of paper.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1582 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1987, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Adam White Editor-in-Chief
Sam Wilkinson Managing Editor
Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager
Sage Brousseau Production Manager
Alan Basque Editorial Production Manager
Eric Faber Advertising Manager
Sue Perreault Advertising Production Manager
Bryan Smith Senior Editor

Dave Trespas Arts & Living Editor
Rob Schulze Editorial/Opinion Editor
Tanya Mannes Diversity Editor
Adam Martignetti News Editor
Bryan Smith Sports Editor
Melissa Hammel Features Editor
Maureen Maske Photography Editor
Chris Brennan Finance Manager
Joshua Szymanski Distribution Manager

Daniel Krechmer Promotions Manager
Esther Danzig Layout Manager
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Brent Siniawski Assistant Finance Manager
Amy Garganta Assistant Business Manager
Katie Beith Assistant Advertising Manager

No more shower sandals
•IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY TO LOOK FOR AN APARTMENT•
Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879
Come check us out at
www.amherstlincolnrealty.com

Done your homework for LIFE 101 lately?
Purpose for Life = Loving God + Loving People
Conference Room
MERCYhouse
It's a church!
www.knowmercy.org

Thai Corner ไทยคอนเนอร์
"Home Style Thai Food"
Serving Lunch From 11:30-3:00
Monday- Saturday
Take-Out Available
• Curry Dishes
• Stir Fried
• Soups
• Salads
• Noodles
31 Boltwood Walk, Amherst MA 253-1639
located down the alley from Antonio's Pizza
Hours: Sun 5-9, Mon-Wed 11:30-9, Thurs-Sat 11:30-10

2001 Summer Jobs Program
Go Hertz.
Opportunities available at Logan International Airport in:
Customer Service and Operations.
up to $2500 BONUS!!
What a great summer job!
1-800-JOB-HERTZ
Hertz
Contact: The Hertz Corporation, Logan International Airport, 207 Porter Street, East Boston, MA 02128; Fax: (617) 569.3276; Email: hertzsummer@aol.com.
Equal Opportunity Employer.

Roots Reggae
ALL AVAILABLE AT VP RECORDS MILES AHEAD IN REGGAE MUSIC
LUCIANO VP1017 A New Day Lucianow
VP1507 More Fire Coolation
VP1508 Zion Diaries Lutes
JUNIOR KELLY LOVE SO NICE
VP1610 Lowe So Nice Junior Kelly
MORGAN HERITAGE
VP1515 More Teachings Morgan Heritage
MAIN BRANCH 88-05 138th Street, Jamaica NY 11435 Tel: (718) 291-7054 Fax: (718) 658-3573
RETAIL STORE 170-21 Jamaica Avenue, Jamaica NY 11432 Tel: (718) 297-5807 Fax: (718)657 6868
VP FLORIDA 6022 S.W. 21st Street Miramar, Florida 33023 Tel: (954) 966-4744 Fax: (954) 966-9766
www.vprecords.com

SGA says good-by to officers

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

As the Student Government Association's Presidential and Trustee elections opened yesterday, busy candidates and Senators had yet another thing to remember: last night's SGA Senate meeting.

What was said to have been a quiet meeting was filled with announcements as well as goodbyes as Executive Cabinet officers extended their final reports. Their terms will finish soon.

SGA President Jeff Howe extended his final report to the Senate and expressed his opinions on issues that he feels need to change in order to help the future success of the SGA. He spoke on topics such as respect as well as changes in the Constitution that would make life easier for SGA members as well as students.

"This is something that I have eagerly awaited this year, and I'd be avoiding the truth if I said that this year hasn't been difficult," Howe said. "We need to respect one another and the people elected into office as well as those sitting beside you right now. We're here to do a job for people, and we should be here to support ourselves, but that of the constituents that we represent."

Howe continued to express that he encouraged Senators to keep on making motions and believing in themselves and the work that they are doing.

Secretary of Administrative Affairs Sheila Tunney also expressed similar thoughts as she completed her final officers report as well.

She expressed the need for respect of one another as well as the continuation of getting Area Governments and House Councils more involved in the SGA.

"It's not easy to maintain a large student body, but House Councils and Area Governments have the ability to reach out to students and make improvements," Tunney said. "They are an easy way to get to students and expand their awareness and we need to work at keeping them involved in the future."

With a light agenda on hand, the Senate moved past announcements to pass a motion involving the allocation of $1000 to the Asian American Student Association [AASA] in order to help fund their main event.

"This event involves people from all over campus, not just one group and draws in people from the community as well," Chair of Finance John Feldman said.

Speaker Jim Eltringham also expressed his thoughts on the allocation of funding by the Senate, and the fact that he felt it was good to see the Finance Committee up and running after a few months break.

"They had a break after last semester, and it was great to see them back and allocating funds once again," Eltringham said. "We have a real bunch of dedicated people and it's been a lot of fun."

Elections Booths will be open today from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. and are located at all Dinning Halls, as well as in the Campus Center.

SHALINE MARTE/COLLEGIAN

Presidential candidate Mike Whitehouse(L) speaks at last night's SGA meeting.

■ "Big" Tony

continued from page 1

and his followers. For all of his confident discussion of this election, Tony is still a confused candidate. He doesn't know what he wants. He doesn't have a plan to lower laundry fees or have a mission to implement a new parking plan. He just wants a change, a chance for the students to get what they want, and that is why he is running.

"This isn't about the SGA," Tony said firmly. "This is about the students, and their needs. This SGA isn't getting it done...and I will."

If nothing else, "Big" Tony's legacy may be the fact that he made people think about the SGA, and how people feel about the job they do. There have been rogue, outside parties in the past, but by all estimation, this may be the first one with the organization and support to win. And if Anthony "Big Tony" Whitman does nothing else, he has won over one person who wouldn't mind seeing him win.

"I hope he does win," current SGA President Jeff Howe said, "The SGA needs someone new like him to come in."

Voting will continue throughout the day today.

JARET BARR/COLLEGIAN

'Big' Tony looking after the little people.

Young Eric Diamond seeks SGA Presidency

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

Although he may be the youngest Presidential candidate on the ballot, Eric Diamond expressed in a recent interview that he is equally qualified, if not more qualified, for the job.

Issues such as Food Services, Parking Services, and the University of Massachusetts educational system were just a few issues of which he is focusing much of his attention towards.

"I look at running as not a lack of experience or a popularity contest," Diamond said, "I have really strong feelings about a lot of issues on this campus and things that I want to see changed. I consider myself to be more mature when it comes to dealing with and being apart of a position like this than a lot of other people my age."

Diamond explained his feelings on issues such as education and its lack of funding at UMass and what he would like to do in order to see changes in the future.

"I think that the allocation and use of funding needs to be changed," Diamond said. "They spend to much time and money focusing on issues surrounding food services rather than that of what is going on in various educational departments as well as maintenance on this campus."

Parking Services has been one topic that many of the candidates have been focusing on, and Diamond expressed his personal thoughts on what he would like to do to change the current situation.

"I would like to change the yellow lot to be specifically for freshman, and that way we could free up the other lots," Diamond said. "I would change it so that only the number of stickers sold would be that of spaces available. I would also like to get a specific shuttle bus running to various dorms such as Southwest and Sylvan."

Eric Diamond

The Hatch Food Court located in the Campus Center was also an issue on the mind of Diamond as he explained a new idea that he felt would draw more students into that cafeteria.

"I think it would be great if we could put in a few fast food vendors in the Hatch," Diamond said. "If we could set it up as a place where people want to go, I think we could open up that space even more for students."

Diamond also expressed that he felt that the Student Government Association had gotten out of touch with students and that was something he felt needs to be improved.

"I think that we need to advertise more events and happenings of the SGA to students on this campus," Diamond said. "People need to get more involved and feel comfortable using student resources. I want to reach out to students and let them know that they do have a voice on this campus."

www.dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN New England's Largest College Daily & THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
THE UMASS DAILY COLLEGIAN AND THE HANGAR
Present
DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM NIGHT
DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM NIGHT
THIS SATURDAY MARCH 31ST
FROM 9P.M.-
THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
At the Hangar Pub & Grill
55 University Drive.
• Door Prizes will be given away throughout the night
• As Always $2 Coors Light Draft
• GRAND PRIZE: Diamond Rio Portable Music Player
SPONSORED IN PART BY: Black Sheep, Judies, Zanna, & ABC.
THE BLACK SHEEP Deli & Bakery
Judies
ZANNA
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY

Amherst Select Board
Dolly Jolly
Dolly Jolly has been effectively serving Amherst for 35 years, working with our youth, fund-raising for our human service agencies, actively supporting our towns and schools, and creatively participating in our business community. Amherst needs the energy, cooperative spirit and ability to get things done that Dolly brings to the Select Board.
Please join us in re-electing Dolly Jolly.
• 35 year resident
• Amherst Select Board 1998 - present
• Co-chair ABC House Capital Campaign
• Human Services fund-raiser
• Member of our Business Comuninity
Merle L. Howes, Co-chair
Judy Brooks, Co-chair
Donald Frizzle, Treasurer
VOTE FOR DOLLY JOLLY FOR AMHERST SELECT BOARD
TUESDAY, APRIL 3 • POLLS OPEN 7AM TO 8PM

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
EDITORIAL/OPINION
Thursday, March 29, 2001
Ed/Op Editor • Rob Schulze
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

He's got a message
Give Tonya a chance

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian will not endorse candidates in today's Student Government Association elections. But we are willing to speculate that at least one candidate in this whole election, "Big" Tony Witman, isn't getting a fair shake.

Is he off his proverbial rocker? Well it certainly seems like it, and after the SGA debates, in which he consistently made reference to FBI plots and wiretaps on campus, he isn't working to disprove the theory.

But at the same time, Witman, by virtue of the fact that he's on the ballot, deserves a chance in this election. Only it doesn't seem that he's getting one.

Instead, it seems as if there are those who are simply scared about the possibility he has to disrupt the election. A third party candidate? Someone from the outside?

"Big" Tony is like a Ross Perot, a Ralph Nader, a Bull Moose party member; he's someone who wants to get into the political system and he wants to start at the top. That's admirable, especially considering the organization he wants to be on top of.

In private, Tony isn't as weird as he presents himself to be. He seems to have grounded ideas (that representatives should remember who they represent them and why they do). That said, we feel that his constituents aren't giving him a fair chance.

Instead, they're following him like hawks. Not only are his campaigning indiscretions reported to the appropriate authorities seemingly immediately, they are reported despite the fact that he has shown no ill-will towards his fellow candidates.

It's an indication of fear, seemingly.

A candidate like Tony gets the support of students who normally don't care – he brings students to an election who seek to read about something different on a day to day basis – and that's an important trait.

Perhaps his most important one.

In an organization suffering from a very serious lack of credibility, Tony brings a different perspective, and while we wouldn't be so bold as to suggest that he brings a better one, it's a perspective that the organization desperately needs.

The SGA is much easier than it seems: students are elected to represent other students. Somewhere along the line, that simplicity has been forgotten. This Tony character seems to remember it. Representatives are elected to represent those that elected them.

That sort of grounded perspective is what the SGA desperately needs to incorporate into its thinking. But where there is something new (which is actually something old) there seems to be fear. Student campaigns need to run their own campaigns, not worry. Gestapo-like, about the behavior of their opposition. In every election, there will be indiscretions, but in this election, those indiscretions will not be enough to justify anything more than a passing glance.

"Big" Tony isn't going to win the SGA election, as fun as that would be. What we can hope is that he's going to make a serious dent in the ritualized style and though about the SGA internally. His outside perspective might be weird – all an attempt to get himself elected of course – but his perspective is invaluable and we can only hope that it isn't ignored in fear.

Spring punk beauty

They were beautiful.

I was bored over Spring Break, and it was a lovely sunny day, so I grabbed my 35mm and decided to go waste some time snapping pictures downtown. I started on the wharf, went to the seafood section and then started walking toward the tourist areas. I figured I'd examine the various historical monuments and whatnot, see if I couldn't get a cool picture of some ancient gravestones or something. It was as I slipped the camera into the case and hit the sidewalk by the pier that I saw them.

They were both young – I'd have to guess they fit in the 17 to 20 range. She was on the short side (shorter than him at any rate), with dyed orange hair at a punkish short length. He was about medium height (taller than her at any rate) with really big pants that dragged on the ground, totally concealing his feet. They both wore identical gray hooded sweatshirts. I have no idea what their faces looked like – I only ever saw them from the back, as I followed them down the sidewalk to the center of town.

That hardly matters, though. It wasn't the way they looked that made them breathtaking. Their physical characteristics were totally independent of their inherent beauty.

What made them melt me was the way they were walking together. It was obvious that they were a couple. She held onto his arm, in the old-fashioned linked-elbow style that you see in black and white movies. She would sometimes lean into his shoulder on occasion, bury her face in, and he would tip his until they touched briefly, and then they would both raise up. He would occasionally return the favor, pulling her in with his arm until their sides were pressed together, then (somewhat regretfully) releasing.

They walked slowly. They carried on a conversation that I couldn't hear, and nor did I care to. The moment was perfect in from where I spied; sound may only have complicated matters.

I took a couple shots of them, taking care that they didn't notice. The pictures came out like crap, of course. It just looks like the backs of two punk kids on a sandy sidewalk; nothing special, really, just a waste of good film. My intention was to capture the moment, and I (of course) couldn't. The beauty didn't exist in two dimensions that could be captured within a flat image. It was ephemeral; it didn't exist except in the air between them, in the space between their eyes when they locked glances.

Even after they took a side street and I kept on going straight, they didn't leave my mind, nor did the smile they caused leave my face. And when I picked up the photos and saw the two that I had so sneakily taken of them, it made me pick up my train of thought right where it had left that fine sunny day.

Most of us, especially at our age, do more or less nothing but bitch and moan about the opposite sex, about relationships, about emotions. Every day your friends tell you about how badly they've been hurt. Their loved one dumped them, cheated on them, forgot to call, said a nasty thing. They curse the day that they ever felt anything for another person whom they could not possibly have imagined would ever be so cold.

When I saw these kids, however, I was reminded of just why we do it. There is a reason why we go through all the trouble and the heartache looking for someone who just feels right. When you find that person, no matter how fleeting it may be, it just makes everything better.

> "People complain about the hurt, but they never acknowledge the joy. The sight of this couple emanating happiness finally made me think the thought that all too often we forget: love is good."

People complain about the hurt, but they never acknowledge the joy. The sight of this couple emanating happiness finally made me think the thought that all too often we forget: love is good. Being with someone you care about is the source of the greatest joy this life has to offer. Just holding hands for a moment can make a day shine, and the mere presence of your special one can make something like a pleasant walk by the ocean on a spring day crackle with goodness.

The pain leaves scars that sometimes don't heal. Trust me, this I know, and know well. Still, I can't help but feel that the hurt isn't the point. The point is to lock arms, lean in, and feel safe, and right, and warm, and content. And to smile.

This probably comes as no solace to those who are currently still feeling the agony of the knife in the back, and seems trite and obvious to those who do have someone. To the former: I've been there, and you can get back what you've lost, and even exceed it; think about the good old times without rancor, and look forward to the better ones to come. And to the love struck latter: trite and obvious I will grant you – but are you taking it for granted? I like to think that I don't, and I try to make it known how I feel. I'm sure you mirror that sentiment, but hell, you can never be too careful. The stakes are too high. Think about it.

Love is its own reward, and the best of all. Just a reminder, courtesy of two punk kids on the waterfront.

Spring cleaning: Saving the memories

It's just about that time. As the roar of the New England winter wind dies down to a whine with the nearing of April, we are eager to trade in our cotton sweaters and heavy wool coats for lighter garb. As we embark upon our season-long spring wardrobe hunt, however, charging our credit cards to the max, it is inevitable that we will have to take stock of our closet garments at some point. For there is nothing worse than finding out, after spending $50 on a light blue Express halter top, that an exact replica lay hidden behind the bulk of an American Eagle sweater.

And so the weeding process begins...

You might be asking yourself, what's the big deal? Just get in the cleaning mood one day and sort through your closet, right? Wrong. It's not that easy. First off, I've never been one for garden work, especially of the kind that demands a good four hours of dedication. Secondly, while some may put off organizing their closets due to laziness, boredom, or simply rebellion, I have a far more complicated reason. I simply cannot part with the threads of my past. For each article of clothing has a tale that the threads of my life, in turn, have woven into an intricate pattern all its own.

There is something about surrendering that piece of clothing to the donation pile that brings about anxiety within, separation anxiety if you will. Some have called it selfish. Most call it bizarre. I call it a challenge.

A challenge to detach any sentimental value to my clothes, long enough to sign over ownership to the causes of charity. I took on this challenge during one of the final days of spring break. In the face of adversity, however, I, somehow, managed to convince myself that the lace-collared, rose chintz dress I wore to Josh Cohn's Bar Mitzvah would be of much needed use someday. It was at this point in the game, so early on, when I knew I had once again been defeated.

Think about it, though. How could I ever part with the satin tulle ankle-length gown I wore to my first cotillion? Or the lambs-wool cardigan that I wore while receiving my first soft kiss? Surely the worn-in, faded blue denim jeans I paraded around the high school halls in my freshman year weren't going anywhere. And to think those are just the clothes lingering in my closet that would still fit me...give or take some shortness of breath.

Alison Lurie once wrote, "To choose clothes, either in a store or at home, is to define and describe ourselves." So...maybe the tie-dyed cotton tee that I wore religiously during my eighth grade Washington trip doesn't fit my current sense of style. And the blue-checkered skirt that had become a permanent part of my beach bag during those carefree summer days certainly has no place in the vocabulary of my present-day wardrobe. But how is it that these articles of clothing had once defined me so fittingly? Was I just a slave to fashion, or had I truly found expression through my clothes?

A five-by-seven cedar-stained frame adorns my bedroom shelf back home. Inside is a picture depicting a smiling 10 year old. I think that the deep attachment I feel towards my clothes can be best explained through this photo. I am wearing a tapestry vest with a black felt slouch hat draping my right eye, as I so boldly pose for the camera. Most likely, I reached for that tapestry vest and black felt slouch hat because it had reflected the girl I had been at that time. Bold. Adventurous. Confident. For at 10 years old I had a self-assurance that I cannot help but envy at age twenty.

And so it is that the stored clothes in my closet remind me of the girl I had once been. If only the feel of the fabric underneath my fingertips could recapture that daring 10 year old that did model shoots in her downstairs basement, or the carefree 12 year old that did cartwheels in the silky, summer sand. Some days I yearn to be the child whose world consisted of running through sprinklers and climbing trees in the juvenile sun wearing her pale yellow corduroy overalls. For how great it would be to slip into that ridiculous lace-collared, rose chintz dress once more to dance the night away at Josh Cohn's Bar Mitzvah.

But here I am, twenty-years old, and the last lace-embroidered item I have modeled would be the handkerchief that rested soundly in my coat pocket this summer during my brother's wedding. At present, my wardrobe could be described as elegant, chic, understated. No floral prints or outlandish material dominate my outfits. In turn, my style has since developed a sophisticated air to it. Whereas I had once dressed to attend my high school's annual wrestling pudding match or football pep-rally, I will soon have to dress for that grad school interview or first job experience.

Oh, how time flies by. And it is just about that time. Time to embrace the clothes that define and describe the person you are today. I take this opportunity to encourage each and every one of you to go out and purchase that one outfit. The one you've admired from afar but have been too hesitant to purchase. Seize the moment. It won't be long until the threads of your life will weave something new for you to wear.

As for myself, this article has taught me a lot. It has made up my mind, indefinitely, to clear out my closet upon my next visit home. It has also inspired me to make a mail run for some new zesty garbs as soon as my wallet replenishes. But, most importantly, it has opened my mind to the realization that I can stay true to both the smiling girl in the picture and the girl that now smiles back, while at the same time doing my part for the good of charity and avoiding a call from the fashion police.

Sharon Stimpfle is a Collegian Columnist.

LIFE IN HELL

The Collegian is always accepting student columns. Bring your submissions to the Campus Center basement.

Letter to the Editor:
MassPIRG a worthy cause

To the Editor:

If there is one thing I am sick of, it is people complaining about the lack of interest of young people addressing society's problems. How many times have you listened to the troubled news reporter regurgitate statistics concerning the plummeting 25 and under voter population, and how many times have you heard that same anchor heave a resigned sigh and make some righteous remark about the declining sense of duty in today's youth.

While I will admit that today as a culture our generation may seem to be distracted by the pop culture craze sweeping over our country...it is a mistake to judge us and our activist spirit by our poor taste in entertainment. In fact, the reality is that never before has the number of students involved in activism been so high – not in the 1960's, not ever. From organizing to volunteering, students are spending more time volunteering at inner city schools and more time fighting for change than ever before.

Whoever says that students don't care about the issues just because we don't vote is missing the larger picture. It's not that we don't vote because we don't care. We don't vote because now, like always, the politicians are not interested in paying attention to the needs of the younger generation. Of course it can be said that if more young people voted the politicians would be more willing to listen to us. That is probably true, but is it the kind of system we want? A system whose government is based on a "you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours" mentality? For many young people who chose not to vote in last year's joke of an election, the answer was no. Instead of going out to the polls and hoping for change to come from politicians that won't listen to them anyway, those same kids being lambasted by the media as lazy and apathetic, are going out to rallies and soup kitchens and lobbying offices of the real world to make the change happen themselves.

Like many people, however, I would not have believed this was true until this past year when I began getting involved with MassPIRG. Now, I see everyday the firsthand and very real results of student involvement in our country. In the past year, MassPIRG registered 3,000 students on this campus, saved sixty million acres of national forest land and finally got dangerous pesticides banned from elementary school playgrounds. This semester, we are working on campaigns to save the Artic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska from needless oil prospecting; we are working to reduce unnecessary energy use in the state of Massachusetts; and we are working to clean up Massachusetts rivers and streams and also working to raise money and awareness for the hungry and homeless in the state. It sounds like a lot of work, and believe me it is, but it makes it worth it to see students tackling today's problems that the politicians are too afraid to address. My experience with MassPIRG has given me hope for our world. I have learned in this past year that people do care. More specifically, students care. That is why it is important that organizations like MassPIRG, who stand for the rights and opinions of students, stay active and stay in power.

This week, MassPIRG will be running their semi-annual referendum question on the SGA ballot. Just like in real life, the future of student activism hangs in the balance of an election. This question will determine whether or not MassPIRG remains active on the UMass campus. Keeping MassPIRG on this campus is keeping students involved, and keeping the fight for change alive. We give students a voice. By voting yes at the polls today for MassPIRG, you can make the statement once and for all to all the old hippies and crusty media anchors out there that students are involved and care about what is happening to the world we live in.

Jesse DeAngelis
MassPIRG Chapter Chair

Austen in Film
Mansfield Park is also by far the most thoroughly modernized. The story follows the maturation of Fanny Price (Frances O'Connor), sent as a young girl to live with her wealthy uncle's family, an arrangement that subjects her to years of quiet judgment and dismissal as belonging to a lower social rank. Her strong intellect and steadfast moral convictions develop in spite of the non-regard her relatives give her, and the usual Austen romantic turmoil is also present.
As the opening credits indicate, the film was based not just upon the novel, but also on Austen's early journals and letters, and this has allowed writer/director Patricia Rozema to recast Fanny as a reconstruction of Austen herself – a young and headstrong writer-to-be. As the following exchange between Fanny and her cousin Edmund (Jonny Lee Miller of Trainspotting) illustrates, Rozema has turned the once-quiet young Aside from these (usually modernized exaggerations and distortions, however, Mansfield Park has a surprising amount of socially astute observation to offer. Austen's is a world of women raised to be totally preoccupied with the... attentiveness to men, [illegible] she writes; and yet, [illegible] a young woman of [illegible] and enlightened [illegible] world is never [illegible] without criticism [illegible]. The nature of Austen's observations makes them especially [illegible] for Rozema's viewpoint for [illegible] post-feminist world [illegible] we really come?
Turn to Austen, Page 8

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian - Every Thursday!

COURTESY ABRAMS ENTERTAINMENT

The Ultimate Jazz Genie

Pianist Joanne Brackeen will perform Friday, March 30 at 8 p.m. at the Sweeny Concert Hall, Sage Hall, Smith College. For reservations call (413) 585-3197

FILM

UMASS – "Showdown in Seattle: Five Days that Shook the WTO," an independent account of the November 1999 protests against the World Trade Organization (WTO) in Seattle, WA, will screen Tuesday, April 3 at 7 p.m. in 227 Herter Hall. and Wednesday, April 4 at 7 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center. An informal discussion will follow each screening. Presented by the UMASS Radical Student Union.

UMASS – "Global Village or Global Pillage," a new documentary exploring what the global economy means for ordinary people, will screen Tuesday, April 10 at 7 p.m. in 227 Herter Hall, and Wednesday, April 11 at 7 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center. An informal discussion will follow each screening. Presented by the UMass Radical Student Union.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – "Reflections/ Deceptions" is a collection of self-portraits by Raymond Majerski. Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, on display now through April 6.

UMASS – "Other: Breaking Out of the Box." This exhibit combines texts with advertisements from the 1950s and 60s to reveal a society in which difference is feared. It is an investigation of cultural identity, conformity, and the challenge of celebration diversity. March 27 through April 24, with an opening reception on March 27, 5-7 p.m., and a gallery talk on April 24 at 7 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery.

UMASS – "Natalie Alper: Recent Paintings." Alper is an abstract painter who uses thick loops and folds of paint, crisscrossed by lines made by removal rather than accretion, and uses both earthy and metallic pigments. University Gallery, April 1 through May 18, with and opening reception on March 31, from 4 to 6 p.m.

SMITH COLLEGE – "The Refugees." Two life sized sculptures by artist Judith Peck depicting refugees carrying a child and all their worldly possessions. Part of the Khan Institute's "Anatomy of Exile" project. Through May 28. For more information, call (413) 585-4292. Third floor, Neilson Library.

WILLIAMSTOWN – "Photography EXPOSED." Includes 45 examples of portraiture as part of the Williams College Museum of Art's 75 anniversary celebration. The exhibit will continue until September 3, 2001. The Museum is open Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

NORTHAMPTON – Deborah Casdin's watercolor works will be displayed in the Hart Gallery, located at 102 Main St. She explores a harmonious symphony of color in both abstract painting and in studied landscapes. The display will be ongoing until April 15.

THEATER AND DANCE

UMASS – "And Then There Were None" is based on the suspenseful mystery novel by Agatha Christie, about ten people who are invited to a lonely island. They are forced to confront the dark secrets about their past and one by one, they die. Presented by the Theatre Guild on March 29, 30 and 31, at 8 p.m., with a 2 p.m. matinee on the 31 in Bowker Auditorium.

UMASS – "Stop Kiss," a play by Diana Son, focuses on two women who become friends, and then realize that they are in love, a realization which inspires an act of violence. April 5 through 7, and April 10 through 13, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on April 7 at 2 p.m. in the Curtain Theater.

UMASS – "The Magic of Michael Moschen." Moschen blends movement and music into a type of dance-theater by turning juggling into a performing art. March 30, at 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

AMHERST COLLEGE – "Blood Knot" is a play written by Athol Fugard about two brothers living together in South Africa whose personal relationship reflects the fears of larger racial issues. April 5 through 7, at 8 p.m. Performance is free, reservations recommended, call 542-2277.

NORTHAMPTON – "The Vagina Monologues" will play at the Calvin Theatre, April 3, 4, 7 and 8. This production will feature, among others, singer/songwriter Dar Williams. For tickets and showtimes, call the Northampton Box Office at 1-800-THE-TICK.

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE – "A Surface Soul." A program of dances choreographed by Mollie McClelland and Kim Brandt, March 29-31 at Hampshire College Main Dance Studio at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 general and $3 for students and Seniors. Call 559-5889 for reservations.

SMITH COLLEGE – "Hot 'N' Throbbing." The New play Reading Series will present this work by Paula Vogel about a divorcee who writes softcore erotica to support her teenaged children while musing on Kraft-Ebing and Henry Miller. It is free, and will be presented on March 29 in the Earle Recital Hall at 8 p.m.

MUSIC PERFORMANCE

UMASS – UMass professor Nadine Shank on piano and faculty member Matt Haimovitz will perform solo piano works and sonatas for cello and piano. April 1, at 3 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall.

UMASS – "Catherine Jensen-Hole" This faculty member will present a concert with a mix of swing, ballad and Brazilian tunes. April 2, at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall

SMITH COLLEGE – "Sage Hall Series: Joanne Brackeen." Brackeen is a pianist and a composer who has recorded over 20 albums as a band-leader, and has performed as a soloist at Carnegie Hall and the Kennedy Center. March 30, Sweeney Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE – "Commemorative Dedication: Lighting the Rose Window, a Musical Celebration." The Mount Holyoke College Chamber Singer and student Instrumentalists will perform to dedicate the window in the Abbey Chapel, March 30, 8 p.m.

READINGS/LECTURES/ACADEMIC EVENTS

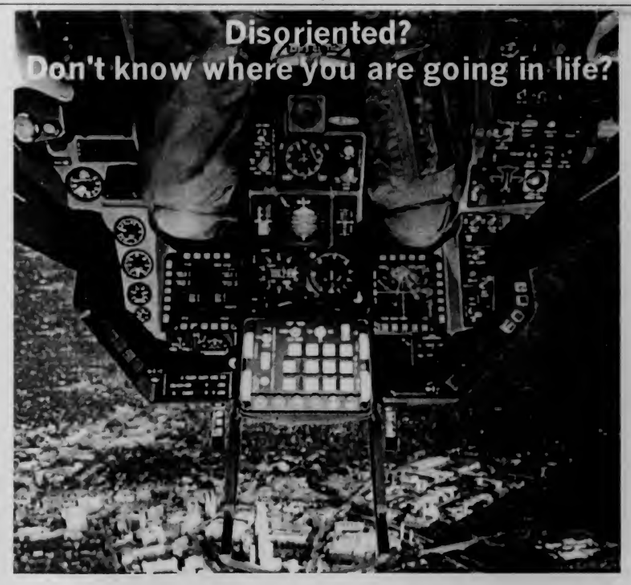
UMASS – "Words She Spoke." Caridad de la Luz is a Bronx-born performance artist celebrates the rich layers of life. Whether through poetry, hip-hop, Latin song or monologue, she comes through with a positive message. April 5, at the Augusta Savage gallery, 7 p.m.

UMASS – Bill Pullman will give a series of workshops and talks, open to Five College students. On April 2: "Screenwriting Seminar" from at 10:30 a.m., Bartlett 202; "From Script to Screen– Making the Virginian" at 1:30 p.m. in Hasbrouck 124; "The Performance Diploma as Bear Bait-Making Good with Your Degree", Pullman will talk about his Hollywood experiences, 5 to 6 p.m., The Rand Theater. April 3: "Being In the Business- An Insider's View", 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

COURTESY JON CRISPIN

Faces of Dance

Choreographer/dancer Jolyn Arisma will perform as part of "Faces in Dance," the Smith College Dance Department's Spring Concert. The event will be held Wednesday, April 4 through Friday, April 6, at 8 p.m. in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre at Smith College. For reservations call (413) 585-ARTS



WE CAN HELP

Contact us for more information on job and scholarship opportunities
Captain Chris Lane
UMASS Air Force ROTC
(413) 545-2437 afrotc@acad.umass.edu

THE FIVE ARTS CENTER SILVER SEASON

Magic Mayhem and Minor Miracles

PENN & TELLER

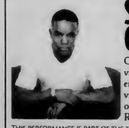
Named two of the funniest people alive in Entertainment Weekly's "50 Greatest Comedians Today," Penn and Teller's act combines exuberant, often absurdist comedy with magic tricks.

"They make you laugh. Really Laugh. Belly stuff!"
– Clive Barnes, NEW YORK POST

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 6 AT 7:30PM, CONCERT HALL
SPONSORED BY WRNX 100.9, THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE AND FLORENCE SAVINGS BANK

Good Vibrations

STEFON HARRIS QUARTET



One of the most sought after marimba/vibraphonists, Harris' passionate artistry, energetic stage presence, and astonishing virtuosity has propelled him to the front of the current jazz scene. The Jazz Times 2000 Readers Poll named him "Best New Artist."

THIS PERFORMANCE IS PART OF THE THIRD ANNUAL BILLY TAYLOR JAZZ RESIDENCY.
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8 AT 7:30PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM
SPONSORED BY WFCR 88 5FM PUBLIC RADIO FOR WESTERN NEW ENGLAND AND THE VALLEY ADVOCATE

TICKETS ONLY $5 $7 $10 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

Love, Lust and Betrayal a la Bizet

LONDON CITY OPERA

The London City Opera returns to the Fine Arts Center with Carmen, Bizet's classic tale of love, lust and betrayal. One of the leading touring opera companies in the United Kingdom, this company proves that opera was composed as entertainment — entertainment that moves one to tears or to laughter.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 11 AT 7:30PM, CONCERT HALL
SPONSORED BY WGBY TV 57

Trysts, Twists and All That Jazz

GARTH FAGAN DANCE

Performing "Trips and Trysts," their newest collaborative effort with Wynton Marsalis, the Garth Fagan Dance Company is earthy and vital with a capacity for wildness, yet anchored in technical finesse, intensity and elegance.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15 AT 7:30PM CONCERT HALL

www.fineartscenter.com
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
THE FINE ARTS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Reality-based TV: the tide is only rising, and the future looks grim

Over spring break there was absolutely nothing to watch. All the shows were in post sweeps reruns, and the new episodes out there weren't too impressive. I spent a lot of time watching the NCAA tournament and swearing at my favorites as I watched teams drop off the brackets. The shows that I waited for all week premiered at the end of the weekend, "MTV's Spring Break 2001."

In the tradition of MTV spring break we saw college models, performances by some of the best in today's popular music, and half naked drunken college kids. MTV, who spearheaded "reality TV" with "The Real World" and "Road Rules," took a page from both Fox's "Temptation Island" and the syndicated show "Blind Date" and fused them into an unholy hybrid that, of course, Generation X eats up. One show, "Dismissed," featured two blind dates, but unlike a normal blind date, this show featured three people. The first 15 minutes had two girls and a guy and the second had two guys and a girl — the title of the show refers to the fact that one of the two daters gets the boot (however, it could also mean that they get "dissed" – as you can see it works on many levels) at the end of the show. The day is separated into a day date and an evening date and is picked respectively by the two people fighting for the single's affection or for a long-term relationship. But they weren't even fighting for a one-on-one date; they are fighting for a one-night stand. I guarantee you after the night was over they didn't even want to pretend they ever met. The first date was such a typical spring break setup it was disgusting.

The other show was "Spring Break Survivor Stories," which combined "Temptation Island" with "Survivor." They brought a couple on who has been dating for about a year and then had them pick from Spring Break tempters. It was really terrible — probably the worst show I have ever seen and even though the couple broke up, it still was terrible.

One of the great things about going home is the fact that we get HBO, so I was enthused that I would be able to watch "The Sopranos," and it was the best episode I have ever seen. I won't give it away for those of you who haven't seen it, but it set so much up for this season in just fifty minutes – like the commercial says, "this is perfection."

As for the Oscar coverage, I thought it was the best award show I have seen in a long time. Steve Martin was very funny with his one-line quips and observations, at one time even blaming Tom Hanks for the proposed kidnapping of Russell Crowe. The show was also on schedule for an award show. It was 40 minutes to become wrestlers. Each week a different contestant will be voted out of the house by the three trainers until only one remains. And the prize for the winner: A WWF contract. One can only hope for cameo appearances from WWF legends such as The Bushwhackers, The Mountie, The Repo Man, or the mighty Kamala. The show, which is currently in production by the same people that brought us "The Real World," will begin airing in June on MTV directly following "The Real World."

Information from www.zap2it.com was used in this article.

Kari Polesky is a Collegian staff member.

"Big Diet": This Dutch-produced series chronicles the trials of 12 fat people who live in a house fully stocked with low calorie treats, tempting junk food, and oh yea, 37 cameras. The premise: men and the women compete in same-sex teams against each other and as individuals within the teams for the chance to win as much as a $400,500. After four initial weeks of sweating and starving, one person will be thrown off the show each week until only four remain. The weekly loser is the member of the weaker team who sheds the smallest percentage of his or her weight loss target. The final winner will be chosen from the two best dieters by the audience and will earn the gold equivalent of how much weight he or she lost. The contestants will also be subjected to temptations, including a wall-mounted fridge full of their favorite snacks. Show producer Debbie de Jongh told zap2it.com, "It won't be like a freak show with sausages falling out of every drawer or something, but I can imagine the doorbell will ring and it's a pizza delivery boy with a pizza."

"Chains of Love": "Blind Date" meets "Big Brother" with this new UPN series set to begin airing next month. The premise: One person (the picker) agrees to be chained to four strangers of the opposite sex for four consecutive days on-camera in hopes of sparking a romance with one of them. The show comes from the same producers as "Big Brother" (and "Big Diet"). Of course, there are a few obvious scenarios that will undoubtedly make for classic television viewing such as the inevitable trip to the bathroom that the chained couple will take together – and of course, the showers. No doubt those episodes will rival the "Who Shot JR?" episode of Dallas, the night Neal Armstrong first walked on the moon, and the debut episode of "Undressed" (okay, maybe not that last one), as great moments in television history. "Chains of Love" debuts Tuesday April 17th at 8pm on UPN.

"Tough Enough": By June the XFL season will be over, and will likely never to begin again. So the WWF will need something new to spread their brand of "attitude" into. Their choice: reality programming. The premise: 12 hopeful WWF wrestlers will live together, train together, and have their lives taped (sound familiar?) over the span of two months. The hopeful future WWF performers – six males and six females – will be trained by current WWF stars Taz, Al Snow and Jacqueline to become wrestlers.

The prize for the winner: A WWF contract. One can only hope for cameo appearances from WWF legends such as The Bushwhackers, The Mountie, The Repo Man, or the mighty Kamala. The show, which is currently in production by the same people that brought us "The Real World," will begin airing in June on MTV directly following "The Real World."

Information from www.zap2it.com was used in this article.

Kari Polesky is a Collegian staff member.

A man hard to love:
White crafts disc of trying gems

JIM WHITE
No Such Place
Luaka Bop

Jim White makes good music and tells great stories. His second album, No Such Place, is similar to Badly Drawn Boy's The Hour Of Bewilderbeast in that it's a scattershot canvas of stirring narratives, semi-songs, and sounds only a critic could love.

Beautiful, lonely, hopeful, and heartbroken sounds abound throughout the album's 13 tracks, one is just left to wonder who will hear them. No Such Place is refreshingly non-commercial, and manages to alienate so many people as to be truly cool. People fond of country radio will treat this (as with anything the slightest bit different) as if it were white noise, and go back to contemplating the merits of the most recent Faith Hill offering. Alternative kids might find the country edge of Jim White just a little too square for their hip tastes. Even alternative country fans, who seemed to make a surge in 2000 with strong offerings from Merle Haggard, Shelby Lynne, Steve Earle and others, may see White's pairing with electronic artists like Q Burns Abstract Message and Morcheeba a little too alternative.

So, not catering to any specific audience, White's last resort is the critic who loves albums that are defiantly individual and turns its nose up at popular taste or established genres. No Such Place certainly succeeds in being unique, with stories so strange and intriguing they stay with the listener long after the music fades from memory.

Which is certainly not to suggest that all the music fails to grab, just that some sections are so sparse that they have you begging for the likes of "10 Miles To Go Down A 9 Mile Road," accurately described by the album's press as "a full-on Neil Young stomper." And the quiet despair of "Corvair" and "The Wrong Kind Of Love" are heartwrenching in their honesty, the former being probably the most affecting ode to a dead car ever written.

And Jim White can tell a hell of a story. The list of words on the cover: sorrow, freedom, fate...bad luck...truck stop...Hollywood, Babylon; you'll go there and feel that throughout the course of the album. In "The Love That Never Fails," White is looking for something he can hold on to in life, something lasting. "Silver linings seldom appear – except in horrible storms," he sings. In the often crowded and sometimes horrible world of singer-songwriters, No Such Place is one such silver lining, something very lasting. (Michael Delano)

SMUT PEDDLERS
Porn Again
Rawkus Records

The Smut Peddlers hit hard with their filthy lyrics and gritty beats. No doubt these dirty kids will offend most of you, but if you're into harsh east coast hip-hop and... um...porn, then you'll probably like their latest offering. The Smut Peddlers are made up of Mr. Eon and DJ Mighty Mi, from the High and Mighty, and Cage, a white New York rhymer who says that Eminem is getting credit for the type of psycho-rap that he's been doing since the early 90's.

The album starts with an intro by Beetlejuice, the altitude-challenged character made infamous by his appearance on the Howard Stern show. The first track, "Smut Council," starts off a series of similar joints discussing pornography and loose women. Samples from Dilated Peoples, Guru, and the Alkoholiks are used throughout the album.

Most of the album is unfortunately mediocre in its overall presentation. Most tracks do not stand out, even though both rappers do have tight rhymes. The skits are bland, involving Beetlejuice or some unnamed dirtbag watching porn on TV.

The guests on this album definitely contribute to its sound. Kool G Rap and Kool Keith both lend their signature sounds to the tracks on which they appear. Keith's track, "Stank MC's," features the only memorable hook on the album, humorously provided by Beetlejuice. Copywrite laces "Anti Hero's," with an excellent verse. Fellow whitey R.A. the Rugged Man gets down and dirty on "Bottom Feeders."

Mighty Mi provides decent production, but this album has a problem with its choruses. They are terrible, usually consisting of the two MC's belting out a line together. They are unoriginal, easily forgettable, and do not contain the lyrical skill that the two show in their verses. The best track, "Anti Hero's," features a head-nodding beat and good use of the piano, but falls short on the chorus like the rest of the disc.

The album is funny, the rhymes are good, and its shortcomings don't ruin the whole creation. Although far from perfect, Porn Again is a listenable contribution to 2001 hip-hop. (Justin Cormier)

COURTESY THE WORLD WIDE WEB

Jim White, a unique singer/songwriter if ever there was one.

Advertise yours in the Annual Collegian Apartment Guide.

Deadline to place a classifieds ad is April 6. Issue to be published on April 11.

Stop by our office in the Campus Center basement or call 545-3500 for more information

April '01

ARTS ON CAMPUS...

A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Monday, April 2-Tuesday, April 3
THEATER: Bill Pullman A series of workshops and talks on acting, directing, writing and film-making. Call the Theater Dept. for information. 545-3490.
Thursday, April 5
MIXED MEDIA: Around the World in Thirty Days A month long program featuring cultural presentations, displays, arts and music, and international dinner. Most events at 7p.m. in the Prince/Crampton Graduate Residence. 545-2299. Through 4/28.
MUSIC: Boyz Hits Car plus Simon Says 7p.m., at the Skybox. $ 577-4759.
POETRY: Caridad de la Luz A reading by a New York-based Puerto Rican poet and playwright 7p.m. at the Augusta Savage Gallery 545-5177.
FILM: Hamburger and Doima: Cross Cultural Identities followed by a panel discussion on documenting culture w/filmmakers and scholars. 7:30p.m. in Herter Auditorium 231. 545-3659.
THEATER: Stop Kiss A play about two young women coping with young adult issues and falling in love. 8p.m. in Curtain Theater. Through 4/7 & 4/10-13. $ 545-2511.
Friday, April 6
MIXED MEDIA: S-Con 2001 Science Fiction Convention Three day event featuring performances , exhibits and artist lectures. Various Campus City locations. $ For more info. http://www.umass.edu/rso/scum or 545-3600.
CULTURAL NIGHT: 7th Annual Puerto Rican Cultural Night 6p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. $ 545-3600.
MUSIC: MU330 plus Big D & the Kids Table and Lawrence Arms 7p.m. at the Skybox. $ 577-4759.
Saturday, April 7
MUSIC: The Yellowjackets Jazz quartet featuring Russell Ferrante, Jimmy Haslip, Bob Mintzer and a special guest drummer. 8p.m. in Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.
THEATER: MISSION IMPROVable high energy improvisational comedy performance. 8p.m. in Campus Center Room 163. 545-3600. Also 4/14, 4/21 & 4/28
MUSIC: J Mascis and the Fog plus Ell Power and Warblers Punk and hardcore inspired rock. 8:30p.m. at the Skybox. $ 577-4759.
Sunday, April 8
MUSIC: It Ain't Nothin' But the Blues Broadway production covering the history of blues from its inception to today. 7:30p.m. in Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.
Tuesday, April 10
